THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

GOD keeps us on the march. Every advance makes a new stage possible and a new journey necessary. Every ending is a beginning — a new beginning; every reformation has in it the seed of reformation to come. Every revelation is a light in which we see light; a preparation and a condition for further revelation. — Thomas Yates.

HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS

12mo. cloth; back and side title stamped in gold; gilt top. Illustrated with portraits printed from tint blocks; $1.00.

IN spite of the many books that have already been contributed on the subject of Christian Union, the present volume has found a ready welcome. It contains the statements of the great leaders in our reformation. Some of these documents have been out of print until brought together and published in this attractive and permanent form. Here within the covers of this book will be found all the epoch making statements by the great founders and leaders—Alexander and Thomas Campbell, Isaac Errett, J. H. Garrison and others. Published at a popular price to introduce it into every Christian home.

Sent postpaid to any address upon receipt of price, $1.00

Let's Che[ck] Up

Mrs. Oldblood—"Are your family early settlers?"

Mrs. Newblood—"Yes; papa always pays every bill on the first day of the month."

Mother—"Clara must have her voice trained in Europe."

Father—"Certainly—or why not make it Asia? That's farther away."

An Irish sailor fell from a lower part of the rigging on the first lieutenant, carrying him to the deck. "Where did you come from, you rascal?" said the lieutenant, as soon as he gained his feet. "From the North of Ireland, your honor."—Ex.

Not the Residence.

A South Side household recently employed a domestic who is a native of Norway. The other day Freda answered a telephone for the first time.

"Is this Mrs. Browning's residence?" asked a voice over the wire.

"No'm," was the surprising answer, "It's her help."—Kansas City Times.

Why She Refrained.

"George, I saw that Singleton woman to-day carrying the silk umbrella that she borrowed from me at the club card party."

"Why didn't you ask her for it?"

"I was just going to when I remembered that I borrowed it from Mrs. Trumper."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Long—"By the way, old man, you are looking a hundred per cent better than you did this time last year. Are you feeling good?"

Short—"You bet I am. A year ago I was worrying about my debts."

Long—"All paid now, eh?"

Short—"No; but they have increased until there is no use in trying to pay, so I've cut out the worry."

"Do you think, sweetheart," queried the young man with the evenly divided hair, as he shifted the fair maid from one knee to the other, "that your father will consent to our marriage?"

"Well," repiled the fair one, "of course, papa will be sorry to lose me, but——"

"But," interrupted the rash youth. "I will remind him that, instead of losing a daughter, he will gain a son."

"Dearest," rejoined the wise maid, "if you really want me you mustn't say anything of the kind. Papa has three such sons boarding with him now and he's a little touchy on the subject."

Pa[pa]r—"What do you think of the doctrine of total depravity?"

Mrs. Zigzag (illiterate)—"Oh, I've no doubt it's good if lived up to."

Didn't Own It.

"I have come all the way out here," said the tenderfoot, "to see your beautiful sunset." "Somebody's been stringin' you, stranger," replied Arizona Al. "It ain't mine.—Chicago Record-Herald.

A few days after a farmer had sold a pig to a neighbor he chanced to pass the neighbor's place, where he saw their little boy sitting on the edge of the pig-pen watching its new occupant.

"How d'ye do, Johnny," said he; "how's your pig to-day?"

"Oh pretty well, thank you," replied the boy. "How's all your folks?"

A Southern negro was brought into the court room, accused of stealing a neighbor's chickens.

"Mistah George Washington Shintopp, did you steal those chickens?" asked the judge pointedly.

"No, sah, jedge; Ah is toe 'spectable fo' dat.

"But it is stated on good authority that a bundle of feathers was found in your back yard the day before Christmas."

"Dat 'splanneration, jedge, des proves mah innocence, 'coz how could de feathers be found in mah back yard de day befo' Christmus, when mah wife didn't pluck dem chickens until de day after Chris'mus."—The Circle.

EDITORIAL

The Union of all Christians upon the Apostolic Faith, Spirit and Service.

It is an interesting volume which has just closed. No year of recent record has shown such varieties of form, such vibrations from extreme to extreme, as 1907.

In actual resourcefulness it has been a great season. In totals of crops, manufactures, exports and imports, and industries of every sort, the values have been very high, yet no recent year has seen such business anxiety and stringency. Conservative prophets declare that the recent troubles are a bridge across which the nation will pass from speculation and recklessness to sanity and safety. To others the hardships of the past few weeks appear the results of the efforts of one set of national gamblers to drive another set to the wall. To others still the portentous figure of the President is seen as the cause of all the disturbance, through his bold measures to curb the trust evil. But be the cause what it may, the effect can only be wholesome. By the difficulties through which we have passed we have no doubt been saved from greater evils. The outlook for business in the new year is excellent, and with the abounding resources of the country as its guarantee, the sky is bright with promise.

The record of accidents and disasters for the year has been very large and most disquieting. The railroads lead in this reign of terror, and their total of killed and wounded is appalling. Not only is the number of accidents on American railroads vastly in excess of that on European roads, but the percentage is out of all comparison. After all has been said regarding the greater mileage of American railroads, and the larger burden of traffic to which they are subjected, it remains glaringly apparent that in no country in which railroads are a factor in transportation are accidents so frequent and inexcusable, delays so common and needless, and public safety and welfare so little regarded.

The reason for this state of affairs is not far to seek. In other civilized lands the railroad is a public servant, and the interests of the public are safeguarded. In America the public is exploited for the benefit of stockholders in the railroads. The American traveling public is the most patient and enduring in the world. Nowhere else would such costly and inefficient railroad service be tolerated, and as a result it is found only here. One who has ample money and time can travel in America with a comfort unknown elsewhere. But the cheap, convenient, safe and prompt transportation known in Europe we have not yet discovered.

Of other casualties occurring in 1907 the most frequent and harrowing have been those in connection with the mines. The list, which lies to hand as these lines are written, is long and terrible. The chief disasters have been those at Saarbrucken, Germany (154 killed), La Esperenza, Mexico (123 killed), Toyoka, Japan (470 killed), Tsing Tau, China (110 killed), Monongah, W. Va. (550 killed), and Jacobs Creek, Pa. (300 killed.) A total of 1,984 fatalities is reported for this country, and nearly as many for the others. One would suppose there must be a meaning in this terrible waste of life in our field of industry. Is it necessary, or is the lesson of the railroads being spelled out here also in letters of blood?

Of great disasters by flood and field there have been few, nothing to compare with San Francisco and Vesuvius of former years. The total fire loss is very high, but few great conflagrations have occurred. Of ocean accidents, the loss of the Berlin off the coast of Holland, and the Hong Kong in the China Sea, both on the same day, February 21, and with exactly the same number of lost, 132, head the list in their strange coincidence.

The death roll of the year is not as full of distinguished names as usual. Of statesmen there were ex-President Casimer Perier of France, and Russel A. Alger, ex-Secretary of War. Of literary men, Thomas Bailey Aldrich, Dr. John Watson (Ian Maclaren), and Mancure D. Conway. In the realm of art, Augustus St. Gaudens, the sculptor; Joseph Joachim, the violinist; Edward Grief, the composer, and Richard Mansfield the actor, head the list. Lord Kelvin was easily the most noted scientist in England. Oscar II. of Sweden, and Queen Carlota of Saxony, complete the titled list. In the realm of religious leadership the names of Henry S. Olcott, the theosophist, and John Alexander Dowie, the "divine healer," find a place.

In literature it has not been a brilliant year. The letters of Queen Victoria furnished an interesting commentary on the politics of her era. Of similar historical value, though far more commanding as a study of events, is the autobiography of Carl Schurz. Sarah Bernhardt's "Memories of My Life," is not only an interesting recital of a dramatic career, but has the virtue of having been written for the most part during a very strenuous season of acting, from end to end of the United States.

The deluge of books that has appeared, dealing with nature, all the way from the technical works like Hugo De Vrie's "Plant Breeding," to the books called out by the President's assault on the "nature fakirs," has been enormous. To this contributions have been made by a host of fascinating writers who are doing their best in the spirit of Burroughs, Thorean and Henry Van Dyke, to help us to understand the art world out of doors.

The linking of education with public service and the training of the citizen may be illustrated in such books as President Hadley's "Standard of Public Morality," President Benter's "True and False Democracy," John R. Common's "Races and Immigration in America," and Professor Laughlin's "Industrial America." On the religious side the same questions are treated by Walter Rauschenbusch, in "Christianity and the Social Crisis," and Shailer Mathews in "The Church and the Changing Order," while R. J. Campbell of London, whose "New Theology" was a plea for the socialism of Jesus, follows it with a similar treatment in "Christianity and the Social Order," in which he boldly attacks the church and predicts its downfall or surrender to a more sympathetic attitude toward social struggles.

On the strictly biblical and religious shelves have appeared the monumental and long expected "Canon and Text of the New Testament," by Prof. Casper Rene Gregory, the latest volume in the International Theological Library; the two volumes of Dr. Hastings' "Dictionary of Christ and the Gospels," covering in large tracts the grounds of his larger Bible Dictionary and yet adding much valuable material. Dr. Orr's "Virgin Birth of Christ" restates the orthodox view of the theme, while Lobstein presents the criticism of the doctrine. A number of recent works deal with the problems of theology, and especially with the Atonement. Among them may be noted J. A. Beet's "Manual of Theology," C. A. Beckwith's "Realities of Christian Theology," J. Scott Lidgate's "The Christian Religion; Its Meaning and Proof," and James M. Campbell's "The Heart of the Gospel" reviewed in this column last week. Prof. Ladd's "The Philosophy of Religion," is older than the year, but really belongs in its literature.

In the Old Testament division the leading works are Brigg's "Psalms," in the International Critical Commentary Series, and Kent's "Laws and Traditional Precedents." There should be added the admirable little volume by Prof. Vernon on "The Religious Value of the Old Testament."

The object of all religious activity is world-wide evangelization, and on this theme a large list of titles could be selected from recent publications. We mentioned but three, "The Missionary and His Critics," by James L. Barton, "The Foreign Missionary," by Arthur J. Brown, and "Where the Book Speaks," by Archibald McLean, President of the Foreign Christian Missionary Society.

This is a mere glance at the abounding literature of the year.

I have always said, and always will say, that the studious perusal of the sacred volume will make better citizens, better fathers, and better husbands.—Thomas Jefferson.

Correspondence on the Religious Life

George A. Campbell

The Correspondent: Let us the Disciples resolve, but what?

The resolution that grows out of the agitated deep of the soul is what counts. Not the New Year's resolution; but the whole year's resolving is what is worth while. I care not for the creed sign. I only wish to peep in on the soul when it holds its head in its hand, when it walks the body up and down, resolving and re-resolving, when it is sleepless at midnight, and when it is honestly alone.

I care not to know the edicts of connections, the pronouncements of sermons or the disputatious writings of the journalists.

It is too easy to say things. The mere talker was never at a premium; but he is less so to-day than ever. It is the word backed up by a life that heartens.

What shall we the Disciples resolve? I prefer to ask what we are resolving? for we can only resolve as we are living and suffering. Impulse is the flower cut off from the stem. Therefore I only care to know what our men are meditating, praying, thinking and doubting about in their innermost lives. We do not choose to resolve. We resolve to live and the compulsion of resolution follows. If we knew with what courage we have been living it would be easy to know how courageous would be our resolutions.

The tragic place of a minister's life is his study. Here is the clearing house for all of his life's complexities. Here is his holy of holies where he sometimes, let us hope, meets God face to face and talks with him as a friend talks with a friend. Here is where the specters of perplexity and doubt leap out upon him, yea often from the printed page that argues for simplicity of faith. Here is where the gaunt finger of poverty is pointed at him as a fool to give his life for others in a world of selfishness and greed. Here is where the nectar of idle dreams tempts away from hard tasks. Here is where the preacher of love often shuts out the wife of his tenderest affections. Here is where the germs of jealousy find their culture or their death. Here is where the soul ponders over the loss of wife or child and finds defeat or hope. Here is where the burdens and sorrows of struggling and suffering humanity often crush the strongest soul to the earth. Here is where the best often wonder how they dare presume to speak for the High and Holy One.

To know a man here is to see his naked soul. Our brotherhood's up-going and on-going depends on the resolving, rather the living, of these secret places.

I would like to write of the heroic unknown of our brotherhood. They are legion. Many of the most godly and the most brotherly are unknown beyond a narrow geographical radius.

But some of our leaders as well have been tried as by fire. They appear with garments dyed red. They have trod the winepress alone, yet not alone.

Without trying to gaze too boldly on the inner souls of these I attempt to ascribe to each a resolution that I have noticed to have been forming in the secret of his life throughout the years and stronger to-day than ever before.

E. S. Ames: Because men are languishing for sympathy and perishing for the inspiration that cometh from above I am resolved to give more and more attention to the heralding of the Gospel of Love which more than the cold reasonings of the educated recluse has the magic power to uplift.

* * *

J. W. McGarvey: The race moves on and up. Each succeeding generation interprets the Gospel anew to its time. The Gospel has still unfathomed depths. I am therefore resolved to encourage all the younger men who with ardor and sincerity are seeking to articulate the Gospel of our Lord with our troubled time. The old Gospel must be interpreted to the New Man; and the New Man must be enlightened by the old Gospel.

J. H. Garrison: Be the years of my labors yet few or many, I am resolved that they shall be spent in efforts to increase in the life of our brotherhood the power and blessing of the great spiritual realities; and to bring into closer relationship all who love the Christ of our common salvation.

George H. Combs: Christ was a friend to the lowly. He invited when he was not to be invited again. I am resolved not to allow my church to lose sight of the Master's poor and needy ones; but to so identify them with Him that our parish will include the hovel and the alley and our church be a league of all who love for all who suffer.

W. T. Moore: I am resolved more and more to trust the broad common sense of our great and growing brotherhood to settle in the right way each and every perplexing question that it confronts; and to have undisturbed faith in the Providential guidance of Him who said: "I will build my church." I am resolved to have another harmonizing story ready for the Bloomington Congress.

W. J. Wright: While compelled to watch the wheels of the machinery go round I am resolved to give much attention to the kingdom which cometh not by observation; and to lead as far as I may be able our brothers to see the deeper things of God.

* * *

H. L. Willett: The man of the street and the man of the college alike need the light and love that flow from the Eternal Word; therefore I am resolved to put much greater emphasis on the message of the Timeless Spirit than on the dates and grammar of His mere reporters, important as the latter may be.

A. McLean: The Gospel and the last man must be brought together. I am resolved to lay upon the conscience of our brotherhood more and more the duty of the world-wide proclamation of the Gospel, which Gospel if effective must demand of its converts that no strong man may oppress a weaker one.

B. B. Tyler: As I have profound and deepening faith in man as well as in God I am resolved to cultivate patience with the intellectual laggards, with the dogmatist who never reads a book and the pessimist who never throws himself enthusiastically into any forward movement. I am resolved to hope even for them.

E. L. Powell: The pulpit is a throne. I am resolved to issue from my throne edicts of the King to the heart and conscience of men, edicts that may please or punish, console or cast down, bless or banish, but edicts of the King. My consolation, hope and courage as well as my commands are with the King.

F. M. Rains: Experience makes dear to me every true man, therefore I am resolved to emphasize character wherever found, in the preacher of the small church as well as the pastor of the great metropolitan congregation, in the poor as well as the rich.

Charles Reign Scoville: Man is as the number of the sands of the sea-shore. God is not willing that anyone should miss the way to Him. Our Father wants all his children won to Himself. Yet one shall put to flight a thousand, because of his multiplied strength when his heart be pure and his mind enlightened. Therefore I am resolved not to seek fewer soldiers for the King; but to make of the many better soldiers, soldiers that will follow his blood-stained banner even to the death.

A. B. Philputt: The old prophets preached to an age of single relationships. Our complexity demands great care in investigation. I am resolved to be diligent in understanding God's message to our time and then without apology, to declare it with the spirit of the prophets of old.

* * *

J. A. Lord: Love is best. "The greatest of these is love." Therefore I am resolved that while "contending earnestly for the faith once delivered" I will do so to the hurt of no man.

EMINENT PREACHERS.

The British Weekly has gathered the opinions of its many readers regarding the greatest preachers in England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales. The leading lists of five each are as follows:

The Unifying Power of the Ordinances

Earl M. Todd

In the December number of the Expository Times there is an article of more than usual cogency and suggestiveness on "The Problem of Modernism." The writer is the Rev. C. T. Crutwell, an Anglican clergyman and Canon of Peterborough, and the article is one of many by various writers called forth by the Pope's encyclical on Modernism. Mr. Crutwell realizes that the questions included under that category affect not only the Roman Church, but the Church of England, and all Protestant bodies as well. The situation is a grave one, from whichever point of view we regard it, and is, Mr. Crutwell, thinks, comparable only to that which faced the primitive church when she was called upon to divest herself of narrow Jewish provincialism, and cease to be a Jewish sect, and adapt herself and her message to her world-wide mission. And in the success with which she met that crisis, and became in some worthy sense the catholic church, Mr. Crutwell sees hope that the church will weather this storm and come forth purified, strengthened, and with larger vision of her responsibilities. Mr. Crutwell says some very pertinent things in this connection about the church's missionary policy—things that others too have been saying, and that it would be well for all who are interested in the world-wide extension of the gospel to ponder. But I have referred to the article to draw attention to what Mr. Crutwell says about the unifying power of the "sacraments." This Anglican Canon sees in these controversies the danger of still further dividing the church already handicapped by her divisions, and is seeking for some sure bond of union that will hold the church—his and others'—together amidst the play of these centrifugal forces, and that will also serve to heal the divisions that already exist, and he finds that bond in the "sacraments." The following is the closing paragraph of Mr. Crutwell's paper:—

"It has been suggested by more than one writer that in the sacraments of the gospel will be found the mightiest of all unifying powers. Doctrines are only expressible in terms of the philosophy of the age or region of culture; even if the same thing is meant, the expression of it must necessarily vary where the mental inheritance is so completely different. But the two gospel sacraments appeal irresistibly to the universal heart of man. The drinking of one spirit by all; the kneeling side by side as they eat the one bread; the brotherly bond of the one body, with its members who all rejoice and suffer with one another: these simple emblems have a cohesive force which no intellectual confession of faith can hope to rival. Unhappily the disputes that rage around sacramental doctrine among us have tended to obscure the wonderful religious power of sacramental ordinances, so that to a considerable proportion of nominal Christians they have almost ceased to convey any message. Yet nothing is more certain than in them, laid down as they are by the Lord Himself as indispensable necessities, lies the organic uniting force of the future; and looking beyond the present church to the as yet unconverted nations of mankind, one may believe that amid the intellectual diversities and perhaps incompatibilities of modernism, something grander and richer than intellect will proclaim that Christ is among men, according to His own promise, all the days' (i. e., all the successive epochs of progress), 'even to the end of the world.'"

The Disciples have had very much to say about the ordinances, in their plea for a restoration of New Testament Christianity, but I do not know that just this note has ever been struck among us. To think of the ordinances as a help rather than a hindrance to the healing of our divisions is a thought that should put new spirit into the advocacy of our great plea.

Men's Work in the Church

H. F. Burns

With the Peoria Church it is a conviction, that if men are to be interested in the work of the church, they must be given some definite part in its service. Careful attention is given therefore to find for each man coming into the church a place where he can work with pleasure to himself and with profit to the church. When assigned to a definite work he is given as much liberty in working out results as is possible. Men do not want to be talked to but want to work and to work at something that they feel to be worth while. The Official Board of the church is composed of twenty-two men, and this Board divides itself into committees, so as to allow, as far as possible, each man to have a definite part in its work. Through a committee the Board appoints regular ushers, whose names are published in the Calendar, thus using more men.

An important organization is the Men's Association of the church. This organization formed about four years ago, has helped greatly to interest not only the men of the church, but others as well. Many men who feel kindly toward the church will unite with the Men's Association, when they would not at present unite with the church itself. Beside the regular officers, the Association elects a Board of Directors, who decide independently upon questions of minor importance, referring questions of greater import to the Association for action. Membership, social, banquet, and program committees, are appointed by the President, who seeks thus to give definite work to every man who has not some special place in the work of the church.

The Association holds a banquet about every two months, during the cooler seasons. For about one-half of these meetings the Association provides speakers from abroad, at the other meetings there is usually a symposium by members of the organization, sometimes men from other churches of the city are invited to speak. For two years after the organization of the Association, it sought to accomplish no definite object aside from its social gatherings and the increase of its membership. After two years of this sort of activity, it was felt that if the organization was to continue to grow, and to become a vital power in the church, it must have some object outside its own growth and the promotion of sociability. Last year preceding the mayoralty campaign in this city the organization espoused the cause of civic righteousness, joining hands with the Men's clubs of other churches of the city, and cooperating with the Independent Voters' League in efforts to secure good administration. For some months past the Association has been working at the problem of reaching the community through institutional forms of work. They have aroused the church to an interest in the matter, and it seems quite probable that this may lead to an enlargement of our present building, with better equipment for the Sunday school, and rooms which may be kept open every day in the week. Toward this sort of practical Christianity the men of this congregation have been most sympathetic. If men have failed to work in the church has it not been because we have failed to assign them definite work worthy of a man's time? Harry F. Burns.

The groves were God's first temples.—Forest Hymn.

An act of goodness is in itself an act of happiness. It is the flower of a loving inner life, of joy and contentment.—Maeterlinck.

Among the heathen, when the beast was cut up for sacrifice, the first thing the priest looked upon was the heart; and if that was unsound and worthless, the sacrifice was rejected. God rejects all duties (how glorious soever in other respects) which are offered without the heart.—Rev. John Flavel.

The Call of the College

A. L. Ward

In no religious body has education had a more important place than in the Disciples of Christ. Our movement in its beginning broke in two directions, that of evangelization and education. When Campbell began his manifold and extensive work, one of the first things he did was to provide for a competently trained ministry. Time has proven the wisdom of this effort.

Some religious movements may exist and even make progress without this, but ours cannot. We must educate in order to evangelize, for teaching has been no small part of our evangelization. The trained worker, minister, evangelist, missionary, is required that our work may be wisely and permanently done. The Foreign Society alone is asking our colleges to furnish fifty young men and women for the foreign field; the home field needs easily five hundred preachers, not to mention the demands of the churches for competent lay leadership.

The college in turn makes its call on the homes of our churches. It asks you for your sons and daughters that it may send them back to you fully equipped to take their places in a larger and more useful life. Parents, the college calls you to send your sons and daughters to be trained for life service; young men, or women, the college calls you that it may help to equip you in mind and heart to bear the King's message to a lost world. In our colleges is a wealth of wisdom and inspiration which, like the richness of soil, is seeking to empty itself into life forces. This call of the college is a pledge itself to the King. Mazzini used to say to his compatriots, "Come with me and suffer;" the college says: "Come with me to serve." This is the imperial call of our Savior: "Come ye after me, and I will make you fishers of men."

Printer's Ink and the Kingdom

Edgar D. Jones

In his eloquent address at the Norfolk Convention Peter Ainslie said that "America is the land of Ink and Money." Mr. Ainslie did not think it necessary to inform us what kind of ink he meant. That were luminously apparent. Printer's ink, of course!

I am only one of an increasingly large number of pastors who believe that it pays to advertise the church services. At the request of Dr. Willett I give below some helps of this kind that I am using regularly, with worth-while results:

A weekly church leaflet, which contains beside the program of Sunday services a page of church notes, personals, announcements, notices, etcetera. The first page is gotten up after a regular form and carries cut of church, mottoes and the like. On special occasions, such as a foreign or home missionary day, I have the cut removed and run a display announcement in its place. For instance, like this:

Annual Meeting October 3d.

Of course you are coming! Reports will be read from every department. There will be music, both vocal and instrumental. There will also be light refreshments served by courtesy of the official board. Now for a final word—Will all who have unpaid pledges to the treasurer of the church or to any church society, make an extra effort to redeem them within the next twenty-four hours. Everybody help to make our annual report a glorious one.

A neat and very attractive blotter printed in two colors, red and black, carrying cut of church, hours of service, name of pastor, telephone numbers, residence, etc. On this blotter printed in clear type and underscored are these words:

"Special Invitation to Traveling Men Spending Sunday in Bloomington".

A committee from the C. E. Society keep these blotters in hotels and other public places. Since the First church is within three minutes' walk of the two leading hotels of Bloomington many commercial travelers attend our services. Indeed, it is doubtful if a Sunday passes without their presence in our congregation.

I may say in passing that I first used the "blotter idea" in my Cleveland pastorate. The press of that city gave the plan quite a little write-up and a Philadelphia daily made the matter a topic of an editorial. The result was that I received many requests for sample blotters: one such coming from far away Australia.

A Bulletin Board in a conspicuous place at the church's main entrance. This for announcement of sermon topics, which are painted neatly in jet black letters on a sheet of manila paper, the latter tacked to the board securely. Here is a sample bulletin announcement:

Sunday, Sept. 15.
The Pastor Preaches.
10:30 a. m.
"Echoes From Our State Convention."
7:30 p. m.
"Voices From the Cross."

It is remarkable how many people we see stop to read such an announcement. In the large cities, of course, they attract less attention than in the city of from ten to fifty thousand population.

We utilize the "Church Directory," now to be seen in all city hotels. We make it a point also to keep our printed matter in that frame correct and down to date. Every year the manager of this hotel directory agency sends out with the annual statement a request for correct data. Judging from the incorrect and out-of-date announcements one sees so frequently on these cards it would seem few pay attention to the manager's request. In one instance I recall a card in a well known city hotel that divided our folks into two denominations as follows: "Christian Churches." Under this heading were listed two congregations. Half way down the card this: "Disciples of Christ." Under this heading four congregations were listed.

I make use of attractive window cards, topic cards, folders, etc., in abundance in the course of a year's work. Special attention is given to the advertising of a series of sermons in the manner noted above.

Then there are the daily papers. Whatever we are doing at the church worthy of publication, I let them have word of, topics of sermons, special services, etc., and make it a point to let them have it in neatly typewritten copy. And they always print it.

I commend the liberal and judicious use of printer's ink to all pastors not now availing themselves of its help in extending the Master's Kingdom.

Like all good things, this "help" may be sadly abused and wretchedly overworked. For, of course, to begin with one must have something really worth advertising—something that has cost time, study and effort—whether it be sermon, music, social or what not! Perhaps this should stand first in what I have here written. I prefer it stand last.

The Empty Bucket

Anna D. Bradley

All nature is vocal with Christ's chief lesson—the lesson of how to reach down to help.

In one way or another we are all down, needing the help of those above. And the paradox is true. In one way or another we are all above and can, if we will, give help to those below.

I was led to these reflections while on a journey. Looking from the window of our waiting car, I saw an old-fashioned well, around which thirsty workmen stood. One was dropping the empty bucket that the full one might rise to the surface.

If the empty bucket had the Christian (?) spirit, there might have been trouble. E'er the workmen came it might have murmured over its seeming uselessness. "What good am I?" it might have whispered "Only an empty bucket! Why was I ever made!" Whinning thus, it might have remained forever worthless. A very good bucket, but empty, it could be of no use in the world. And thirsty souls would seek it in vain for refreshing drink.

Or, being raised so high, it might have been filled with dignity. (It is easy, when empty of everything else, to fill ourselves with dignity). That bucket might have so realized its own importance as a bucket of superior material, it could not have condescended to leave its right position to go among the seeming refuse of that low place to assist in the rescue of one so infinitely beneath it. Keenly conscious of the respect due itself, it might have been too proud to stoop.

Or it might have been a jealous or suspicious bucket. Looking down, it saw another struggling to rise, yet without help it must stay down forever. With help—that none could give so well as the empty bucket—it would spring up, bubbling with fresh, life-giving water, and fill the place now held by the other.

Lesson Text John 1:19-34	The Sunday School Lesson	International Series 1908 Jan. 12

The Voice of the Herald*

H. L. Willett

The Prologue of the Fourth Gospel (John 1:1-18), which was the text of the last study, emphasizes three things: (1) God has revealed himself to men not in the indefinite and mysterious beings which heathen and Jewish philosophy described as "logoi" or vague emanations from the divine, but in the Word, who is the complete expression of God's life, the Creator and Life-bringer. (2) This disclosure of God is not a mere essence, disembodied and unknowable, as the mystics of the age affirmed, but a man, living the life in flesh which he shares with all men. Thus he proves the reality of the divine life in terms of human experience, and manifests the method by which all men may become sons of God. (3) The ministry of John was only preparatory. He was not the real Messiah, though certain groups in the first century insisted that such was the case, and the view did not die till the second century (cf. Acts 18: 24-19:7).

Four Days.

After the prologue, the chapter shows a closeness of structure which is unusual in this Gospel. It is linked together by a sequence of days, four in number, which yield incidents illustrative of faith produced by the words and works of Jesus. The first was John's witness to the prophethood and mission of the One who should come after him. The second ("on the morrow") was the testimony of John to Jesus himself, as he appeared on the banks of the Jordan on his return from the temptation. The third was the interview of Jesus with the two disciples of John the Baptist (probably Andrew and John) and their entrance into the company of his disciples. The fourth was the conversation with Nathaniel, following his call by Philip. In all of these scenes there is the center-thrust of witness to Jesus and consequent belief in him.

Priests and Levites.

The prologue stands out with marked distinctness from all the rest of the Gospel. It is the effort of the writer to mediate the message of the Incarnation to a generation accustomed to think in other terms of the facts of life. The evangelist is using the vocabulary of his time in which to set forth the great truths of the faith. Yet the transition from the prologue to the body of his message is smooth and natural. Already he had spoken of John's witness to Christ. He now goes on to relate the events of a day when that very matter came up for discussion between John and the priests and Levites, who were sent out from Jerusalem to the Jordan to see what he would say on that theme. From the very first his words had occasioned them disquietude. They were indeed looking for a Messiah, and they were led to believe from the utterances of Scripture that Elijah would come first as the herald of the advent of the Greater One. Was this desert preacher Elijah? He had many of the characteristics of that rough prophet of the past (I Kings 17 f.). Was it to him that the words of Malachi pointed (Mal. 4:5)? Or was he perhaps the Great Prophet of whom Moses had spoken (Deut. 18-15)? His words were powerful enough to be those of some such divine messenger.

A Voice.

When these men came out from Jerusalem to inquire of John his office and authority he claimed nothing for himself. There is no more conspicuous instance of humility than this same prophet. Jesus called him the greatest among men, and named him the Elijah who was to come. Yet John himself denies all title to such honors. They said to him "Are you the Messiah?" and he said "No." They said, "Are you the Prophet that we look for?" He responded "No." Then they said, "Are you Elijah who is to come and make ready all things?" And still he said "No." "Who then are you? In whose name do you preach repentance and reformation of life?", they said. His humble response was "I am a voice."

Elijah's Lesson.

Yet in that one word lay all the secret of the divine method with men. Earlier prophecy had been volcanic and fiery. When men disobeyed the heavenly vision, the prophets did not spare them. Samuel sent Saul to exterminate a nation, and he hewed their king to death with his own hands. Elijah thought to complete his Carmel victory by the slaughter of the priests of Baal. Yet these harsh and brutal methods not only misinterpreted the nature of God, but they failed in accomplishing the desired results. Elijah learned at Horeb the better way. Panting from his long flight, and overwhelmed with his failure, he was taught that violence is not the key to success. God is not in the wind nor the earthquake nor the fire, but in the still small voice. From that day forth prophecy was a message not a massacre, a spoken word, not a brandished sword. And so John proclaimed himself modestly, and yet with singular directness as the very embodiment of prophetic purpose — a voice.

"Behold the Lamb of God."

When they demanded of him the authority for his conduct he pointed them to the unmarked Teacher standing in their midst. In the first days of his preaching he had been led on by the impulse to announce the approaching manifestation of the kingdom of God. But one day there came One whom he recognized as the King, and since that day his preaching had taken on a new note of assurance, insistence and authority. Jesus had gone away into the desert to fight the last battle with himself and the world-order in which his work must lie. But John knew he would return, and when at last he appeared on the sloping Jordan banks, his testimony was flung out joyously and with swift conviction, "Behold the Lamb of God."

The Greater Baptism.

His own baptism of men was but a preparation, even as he was but a voice. He could bring men into formal alignment with the new order, but Christ alone could give to them the true unction from on high. The baptism in water was, and ever remains, the most vivid picture of the soul's commitment to God through the death and burial of the old life and the forth-coming of the new. It is the open and manifest pledge of acceptance of that grace of God revealed to all men in the gospel of Jesus. But only He who is the source of life can complete the work of grace by the baptism which is not of water but of the Spirit. Any interested and devoted child of God can administer the baptism in water. Only He who is the Lord of life can confer the baptism of the Spirit.

The Higher Sign.

Who this was to be John had not known. This is not to say that he had not met Jesus. They were related, their mothers had shared confidences at the holiest moments of their lives, and the boys had doubtless often seen each other. The singular beauty and devotion of Jesus' nature had already impressed John, so that he hesitated to perform for him the rite of baptism. And yet it was only at the moment when that rite was completed at the earnest request of Jesus that the proof was furnished that this was indeed the One who should come. Of that fact he had never been doubtful since. With full assurance, when Jesus returned from the wilderness, his face marked with the signs of his supreme struggle, John could cry, "Behold the Lamb of God, who taketh away the sin of the world."

SPARE ME MY DREAMS.

By Richard Watson Gilder.

Relentless Time, that gives both harsh kind,
Brave let me be
To take thy various gifts with equal mind,
And proud humility;
But, even by day, while the full sunlight streams,
Give me my dreams!

Whatever, Time, thou takest from my heart,
What from my life,
From what dear thing thou yet may'st make me part—
Plunge not too deep the knife;
As dies the day, and the long twilight gleams,
Spare me my dreams!

Scripture Isa. 35:8 Jno. 8:12	The Prayer Meeting	Topic for Jan. 15
	Missing the Plain Way

Silas Jones

The lesson we have thoroughly learned seems so simple that we wonder anyone should not understand it. The knowledge of the material world which we have by right of inheritance puts a wall between us and the savage or barbarian. It is only by effort that we can put ourselves in his place and see the world with his eyes, and even then we but imperfectly enter into his thought world. In the moral world there is the same difficulty. The motives that control the civilized man are incomprehensible to the savage. The torture of enemies is a delight to the savage. He sees no reason for sparing one that has done him an injury unless he can get some service out of his prisoner. Human sympathy is not in his breast. The care of the weak and unfortunate is not a burden on his conscience. To a man of this kind the gospel motives are hard to grasp. There are in civilized countries people whose training has left them on a level with the savage. They have been taught to live at the expense of others. Some of these persons have been brought up in professedly Christian homes. The words of the Master have been pronounced but his spirit has been absent from the lives of the parents. The appeals that come from the pulpit have no meaning for these pagans that boast Christian ancestry. Teachings plain to the Christian heart are a puzzle to them, if they pay any attention to them at all.

The plain way is often hidden by the fog of theological discussion. If any one doubts this, let him read the Sermon on the Mount and the Athanasian creed. The sayings of Jesus are clear and practical. They reach to the heart of religion. Any man of ordinary intelligence can get something from them. The creed is understood by no one. The men who wrote it did not know its meaning. It has been a hindrance to faith. Where the creed is unwritten, the arguments of the theologians may obscure the truth. Whittier voiced the feeling of many troubled souls when he wrote:

"O friends! with whom my feet have trod
The quiet aisles of prayer,
Glad witness to your zeal for God
And love for man I bear.

I trace your lines of argument;
Your logic linked and strong
I weigh as one who dreads dissent,
And fears a doubt as wrong.

But still my human hands are weak
To hold your iron creeds:
Against the words ye bid me speak
My heart within me pleads.

Who fathoms the Eternal Thought?
Who talks of scheme and plan?
The Lord is God: He needeth not
The poor device of man.

I walk with bare, hushed feet the ground
Ye tread with boldness shod;
I dare not fix with mete and bound
The love and power of God.

After making due allowance for the difficulties created by ignorance and by the folly of the church, there remains the sin of the human heart. "The lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the vainglory of life," turn men away from God. They must be told plainly of sin and its deceitfulness.

Scripture John 15:1-10	Christian Endeavor	Topic for Jan. 12
	The True Center of Life

The central thing about each man is his view of life. What does he think of God and his brother, of duty, and the unseen. As Mr. Chesterton says in his collection of essays called "Heretics":

"There are some people—and I am one of them—who think that the most practical and important thing about a man is still his view of the universe. We think that for a landlady considering a lodger it is important to know his income, but still more important to know his philosophy. We think that for a general about to fight an enemy it is important to know the enemy's numbers, but still more important to know the enemy's philosophy. We think the question is not whether the theory of the cosmos affects matters, but whether in the long run anything else affects them."

In other words, the essential thing is the man's religion. And with us the one possible religion is Christianity. No other religion can make appeal to us. Muhammadanism and Hindooism and Booddhism can not convert us. If we have any religion it will be Christianity. As Professor James says in "The Will to Believe,"—"A living option is one in which both hypotheses are live ones. If I say to you: 'Be a theosophist or be a Muhammadan,' it is probably a dead option, because for you neither hypothesis is likely to be alive. But if I say: 'Be an agnostic or be a Christian,' it is otherwise; trained as you are, each hypothesis makes some appeal, however small, to your belief."

We ourselves are already Christian. What then is the central thing in Christianity? It is not the inspiration of the Bible, nor the teachngs of Christ, nor the ethics of Christianity, nor the service of the world. All these have their place, but they do not have the central place. That belongs to Christ himself. He is the soul and center of his religion. "I am the light of the world." "The bread which I will give is my flesh, for the life of the world." "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." "Abide in me." These are a few of his own words in which he reveals his central place in Christianity.

This means that Christ will be in our hearts as Lord. The late Dr. Deems used to tell a story of the Napoleonic wars of a soldier who was wounded near the heart, and who watched the surgeon as he cut in after the bullet. As the knife went in near the heart, he looked up in the surgeon's face and said, brokenly, "Surgeon, I think—if you cut—much farther—you'll touch the Emperor." He carried Napoleon in his heart, in the center of his life. In the Christian, Christ has this place.—S. S. Times.

Preaching on the life of Robert Morrison, Dr. Campbell Morgan said: "About two months ago I stood, after preaching, in the vestry of Fifth Avenue Church, New York. There came into the vestry a man who took my hand in his, and looked into my face. He said, 'You don't know me?' I said, 'I seem to know your face.' He said, 'I am Griffith John.' I felt that I stood in the presence of one of the great apostles. I asked him for his benediction, and what do you think he said to me? 'I have had fifty years in China, and I'm going back.' 'Well,' I said, 'aren't you coming to see us in the old country?' 'Oh, no,' he said, 'I've very little interest in the old country.' I said, 'Don't you want to see Wales?' He said, 'No, I love China more. Wales is a beautiful memory to me, but I must live and died in China, and mix my dust with her dust.'

"Thank God," Dr. Morgan added, "that he still lingers with us. He is building on the foundations which Morrison laid."—British Weekly.

In feelings, not in figures on a dial.
We should count time by heart-throbs. He most lives

WITH THE WORKERS

Doings of Preachers, Teachers, Thinkers and Givers

R. C. Harding has been conducting a revival at Bellville, Kan.

J. R. Parker has resigned at Winchester, Ill., owing to failing health.

W. A. Crowley closed his year's work at Bloomfield, Ky., December 15.

O. L. Summer of Chillicothe, Mo., has been in a meeting at Douglas, Kan.

Joseph Gaylor of Springfield, Mo., is preaching in a good meeting at Maitland.

James Cornish of Jewell City, Kan., has received a call to the church at Downs.

F. A. Bright of Waynesburg, Pa., recently held a good meeting in Clarksville, Pa.

J. P. Lichtenberger of New York City, was a visitor during the holidays in Guthrie, Okla.

Hugh Wayt, Barnesville, Ohio, has received a unanimous call to remain pastor for the third year.

E. C. Boynton recently closed a ten days' meeting in the Central Church at Whitewright, Texas.

J. T. McGarvey of Warrensburg, Mo., has accepted a call to the Woodward Avenue Church, Detroit, Mich.

J. J. Bare has closed his work at Sumner, Ill., and removed to Findlay, where he is ministering for the church.

J. L. Green, a student in the College of the Bible, Lexington, in his second year, has charge of four churches.

J. R. Campbell has removed his family from West Virginia to Concord, Ill., where he is employed for full time.

R. H. Crossfield of Owensboro, Ky., will devote his sermons this month to the consideration of "Some Distinctive Doctrines of the Christian Church."

F. W. Pinkerton of Kenton, Ohio, was the speaker at a men's meeting, December 22, in the church at Painsville, O.

L. M. Omer has taken charge of the work at Sandersville, Ga., where they are building a $10,000 brick building.

Clifton B. Rash of Chase, Kan., preached Sunday, December 15, morning and evening, in the church at Salina.

Z. O. Doward, pastor of the East Side Church, Lincoln, Neb., has been a victim of the grippe, but is now much better.

J. G. Slayter of Allegheny, Pa., will preach in a meeting with the congregation in Waynesburg, Pa., beginning February 3.

Miss Lemert, the Bible school expert, will hold an institute in the Jefferson Street Church, Buffalo, N. Y., beginning next Sunday.

Leslie G. Parker and Charles E. McVay, singer, just closed a short meeting at Weldon, Iowa. The meeting would have continued longer but Bro. Parker became ill.

J. E. Holly of Everest, Kan., has accepted a call to the First Church at Boulder, Col., and will move there the first of the year.

D. J. Howe of Eureka, Ill., has accepted a call to Hutchinson, Kan., for next year, and has already removed to his new field of labor.

The annual meeting of the congregation in Crafton, Pa., for which C. H. Frick is preaching, will hold its annual meeting January 9.

John P. Sala and the church in Elyria, Ohio, have begun a fine meeting with Evangelist E. E. Violett and Frank Charlton as helpers.

C. M. Sharpe, minister at Columbia, Mo., delivered a lecture in the Christian Church at Glasgow recently to a large and appreciative audience.

L. E. Brown, pastor in Lebanon, Ind., will preach a series of sermons this month on "Home." The announcement of this special feature of his work is made in an artistic leaflet bearing a cheery New Year's greeting.

As an appropriate Christmas message to members of his congregation, G. B. Van Arsdall of the First Church, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, published a sermon on "The Light of the World." The sermon makes an attractive brochure.

The Netz Sisters Quartet is leading the music in special services of the Glenville Church, Cleveland, Ohio. The pastor, Edward S. De Miller, is preaching. The meeting will be short and will be followed by a concert given by the quartet January 6.

Small and St. John begin a meeting with the Huntington, Ind., church January 12. Four hundred were added to the church in 1907; another new year seems one of large promise. The official board of the church presented Bro. and Sister Shelburne with a valuable Christmas remembrance.

A church calendar, bearing a picture of the church house, names of church officers, and topics of mid-week and Christian Endeavor meetings is a helpful feature in work of the Central Church, Syracuse, N. Y. Joseph A. Serena is the enterprising minister. The men of his church will serve a church supper January 6.

"Sons of India" is the title of the exercise for Endeavor Day for foreign missions. Observance of this day is becoming quite general. It should be kept by a thousand societies this year. Urge your society to be one of that number. Order supplies at once from the Foreign Christian Missionary Society, Box 884, Cincinnati, Ohio.

The annuity plan in our Church Extension work is growing in favor among our people. During the month of December the board received two annuity gifts; $1,000 from a sister in Iowa, and $500 from a sister in Tennessee. The last was the 208th gift to the Board of Church Extension on the Annuity Plan. The Annuity Fund now amounts to nearly $210,000. The board can use thousands of dollars of annuity money, because churches are glad to pay 6 per cent when they borrow this money from the Board of Church Extension. Concerning our Annuity Plan, write to G. W. Muckley, corresponding secretary, 600 Water Works Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

THE CHICAGO CHURCHES.

G. I. Hoover received the confession of one young man in regular services last Sunday in the West Pullman church.

George B. Stewart and his wife are receiving the congratulations of friends because of the arrival of baby Mary Catherine, who came Christmas Eve to live with them.

Miss Edna Lyman will address the next meeting of the Christian Ministers' Association on "The Listening Child." The meeting will be held Monday, January 6, in the Hyde Park Church, 56th street and Lexington avenue. After the session of the morning lunch will be served by the ladies of the church. The wives of the ministers are invited to attend the meeting.

Dr. George H. Combs of Kansas City, will be the speaker in the meeting of the association on January 20. He will be in the city as the University preacher at the University of Chicago, January 12 and 19.

THE FOREIGN MISSIONARY RALLY.

President A. McLean, Dr. Royal J. Dye and J. H. Hardin will conduct a rally of the Foreign Christian Missionary society Monday, January 13 at 3 p. m., in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium, 153 La Salle street. In addition to the addresses made by these men there will be a number of brief speeches by pastors of the city. Other features of the gathering will lend interest to the sessions. It is hoped that this will prove the greatest meeting of the kind ever held in this city. Churches are urged to send large delegations. We shall publish next week the final word in regard to the program and time of sessions.

THE LADIES AID, A MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Few perhaps know that the Ladies' Aid Society is a missionary organization in addition to being the strong right arm of the local church. We recently examined our books to ascertain from what source the funds had come for the Hot Springs mission, and are pleased to say that 309 ladies' aids have made offerings, some giving twice and a few three times, and some societies as much as $25. The total amount given by the societies is $1,156.29. Collections from Y. P. S. C. E., Sunday School and congregations amount to less than $300. The ladies' aid societies and the individual have made the present success of this work possible and we ask them to see us through. If those to whom we now write or Brother Andrews visits will do all they can, we will soon attain success and be out of the way. Now is the time for everybody to do his very best.

AWAKING AT LAST.

Next year is the Centennial! January 19th is Education Day.

"Ten thousand ministers by 1909."

"A gift this year from every Disciple to some Christian College."

The College for the Church, the Church for the College—both for Christ.

From all parts of our great country letters are pouring in to the Centennial Headquarters indorsing the plea that is being made for Christian Education. All signs indicate an awakening of both preachers and people to their responsibility toward and dependence upon the colleges. We must have an educated ministry and we want an educated membership. If there was ever a disposition of our educators to wait for the mountain to come to Mahomet it has given way to the realization of the fact that Mahomet must go and get the mountain. The spirit of enterprise in our schools has been added to the consecration and high ideals that have always characterized them.

Make Education Day, Lord's day January 19th, 1908, a great day in all the churches.

Next year is the Centennial!

W. R. Warren,
Centennial Secretary.

THE MOST IMPORTANT YET.

The approaching offering for Foreign Missions the first Sunday in March, is beyond all question the most important in our history. This for a number of very apparent reasons:

1. We are drawing nigh the great Centennial in Pittsburg in 1909. We must begin to mount the heights if we show ourselves equal to an event of so much importance. We will be more measured by what we do for Foreign Missions by the religious world than by any other one thing. Numbers, houses, colleges, etc., will weigh for little in the estimation of thoughtful men if we are not doing a creditable part in the evangelization of the whole world. Here is the crucial test of the plea we make.

2. We have assigned ourselves a larger task than ever before. To send out fifty new missionaries and give $350,000, is a worthy undertaking. Ten of these missionaries have been sent forth since the Norfolk convention. The whole task well performed will be worth far more than all the effort we may expend in the accomplishment.

3. Our work is larger in the regions beyond. We have opened new fields, planted new stations, equipped new schools and colleges, started printing presses, launched mission boats and sent out missionaries into regions never before blessed with the Gospel, and in a word the work has expanded beyond our hopes and dreams of ten years ago. This enlargement lends a tremendous significance to the offering we observe March 1st.

4. A blessed scriptural wave of evangelism is sweeping through our churches with thrilling results. If these converts are not given a scriptural vision of Jesus Christ and a clear conception of his purpose concerning the evangelization of the world, and if they are not impressed with their own personal obligation to give the Gospel, which they now believe, to others, they will likely soon fall away. The missionary conception will strengthen their new born faith. It will give them lofty ideas and insure their steadfastness in the Divine life. These and other tremendous reasons all conspire to make the approaching offering the most important we have yet observed.

All the necessary March offering supplies will be promptly furnished upon request. We will send March offering envelopes, pastoral letters, Missionary Voice, subscription blanks, a March Offering Manual, a March Offering Bulletin, etc., all free of charge.

THE EMPTY BUCKET.

Who would even remember the empty bucket when the full one was there?

Anyway, what justice in such disparity of gifts? Why this painful contrast of one so empty and another so full? It was unjust. And was it fair to expect one who had nothing but position to resign it all to go down in the cold to help another who would never even remember its benefactor?

Thus, spiteful, jealous, suspicious, the empty bucket must have remained empty while the sunlight—its one possession—must soon have proved a curse, reducing it to hopeless ruin. Also the full bucket, so much needed, must have been forever useless because no hand was there to lift it up.

Fortunately for the waiting, thirsty toilers the dear old bucket had not caught our Christian (?) spirit. It knew itself empty, yet felt no secret heartburning. When the thirsty workmen came to its side, it said cheerily—"I have not a drop of water, but I can hurry down in the well and send up a bucket with more than you can use."

Then the empty bucket readily resigned its conspicuous and comfortable place, and for a time, was lost to the world.

Perhaps—who can tell?—for a moment the bucket felt lonely and sad as it entered the cold blackness, realizing, through the toilsome way, that another and a better would take its place, while never a loving nor grateful memory would be wafted it.

You and I can scarce repress such thoughts as these as we fancy we are giving all and receiving nothing.

Yet whatever it's secret pangs, the bucket made no pause until it saw the other eagerly seized by the thirsty men. Then it felt its work was forever done.

How could it know—poor, foolish, loving, empty bucket!—that what seemed loss was greatest gain, and what appeared as death was nobler life?

From the empty bucket I learn my lesson. Only by freely giving can I receive again. Only by self forgetting can I rightly be remembered. Only by going down into the shadow of death can I emerge into eternal life.

A hard lesson? Ah yes. None know this better than the self-condemned writer. And yet I feel it is only to the partially regenerated spirit that it is hard.

To most of us, whether in the world, the family life or the church, it is always hard to resign our place to another. Yet if we truly love and desire to serve, and that others can fill our place better, I fancy we will not find it hard.

The mother never counts it loss, nor shrinks, though she goes down into death for her child. And this is love, Christ emptied himself of all the glories of eternity to come down to rescue you and me. And this was love.

And you and I, the redeemed who wear only the sacred Name, will Christ forgive us and teach us how to love. Or if my heart is not attuned to this higher lesson, teach me then, the better lesson of selfishness than that which now I know. Teach me that if I would mount to higher grounds it must be on the stepping stones of my dear self. Stamp upon my selfish heart the truth that only by emptying my life can it be truly filled, that loss means highest gains, that death will lead to life.

THE NEW ORLEANS CONVENTION.

I note that the reason assigned for the small attendance at the Norfolk convention was that it was not advertised as largely as it might have been. The greatest event in the year is the International Convention of the Church of Christ and for this reason as soon as one convention is over and the time and place fixed for the next convention, we ought to begin to work to make it the greatest in our history. Time lost is opportunity wasted. Let us begin now to make the New Orleans convention the greatest in our missionary efforts. Let us go to New Orleans in great numbers that we may show that priest-ridden, saloon-ruled city, what a great people we are, and that we may know what a great missionary field Louisiana is.

Brother, you have wanted to go South. Plan to go next October when you can give and receive a blessing. W. M. Taylor and the Louisiana brethren are already at work to make this our greatest convention. "Go and do thou likewise."

CHILD LABOR DAY.

A Letter to Pastors and Churches.

The National Child Labor Committee takes this opportunity afforded by the kindness of The Christian Century to invite the pastors and churches of America to set apart Saturday, January 25, or Sunday, January 26, 1908, as Child Labor Day.

The awakening of America against the evil of child labor is evidenced by the enactment of improved laws in eighteen states and by the Congressional authorization of an investigation of the conditions of working women and children, within the past year. Such improvement has been made, under the light of public criticism that many sensational tales of little working children, true a decade ago, are based upon a description of conditions that no longer exist.

Despite these signs of improvement there are to-day hundreds of tender children among the two million employed, engaged in forms of labor that deny opportunity for health and education and that offer a serious menace to the moral and spiritual life. This sacrifice of childhood lays upon the church a heavy responsibility. It calls for a presentation of the subject in general and for special discussion of its local aspects.

The National Child Labor Committee is an organization of American citizens devoted to the study and prevention of child labor. The work is maintained entirely by voluntary subscriptions and includes investigations of child labor, efforts to secure more adequate laws and their enforcement in various states, and co-operation with school authorities for the readjustment of the school curriculum to the needs of an industrial age. That this work may be carried on effectively, the committee invites the churches throughout the country to aid by such offerings from the people as may be deemed wise, either on this special Child Labor Day, or at a more convenient time.

A multitude of organizations working independently can accomplish little against this widespread evil, but a coordination of the churches of America will be irresistible. It is our mission to represent you and to declare your convictions before Congress and before the governments of commonwealths of our republic.

Addresses, essays and reports from the leading American authorities on Child Labor are published by the committee. These publications describe the conditions of working children in various industries, the relaton of chld labor to the family, to health, to education and morals, and the efforts that are being made to protect our working children. These, together with a pamphlet containing special themes for pulpit addresses and for Sabbath school and young people's services, will be cheerfully sent upon application to the National Child Labor Committee, Owen R. Lovejoy, secretary, 105 East 22d Street, New York City.

EMINENT PREACHERS.

T. C. Williams. 4. Rev. Principal Edwards. 5. Rev. Elvet Lewis, London.

Other English preachers given high place are Rev. Silvester Horne, Rev. Thomas Phillips, the Bishop of London; Dr. Clifford, Dr. Horton, Rev. J. E. Rattenbury, Rev. Ensor Walters, Dr. Gore, and Dr. Fairbairn, and in Scotland, Dr. Stalker, Rev. G. H. Morrison, Dr. MacGregor, Rev. Wallace Williamson, Rev. James Black, and Rev. John McNeill.

The theological bias of either the journal or its readers is shown by the absence of Canon Hensley Henson and Rev. R. J. Campbell, from the English list, either of whom would certainly rank high in a popular choice.

PARABOLICAL OR DIABOLICAL

Hugh Wayt.

Another parable was put forth unto them, saying, the Church is like unto a stage coach. The minister is in the lead to guide and inspire. The membership is back of him to encourage and help. But how soon the passengers separate into three classes! They reach the foot of the hill. First-class passengers keep their seats. Second-class passengers get out and walk. Third-class passengers get out and push. And lo, and behold, the majority of the Church are first-class passengers. The minister inspires, conspires and perspires. He struggles and pulls up the long hill, and a large percentage of the members ride.

LITERARY NOTE.

Ex-President Grover Cleveland has written a remarkable article on "Our People and Their Ex-Presidents" for The Youth's Companion. In it Mr. Cleveland says:

"As I am the only man now living who could at this time profit by the ideas I have advocated, I hope my sincerity will not be questioned when I say that I have dealt with the subject without the least thought of personal interest or desire for personal advantage. I am not in need of aid from the public Treasury. I hope and believe that I have provided for myself and those dependent upon me a comfortable maintenance, within the limits of accustomed prudence and economy, and that those to whom I owe the highest earthly duty will not want when I am gone. These conditions have permitted me to treat with the utmost freedom a topic which involves no personal considerations and only has to do in my mind with conditions that may arise in the future, but are not attached to the ex-President of to-day; and I am sure that I am actuated only by an ever-present desire that the fairness and sense of justice charactertisic of true Americanism shall neither fail nor be obscured."

CHRISTMAS LETTER OF CHEER.

(The following letter of cheer was sent to all the missionaries of the American Christian Missionary Society.—Ed.)

My dear fellow worker:

Another year—the best in our history—is all but gone. The general results have been gratifying; our income was much enlarged, and sower and reaper both rejcice.

And now the sweetest season of the year has come—Christmas! But Christmas would be robbed of much of its joy for us if you could not rejoice in this time

"Of glinting star, of manger low
Of love that sets the world aglow,
While love-gifts swiftly wing their flight
From homes that gleam with Christmas light."

We are very happy that the Lord makes it possible, even in the time of financial difficulty, to send you herewith, and somewhat in advance, your salary till January 1st, 1908.

May the birthday of our divine Lord be bright for you and yours; may his presence and peace pervade your heart and home; may good will abound, and the sweet spirit of the Christ-child make all the sad world glad. May every blessing be yours.

Fraternally yours,
Wm. J. Wright.

Not In It With Boston.

A Bostonian died, and when he arrived at St. Peter's gate he was asked the usual questions: "What is your name and where are you from?"

The answer was: "Mr. So-and-So from Boston."

"You may come in," said St. Peter, "but I know you won't like it."—Christian Register.

From Our Growing Churches

TELEGRAMS

Mt. Carmel, Ill., Dec. 30.—Fifty-four accessions here yesterday. 186 in seven days of invitations. Last year, working with pastors and churches and our assistants as workers together with God, we reached a few over five thousand in twelve months. This year in ten months, we have reached 8,004. "Thine is the Kingdom and the power and the Glory for ever."

Chas. Reign Scoville.

Valdosta, Ga., Dec. 28.—The Wilson Lintt meeting closed Dec. 22. Sixty-nine additions, thirty-six men and boys. Church greatly blessed.

Richard W. Wallace.

ARKANSAS.

Ft. Smith.—We have recently enjoyed a splendid series of sermons from W. R. Lloyd of Lexington, Ky. His sermons did us great good. While we did not have many additions, we rejoice in other results that will mean much to our work here. Our people are moving forward to larger things.

E. T. Edmonds.

CALIFORNIA.

San Francisco.—Dr. H. O. Breeden conducted an all day evangelistic conference at the First Christian Church, Oakland, Calif., on December 16th, which was well attended by the ministers and church workers of San Francisco and adjacent parts of the state. A fellowship luncheon between forenoon and afternoon sessions was a feature.

E. W. Darst and I. N. McCash gave splendid addresses, the former on "The Need of Evangelism on the Pacific Coast," the latter on "The Pastor Evangelist."

Dr. Breeden delivered two stirring themes, "Evangelistic Problems" and "Evangelistic Movements." Words of appreciation on my part would, I am sure prove inadequate. The meeting expressed itself by a rising vote of thanks.

Otto B. Irelan.
Secretary Christian Ministers' Association.

Visalia.—Closed meeting Dec. 22d. Church much revived. Christ was preached in great power by Victor Dorris. The church has a happier grasp of our plan and is at work. Dorris faithful to the Gospel; to the pastor and church at large. He is devoting all his time to the work of an evangelist and will go anywhere. Address him at North Yakima, Washington.

I. H. Teel, Pastor.

CANADA.

J. A. L. Romig, Superintendent of Missions, is in a great meeting at Yellow Grass, Sask., Canada. The meeting is two weeks old, with 32 additions, nearly all by confessnon. This church is only two months old, and was organized by A. R. Adams of Milestone. Through the instrumentality of Bro. Adams the Baptists voted to unite with the new church and this gives the Church of Christ the largest membership in the town. The church has extended Bro. Adams a unanimous call to the pastorate at a much larger salary than he is now receiving, but he has declined to accept it, as the Milestone church wishes him to remain with them.

Charles Bailey, Clerk.

ILLINOIS.

Mattoon.—Our work prospers, with a good, steady growth. Four confessions and two by statement since last report. The fellowship of the different churches is delightful. Some time ago we had a week of union meetings, closing with a union communion service. In the last year I have exchanged pulpits with the Methodist, Presbyterian and Congregational ministers.

Reds and Blues Contest Buttons

REDS AND BLUES Contest plans have proved wonderfully successful in Y. M. C. A. work and are proving more so in Sunday school work. By making use of our Reds and Blues plans you can easily double your school membership in a month or six weeks. You can break up irregular attendance in a very short time. You can raise large sums of money for your needs. You can secure church attendance, bringing of lesson helps, bringing of collection, coming on time.

The Reds and Blues plans please because they set everybody at work heartily and enthusiastically and because each leaves the school in a healthy condition when the contest is ended.

Each Reds and Blues plan requires dividing the school into two sections—Reds and Blues and appointing captains, one or more, for each side, a social or other treat to be given at the close of the contest, when those on the winning side receive ice-cream and cake, and the losers crackers and cheese, or some other attraction to celebrate the close of the contest and the victory. Treat is to be paid for by the school. Complete instructions sent with each order.

Price, in lots of 10 or more (sent assorted, one-half each color), 1½c each, postpaid; 50 or more, 1c each, postpaid.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY CO., Chicago.

I recommended the minister to the Presbyterian church. He has been with them more than a year and they are more than pleased with him. I had labored with him in Wisconsin, and felt confident that he was a good man for this church and for our city. The time has come for us, as a people, to do something more than teach union; we must practice it. Miss Ada Boyd was with us and gave our church a new vision of missions. Miss Anna Davidson, State President of the C. W. B. M., was with the church C. W. B. M. Day, greatly pleasing and helping all. Nine new members were added to the auxiliary and a Young Ladies' Society organized. We are in a Bible School contest with Canton, Ill. Attendance, offerings, number of Bibles and number of teachers, the points considered, it is helping the school. The church received its friends New Year's afternoon and evening. Light refreshments were served in the afternoon and a musical and literary program in the evening.

David N. Wetzel, Pastor.

Eureka.—Spent thirty-one days with the little church at Baders, Ill. There were thirty additions to the church and the congregation was more than doubled in working capacity. This is the third year I have served this church as evangelist. They have not had the benefit of a pastor between meetings. Considering the circumstances their faithfulness and Christian growth has been truly wonderful. Too much cannot be said in praise of the few devoted members who have stood by the work. They will now be able to hire a minister and move along more rapidly with the Master's business. We closed the meeting Christmas Eve, with roll call and love feast, followed by Christmas tree and treat for the Sunday school. The dear people showed great kindness to the Lord's servant, and loaded him down with many valuable tokens of their regard.

L. R. Thomas.

Niantic.—Closed a three weeks' meeting here last Lord's day, with 23 added, 12 of whom were by baptism. Evangelist A. P. Cobb of Decatur, Ill., assisted by Song Evangelist Miss Pearl Critchfield of Murray, Iowa, led us. They won the esteem and praise of all for their work's sake. Bros. O. W. Laurence, Charles Bloom and J. H. Bristoe, neighbor ministers, encouraged us by visits during the meeting. One hundred and ten accessions here during 22 months.

J. Will Walters, Minister.

Lexington.—Charles D. Hougham just closed a three weeks' meeting here with 12 additions, all adults, Bro. Hougham knows the gospel and preaches it as though he believed it to be true. We had 21 additions during 1907.

B. H. Sealock.

Dec. 31.

Lanark.—We had a great day here yesterday. The splendid new church, one of the finest in finish, furnishing and facilities, I have seen anywhere, was dedicated free of debt. It cost about $10,000; about $5,000 raised yesterday, in spite of rain and slush. There is great joy among the members, and in the heart of the faithful, patient, hard working pastor, D. F. Seyster. Continue in a week's meeting.

Sumner T. Martin.

Dec. 30.

INDIANA.

Tipton.—The work moves along. Three additions last Sunday by baptism.

L. H. Stine.

IOWA.

Des Moines.—Ministers' meeting Dec. 30. Central (Idleman), four confessions, three by letter; University Place (Medbury) one confession; Valley Junction (Boggess) one by letter; Chesterfield, one by statement, one reclaimed; Capital Hill (Van Horn) two by letter, two confession. W. J. Lockhart visited with us.

John McD. Horne.

KANSAS.

Fredonia.—Over two hundred additions here in a meeting of three weeks, with Richard Martin as evangelist. Mostly baptisms and chiefly men, with overflowing crowds at every service. Worldlings and denominationalists of every description have accepted the gospel plan.

Richard Martin, Evangelist.

MISSOURI.

Lancaster.—Meeting will no doubt close to-night; has been running 24 days; 152 added.

F. A. Hedges, Pastor,
Joel Brown, Evangelist.

Springfield.—There were three additions to the First Church this week, one by letter, and two by baptism.

Dec. 30. N. M. Ragland.

Platte City.—We had a fine businessman take membership with us by confession last Lord's day. This makes nine that have not been otherwise reported. Five were by letter.

Harry E. Tucker.

UTAH.

Salt Lake City.—One addition by letter in regular services December 22.

Dr. Albert Buxton.

Mr. Spriggings (gently): "My dear, a Boston man was shot at by a burglar and his life was saved by a button which the bullet struck."

Mrs. Spriggins: "Well, what of it?"

Mr. Spriggings: "Nothing, only the button must have been on."—Sacred Heart Review.

SETTLE THAT SUNDAY-SCHOOL PROBLEM!

ARE YOU A SUPERINTENDENT, LOOKING FOR PLANS?

The City Sunday-School (Brown) is brimful of ideas which the author has used in making his school one of the largest in the world. Devote a teachers' meeting to the discussion of these plans. 25 cents.

ARE YOU A PASTOR, ANXIOUS TO HELP YOUR SCHOOL?

Many other pastors have solved this problem, and a pastor tells how they have done it in The Sunday-School and the Pastor (Faris). 25 cents.

DO YOU WANT TO INTEREST THE PARENTS?

Surely. But how to do it—that's the question. It would help you to know the plans of others and see the letters and other matter sent to the homes by a successful superintendent. All this is described in The Sunday-School and the Home (Brown). 25 cents.

DOES THE PRIMARY DEPARTMENT DRAG?

Why not get a little booklet of tested plans to run itself, till it ran down. The Home Department of To-Day (Mrs. Stebbins) breathes the spirit of success from every page of methods. 25 cents.

ARE YOU PUZZLED OVER ABSENTEE SCHOLARS?

A copy of Sunday-School Records, Reports and Recognitions (Fox) and a few hours of counsel between superintendent and secretary may bring a successful solution. The book tells about records of every kind, for all departments, and where to get them. Make your own choice. 50 cents.

LOVE AND LOYALTY.

By Jenkin Lloyd Jones.

Twenty-three sermons by the noted pastor. With the exception of the introductory discourse, they were all delivered as "class sermons" for successive graduating classes, and the text is in every case the class motto. The collection thus represents a cross-section of a quarter-century from a busy city ministry. Composed for boys and girls, the discourses should appeal particularly to others of like age, but anything that appeals to the young interests their elders likewise. The book is therefore issued in the belief that many will find a value in the noble ideals here set forth.

The object of Education Day is not primarily to secure money but to develop the acquaintance between the church and the college. But since the heart follows the treasure it is well to give every member of every church an opportunity on this day to make a practical expression of his interest in the cause of Christian education.

The aggregate value of property held by our colleges and schools is now $4,011,304, their total endowment amounts to $2,067,749. On Education Day, January 17, every church ought to consider earnestly the importance of having a bequest for education in every will made by one of its members. There is an increasing number of our noblest men and women of means who give annually hundreds of thousands to this sacred cause. They are making their offerings more generous this year than ever before. They have probably remembered the college in their wills but they wish also to see some of their money rendering service while they live. Disciples of less means should have the privilege of the same fellowship by each making an offering according to his ability on Education Day.

One thousand one hundred and four young men are in these schools preparing for the ministry. We are asking for a thousand recruits to this number this year and the colleges must be prepared to take care of them when they come. Let everybody help.

W. R. Warren,
Centennial Secretary.

Vol. XXVI. CHICAGO, ILL., JANUARY 9, 1909. No. 2

"Tristis Italia"

If Ramah wept over the departing children of Israel as they wended their way past the tomb of Rachel on the road to exile, much more is Rome called on to mourn the slaughter of her children in the earthquake-devastated regions of lower Italy and Sicily. No horror of recent years compares with this in magnitude and completeness of ruin. One of the fairest regions of the earth, the paradise of the winter tourist, and lover of nature, has been swept by a wave of destruction from which it cannot recover for half a century.

Not Rome alone, the mother of Italy, but the mother-heart of the world has been touched by this inexpressible tragedy. Already swift ships are speeding to the relief of the homeless and stricken people. The horrors of the event can never be known. Faint echoes of the awful ruin wrought came from survivors, but the hand of oblivion covers the larger number of those terrible scenes that must have been enacted. Perhaps it is a merciful hand, for the full recital of the facts would no doubt be too harrowing for recall.

At such a moment it is impossible to avoid putting to ourself and one's faith certain questions which demand, if not adequate answer, at least consideration. What is the cause of such a calamity? Is man in any degree responsible? What is God's part in it? Did it come about by the divine will? If so where is that mercy of God, that tenderness of which prophets, apostles and our Lord have told us? Does not such an event stagger our Christian confidence, and cause us to lift white faces to the heaven that seems not to hear?

Three attitudes may be held toward events of this sort, and God's relation to them. The first is one of denial that there is any such relation. God may be conceived as either non-existent or uninterested in human affairs. He is simply the convenient way in which we describe the reign of law, the aggregation of forces which make up the universe; or he is too transcendental, too far off and too unrelated to our problem of life to concern himself with us or to render us aid in such distress. This will be the explanation of the atheist or the agnostic according to the place one gives to deity in his scheme of the universe. To the men who hold this view it would be as useless to think of God's part in this tragedy as responsible and purposeful as to ascribe volition and emotion to the machine that crushes the rock for our streets.

A second view is quite the opposite of this. According to this theory God is the direct cause of all that transpires. No event is outside of his notice and his directing interest. He is immediately involved in every event. All the movements of nature are the results of his purpose and power, directly applied. Such a thing as law, save as a human enactment, or a mandate for human obedience, is not to be considered. At every moment God decides what we will do. His decision is right because he makes it. For purposes of his own he creates the world and man. For purposes no less his own he turns man to destruction and says, "Return, ye children of men." He carries them away as with a flood. In the morning they are like grass which grows up. In the evening it is cut down and withers. If evil befalls, it is God's good pleasure. "Shall there be evil in the city and the Lord have not done it?" "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away." This is the Hebrew view of God and of trouble. It is found throughout the Old Testament. It knows nothing of second causes. It looks with tear-dimmed face on the havoc about it, and suffers in silence because God has done it. It is conscious of no irreverence in charging God with evil, because it submits to what it deems his heavy hand, and only seeks to know why, if that be possible.

But a third answer to the problem is offered by the teaching of Jesus regarding the Father, and its harmony with the enlarging body of our knowledge of nature, that other great revelation of God. Both teach us that God is reality, and that his in the heart of a Father. In order to accomplish his purposes of good he makes out his great designs according to pinciples or methods which we call the laws of the universe. These he does not change, because they are the best. He is not the creature of these laws, but he uses them as his ways of working. In accordance with them all nature moves. To violate them would bring havoc, not merely local and partial, but essential and limitless. But these laws are the rules by which all things change from lesser to greater forms, from lower to higher. Change involves disturbance, suffering, tragedy. No improvement comes without the displacement, revolution, ruin which seems at first wholly destructive. Not an excavation is made for a building that a thousand forms of life are not called upon to perish before the foundation can be laid. Not a building rises to strength and beauty in the heart of a great city that from one to a score of human lives are not sacrificed. The disaster in Italy is only a more vivid and impressive illustration of the law of change and sacrifice. The internal fires of the earth die gradually down. The crust of the planet shrinks. The forces that once upheaved mountains now only shake down walls. It is terrible in its demonstration of colossal power. but it works out slowly and with the throes of pain the long history of the continents.

But this is not all. Man learns in the school of God the art of mastering even these hidden and deadly energies. Once the plague, the cholera and the pestilence walked abroad and reaped their horrible harvests of death. Why do they no longer scourge the world? Because God has been teaching man in the great school of nature and experience. Our famine was a recognized and expected visitant. Today in western lands it is unknown, and even in the east it gradually yields to better agriculture and more adequate transportation. Once ships went forth to take their chances of storm and wreck. Today the signal service along the coasts, the wireless telegraph and the marvels of ship construction render water travel far safer than journeying by land.

It is the task of science—and science is only man's ordered knowledge of God's work—to sweep away the remaining monsters that threaten man's life—the white plague, the aridness of the desert, and the devastations of volcanoes and earthquakes. These last will come by the location of danger-belts of the earth's surface, in which cities can only be built with due knowledge of the peril involved and such ability to forewarn the menaced localities that escape for all will be possible.

These are God's ways of educating men. No growth in power or in knowledge is without toil, peril, suffering, sacrifice. But in these experiences we come more fully to know our Father as no untroubled and unsympathetic being, above the storm. But the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the God of pity and of love. No human sufferings are beyond his notice. But they are a part of our growth, and how small a part they play in the long drama of any individual experience. The suffering, at the worst, is but for moments or years. But life is eternal if we are willing to pay the price of tuition in God's school.

Meanwhile the most precious lesson of this tragedy is the sense of brotherhood which it brings. The wires that flash the intelligence of gold and silver hurrying to the relief of the stricken are binding the world together in a fresh experience of brotherhood. The ships that carry supplies are the messengers of peace and good will. This is the interpretation which our blessed faith gives to an event so sombre as that which has brooded over the opening year. May its significance not be cast in the facing of our personal problems of suffering and service.

THE TREND OF EVENTS

By Alva W. Taylor

METHODIST FEDERATION FOR SOCIAL SERVICE

The great M. E. Church has a Federation for Social Service. The first national conference was recently held in St. Louis. The dominant notes were that the social crusade must be religious at bottom and that the church is a means to an end, not an end within itself, and that the present church agencies need to be more largely directed to doing of the social work that the times demand. The undenominational social settlement received hearty commendation which is another evidence of the growing fact of more Christianity and less churchianity.

THE GREAT HINDU NATIONAL CONGRESS

The great National Congress of India is now in session at Madras. There are 2,000 delegates in attendance. This congress is fast proving that India is preparing a body of men and developing a national patriotism and unity that would make self-government progressively possible. It represents all classes, religions and nationalities that can send educated representation. India is the most heterogeneous of lands but the education that Christian missions and the colonial government are giving is fast breaking down divisive lines, caste is beginning to disintegrate, the petty states are taking on metropolitan interest and patriotism is dawning in the land. The congress has already heartily approved John Morley's plan for a fuller native representation on the governmental boards and in the national council and will have a wide influence for peace in the present turmoil—peace so long as the trend is toward nationalism.

LABOR BECOMING CAPITALIST

The great shipbuilding firm of Furness, Withy & Co., of London, has recently proposed to its workmen a scheme that will do good to the prophetic heart of the Laird of Skibo whose dream of the end of all labor troubles in his latest book was noted in these columns recently. They offered their employees the choice of one of two proposals. One was that the workmen should take over the entire plant, paying for same on easy terms and at a price to be fixed by assessors agreed upon. The second was that they should buy shares of stock to any amount by having five per cent of their wages applied to the purchase, the company guaranteeing four per cent on such moneys and agreeing to divide all profits after due allowance for depreciation and five per cent on all other stock had been deducted. The union discussed the matter maturely and accepted the second proposition, further agreeing to arbitrate all labor difficulties, giving the plan one year's trial, after which it will be permanently voted upon. It is confidently believed the result will be a permanent partnership of employer and employee and an end of all disagreements through the community of interest. Seven of the London Gas companies are trying a like experiment.

WHO SHALL CARE FOR THEIR INJURED WORKMEN?

This is one of the vital problems clamoring for settlement. Many a poor man has been sent to poverty in the arts of peace by being injured in the performance of duty and his family left helpless while the wheels whirred on and the world was made the richer. Young men who enlisted in the Cuban campaign are pensioned for ills accruing which only a physician can find. What of the mighty army of workers? Congress will consider the question for federal and interstate commerce employees and the President urges that it must enact a model law for the district of Columbia which he would like to see made a sort of national experiment station or model for the nation in all social legislation. Thirty-one legislatures will meet this winter and bills are ready to be introduced in at least fourteen of them. Most of them will doubtless be called upon to consider the matter. In Illinois the Industrial Insurance Commission, of which Prof. Charles R. Henderson, of Chicago, is the most active member, will ask for a law along the lines laid down in the bill introduced two years ago. It will provide that an employer may be released from liability by signing an agreement with employees in which each agrees to pay half the expense of an insurance policy covering all accidents. This is strongly criticized on the ground that the employer's share will soon be assessed against the employee by a corresponding reduction in his wages which means he must bear his own losses by accident entirely while the employer is relieved of even his present liability. In most of the proposed bills accident through the carelessness of a fellow worker does not relieve the employer as heretofore.

A GATUN DAM ALLITERATION

No doubt many of the authorities are tempted to alliteration over the criticism of the Gatun dam. Sensational reports are constant about some part of the great Panama enterprise as there is bound to be in a free country and especially where a certain type of journalism is typified ethically by the remark of a New York editor who condemned "journalistic ethics" to a place that plays in this alliteration also. The latest is that the great dam, a mile and a half long, a third of a mile wide at the base and 135 feet high, was sinking. As a matter of fact it is sinking—right where the engineers designed that it should. An old French channel, filled with silt, runs under it and the rock is sinking down to bedrock bottom just as it was planned. Next!

INDUSTRIAL CO-OPERATION

The report of the Fortieth Annual Congress of the Coöperative Union of Great Britain is out. The past year added more than 100,000 members to the Union which now numbers nearly 2,000,000 coöperators representing over 8,000,000 people or one-fifth of the entire population of the United Kingdom. They did more than half a billion of business the past year, an increase of $39,000,000 over last year and paid $60,000,000 profits, an increase of over $5,000,000. The various stores, factories, and agencies represent a paid-in capital of nearly a quarter of a billion, considerable proportion of which is the accumulation of bonuses on purchases. $19,000,000 is held in reserve for "days of depression." They have helped 50,000 members build homes and "Garden Cities" and "Garden Suburbs" are being founded. They also expect to remove their factories to the country and the whole movement is developing into a humanitarian rather than a mere financial project. Instead of the competition that leaves many unemployed, coöperation tends to provide bread for all who will labor for bread. Not until man has enough to eat will he realize that he does not live by bread alone, they proclaim. Last year they spent $460,000 for libraries, scholarships, publications etc. They say "our ideals are our most valuable assets," and "coöperation is a ship and all that board her must belong to the crew."

In the past decade the number of coöperative societies has increased in Denmark from 310 to 1,200; in Hungary from 20 to 2,453; in Switzerland, 2138 have been founded in the past seven years; in Roumania 2,000 in the past ten years; in Sweden 3162 in the past nine years; in Germany there were 25,714 at the close of 1906; in Finland 1016 were formed in the past seven years and in Holland more than 1,000 in the past eleven years. In the United States the farmers of Minnesota have 1,000 coöperative creameries and creameries, elevators and stores are being organized all through the Northern Middle states. In the four months of July-October, this year 138 such new organizations were reported in these states.

THE FIRST BONA-FIDE INTERNATIONAL COURT

The first international tribunal with full powers is that of the five Central American Republics. They have been in a constant melee for many years and, tiring of the thing, concluded to try to do one with another just what the states within a nation do and settle their troubles through a court of justice. The tribunal consists of one representative from each of the nations represented and each is pledged to abide by all decisions. The first real test has just been successfully passed. Honduras accused Guatamala and San Salvador of encouraging certain disaffected patriots of the Central American type in efforts to organize a revolution against her. The case was duly submitted to their tribunal and the claim found not justified, the two judges from the disinterested states agreeing with those of the two accused and the representative of Honduras alone failing to sign the findings. For a territory so easily blown into a gale of passion to so quietly accept the finding is significant of what might be done by a permanent mandatory tribunal at The Hague. Some of the South American countries have some unsettled disputes which will probably be referred to this new tribunal and there is a feeling that Venezuelan cases should also find settlement there. This neck of continents that has been as tempestuous as a channel between two seas may yet point the way and demonstrate the practicability of a mandatory court of justice between nations. It may be here added that Argentina and Chili some time ago signed a permanent arbitration treaty and sold their navies. Lately there has been some jingo scare in Argentina because Brazil is building a navy, but the last Bulletin of the International Bureau of American Republics outlines a treaty that is well under way between them in which they agree to arbitrate all but those questions "that affect the constitutional precepts of the two countries." They do not agree upon a permanent court but do agree to appoint a court for each case that arises and to abide by its decision.

CRIMINAL OR REVOLUTIONIST

Deep interest and no little excitement has been occasioned in Chicago by the efforts of the Russian government to secure the extradition of Christian Rudovitz, a Lettish workingman or peasant, on the charge of murder. The question is asked why a country that has its hands more than full with police matters should be so interested in running down common criminals and especially as most of the European nations are willing that we should have those classes and as the cost of this effort to get the humble peasant is very expensive. Now Russia is in the full tide of reaction from the recent wave of revolution which swept over the country before the close of the war with Japan. It can never recede to the old dead level but much that seemed gained is being lost. Cossacks and police are striking terror to the hearts of the revolutionary and the dreadful drum-head court is pronouncing doom upon hundreds in the customary medieval manner. It is believed that the effort to get such men as Rudovitz and Pouren, the peasant whose case has recently been agitating New York, is a piece of strategy. We do not extradite political offenders. Our nation was founded by such and we believe in the right of revolution and disbelieve in punishment for political nonconformity. We do not believe in treason as such, yet we know that treason in such a land as Russia is simple patriotism in a land like our own. To defeat this state of affairs the Russian police powers are trying to secure these revolutionaries on criminal charges, take them home and execute them as a warning that such as they need no longer expect to escape to either England or America, the only two lands where they are now assured of protection. It seems that Rudovitz had part in a revolutionary meeting where three spies of the government were condemned to death and either had part in the execution or at least had knowledge of it. The Commissioner ordered his extradition as a common criminal but appeal has been taken to the State Department and additional evidence in his favor is now found. He admits having taken part in the sentence but not in the execution of it.

A Centennial Event

We are to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the publication of the "Declaration and Address" by Thomas Campbell, at Pittsburg, October 11-17, next. It is believed we will meet 50,000 strong. The opinion has been expressed that the attendance of the Jubilee Convention at Cincinnati, in 1899, will be quadrupled. Already preparations are being made in a number of churches for large delegations. And Australia, England, Japan, and possibly other nations will be represented.

"Where the Scriptures speak we speak" has been our emphatic slogan for the past century. Marvelous victories have been won in this and other lands. We number more than a million in this country alone. Our simple New Testament plea has girded the earth with mission stations. At Pittsburg we will recount these and other victories and rejoice together that the Lord has been able to use us in His gracious, world-wide purposes.

During all this Centennial year let us seek the clear and lofty faith, the evangelistic temper, and the consistent piety of the great and good men of one hundred years ago, who sought to restore the New Testament church in teaching and practice and spirit. Past achievements, present opportunities, and all the glorious promises of a reunited church and the evangelization of the whole world, summon us to a more complete consecration of our lives and to our best and most loyal efforts.

As our churches approach the annual offering for world-wide missions this great Centennial year, they will be cheered as they recount the things done last year. In spite of a widespread, financial depression and an unparalleled, exciting, political campaign, a real advance was made. But the situation is altogether different now. Business is awaking to new activities. The storm of political agitation is passed. Everywhere there is confidence and hope. We believe our people are ready as never before for a united, enthusiastic, effective step toward the evangelization of the pagan world.

Let us remind ourselves that the basis of our efforts to bring the world to Christ is the Word of the living God. This was the weapon of our pioneers. This is God's great instrument for the conversion of the world. We are custodians of the gospel which is the power of God unto salvation. Before Christ the prophets saw the world redeemed through the gospel. Christ was God's missionary. "As my Father hath sent me," said Jesus, "So I send you." The apostles were missionaries of Christ. Indeed, the very word "apostle" means "missionary." "Apostle," "missionary," "one sent," "messenger," all mean the same thing. The New Testament church went everywhere preaching the Word. Preaching was the one business of the apostles and of the primitive church. A preaching church is loyal, spiritual, united, aggressive and a growing church. As a Christian people we have nothing to teach but the gospel and nothing to do but to preach the gospel. With Barton W. Stone, who embraced this plea as early as 1804, we can say, "Let all Christians, therefore, unite in prayer, that God would send forth faithful laborers unto His harvest; that He would collect and unite into one His scattered flock, that the whole world may believe in Christ the Savior of sinners." This is the kernel of our plea, the union of the people of God to the end that the world may be evangelized.

March 7th will be indeed a Centennial event. It will be to us a great day, a day to be remembered in all our after lives. It will be to us God's day. Think not of it as an ordinary day. It will be a day full of possibilities, far-reaching. We must make it a real Centennial event. Prayer and pains and preparation and vision and a holy purpose will lead us to one of the crowning occasions of all our splendid history.

It will be well for all to keep in touch with the office of the Foreign Society for information, for suggestions and all necessary helps.

Remember March 7th!

Paragraphic Editorials

What effect will the Emmanuel movement have on our attitude toward Christian Science? Does it not involve a practical recognition of the truth of Christian Science? We think not. On the contrary we predict that the frank recognition of the truth in this modern cult puts us in a position to expose the whole system of presumption and fraud by which thousands are being ensnared. The scientific-psychic movement in therapeutics and religion is the worst foe of the unscientific-psychic cult named Christian Science. The impossible conceptions upon which this preposterous religion is built cannot permanently support a structure which men take as seriously as they do their religion. Christian Science has pointed out an unperceived truth, has indeed called the attention of the thinking as well as the unthinking world to it. But that truth is now being shucked from its metaphysical wrapping and put into the guidance of sane and informed leaders. Meanwhile, unless Christian Science greatly modifies its claims it will surely be called suddenly to account for imposition which not infrequently becomes criminal.

At the Chicago Ministers' meeting last Monday one of the pastors who has been in the city a number of years expressed in the tenderest way his appreciation of O. F. Jordan's article in last week's Century on Chicago Disciples. This is but one of the many words of praise of Mr. Jordan's page that we receive. Chicago is pivotal for the nation. Considering its importance as a city it is the most susceptible field for the cultivation of the essential Christianity for which the Disciples stand. Church prejudices are not deep here as in older cities—indeed, in one of its aspects this is the fact most deplored: that people have so little interest in religion that they haven't any prejudices on the subject. Mr. Jordan's description of the difficulties of the work here was a revelation even to some Chicago people, and must have been the more so to those who live outside the city. The Chicago page of the Christian Century promises to grow increasingly interesting from week to week.

The distressing news comes to us in a heart-breaking letter written by himself that Mr. P. C. Macfarlane was suddenly bereaved of his wife just as he was about to leave Alameda, Cal., for his new work as leader of the Men's Brotherhood movement. Mrs. Macfarlane died a few hours after giving birth to a baby boy, the fourth child born to their home. The all but crushing blow fell as Mr. Macfarlane was leaving the church services on Sunday morning on his way to the hospital. This sorrowful news will strike grief to hundreds of hearts in our brotherhood who know Mrs. Macfarlane to love her. She was a tender and most intelligent companion of her husband in all his church work, furnishing inspiration and motives for his useful life. The entire brotherhood, to whom he now belongs, shares the grief of Mr. Macfarlane in the tenderest sympathy. The Editors of the Christian Century pray that the great Companion may be the stay of the stricken household in these lonely days.

In preparing the minds of our church people for the March offering to Foreign Missions much good use should be made of President Roosevelt's article on the "Awakening of China" printed in the Outlook of November 28. Certain minds unpersuaded by the message of preacher or missionary may perhaps yield to the masterly statement of our statesman president. Mr. Roosevelt concludes that the missionary is not simply saving souls in a theological sense but is quickening society and establishing ideals of such a sort as to make business and intellectual and social co-operation possible on a large scale between the orient and the occident. He concludes his article thus:

"The awakening of China is one of the great events of our age, and the remedy for the 'yellow peril', whatever that may be, is not the repression of life, but the cultivation and direction of life. Here at home we believe that the remedy for popular discontent is not repression but justice and education. Similarly the best way to avert possible peril, commercial or military, from the great Chinese people, is by behaving righteously toward them and by striving to inspire a righteous life among them. Our Christian missions have for their object not only the saving of souls, but the imparting of a life that makes possible the Kingdom of God on the earth. It seems to me that there is no place where there is better opportunity today to do this work than in China, and I earnestly hope that we can attract the attention of the great public outside the so-called missionary circles to the possibility and practicability, no less than to the importance, of the work. As Bishop Brent has said, now is the time for the West to implant its ideals in the Orient, in such fashion as to minimize the chance of a dreadful future clash between two radically different and hostile civilizations; if we wait until tomorrow, we may find that we have waited too long."

No minister can accomplish much in two years of residence in a parish. He can only scratch the surface of his community. He may add many to the church, but such results may have little spiritual significance. What tells in a ministry is not eloquence, or hustling or manipulating, but the minister's own spiritual character which expresses itself through these activities and talents. And it takes years for this personal character to establish itself in the hearts of the people of a community so as to be spiritually effective there. The custom of long pastorates among us would change the type of our churches in a radical fashion. The difference between typical Methodist and Presbyterian churches could be explained by the difference in the average lengths of their pastorates. We consider Mr. Oeschger's article in this issue a helpful suggestion making toward longer pastorates. But the cause of our short-lived ministeries lies deeper than the technical contract of engagement, as we are sure Mr. Oeschger will agree. Our ministers themselves, as well as the churches, hold too lightly the pastoral engagement.

A pastor was telling us the other day of his purpose to move to another field. "My church," he said, "is at flood-tide now. I think I should resign before any trouble appears or any ebb of our prosperity. That will leave them in a good condition to get a new pastor, and it puts me in a position to command a prominent parish for my new field." He had been with this church two years. Another pastor in a good sized town was regretting the fact that his work was completed in that community because there were no more people there to be converted. He had the strongest church in the place, and had received so many accessions in the four years of his pastorate that a religious canvass of the town showed only an insignificant group of unattached residents. This condition he urged as a reason why he should relinquish the parish and seek a new field for himself. These two instances were instructive to us of the insufficient conceptions which ministers do themselves have of their work. The first conversation betrayed the fact that the minister knew his success was more apparent than real, that he had been using high pressure, unspiritual methods, and that when the fire came to try his work—as it comes to every man—it would prove to be, for the most part, wood, hay and stubble. His desire for a "change" was perfectly natural. The other man simply lacked vision of his big opportunity or else was conscious of his spiritual and mental exhaustion.

When one thinks of it, it requires a soul richly equipped with knowledge and sympathy to minister to the same congregation year after year. The preacher must have foundations of culture and of spirituality laid good and deep in his soul if he hopes to be able to maintain a long pastorate. The "barrel" of sermons is soon used up, and even sooner the "barrel" of social amenities. If when the novelty of the new preacher with his new methods and his revivalistic vigor is worn off, the people discover below the surface a selfish or a lean soul, or an indolent intellect whose pigeon-holes are filled with scraps of ideas picked up years ago, the days of that pastorate will certainly be numbered. With all its chances for dissimulation we know of no calling in which the real man will so surely be discovered in the long run as in the ministry.

The long-pastorate minister must have opened within him the well of water springing up into enduring life. His touch with God must be vital and real, constantly renewing his soul with fresh enrichment of grace. His touch with truth must be vital and real, constantly renewing his mind with fresh enrichment of knowledge. His people soon become wearied of ideas drawn from a cistern. But truth drawn from a living well is ever fresh. New books, live literature, and leisure in which to read and meditate are indispensable to a preacher who would really feed the flock of God through a continuous ministry of years. And with the college rests the secret of giving the young minister a taste, not for the old cistern water of dogma and tradition, but for the fresh stream of knowledge flowing through the midst of our modern civilization.

The Sin of the Heretic

By Harry F. Burns

What is the sin of the "heretic"? What is his offense? It is in a word, non-conformity. The sentence of the unprejudiced judge is, "I find no fault in him." His brethren cry, "Crucify him." And his offense—it is that he differs from them in his thinking and perchance in some of his teaching. He fails to conform to the accepted standards of the group with which he is associated. He is out of fashion; if not because clinging to an outgrown fashion, he accepts standards not yet generally accepted. To be out of fashion is to be out of the world, in a very real sense; it is to be out of sympathetic association with others. The passport to societies, "sets," "clicks" or "clubs," is conformity; either natural and normal, or artificial and harmful. This demand for uniformity is so strong as to be able to prescribe with considerable definiteness, not only the style of dress, and rules of etiquette, but even standards of thinking and teaching.

Nowhere is this more evident than in question of politics and of religion. At the peril of his life, the subject of a king may refuse to conform to the royal decree. The first task of the victorious party in Greece or Rome was to put to death the leaders of the opposing party—that they might thus insure conformity to their demands. Jeremiah and Isaiah were victims of the demand for conformity to a mistaken and wicked political policy. To Daniel and his friends was given the alternative, "bow or burn." Count Tolstoi's sin against an oppressive Russian government was nonconformity. Every advance step in the history of the church has been won at the price of the blood of the nonconformists. The death of the martyrs was the penalty of nonconformity either to the political or ecclesiastical power of the time.

But conformity is a virtue only when for the purposes of the group it is needed to have men act together, unthinkingly rather than intelligently and independently. The effectiveness of an army depends upon the unquestioning obedience of every member of the body. The conditions of tribal life demanded that the will of the chief be supreme. Conformity is a virtue in a militant society, when it is of first importance to be able to move the whole body as one man. It was the virtue that gave power to the Roman army and that today gives power to the Roman church over the minds of immigrants to America. But a different ideal obtains in Protestantism and Democracy. There the progress of the whole depends upon the progress of each individual member of the group. To progress the individual man must think independently. It is by being free to think and to express the results of his thinking that he may contribute to the life of the whole. This is the secret of the rapid advance of scientific learning of the past century in Protestant countries. But strangely enough the churches that have protested against the demand for conformity to the teaching of the church of Rome, would now demand conformity to the teaching of a past century, and the people who have decried creeds, would now demand acceptance of a creedal statement as a test of one's right to the privileges of the body. We are, but for a day, setting up the golden calf modeled from our former bondage. We shall not long remain here but shall pass on to the land which we are to inherit where every man may be free to think and to speak, so long as he is loyal, not to dogma but to the great ideals of the Gospel of Christ. The "heretic" is a nonconformist, but have we not passed the time when nonconformity is a sin? He who would say otherwise—let him call a council of the church and elect a pope, and give him power to punish with death any who may not conform to his edicts.

The Church and the Christian College

By W. F. Rothenburger

No apology need be made for placing the interests of education in our calendar. Both our heritage and the spirit of the age demand it.

It is contended that to the Disciples of Christ belongs the honor of organizing the first college in whose curriculum the teaching of religion received first place. It belongs to us, therefore, to protect and advance this most serviceable and effective work. We have pleaded effectively for an educated ministry, and let there be no abating of interest here, but we must plead as well for an educated laity. While the efficiency of a layman's work in the kingdom does not depend wholly upon his mental training, it adds mightily to his influence as well as to his conception of men and money.

The best interests of our young men and women demand the perpetuity of the Christian College in our educational system. No university in the land can possibly mean as much to certain periods of young life as can the Christian College. Yet with the almost unlimited funds pouring into larger institutions, and their consequent superior equipment, it becomes increasingly difficult to perpetuate the Christian College, and will continue to be so until the Church awakens to its opportunity.

The manner in which the church has played its part in this great work is shown by the facts concerning an $80,000 endowment list for one of our oldest colleges, pledged within the last twelve months. Less than $20,000 of this amount, or twenty-five per cent, came from our own members. We have too long thrown the responsibility of endowing our institutions upon our college presidents. The president of Vassar has recently declared that this burden should be lifted from the shoulders of these men, while the head of another of America's greatest institutions of learning lamented upon his death bed that he should ever be remembered most of all by his career as a "getter of money."

Alas for us if the rank and file does not respond to this great need. If the churches contend that local interests consume their resources let them believe that adding the price of one tuition to their annual budget would soon greatly increase their power by the developing of an educated laity. If they contend that their outside interests must be limited to missions proper, let them remember that the larger missionary spirit of the majority of our most consecrated men and women on both the home and foreign fields was born during their college career. If the church believes that the Christian college can continue to depend upon students from disinterested homes, let it begin to realize that this will be true only in so far as the college can offer advantages somewhere nearly as good as the larger institutions. If we look longingly at the increasing fortunes of a few men within and without the church, let us be assured that business sagacity will cling to these more handsome sums until their confidence has been won by a reasonable liberality from the rank and file of the Brotherhood. Therefore in this great Centennial year, let us not be rebuked by lack of faith in the cause of the Christian college, but let us command the respect of men and the commendation of God by a gift from every church in the Brotherhood.

The Atonement in Modern Terms

By Burris A. Jenkins

The present attempt at a constructive statement upon the subject of the atonement—and it cannot be too often emphasized that it is only an attempt that has so far been made—must begin, it seems to me, somewhere near a point like the following, which has become so familiar in the scientific statements of the day:

All life and all progress in the world are at the expense of sacrifice and death on the part of some one or many. Mere physical existence can only be begun and maintained as the result of rapid, repeated, widespread death. Not only we, but all creatures rise on stepping-stones of others' dead selves to higher things. The whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now, in giving birth to the next day and the next generation and the next era. To put it ever on the lowest plane, it is not merely certain rudimentary forms of life that make their culminating act the act of reproduction, and with this climax of their careers pass off the stage of the living forever; but even the highest type of life—man—in giving life to his kind that are to follow him, in nurturing them, guarding them, rearing them, voluntarily embraces decay and death, if gradual, yet no less sure.

This sacrifice of life that other life may follow—higher, better life or else the universe is all out of gear—is partly involuntary and partly voluntary. The struggle for life has its fail in the struggle for the life of others. The pouring out of blood for the sustenance of the beasts that prey has its opposite motive in the pouring out of their hearts' rich tide by the mothers of the race that prays. The awful war of extermination that rages in the thick jungles of the tiniest grass-blades as well as in the greatest forests and mountain fastnesses claims not more victims than the altars of voluntary vicarious sacrifice upon which the parents of all men and many creatures willingly and gladly lay down their lives.

The same principle applies, does it not, in matters higher than mere physical existence. There is no advancement in human thought, no growth of any great telling movement among men except at the cost of life. Advance comes by friction, opposition, battle; and these waste life. The scholar burns out his life with his midnight oil. The preacher—if he be really a preacher—dies just so much upon the cross, every time he ascends his pulpit. The statesman—if he be one, and not a mere politician—gives his life for great ideas just as really through his toil as the soldier in his marches and his battles. The man of affairs, that deserts may be watered and conquered, roads built, the earth peopled and prospered, gives his life whatever the motive, either in midnight journeys, or meetings, or wastes it in the confinement of a cell-like office. The world of thought grows, develops, but at what tremendous cost of human life!

In the same fashion, may it be, is it not true that in the world of spirit, growth comes only in the train of death? That souls may be uplifted, cleansed, exalted, redeemed, someone or many must die. Indeed we have seen many die in the ages past for just this purpose. A moral vicarious sacrifice needs little illustration beside our own memories of a long and heroic history. So far we can understand. But is it not possible that just at this point enters the larger sacrifice which we cannot understand—a mysterious sacrifice, a death demanded in the very nature of things spiritual, that higher life, eternal life, sin-free life, might be the portion of the race? The necessity for such a sacrifice is no more mysterious, no more awful, than the necessity for the wholesale slaughter and the multitudinous self-immolation that is going on every hour in the world.

With this general hint, then, as to how the process of redemption is likely to appear to the modern mind, we may attempt to trace its course.

Here is the fact of sin in the world—the one universal problem that man had ever grappled with. Everywhere and in all times men had struggled with it. They had sacrificed lamb after lamb, bullock after bullock, hecatomb after hecatomb, till their temples had run red with blood, and yet, like Lady Macbeth, they had never been able to wash out the foul stain upon their hands. They had a consciousness of their God or their God's hatred of sin, and yet though they had erected priesthoods to intercede with him, they had never been able to arrive certainly at a sense of forgiveness which was, and perhaps still is, the end and aim of all religious service. For one thing, they were uncertain as to the character of their God, and his attitude toward rebellious children.

Such being the state of affairs, and God seeing it, felt the need of a solution for man, of this tragic question; and as a means to this end, of a full revelation to man of his own heart—its hatred toward and horror of sin, its love for and pity toward man. So, when the fulness of time had come, when man had reached such maturity as would comprehend, in some measure, his self-revelation, the Incarnation followed. God chose to reveal his qualities not in a book, not in the words of prophets and teachers, not in a system of theological statements, not in the works of nature. He had already shadowily revealed himself in all these ways, and to individual minds, here and there, these revelations had been intelligible. But to the great multitude of men there is but one book legible and comprehensible, and that is man. Everybody could read a man's life, everybody would read a man's life—so interesting, so fascinating is man to humanity. Hence, when God would send his final message to humanity he must write in this final and universal language of mankind—a man. He did so. He said to the world: "This man is myself. What he is I am. He does always the things that please me. He and I are one. He that hath seen him hath seen me."

Having thus revealed himself fully to men, he proceeded to show through this human medium, his attitude toward sin. Never in all the world has there been such a rebuke of sin as in the mere presence of Jesus Christ upon the earth. Not the broken tables of the law, not the fiery serpents in the wilderness, not the deluge, nor the ashes of Gomorrah have ever carried the conviction of God's unalterable and inappeasable hostility to guilt as has the quiet, gentle, calm dignity of Jesus' sinlessness. The word of God is here heard most convincingly not in the earthquake, not in the fire and tempest, but in the still small voice of the incarnate God. His presence, like that of the Holy Spirit, nay which is identical with that of the Holy Spirit, convicts the world of sin and judgment.

And yet, along with this message of hatred toward sin comes the major strain, the dominant theme, in the symphony of Jesus' life, of God's overflowing, inextinguishable love for man—the sinner. Individuals heard the strain—oh, so clearly—the rich young ruler, the woman of Samaria, Zaccheus the publican, Simon Peter the traitor, the poor arab in the Temple—these and scores besides heard the new note, the song of love and forgiveness: "Neither do I condemn thee, go and sin no more." Here was no consuming fire of wrath, here was no freezing ice of impenetrable sinlessness, lofty, stark, and aloof. Here was gentleness, long-suffering, mercy, love. This was the heart of God. Individuals caught the message, the nation caught it, and slowly the nations catch it, too.

But this goodness, this tenderness, this sinlessness, this embodied mercy, must suffer in the presence of sinfulness. The very word long-suffering shows that we have some inkling of the pains of God. We have suffered, too, have we not, in some feeble attempts at a purely moral redemption. We have wrestled in soul with an erring brother in the bonds of his sin, with a wilful and headstrong child, with a criminal wretch struggling to be free of the shackles of long habit. We, now and then, have made vicarious atonement, at least in its elements, so far as the simple moral motive extends. But we are not God. We did not make man. We are not responsible for his well-being, his ongoing, in short his redemption. We, therefore, cannot understand the full agony of creative grief at the moral maladjustment of the creature.

We do not know, we cannot tell,
The pain he had to bear.

If we suffer in the throes of a rebirth for some friend, parishioner, or relative, struggling loose from a wicked past, what must have been the agonies of Gethsemane, and of the hours upon the cross?

I would not be misunderstood as implying that this sympathetic moral passion is all there was to the atonement. It is about all that we can understand. But at the outset I tried to say that, in my judgment, mystery is a legitimate part of religion; and because we cannot understand more than this is no reason why we should affirm that there is no more. Indeed we cannot understand why there should be pain and passion in mere physical birth, in intellectual birth, in moral birth. Why then is it a thing incredible that we cannot analyze, systematize, theologize plainly, mathematically, dogmatically, this mysterious process of redemption?

The time has gone by, in my judgment, when theologians presume God to scan, when they employ with smug certitude the phrases, "scheme of redemption," "plan of salvation," and the like. We have come to feel that the scheme, if there is one, is too stellar in its scope, the plan, if there is one, is too nearly like the Pleiades in proportions for us to outline with a geometrical exactness, in the size of a printed page.

That "God hath his mysteries of grace, ways that we cannot tell," I, for one, firmly believe. That he has thus dealt in the profundity of his wisdom, with the problem of sin, I have no doubt. That somehow, the sufferings of Christ were necessary to accomplish his gigantic purpose, is altogether in line with the best scientific thought of today. That those sufferings fulfilled something more than the purpose of erecting a beautiful moral ideal of self-forgetfulness, heroism, courage, renunciation, is, I believe, the conviction of this present age and of the best thought of the age just coming on. What that purpose was we can, no doubt, do little more than hint; but that hint, in harmony with the ascent of man, finds its analogue in the struggle for the life of others which is one of the leading themes in the natural science, social science, political science of the time.

Poets sometimes reach truer conclusions than philosophers, as hearts sometimes are more nearly infallible than heads; and it is a modern American, the editor of one of our leading magazines, who writes:

Subtlest thought shall fail and learning falter,
Churches change, forms perish, systems go;
But our deep human needs they will not alter,
Christ no after age shall e'er outgrow.
Yea, amen, O changeless one, thou only
Art life's guide and spiritual goal,
Thou the light across the dark vale lonely,
Thou the eternal haven of the soul.

I do not feel that I have done much more than preach about this theme—and a little preachment, at that. I fear that the academic philosophers who are here will think it woefully inadequate as a theological statement. And yet, if I have done anything at all, in my half-hour, it is to give the impression that I consider this much more of a theme for preaching than for philosophizing; for, when you philosophers shall fail in stating it, we preachers shall succeed in singing it, such an easy and such a winged song it is, so mysteriously beautiful and so beautifully mysterious, into its resting-place in the aching, sin-scarred hearts of men. I cannot state it in scientific fashion, nor do I believe that you can, but I can preach it, after a certain fashion, and by God's grace I intend to go on preaching it, till this poor lisping stammering tongue, lies silent in the grave; and then I expect to hear it both stated and preached in triumphant voices on the plains of God.

The Minister's Tenure Contract

By William Oeschger

To the end that things which are not as they should be, may be improved, these lines are written. One of the greatest evils that exists among us today is the evil of short pastorates. The churches do not keep their pastors long enough. Just about the time that a pastor is well settled and fairly well acquainted with the church membership and the community the pastoral relationship is terminated. The blame for this termination sometimes rests with the church and sometimes with the pastor, himself. In our independent form of church polity there will always be more or less of these uncalled for pastoral changes. Yet it seems that we should earnestly seek to abate the evil. We must do this if we expect to advance the cause of Christ as it should be advanced.

The churches must learn to be patient with their pastors and the pastors must learn to be patient with their churches. There are ebb-tide and flood-tide periods in the life of every church. It is in the ebb-tide period that pastoral relations are for the most part terminated. But that is not the time for pastoral ties to be broken. It is rather the time in which to work, pray, and patiently wait for results. It is the time when both church and pastor should pray for "Sticking Grace."

But it often happens that just in one of these ebb-tide periods the minister's year is up. Nothing could be more unfortunate than that the church at such a time should be called upon to decide whether it wants to re-employ its minister for another year or not. If there is the least doubt in the minds of some that the depression in church work may be due to the minister in charge, it now grows in magnitude and asserts itself against the minister. If there is opposition to the minister this is the time for this opposition to make itself effective. It is the "psychological moment" for breaking the pastoral tie by the church. If it is such for the church it also has its strong temptations for the minister to do the same. If he must stand for re-election at the end of each year, and opposition to him develops be it ever so insignificant, and the minister is of a sensitive nature, he is liable to look with favor upon some other field. This may lead him to open up a correspondence with another church, which finally results that he decides to go to a new field rather than go through the ordeal of brooking the opposition to his re-election in the old field. The result is that a pastoral relationship that was altogether too short is terminated, the church left pastorless and the pastor going to a new field where he must begin all over again.

Now much that led to this unfortunate result is due to the fact that the minister was called for a definite period of time, an annual term tenure contract. Many of the causes that led to the termination of the pastoral relationship would never have had an existence if the church would not have been called upon to pass upon the question of re-employing the minister for another year. If the minister would not have been called upon to stand for re-election he probably would never have opened up a correspondence with another church, which in the end called him away from his present charge.

A better plan, and one that many churches follow, than that of calling a minister for just one year at a time, is to call him for an indefinite period of time, with the provision that either party, minister or church, may terminate the relationship at any time, previous notice of the same having been given three months prior to the date determined upon for terminating the relationship. The very fact that a man has been called for an indefinite period of time has an aspect of permanency to it that the annual term contract does not have. Such a tenure of service is not conditioned upon a favorable election at the end of the year. It does not afford an annual "psychological moment" for opposition to crystallize itself against the minister's tenure of service. The call for an indefinite period of service eliminates many of the evil features that the annual term contract produces. Just because it does this the pastoral relationships that rest upon it are of longer duration than those that rest upon the annual term contract. A complete induction of all the facts would warrant us in saying that if ministers were called by the churches for an indefinite period of time we would have longer pastorates. Let ministers and churches bind themselves together for an indefinite period of time. The result will be longer pastorates than we now have under the annual term contracts. This is the honest conviction of the writer. What does the reader think?

NOW IS THE NICK O' TIME

Now is the time for the friends of the Christian Century and the cause which it represents to aid in building up our subscription list.

The controversy concerning the Centennial Program and the attack on our Missionary Societies having come to an end, as we now hope, our purpose will be to produce a paper that will be an assistant pastor to every preacher into whose congregation it goes.

We mean to make our pages constructive and inspirational. We shall not fear to lead our readers into new truth as God gives ns to see the truth, but our treatment will be irenic, not controversial.

We aspire to be a layman's paper—as well as a preacher's paper. Our pages will discuss life's big problems in which all earnest men and women are interested. We shall have constantly before us the purpose of building up the spiritual life of our readers—in intelligence, in breadth of vision, in zeal. Every member of the Christian Century family should be a better worker in the church and a better citizen of his community as a result of his habitual reading of our pages.

Therefore we are making this direct request of our friends to enlist other readers. We wish to more than double our circulation in this Centennial year. This could easily be done if the enthusiasm conveyed to us in recent letters were directed toward practical effort. Some have already begun this good work. One prominent pastor writes that he has been waiting only until the controversy should be over to make a personal canvass himself in our behalf. Another pastor asks for sample copies to be sent at once to the address of a bright young man whom he has appointed to solicit every family of his church. Yet another assures us that it is his purpose to present the matter from the pulpit next Sunday morning and take subscriptions, then and there.

Without any systematic effort our circulation has increased nearly fifteen per cent in less than two months. With the active support of our loyal friends, the next three months should set us a long way toward our Centennial aim.

We will pay a cash commission to agents who will send us ten or more subscriptions. Write us for terms.

To Our Knees

O God! Our hearts are smitten and withered as grass before this vast and unspeakable devastation.

The cry of the dying and afflicted has rended our ears and weighted our earth with the burden of an inexpressible sorrow.

The forces of nature which man is powerless to control have stricken us and we are wounded and sore.

We gaze upon the frightful carnage benumbed with agony and witless to understand.

We cannot associate thy love with a spectacle so abhorrent nor can we condone so dire a judgment even with the vague sense of justice that is ours.

Yet we confide in Thee.

We believe that Thou sorrowest with us in our grief, O Thou Father of ours, and that in some way ye cannot comprehend Thou sharest the burden of our great affliction.

Thou who knowest the travail of our world, bear unto us Thy gracious consolation.

As we, in our eagerness, give of our store for the needs of those most distressed—so, O Thou Infinite God, in greater and fuller measure give unto all Thy peoples everywhere which populate this earth, increasing wisdom and strength and grace. Give unto us all (needy children that we be) a faith sufficiently founded and enduring to withstand the might of life's bitterest woes—of her direst and most terrible experiences. Speak Thou peace unto us and let the bonds of Thy unconquerable love unite our world.

A. McLEAN'S BOOK FREE.

Our proposal to give a copy of A. McLean's new book on "Alexander Campbell as a Preacher" with each new subscription of $1.50 has proved so attractive that we have decided to continue it beyond the date (January 2), which we had set for its expiration. During January the offer will hold good. Ministers may have the paper (new subscription), and the book for $1.20.

YOUR OWN PAPER FREE

FOR A LITTLE WORK.

Any minister (who is not in arrears to us) can have his subscription date set ahead one year by sending us 2 New Yearly Subscriptions with $3.00. This applies to ministers who are not now subscribers as well as to those who are.

DEPARTMENT OF BIBLICAL PROBLEMS

By Professor Willett

Dear Brother:—

1. What are the fundamental fallacies and un-Christian doctrines of the Christian Science cult, and cite the scriptures that give the clearest refutation of them.

2. What are the truths of the system, and are they receiving sane and "scientific" treatment in the Emmanuel (Boston) and kindred movements?

3. What are the best and sanest books in the refutation of their false doctrines that you are familiar with?

Thanking you very much for your assistance in advance, I beg to remain, Very sincerely yours,

Buffalo, N. Y. S. B. Lindsay.

Perhaps it will be somewhat better to consider the second question first. The Christian Science movement represents a perfectly natural reaction from the materialistic tendencies of our age. Such reactions are always likely to be extreme. The passion for financial success, coupled with a theory that the conquest of material forces and the wealth which that conquest brings constitute the measure of well-being to which men can attain, is a view of life so unsubstantial and false that it is sure to result in a fresh emphasis upon spiritual things. And this emphasis invites just such fantastic extremes as our day reveals.

Then, too, human suffering is one of the great facts of experience. It is so widespread and distressful that among the experiments made to modify or overcome it, it is inevitable that we should meet the extreme form here presented, of opposing it by a denial of its existence. This is what Christian Science does. It resorts to the method of so strongly insisting upon the nothingness of evil, disease, suffering and sin that by a process of hypnotism, brought by concentration of mind upon the fixed idea of prevalent and triumphant good, it secures, for a time at least, conviction and cure.

It is not to be doubted that the partial acquaintance of the west with eastern philosophies which place emphasis upon the illusive nature of matter and the ideal of absorption in Deity, has had its effect in making Christian Science popular with a certain class. The mystical element in religion has great charm for lower types of mind, and no one questions the extent to which this factor finds place in the cult we are considering. If one adds the item of taste in church architecture and equipment, and a certain studied simplicity in the forms of worship, which leaves ample room for the constant insistence and re-insistence upon the few fixed ideas of the system, he sees that an appeal of great strength and persuasiveness is made to many people in our generation.

Christian Science stands upon two feet. One is the entirely unscientific and irrational metaphysical theory of the non-existence of evil. The entire New Testament is a collection of texts on this theme. No stronger refutation of the underlying fallacy of Christian Science could be found than the arsenal of references to sin, disease, suffering and death in the teachings of Christ and the Apostles. Everywhere Jesus took for granted the reality of the evil he was opposing. Men were really, not merely in imagination, sick and afflicted. In upholding this view of unreality in evil, Christian Science subjects the Bible to the most fantastic and grotesque system of interpretation ever known outside the bounds of apocalyptic vagaries. The simplest historical facts are "spiritualized" with an ingenuity that would have done credit to the allegorical schools of the middle ages. An example of this may be seen in the interpretation of the two acounts of creation as "natural" and "spiritual" respectively. By such a method, which seeks rather to discover what biblical texts can be made to teach, rather than what the Bible really says, it is possible to vindicate any view whatever. The examples of this vicious use of the Scripture are to be seen in almost every section of Mrs. Eddy's writings, and form the staple quotation of Christian Science liturgies, lectures and literature.

The other foot of the system is the perfectly biblical and scientific truth that evil, sin, disease and death are the enemies against which Christ came to wage warfare, and over which in the end he is to triumph. Christian Science has laid hold of the fact, too long neglected by the church, that Jesus cared for the bodies of men as well as their souls. The Church, in its long insistence on the other-worldliness of religion, forgot that the struggle of our faith must be in behalf of the whole man, body as well as soul, and against the foes that war with every part of his being.

The principle which Christian Science employs, in contrast with its unfounded theory, is the simple one of suggestion. This is the basis of every form of mental therapeutics practiced today. Christian Science differs in no manner from the other forms of healing which proceed upon this view. Among them are faith-cure, divine-healing, prayer-cure, suggestive-therapeutics, the Emmanuel Movement, and even spiritism, insofar as the latter undertakes the cure of disease. Every physician understands, and in a measure employs, this method. Every student of mental science knows its nature and value. It undertakes to create in the mind of the sufferer a state of confidence and hope. This may be based on any one of a dozen doctrines, each one of which serves as the basis of a particular cult. With Christian Science it is the theory already stated. "God is all; God is good; therefore evil cannot be. Sin is evil. Disease is evil; therefore they are not. Deny them. Insist that you are good and that you are well. Properly convinced, you no longer suffer."

It is a satisfaction to record the undeniable fact that Christian Science, like the other forms of healing mentioned, has wrought great good to many sufferers. People whom other forms of treatment left without hope have been quickened into new health and happiness by the practice. This result is quite independent of the theory of Christian Science, and would be the same under any other of the forms of suggestive therapeutics. Many people are only mentally sick anyway. That is, they are impressed with the belief that they are actually suffering from some malady over which medicine is powerless to work healing. In thousands of cases, even of acute physical suffering, these maladies have been shown to be purely mental and imaginary. An example of this type of affliction was mentioned last week in the Christian Century in an editorial entitled "Remember!" For such maladies some form of suggestive treatment is often effective. In others, where some lesion has actually occurred, the same treatment by mental influence is often found remedial, so intimate is the relation of mind and flesh. In all these cases it is the central principle of suggestion, whether employed in hypnotism, suggestion proper, or what is known as re-education. Christian Science is merely one of the forms of healing which make use, some of them unconsciously, of this fact.

It is highly probable that the cures that have been wrought by holy men, holy relics and holy places, have been of this nature. It is not the impartation of power from without, but the awakening of power and courage within. Yet there is even here an impartation. The holy man gives to the sufferer something of his own quiet confidence and in this bestowment has to all appearances, wrought the cure. How far our Saviour employed this principle we have no means of knowing. As far as we can trace his healings in parallel lines with those of men in whose lives such phenomena seem to have occurred, the agreement is striking. Nor is there any reason why Jesus, who lived so truly a perfect life, in harmony with all law and all nature, should have declined to employ a principle seen to be of such wide application. But almost immediately he moves out into wider ranges of wonder-working power where no man has followed him, and the uniqueness of his life as the one perfect and master-life of history becomes at once evident.

To sum up then, Christian Science has enabled many of its believers to attain a calmness, healthfulness and happiness which they had not found before. It has proved what needs always to be kept in mind by the church, the fact that Christianity has a healing power for the bodies as well as the souls of men. In addition, Christian Science has made to the Church the useful contribution of architectural taste of a special sort, and perhaps also some useful suggestions regarding certain forms of worship.

On the other hand it needs to be remembered that it shares its one element of value as a system of healing, with all the other methods of psychic therapeutics, and seems to have no advantage over them. Further, that its theology, in so far as it may claim one, is a sorry thing, the product of an untenable metaphysic and a wholly impossible biblical interpretation when it is added that as a cult it tends to an unsocial indifference to the needs and sufferings of humanity that has never been equalled in the long centuries of Christian history, perhaps an idea has been given of its strength and weakness. Social workers declare with one voice that from Christian Scientists as a class they receive absolutely no aid or encouragement in the very work of relief which the Gospel of Christ inspires.

A list of books on this subject was given in this column in the Christian Century of December 26th.

A loving hand I never forget. I remember in my fingers the large hands of Bishop Brooks, brimful of tenderness and a strong man's joy. If you were deaf and blind and could have held Mr. Jefferson's hand, you would have seen in it a face and heard a kind voice unlike any other you have known. Mark Twain's hand is full of whimsies and the drollest humors, and while you hold it the drollery changes to sympathy and championship.—Helen Keller, in "The World I Live In."

Questions for Prof. McGarvey

Readers of this department of The Century will remember that a few weeks ago I asked Prof. J. W. McGarvey two questions, which I hoped he would answer with all the frankness which is characteristic of him. He notices a part of the article referring to him, but fails to see the two questions. I put them in italics so that they would stand out more clearly, but evidently he did not have on his glasses when he read the article or else he had a poor light.

I will put the questions to him again, and this time in a little clearer type. It will be remembered that he said in defense of the "Lexington Creed:"

> "Everybody in Lexington, so far as I know, believes the assertion of Jesus that the books called the Pentateuch are the writings of Moses: but not one, so far as I know, is so silly as to believe that Moses wrote the last chapter of Deuteronomy, describing his own death and burial."

This last sentence from Prof. McGarvey is what puzzles some of us here in Chicago—"silly to believe that Moses wrote, etc."! And yet "the last chapter of Deuteronomy" is a part of the Pentateuch. Why "silly" to believe that Moses wrote that? Is it because it describes events future to Moses—"his own death and burial"? Why should that be a difficult thing to one who was inspired of God? Can not God look into the future? and could he not tell Moses all about "his own death and burial"? According to Prof. McGarvey, Moses looked back 2,500 years and described the creation of the world; why "so silly" to believe that he looked forward one year and described his own death and burial"?

If "the assertion of Jesus" settles the question of the authorship of the Pentateuch for Prof. McGarvey, the assertion of Jesus concerning the motion of the heavenly bodies ought to settle the question also. I was taught in my early school days, and I have been inclined to believe, that the sun stands still, and that the earth moves. But the assertion of Jesus is that God "makes his sun to rise on the evil and the good" (Matt. 5:45). If the one who disbelieves the assertion of Jesus that Moses wrote the Pentateuch is an infidel, as Prof. McGarvey teaches, then the one who disbelieves the assertion of Jesus that the sun rises must also be an infidel. That is just the accusation that was made by the Roman Church and the Protestant Reformers alike, against Copernicus and all others who taught, contrary to the assertion of Jesus, that the sun stood still.

None of us here in Chicago wants to be an infidel or be known as an infidel; yet I see that some of us are in danger of being called infidels by Prof. McGarvey if we accept the astronomical doctrines taught in all of the schools. I wonder how Prof. McGarvey treats this assertion of Jesus about the motion of the sun.

The Questions.

1. Do you believe that the sun rises and sets according to the Ptolmaic system of astronomy or that it stands still according to the Copernican system?

2. On what grounds do you affirm that it is silly to believe that Moses wrote the account of his own death and burial?

Lexington will confer a great favor upon Chicago by answering these questions. They involve all our differences.

Jonah and McGarvey vs. Jesus.

In making his reply to other parts of my article Prof. McGarvey calls the "Lexington Creed" which I formulated "a cob house," which he "kicked over, more in fun than in malice," and says:

"In scrambling for his cobs, to get them in place again, Bro. Gates gets funny, and charges me with contradicting Jesus. Jesus, he says, said it was a whale that swallowed Jonah, while I say it was a big fish." Here is what Prof. McGarvey said: "If Gates had put it 'the great fish,' instead of 'the whale,' this article would have been correct." Now he justifies that slight upon my biblical scholarship by saying:

> "I had supposed that every editor of a religious paper in Chicago had learned long ago that the word 'whale' in the remark of Jesus about Jonah is a mistranslation. If not sooner, he ought to have learned it from the Revised Version."

I used the King James Version until Prof. McGarvey told all who would be exact and careful scholars to use the Revised Version. I used the Revised Version until he told all of us learned scholars to use the Standard American Version. I use that now, but all of these three versions have exactly the same reading—"for as Jonah was three days and three nights in the belly of the whale" (Matt. 12:39). What does Prof. McGarvey mean by saying there is a "mistranslation"? There has been no change in the reading in any of these new versions. I know, of course, that in the Book of Jonah, the word means and is translated "great fish." But Jesus said it was a "whale." We now have Jonah and McGarvey against Jesus. I prefer to follow Jesus rather than either McGarvey or Jonah. Which does the professor believe correct—Jonah or Jesus?

Prof. McGarvey will have to try again to get out of his difficulty. I confess that the point is not a profoundly important one—"whale" or "great fish"—but it was not I who raised it. It seemed important enough to Lexington to make an issue out of, and it was too good for Chicago to let alone. It is Lexington and not Chicago ground we are on. Fine points and sharp turns, however, are peculiarly Lexingtonian; and this Jonah difficulty is just a sample of the way mole-hills are turned into mountains, and mint, anise and cummin are tithed in the theology of Lexington. Where you have a theory of verbal inspiration you are likely to have a practice of verbal scrupulosity. We ordinary human erring mortals in things theological do get a great deal of comfort when great Homer nods. When Lexington slips up on fine, correct biblical usage, there is a gleam of hope, and there ought to be a degree of tolerance, for the rest of us poor mortals.

Lexington Never Changes.

But Lexington never seems to learn the lesson of tolerance and liberty, and sweet human charity, even from her own mistakes and lapses. Like Rome, she never changes, and never goes wrong. Her laws of orthodoxy are inexorable, like the laws of the Medes and Persians. Deviation from the straight and narrow path that leads to belief that Moses wrote the Pentateuch, and that the whale (Lexington forgive! Better "great fish") swallowed Jonah, is visited with awful anathemas. The torches with which she burns the tender reputations of good men are composed of such exquisite terms as "infidel." "destructive critic," "poisonous teaching," "German rationalism." But Lexington reasons: Did not Jesus use such terms as "false prophets," "hypocrites," "whited sepulchers," "serpents," and "offspring of vipers," against false teachers; and did not Paul warn against men who teach a different doctrine? Why may we not use these terms, or similar terms that are understood, against false teachers.

If Lexington could be as sure as Jesus and Paul that teaching was false, and that ideas were infidel and poisonous, then she might exercise their judicial prerogative. But it is only on the basis of an authority and infallibility which belongs only to inspired men that Lexington can proceed against false teachers. Suppose Lexington should make a mistake (and that is possible) and anathematize a man who was innocent of the religious crime of infidelity; what could she do to make amends for the wrong? Could she ever give back the reputation destroyed, or cancel the pain that it has caused? Are there any courts in which one who has thus been wronged can secure justice?

Theological Libel.

The Outlook of New York, has been saying some timely things with reference to a man's right and property in a good name. "It is high time for the American people to recognize that 'Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor' is a part of the moral law; that reputation is a valued possession which it is the duty of the community to protect; that they do not sufficiently protect it if they simply leave a man who has been robbed of his reputation to bring a suit for damages; that to rob a man of his reputation is a crime against the community as well as against the individual, and it is the duty of the community to punish it."

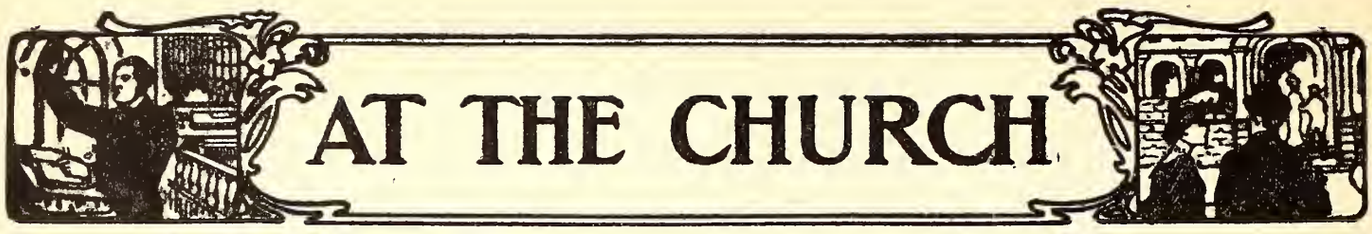
Theological libel is just as damaging and as criminal as civil libel. To call a man an infidel in the religious sphere is the same as to call him a thief or a murderer in the social sphere. It hurts him as much in the one as in the other. It puts many a man out of business in both. But in the social sphere a man can seek redress at law, and be judged innocent or guilty by one law. But in the religious sphere there is no redress, and a man is judged innocent or guilty by as many laws as there are opinions as to what constitutes infidelity. At Lexington a man is an infidel if he denies that Moses wrote the Pentateuch; a partial infidel if he denies that the whale swallowed Jonah.

In most circles among the Disciples a man is amenable to one law of faith—faith in Jesus Christ, the Son of God. If he believes this, and lives as if he believed it, he is a Christian. While the only thing that constitutes infidelity is denial of this in word and life.

The voice of God is always calling us to higher things.

The Christ-controlled life yields the largest measure of usefulness and happiness; because it is the gentle life.

The greatness of gentleness is of finer quality and far more pleasing and enduring than that wrought out by force.



Sunday School Lesson

BY HERBERT L. WILLETT.

The Messiah Vindicated*

It will be remarked as one of the most valuable improvements in the arrangement of the International lessons that the passage of Scripture to be studied covers much more territory than hitherto. This will remove something of the objection hitherto so strongly urged, that the lessons are too brief and scrappy, and that they leave such unconsidered intervals between. The lesson texts will, in the future, extend much further than the printed text, which will embrace about the same amount of biblical matter as before.

Brevity of the Record.

The two studies devoted to the second chapter of Acts are inclusive of the entire chapter. The first gives the setting of the Day of Pentecost and the arousal of the one hundred and twenty disciples to their holy task by the coming of the divine Spirit upon them. The second gives the main ideas of the sermon of Peter, and the results that came from its delivery. We are not to suppose that we have all the words of the apostle, for the custom of the Bible is to give a brief resume of what was said on such occasions. Then, too, we are expressly told that Peter said much more than was written down. But the things recorded were sufficient to give an adequate idea of the whole as it was recalled by those who heard it.

The Words of Joel.

First, the astonishing events of the morning were interpreted. The strange things which the multitude had heard, which some thought were the utterance of foreign languages on the part of the disciples, and others supposed were the cries of drunken men, were, he said, in reality the climax of an ancient prophecy. Joel, whose work fell some time in the latest period of the Old Testament history had spoken of the time to come when great disturbances of nature would take place, as the signs of the fact that God was about to pour out his spirit upon the chosen people. These words Peter declared had now been fulfilled in the signs of Pentecost. It is clear that neither Peter nor his hearers thought of the convulsions of nature spoken of by the prophet as more than figures of speech, for none such had occurred, and the people did not demand to know what he meant. Both he and they understood the language of the prophet in the usual manner of apocalyptic speech. But both realized that strange changes had come upon the community at that feast, and that these events of the day might well be called the fulfilment of Joel's words.

The Miracles of Jesus.

After this preface, which not only secured their attention but convinced them that the matter in hand was far more important than any other event of the feast, Peter proceeded to drive home the great facts of the Savior's life and death. First there was the fact that the Nazarene had wrought miracles among them, with which they were quite familiar. This use of the miracles of Jesus by Peter at a time soon after the actual work of the Lord is one of the surest proofs that the Master did perform these deeds of power. Otherwise there would have been neither point nor safety in a reference which could so easily have been refuted by his hearers.

The Murder of the Messiah.

The second item of the sermon was the charge that they, the people of Jerusalem and the nation at large, had taken this good man, this worker of kindly ministries, and had delivered him up to death. Nor was this a mere act of mob violence. It was consistent with the long history of unfaithfulness characteristic of the nation, and was a part of God's plan for the correction of the people and the saving of the world. In following out their own mad passions they were bringing upon themselves the judgment of God, were making their national sins odious beyond description, and were fulfilling the very plan which they had seemed most bent upon thwarting.

The Sixteenth Psalm.

This was shown by the return from the dead of the very One whom they had so sorely mistreated. And here the third point in the discourse was reached. The resurrection of Jesus was the prime fact of the Gospel which Peter was announcing. This he first set in the light of Old Testament words. A psalmist of the past had spoken of his confidence that God would not give him over to the power of the grave, but would continue him in the high fellowship of divine favor. Since David was known among the Hebrews as the Psalmist par excellence, the father of sacred hymnody, all the psalms were attributed to him without reserve by the Jews of Jesus' day. Moreover, this Sixteenth Psalm was counted Messianic by them, a forecast of the triumph of their future king over all opposition. Peter takes it at its highest value as rated by them, and applies it directly to Christ. The questions of its origin and first meaning were secondary to its value in the estimation of his hearers—a Davidic and a Messianic psalm. It was therefore the very vehicle to use most effectively in conveying to this Jewish audience the fact of Jesus' resurrection.

The Higher Use of the Psalm.

In this use of the psalm may be seen an instance of that free use of the Old Testament by the interpreters of the Gospel which has caused no little perplexity to Bible students, and yet is not difficult to understand in the face of all the facts. The study of Psalm Sixteen reveals clearly the fact that the composer was thinking of himself and not another; that he was not speaking of deliverance out of the grave but of salvation from it, i. e., of prolonged life. This is the manifest meaning of the words, "Thou wilt not give over my soul to Sheol, neither wilt thou permit thy devoted one (the Psalmist himself) to see decay." But the New Testament writers and preachers saw that in the light of Jesus' experience and the wide meanings of the new faith, the original use of the words did not exhaust their value, and they felt free to use them as admirable statements of truths far greater than their authors conceived. This principle explains the meaning of many passages in the New Testament which seem to find in the older Scriptures values which are not apparent to the student who examines them.

Jesus the Goal of the Old Testament.

Peter says that David, whom he accepts as the author of these words, did actually come to the grave as they know. Did his words, then fail of meaning? No. They had a larger significance than his own life. Only in the Messiah did they find fulfillment. David had recognized that One greater than himself should come, who was not to share the ordinary experience of subjection to death, but was to escape the snares of the grave through the divine power. This One was no other than the promised son of his line, through whom the glories of Israel were to be perpetuated and brought to their climax. In the light of the resurrection, of which he and his fellow disciples were the witnesses, he and they were prepared to insist that the Promised One of the psalmists and the Christ of Nazareth were one and the same. The writer of the Hundred and Tenth Psalm (David once more, in the thought of both Peter and his audience) had spoken of one higher than himself, to whom God gave the high place at His own right hand. This was the same Christ. Let the house of Israel know then that in the recently crucified but now risen Jesus the promises of the past and the hopes of the future were accomplished.

Fact vs. Illustration.

Peter did not quote from the Old Testament to prove the resurrection of Jesus. There was but one proof of that fact, and that was the testimony of himself and his companion disciples, who had seen the Master alive from the dead. But his purpose in referring to the psalms was to show that upon their own construction and interpretation of these Scriptures, which he fully shared, the resurrection was not only possible but an expected fact in the experience of David's great Successor. The Bible student must keep in mind the fact that the writers of the Scriptures employ every method of illustrating the great truths which lie heavy on their hearts. The truth itself, the fact of which they are speaking, is the matter of supreme importance. The illustration is of secondary value, but chosen because of its power to direct attention to the theme in hand. The illustration may be a fact of history, a bit of song from the past, a miracle, a parable or a fable. Whatever has the power to fix attention upon the fact or truth in hand is worth while. The illustration may be of but partial value in itself, it might even have no foundation in fact. Its invalidation, were such possible, would in no way affect the truth which is the matter of moment.

*International Sunday-school lesson for January 17. The Beginning of the Christian Church, Acts 2:22-47. Golden Text, "They continued steadfastly in the apostles' teaching and in fellowship, and in the breaking of bread and in prayers," Acts 2:42. Memory verses, 32, 33.

The Fact of the Resurrection.

So of this incident of our study. It was the resurrection of Jesus which Peter wished to burn into the consciences of his hearers. That tremendous fact, proved by the witness of the disciples and needed to complete the hopes of the Old Testament; was the vindication of the Messianic claim of Jesus, and the evidence that in his death the nation had committed the greatest crime in history. The indictment was crushing. The charge was unanswerable. The Day of Judgment was at hand to bring the retribution which such sinners richly deserved.

The Results of the Sermon.

In terror they looked at each other and then cried out, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" It was not the question of seekers after spiritual blessing. It was rather the cry of men who are suddenly confronted with the awful proofs of guilt, and know not which way to turn. The wrath of God was upon them. What should they do? With masterful use of the moment and the fear of the people, Peter said to them, "What you really need to do is not merely to escape the anger of God, but to take up the holy life which this Nazarene, your Messiah and Savior, enjoins. Repent of your sins. Accept the badge of discipleship in the company of his followers. The memory and the guilt of those sins of the past will fade in the new passion of love and service. You shall be free from the power and the penalty of your sin. You shall have the spirit of love, of brotherhood, of purity and of prayer. You shall have the Spirit of God, the Holy Spirit of promise."

With such words, and many more not recorded, he turned their minds from the mere emergency of present peril to the higher duty and joy of Christian life, and their happy response in baptism made that day memorable in the annals of the faith.

THE PRAYER MEETING

By Silas Jones

Topic January 13: The Church and Men. John 1:35-51; Acts 4:4.

It is too late in the day to say that men are less religious than women. We must reason from accidents and get down to the abiding qualities of character. Men are just as much interested in the meaning of life as women. They are not inferior to their wives and sisters in the love of righteousness. They have temptations and sins peculiar to themselves, and so have the women. In some countries women go to church in larger numbers than men. This shows that the prevailing type of church life in these countries is feminine rather than masculine; it does not prove that Christianity makes a stronger appeal to women than to men. The masculine and the feminine element are both needed in the church. It is a waste of breath to tell men that they ought to join a church whose preaching and activities are suited to the mind and hand of woman. They intend to be men and if they cannot be men in the church, they will stay out in the world.

Men Need the Church.

The energy of the American man is the admiration of the world. He cannot be idle and he works with a purpose. In this his strength is also his weakness. He is so busy with the one thing that comes to his hand to do that he has no time to look over the whole field of life and learn the relative values of things. Hence it happens that many men, whose ability to make money is conspicuous, are exceedingly bad citizens. They pay their taxes grudgingly. They look upon city councils and legislatures as legitimate commodities for the ownership of which money should be spent with lavish hand. They take thought for the common welfare only when their selfish schemes are not in danger. Having no insight for spiritual realities, some of them seek satisfaction in the indulgence of the basest passions. The suicides that follow business reverses and the madness with which speculation is carried on are evidence that business men need faith, a faith that gives serenity and a sense of the worth of friendship and love. The business world needs men who will sacrifice financial success in the interest of humanity. The spirit of Paul, who gave his testimony at the cost of his life, is as much needed in commercial and industrial circles as it is on the mission field.

The Church Needs Men.

The church has work for men. It has a place for men in its ministry. It has been said that ministers help to continue the divisions among Christians by insisting on the importance of scholastic distinctions that have nothing to do with life and godliness. If there is any ground whatever for this assertion, the church has reason to pray for men in the ministry who know where to put the emphasis. Real men are needed for elders and deacons and for Sunday-school leaders. The boys are lost to the Sunday-school because the men are not studying their Bibles. Men who are face to face with the problems of the age are capable of testing the doctrines preached in the church. Down in the mountains of the South where men have little to do the doctrines of free will and predestination are discussed with a fervor that would do credit to the demons in Milton's hell, but no great spiritual revolution has been started by these discussions. Dr. Grenfell met Mr. Moody in a hotel in Boston and said to him, "Fourteen years ago I put my faith in Christ after hearing you preach." "Oh," said Mr. Moody, looking Grenfell over, "and what have you been doing since." Dr, Grenfell is one of the great men of the modern church because he believes he is in the church to do and not to debate. Men still have in them the heroic element and the church should appeal more and more to that element and use it.

Men to Win Men.

Andrew brought Peter to Jesus. Philip brought Nathanael. And thus the company of the disciples grew. These was no effusive or affected emotion. The personal workers were serious. They spoke straight to the hearts of the men they sought. The men in the churches today can manifest an equal sincerity. No doubt many of them are deterred from soliciting the obedience of their friends to Christ by their distaste for the pietistic methods with which they have themselves been tormented. They do not know that there is a way for one who has a proper regard for the rights of free men to speak earnestly to another about Christ. The New Testament has examples of the right method of approach. It illustrates how men who are not fanatics, may exert their influence for the building up of the kingdom of God. If the men of the church will talk in their own way, without aping the zealot, about the power of the gospel and the activities of the church, multitudes will confess the name of the Master.

TEACHER TRAINING COURSE

By H. D. C. Maclachlan

PART II. SUNDAY SCHOOL PEDAGOGY

I. ENROLLMENT. It has been well said that the price of a graded Sunday-school, like that of liberty, is eternal vigilance. Once the school has been placed on a graded basis, all scholars, without exception, must be made to conform to its classifications. No plea of personal affection between the teacher and scholars under the old system, should be permitted to interfere with the assignment of every pupil to the proper class. It is better that a few scholars should drop out than that the grading should be perfunctory and incomplete. The same is true of every NEW SCHOLAR. None should be taken into the school without first being assigned to the proper department and class regardless of individual preference. The neglect of this rule will soon reduce the best graded school to the chaos from which it sprang.

II. PROMOTION. Some system of promotion is essential to a properly graded school. The Sunday-school being a purely voluntary institution, there cannot be the same stringency here as in the day school, but much can be done by a wise system of promotion, to encourage the scholars to do their best work. Promotion should be of two kinds—ordinary and certificated:

(1.) ORDINARY PROMOTION applies to all scholars alike, and is determined by age alone. This should be the only kind of promotion recognized in the beginners' department.

(2.) CERTIFICATED PROMOTION depends on the fulfillment of certain definite requirements. Written examinations should be held at the close of each school year, and certificates of promotion awarded to all scholars who reach a certain percentage. These entitle them to pass into the next higher class. On passing from one department to another, special DEPARTMENTAL CERTIFICATES should be given. Upon completion of the regular course of the school, a diploma of graduation may be granted. Graduation or Promotion day, should be one of the most prominent in the school calendar, and the exercises should be such as to impress upon the pupils the real honor of promotion.

III. CLASS MARKING. In order to maintain a high standard of work, some system of class marking, other than that of mere attendance is advisable. Nothing stimulates the interest of the scholars more than the knowledge that an accurate record is kept of their standing. The things taken into account should be attendance, punctuality, offering, bringing of quarterly and Bible, lesson study, church attendance. The values assigned to each of these will, of course, vary in the different departments. Deportment may be added in the Primary and Junior grades. The following is sugestive only: attendance 25, punctuality 10, offering 10, lesson preparation 25, bringing quarterly and Bible 10, church attendance 20; total 100.

IV. HOW TO START A GRADED SCHOOL. For the benefit of those who desire to grade their Sunday-school, the foregoing principles may be summed up in the following suggestions: Get an accurate record of the ages, or public school standing, of all the scholars, and separate them into Elementary, Primary, Junior, Intermediate, Senior and Adult departments. Then divide up each department into classes, assigning to each a teacher properly equipped for the work of that particular grade. At the head of each department, put a Superintendent, and, if the department be large, a Secretary also. Where possible, let the Department meet separately for either opening or closing exercises. Where this cannot be done let its identity be preserved, by having its own reports, departmental interests, etc. Appoint a Secretary of Enrollment for the school, whose duty it shall be to see that new scholars are assigned to the proper classes. Let all records of class standing, examinations, eac., be kept as strictly as in the day school. Have regular departmental conferences, at which the teachers of the several departments may meet together and discuss their methods of work. Once every quarter, at least, have a full meeting of all the teachers and officers of the school for the purpose of mutual inspiration and advice. Order a series of graded lessons helps; but be sure they are GRADED.

QUESTIONS. (1) What is a graded Sunday-school, and why is it necessary? (2) Name the essentials of grading. (3) What should be the basis of classification? (4) Give the five great divisions into which the School should first be divided, and the ages corresponding to each. (5) What are the Home and Teacher Training departments? (6) What is meant by "graded lesson material?" (7) What is meant by "graded methods?" (8) What is meant by "graded teachers?" (9) If the School is to be kept on a graded basis, what principles of enrollment must be observed? And explain why. (10) What is the value of promotion? (11) What two kinds of promotion are there, and explain each? (12) Tell in your own words how you would establish and maintain a graded school.

to us in keeping down insects, and the most spiritual beauty of their home lives and affections. I was interested at the time, but the talk vanished into my brain cells and was forgotten, as things often do for which we have no present use.

"The first winter after I returned here to teach I was pretty blue and everything that came my way seemed to deepen the dye. One afternoon—it was precisely such a gray day as this— my head ached so that I could not do my school work, and putting it away, I pulled on my oldest coat, and jamming my hat over my eyes, I walked down the road to a clearing in the woods by the river, where, sitting on a stump, I was prepared to really enjoy a fit of crying. A soft whistle startled me, and out from the brush flew a streaked, sparrow-like bird with a pure white throat band, gave a couple of sweet notes and passed. I didn't know that it was the white-throated sparrow of the silver song, but I did know that it was beautiful, that it had spoken to me in my bitterness, and a desire to learn its name stopped my tears. Then suddenly my brain cells opened, the talk on birds filled my mind, but with an entirely new meaning, and I determined that I would learn all I could about these little winter companions and make chums with them if possible.

"I wrote to a bird-loving friend for advice as to the best way to learn. 'Begin now,' he answered, 'in winter, when the leaves are off and the birds are few; then when the spring rush begins, you will know half a dozen types that will guide to others," and he enclosed a list of a baker's dozen of birds that I should be most likely to find hereabout.

"After that, whenever I grew blue, I seized my paper and the book that came with it, and went out; and as my list of bird friends lengthened the depth of the blue dye that tinged my sight diminished. Now, Mrs. Hale, if you'll ask me up to the house for a cup of tea, I'll write out a list for you and the children, for I'm soon going to have a bird club for my kindergarten class, and then you will be completely drowned in questions."

Somehow the sitting room is a wholly different place from the room you left an hour before, infinitely brighter, even though the outside light is fading. The children bring forward the tea table to the hearth, while Miss Beatrix, pulling off her crimson sweater and straightening her locks that the tam-o'-shanter has tousled, sits on the little wicker stool and coaxes the fire into life.

The kettle is slow about boiling, and while you wait she asks for a pad to make the list.

"But can't we do something to help the birds when it is cold right off now, without waiting to know their names?" urges practical Marjorie. "A poor man came to the door for breakfast this very morning, and we didn't know his name; but he didn't mind a bit, only just wiped his mouth with his sleeve and asked for more coffee."

"Certainly you can," answers Miss Beatrix, "if you ask your father to put up a shelf with a little roof to it to keep off rain, on the south side of the old pine tree by the fence, and make it of old wood if possible, for birds are wary of new things. You can spread dog biscuit crumbs on it for the birds that love seeds, and nail some lumps of suet to the edge for the other birds that are meat eaters and love grubs, larvae and such like; and never leave the shelf empty! I've tried almost everything and suet seems to be more like the worms and things they find in trees than anything else. Then, what better place could mother have for learning the bird's names than by watching them when they come to feed?"

"I'm only writing down the easier birds that you are sure to see Mrs, Hale," Beatrix says, "because a dozen or so is enough for a beginning, and then I'll list the books. When you've learned all about a few birds, their spring and fall journeys, songs, nesting, change of feathers, you'll have a grip on the whole thing, and then it will be spring, and when you go out with your opera glasses, you will see so much color and hear such exquisite music that you can play you are at an opera out-of-doors."

Beatrix's fountain pen flies over the paper, and as she writes she reads the names aloud: Slate-colored junco, snow-flake, American goldfinch, white-throated sparrow, red cross-bill, purple finch, song sparrow, bluejay, chickadee, winter wren, brown creeper, downy woodpecker, white-breasted nuthatch, meadowlark, flicker, or golden-winged woodpecker.

"These names will serve merely as a clue to what you may expect to find. You must identify them yourself by reading them up in one of the books. I'm reversing the kodak legend to run 'I press the button; you do the rest.'"

ETIQUETTE OF GIFT-GIVING.

There is an etiquette governing the giving and receiving of presents, because there is always a best way to do everything. If we penetrate below the surface of the little courteous conventions we shall find that consideration for the feelings of others underlies all. Do not try to make your gift look as though it cost more than you paid for it. Aside from the paltry spirit of such giving it is a delusion and a snare, for next year your offering must seem to be as fine as the one of this season, or you may appear to have been less anxious to please your friend. The best gifts are those which put no tax upon material resources, but trifles of which the recipients may make frequent us, and so keep the giver in mind. Take the time to write a few words of loving or cordial greeting on the cards that accompany your gifts. Without evidence of individual, personal thought the offering of even the finest present appears somewhat graceless and perfunctory. A message on a card is better than a note, because more informal, and one should not seem to make much of a gift. Having your presents daintily wrapped is not less a matter of courtesy. Let their outward appearance commend them. Leave them or send them to their destination the day before Christmas—unless you can insure their reception early in the day. A tardy gift appears like an after-thought.—December Ladies' Home Journal.

SIGHT.

By George W. Thomas.

Dear Lord, if ever I
Forget thy hallowed name,
And thine all-searching eye
Discern my secret shame,

Restore my failing sight;
The blinding film remove;
With floods of heavenly light
Thy wayward child reprove.

The vision of thy charms
Shall break my heart in twain,
Thy love, that frowning death discerns,
And snaps the galling chain.

O Saviour, ever near,
Our Friend and Lover Thou,
Thy gentle whisper brings good cheer,
And smooths the troubled brow.

CHICAGO

THE OLD TESTAMENT ORDER OF THE SONS OF BELIAL IN TWO TYPICAL DEMONSTRATIONS IN CHICAGO—O. F. JORDAN WRITES OF THE FIRST WARD BALL AND THE NEW YEAR'S EVE ORGY.

On two recent occasions, the Old Testament order of the Sons of Belial, so much opposed by the prophets, has made strong demonstrations in Chicago. On these occasions, the social student has had much food for meditation presented. As this type of individual is more numerous than many of the modern prophets would want to admit, it will be worth our while to note the doings of the Sons of Belial.

"Scarlet Women and "Scarlet Men"

One demonstration occurred in connection with the famous First Ward ball some weeks ago. This ward is made up of the boarding houses that fringe the business district. The widely celebrated aldermen are the Honorable "Bath-house John" Coughlin and the Honorable "Hinky-Dink" otherwise known as Michael Kenna. This first ball is an annual event held in the Coliseum by these celebrated citizens whose generosity in the distribution of drinks is sung to every tune in the tenderloin. The Grace Episcopal Church which is adjoining the Coliseum, attempted to secure an injunction against the promoters of the ball but without success. The powers that be decreed that so respectable an affair should not be interfered with in any way. A motley, mad company it was. Made up of the lost souls of Chicago. We regret that the poetic genius of a Dante or of a Milton who must describe the lost souls in Hades, was not allowed to feed upon the material presented. The scarlet woman and the scarlet man—for why should they not have a like stigma—were present from all parts of the city. Liquor was consumed in quantities to astonish any but the most hardened. The temper of the audience is best illustrated by the press reports of the doings of his honor, "Bathhouse John." He found a staff photographer of the Record Herald waiting outside the building. The presence of a newspaper man is always a danger signal to men of this type. Whatever may have been the inciting cause, the press report states that "Bathhouse John" attacked the reporter and demolished his camera, supported by the sluggers that form the body-guard of the brave alderman.

A wave of horror and shame has gone over Chicago since the reports of this orgy have been published. Yet the Sons of Belial are so well connected that little if any legal trouble has arisen for them.

Chicago's Welcome to the New Year.

On a larger scale was the meeting of the Sons of Belial on New Year's Eve. It has become a city custom for the pleasure-loving part of the population to turn out on that evening. Seats in the restaurants of the loop district are sold by speculators for fifty dollars. It is estimated that every guest in the fine restaurants spent fifty dollars each, mostly on wine. The poorer devotees of pagan sensualism walked the streets, drunken men and women jostling the curiosity seekers that were also on the scene.

On this evening the forces of evangelical Christianity also had a meeting. It was a counter movement to remove the flavor of the First ward ball from the Coliseum. Great evangelists like Dr. Chapman, Biederwolf, Dixon and others were present. The meeting filled this great building, the largest in Chicago, to overflowing, and an overflow meeting was held in a neighboring church. This splendid crowd might seem to exhibit a force adequate to meet the Sons of Belial. It is discouraging, however, to see how little comes from some of these meetings of the evangelical Christians. The highly emotional leadership of the Moody Church on the north side is able to generate a tremendous voltage of enthusiasm, but is unable to convey it over the power wires to the machinery of social service. We need not less enthusiasm but more intelligent and capable leadership in the work of the kingdom. It is encouraging that fifteen thousand people should meet to oppose the Sons of Belial on New Year's Eve. It is discouraging, however, that when the noise of demonstration is over so little remains behind.

Christ's Love of Sinners.

Whence come the Sons and Daughters of Belial? They do not marry or have children. They live but a single generation. The curse of illegitimacy that has fallen on Paris is not a serious problem here. It is the sad fact that the Sons and Daughters of Belial are often the Prodigal sons and daughters of our Christian homes. We cannot dwell long on the good old parable in our churches without the tears welling to the eyes of a parent who has suffered a bereavement worse than death. Jesus was known as a friend of publicans and sinners. He would be working in Chicago much in the First ward from which His church has fled as from the plague. His splendid optimism would insist that the very Sons of Belial might become the Sons of God.

But He would have us do more than pick up social wreckage. He would have His church prevent the making of "rounders." The homes would be made more home-like, the churches more open and brotherly, and our schools more effective in character-building. Not so much with new machinery as with the vitalizing of old institutions would we be taught to present the recruiting of the ranks of the Sons of Belial, and the Sons of the Kingdom would be the more numerous.

Echoes from Philadelphia.

The Federation Council held a meeting at the Y. M. C. A. last Monday with the various denominations present. The speakers reported the national meeting at Philadelphia. These speakers were Rev. John P. Hill, secretary of the Board of Church Extension of the Presbyterian Church, Dr. Herbert L. Willett and C. D. Mitchell, pastor of St. James' Methodist Church. One of the practical enterprises inaugurated last Monday was the starting of a fund for the employment of Mr. Colby as agent of the Protestant churches in the Juvenile Courts. The Catholics have an agent there claiming every unattached child of Catholic parents and ready to receive all others.

The perpetuation of denominational difficulties and differences was ridiculed by all. Rev. Mr. Mitchell told a story of two German Reformed churches at a country cross-roads. When asked to explain the difference between the churches a countryman replied, "The old church believed that Eve tempted Adam with an apple; but we believe he was a 'son-of-a-gun' from the beginning."

Chicago preachers are much interested in a series of social studies edited by Josiah Strong called "The Gospel of the Kingdom." Some Chicago men among the contributors to the series are, Dr. Willett, Bishop Fallows, Prof. Henderson and Prof. Graham Taylor.

These studies are to be used in weekly meetings such as prayer-meeting, Christian Endeavor or adult Bible class. The studies for November show the curve of the series. "Working Women," "Woman's Wages," "Effects on Home Life," "Sweating and Consumers' Leagues," "What the Church Can Do."

The literature can be secured of the American Institute of Social Service, Bible House, Astor Place, New York. There can be no doubt of the benefit of introducing such a course into the life of any church.

CHURCH NOTES.

Ministers' Meeting.

The Ministerial Association will meet at the Jackson Boulevard Church, January 11, at 10:30 A. M., and will be addressed by the Rev. G. W. Thomas.

Let all the members of the association accept this as formal notice and make every effort to be present.

Stephen J. Corey will preach at Evanston on next Sunday evening.

Rev. Will F. Shaw left last Monday for a month's meeting at Newman, Ill.

C. E. Rainwater and wife made an extensive trip visiting relatives during the holidays.

Dr. Layton of China was at the ministers' meeting Monday. He will spend his furlough in Chicago. Our churches ought all to hear his story.

There have been two baptisms at the Metropolitan Church the past two weeks. Last Sunday night an unusually large audience greeted the minister, A. T. Campbell.

The Austin congregation gathered at the home of Rev. and Mrs. G. A. Campbell on New Year's evening. They left a holiday present for Mrs. Campbell and heartiest expressions of good-will for all in the household.

C. G. Kindred was at the ministers' meeting for the first time last Monday. He told his brethren of his preparation for the other world. His deep religious experience during his illness impressed all with the reality of the Christian faith. There were five additions at Englewood Sunday.

The rally of the Foreign Society will occur at the Jackson Boulevard Church next Monday. Stephen J. Corey will give his moving picture lecture in the evening. In the afternoon, returned missionaries and local pastors will give short addresses. The church serves a turkey dinner in the evening.

Prof. Lester Bartlett Jones of the University of Chicago spoke to the ministers last Monday on church music. He pleaded for high grade music throughout the church work. He would have the jingle hymns of popular evangelistic tabooed and the great, yet simple hymns of the past substituted.

The Evanston Church closed the year with a surplus in the treasury. The membership will be canvassed this month for funds to get on to the new lot. The old building may be moved over to the rear of the lot and remodeled for institutional work. The Sunday-school was the largest the past quarter that it has been in the present pastorate.

The quarterly rally of the Chicago Christian Missionary Society will be held at the First M. E. Church Sunday afternoon, Jan. 24. Dr. E. S. Ames is the speaker, and the Hyde Park choir will lead the music. Dr. Ames is qualified by his long residence in the city and by his social insight to deliver a masterful address. The interest already generated promises an unusual crowd.

WITH THE WORKERS

Living Link Evangelist, F. A. Sword, is in a meeting at Brooklyn, Ia.

The church at Alvin, Ill., has called T. J. Buck, of Frankford, Ind., to become their pastor.

The First Church, Omaha, Neb., has called to its pastorate J. M. Kersey, of Parsons, Kansas.

After a successful pastorate of eight years, E. L. Prunty has resigned the work at Brookfield, Mo.

The church at Winchester, Ill., under the leadership of Lew D. Hill, raised fifty dollars for state missions.

J. Will Walters has closed his work at Niantic, Ill., and entered into service with the church at Sullivan, Ill.

R. D. Brown and the church at Chapin, Ill., began a meeting Dec. 27, E. O. Beyer of Chicago is leading the singing.

T. L. Lowe, Union City, Ind., has received a unanimous call to the Fourth Ave. Church, Columbus, Ohio, to succeed Walter Mansell.

The church at Wibders, Ga., will dedicate its new building the first Sunday in February. Geo. L. Snively will have charge of the service.

E. F. Leake closed his work at Onawa and began at Vinton, Ia., Dec. 1, where he succeeds A. B. Elliott who takes the church at Grand Junction, Colo.

F. D. Ferrall has entered upon his fourth year with the church at Bloomfield, Ia. Bruce Brown, of Valparaiso, Ind., will assist them in a meeting beginning January 6.

Walter Mansell, Columbus, Ohio, goes to the work at Crawfordsville, Ind., Jan. 10, where he succeeds Earl Wilfrey, who has become pastor of the First Church, St. Louis.

F. J. Stinson and wife, Eldorado, Kan., have moved into the new parsonage. The members of the church celebrated the event with a surprise party, with a delightful program and refreshments.

The Central Christian Church, Peoria, Ill., is preparing to welcome W. F. Turner, of Joplin, Mo., as their pastor. The reception committee consists of the president of each of the auxiliaries of the church.

W. A. Green, of Kewanee, Ill., is in a meeting with the church at Camp Point, thus returning the service of the pastor H. J. Reynolds, of Camp Point, who recently assisted in a meeting at Kewanee.

Wilhite and Gates will assist the church at Mt. Vernon, Ohio, in a meeting during February. The meetings will be held in the skating rink which seats from 1,500 to 2,000 people. L. O. Newcomer is the aggressive pastor.

The members of the church at Colusa, California, have petitioned H. J. Loken to reconsider his acceptance of the call to the church at Alameda. We have not heard whether he will yield to the entreaty of his church.

The church at Cheney, Kan., received 100 new members in a meeting led by Edward Clutter. They have increased the salary of their pastor, H. J. Meyers, and on account of the large audiences are compelled to face the problem of increasing the size of their building.

TELEGRAMS.

Eureka, Ill., Jan. 3.—Annual report shows four thousand dollars for missions and benevolences. No large gifts.
Alva W. Taylor.

Washingon, Pa., Jan. 3.—Twenty-four added today, one hundred and fifty-eight to date. Greatest Washington meeting in twenty years. George L. Snively easily ranks with our greatest evangelists in resourcefulness, drawing and converting power. Many new subscriptions today. Meeting closes too soon. Evangelists begin next at Marshall, Mo. E. A. Cole, Minister.

Des Moines, Iowa, Jan. 3.—Eighty-three added today—first invitations. Began with Central Church, Finis Idleman, pastor, Thursday. Sixteen converts this morning, sixty-seven tonight. I worked with Brother Idleman four years ago at Paris, Illinois, and with this church 8 years ago when Dr. Breeden was pastor. Brother Idleman is a prince among pastors, with unlimited enthusiasm and consecration. Vancamp and Mrs. Scoville are here. Rockwells at my parents' home, Butler, Indiana, where I gave three invitations last week with twenty-four and eighteen added. Today was our greatest first day with a single church.
Chas. Reign Scoville.

Findlay, Ohio, Jan. 3.—Began with First Church today under favorable conditions. Pastor John Mullen and his people earnest and hopeful. Mr. Leroy St. John, the peerless song leader, began permanent engagements with me. L. E. Seller.

Joel Brown held a meeting at Lancaster, Mo.

Knowles and Ridenour began a meeting at Beaver Crossing, Neb., January 1.

The Foreign Society is making a strong appeal for a Christian physician for work in China. Certainly America's abundance should supply China's need.

H. E. Oldaker, Salinville, Ohio, is holding a short meeting for the La Belle View Mission, Steubenville, where C. N. Garrett, a Bethany student, is the minister.

J. R. Golden began his pastorate with the West Side Church, Springfield, the first Sunday in January. He was heartily welcomed by the other ministers and churches of the city.

The First Church, Springfield, held its annual meeting New Year's night. The reports from the various departments showed the church to be in the most prosperous condition.

The First Church, Springfield, Ill., under the leadership of F. W. Burnham, is entering enthusiastically into the preparation for the union meeting which will be led by "Billy" Sunday.

The Chicago Christian Missionary Society will hold its next quarterly rally at the First M. E. Church, Jan. 24. The address will be delivered by Dr. E. S. Ames, pastor of the Hyde Park Church.

A. F. Stahl has been two weeks with the church at Steubenville, Ohio, and the church is under his leadership taking on renewed courage. Their Sunday-school brought together a bountiful supply of provisions for the poor of the city. The church has a benevolent fund of $800.00, and they see that no child is kept from Sunday-school for lack of clothing.

W. S. Johnson is now in a meeting at Panora, Ia.

One thousand in the Sunday-school, Jan. 3, was the standard set by the North Tonawanda Church (N. Y.)

G. N. Griswold, Waveland, Ind., is available for a series of meetings. He is an evangelist of experience.

The church at Billings, Montana, Walter M. Jordan, pastor, began a meeting Jan. 3. Miss Lucille May Park leads the singing.

President A. McLean and Secretay S. J. Corey are making a great record in missionary rallies this year. The moving pictures, a new and instructive feature are proving very popular.

E. D. Long, 5218 Union avenue, Chicago, Ill., is available for pulpit work with churches in or near the city, until April first, and will assist churches either as regular or occasional supply work.

Geo. B. Stewart, Warrensburg, Mo., speaks in the highest terms of the work of Evangelists Snively and Altheide who assisted in the recent meeting at Warrensburg in which there were 77 additions to the church.

M. E. Dutt has just closed the first six months of his pastorate with the church at Las Vegas, New Mexico. In that time there has been a net increase in the membership of 25, and the church is in the most prosperous condition.

W. C. Bower, pastor of the Tabernacle Church, North Tonawanda, N. Y., is spending a few weeks in special studies at the Columbia University. Lowell C. McPherson, Vice-President Keuka College, is supplying the pulpit at the Tabernacle Church.

W. S. Johnson, evangelist under the State Board of Iowa, closed a meeting at Griswold, Ia., Dec. 22. Miss Ola Bowles, of Des Moines, led the singing. She is highly commended for her Christian character and ability as soloist and director of music. There were 34 additions to the church. S. R. McClure is the energetic pastor.

Harry G. Hill, Third Church, Indianapolis, announces the following series of "Larger Life Sermons," to be preached Sunday evenings during January and February: "Humanity's Highest Honor"; "As a Man Thinketh"; "The Will to Be Well"; "What All the World Wants"; How to Have Personal Power"; "Wisdom's Ways"; "How to Be Happy"; "The Way to Wealth."

J. T. Brown, Johnson City, Tenn., announces a series of eight sermons on "Foreign Countries and Heathen Religions" for the months of January and February. The sermons will be illustrated by the use of the stereopticon. This is the very best way to interest people in Foreign Missions. Preachers, the Foreign Society will furnish you slides for this sort of work, asking only that you pay express each way, and return the views within two weeks.

M. F. Harmon, editor of the Christian Messenger, Jackson, Miss., commends editorially the present work of the Christian Century and adds: "From Willett's 'Confession of Faith', he seems to be believing in almost everything which we have usually considered to be essential and possibly in a little more. Why don't the Standard accept his statement, treat him as a brother, and go on about its business? It may cause Willett to be taken off the program but it can't turn him out of the Kingdom, nor try him for heresy."

AT OLD EUREKA.

Dear old Eureka! As Paul said of the Philippians, "I thank my God upon every remembrance of you." Eureka is not a town, a place on the map, only. It is a life, a character, a spirit, an inspiration—the embodiment of great spiritual and intellectual forces. For three-quarters of a century good men and great and noble and consecrated women have been pouring the tides of highest thinking and purest living incarnate in splendid personalities into "Eureka." And today Eureka—College and church—is a source of almost constant streams of influence carrying blessing and benediction throughout the world. How much do some of us owe Eureka. For three years of academic training under the old masters—Radford, Everest, Allen and others, for the degree of Bachelor of Arts conferred more than thirty years ago and for Master of Arts three years later. For the privilege of winning the best wife the Lord ever gave any man. These are supreme among her myriad of gifts to me. Why shouldn't I love Eureka? Seven years ago when the new edifice was completed, it was my privilege to share the fellowship of the church in the service of dedication. But the greatest joy and honor the Eureka Church ever bestowed upon an alumnus of the college was mine last month when I was privileged to lead this grand old church—winner of so many victories— in a twenty-five days' soul winning campaign. The character and results of this campaign have already been adequately and admirably reported by the pastor and Prof. Radford. Let it be mine to set down some impressions of the church as it is today and its ministers. Later I shall perform a similar service for the college. The Eureka church has had a glorious history. Some of the greatest men the brotherhod has known have preached for it. Some of the best pastors have shepherded this flock. But the flock is larger today than ever before—the church vastly stronger in every good word and work.

For six years Alva W. Taylor has led the Eureka flock into "green pastures and beside still waters." And his leadership has indeed been a masterful and yet withal a gentle one. As few men among us, Brother Taylor combines the essential qualities of the preacher, the pastor and administrator. He has the vision of the prophet, the sympathy and considerate care of the shepherd and the masterful grasp of affairs, the close attention to detail, the managerial qualities of the trained executive. In these six years of his incumbency the church has steadily advanced in every department. In this period more than two hundred and fifty have been added to the church by baptism and a much larger number by statement and letter. More than $17,000 have been given for missions and benevolence. The missionary offerings have increased from $1,000 the first year of his pastorate to nearly $4,000 the last year. In each of the last three years the missionary offerings have exceeded the offerings for current expenses. Is there another church in the brotherhood that holds such a record? The past year has been the crowning one of this pastorate. The accessions have been larger, the giving more generous, the spirit of Christ in the church more evident and every auxiliary at the high tide of its life. A remarkable characteristic of Brother Taylor's ministry is its effectiveness in reaching and winning young men. A large number of baptisms during the entire pastorate have been young men and the very best workers in the church today are from their ranks. The students of the college have been greatly inspired by his ministry and they are, with few exceptions, in the church.

Brother Taylor is a vigorous and virile thinker, a dilligent student, with a strong hold upon the vital things, the eternal verities of the gospel. Sometimes he is, I think, misunderstood in his teaching, but to me he seems to be above all things loyal to Christ and His gospel and aware of the Spirit of the Age. His supreme desire is to commend his Master to the minds and hearts of those who need Him.

Brother Taylor has until now resisted the many temptations that have come to lure him to a larger field and a greater work, but the repeated and reinforced appeals of the Irving Park Church, Chicago, though once declined, ought to be effective. In such a field, with ample scope for his versatile powers, his superb sociological and spiritual equipment he will do his greatest work.

H. O. Breeden.

WITH THE WORKERS

Assisted by Chas. Altheide (singer), and Geo. L. Snively (Evangelist), the church at Marshall, Mo., with B. F. Wharton as pastor, began a meeting January third.

The church at Metropolis, Ill., has just closed a meeting with R. R. Hamlin of Fort Worth, Texas, as Evangelist. There were 83 additions to their membership.

J. W. Lowber of Austin, Texas, preached his farewell sermon for that church January 6, thus closing an unusually successful pastorate which has lasted through a period of twelve years. He expects to devote his time to lecturing.

The Allen Ave. Church, Richmond, Va., held a four days' meeting, Dec. 27 to 30, in opening the Sunday-school section of the church. There were services on Sunday, and at 8:00 o'clock Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings.

Geo. L. Snively, who has just closed a meeting with the church at Washington, Penn., of which Bro. E. A. Cole is pastor, says of the pastor: "He is the most popular preacher in the city and pastor of the most useful church there."

T. L. Read closed a six weeks' meeting at Chapin, Ill., on December 20, with 107 added, 83 baptisms, 66 men and 41 women, only five under 16 years of age; 20 men and their wives; 19 reclaimed, 5 from other churches, who had been baptized. Net gain to the brotherhood 88. He was assisted by J. Wade Seniff of Pittsfield as chorus leader and soloist.

H. H. Peters will present the cause of Christian Education in several of the leading churches of Illinois during the month of January. Among them will be University Place, Champaign, Rantoul, First Church, Bloomington, Lexington, Decatur (Central), Latham, Jacksonville, and Watseka. He writes that the prospects are bright for Eureka College.

We receive with sorrow the news that Mrs. W. T. Moore, president of Christian College at Columbia, Mo., has broken down in health by her strenuous labors for the school for which she has sacrificed so much. Mrs. Moore has been president of Christian College for the past twelve years, and has not only given herself, but a large amount of money, to the building up of this time-honored institution. She will resign the presidency of the college the first of next June and take a well-earned rest. Friends everywhere will wish her perfect restoration and a speedy return to her great usefulness.

KEUKA COLLEGE

A remarkable incident in the progress of union between Free Baptists and Disciples is their co-operation in the conduct of Keuka College, Keuka, N. Y. We take pleasure in presenting to our readers the following agreement which forms the basis of the co-operation, which has been adopted by both bodies: 1. That the Disciples of Christ co-operate in the management of Keuka College. 2. That the Disciples of Christ be given the privilege of naming four trustees immediately, and that, as other vacancies occur in the board, the number be increased as expedient, until they shall have equal representation with the Free Baptists. 3. That the Disciples of Christ be given at least one representative on the Executive Committee, and that they be duly represented in the personnel of the Faculty. 4. That the Disciples of Christ co-operate with the College in providing proper support, and in conducting a joint canvass for $100,000 additional endowment, the income only of which is to be used for the maintenance of the College. 5. That the Disciples of Christ secure for the College a suitable man to enter upon field service, to aid in securing students and money for the institution. 6. That, upon entering into this co-operation, the Board of Trustees appoint a Board of Arbitration, to consist of three members, one a Free Baptist, one a Disciple of Christ, and these two to select a third at their convenience. That, in case of any continued disagreement in points essential to the welfare or policy of the College or in matters that are fundamental to our continued co-operation this Board of Arbitration shall have the authority to decide such questions as shall be referred to it by the Trustees; it being understood that in case of any division of property being necessary, the Disciples of Christ shall share only in that part of the property which they have helped to accumulate. It is suggested, on behalf of the Free Baptists, that the first President of the College under the new arrangement be named by the Disciples of Christ; and it is their desire that a Biblical department be established under his direction. It is the opinion of the officers of Keuka College that this plan of co-operation will be welcomed by a large number of the Free Baptists, there being no apparent opposition to it; while it is the opinion of the Disciples that such a union of efforts will be potent in promoting Christian unity; and it is hoped by all that names and thoughts of distinction will rapidly disappear in loyal service of the Master in the cause of Christian education.

"CHRISTIAN MEN"

The first number of Christian Men has come to our desk. It is the organ of the Committee of Men's Organization Disciples of Christ, published at Kansas City, Mo., with P. C. Macfarlane as editor and business manager. On the front page is the cut of R. A. Long, president of the National Men's Organization, and on another page a short sketch of Mr. Long's very interesting career as a Christian business man. It is the plan to give each month a sketch of some captain of industry among us. The magazine contains such articles as "The Minister's Work a Man's Work," "The Men's Brotherhood," a sketch of the history of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, some model constitutions of men's associations, a sketch of the Men's work in the Christian Church of Alameda, California, where the editor P. C. Macfarlane has closed a successful pastorate to take up the larger work with men of the entire church. The magazine is bright, aggressive, virile, and will be a great service to the work of the men in any church where it may be taken.

LUM GRADED SCHOOL.

In the call for gifts for the Southern Christian Institute, on account of the burning of Allison Hall, we have overlooked the needs of the Lum Graded School. In our last appeal we stated that enough clothing had been sent to the S. C. I., but enough has not been sent to Lum. On account of the unusually hard times, there will be great suffering in that part of Alabama this winter. A good supply of clothing will enable the workers there to not only relieve suffering, but to greatly strengthen the mission of the school in the community. Send good, warm clothing, securely packed in strong boxes. Direct boxes to Isom Franklin, Calhoun, Ala. Letters directed to Lum, Ala., will reach him. Please note this call from the suffering.

WITH THE WORKERS

S. D. Dutcher has begun work as pastor at Terre Haute, Ind.

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Cappa, singing evangelists, are assisting J. M. Vawter in a meeting at Sullivan, Ind.

March 1 Nathaniel Jacks will close his work at Texarkana, Texas, to enter the generalistic field.

The Broadway Church, Louisville, Ky., is placing a new pipe organ in their building. W. N. Briney is the pastor.

Jewell Howard has resigned the work at Amarillo, Texas. This is a good church and should not be long without a pastor.

C. G. Brelos is considering the work at Galveston, Texas, where there is a larger German population than in any other city of Texas.

Mrs. M. M. Blanks, of Lackhart, has given a new building to the Bible Chair work at Austin. Work on the structure is about completed.

Randolph Cook, minister at Enid, Okla., is pushing the work with vigor. The C. W. B. M. offering was $29.00. Additional payment on church debt.

The meeting with the Budd Park Church, Kansas City, led by Wilhite and Gates, resulted in 87 additions to the church. B. L. Wray is the pastor.

Good reports come from the work of Cephas Shelburne with the East Dallas (Texas) Church. There have been 14 additions to the church in the last few weeks.

John L. Brandt and wife expect to make a circuit of the globe immediately following the Centennial Convention. The chief purpose is to study the work of our mission fields.

The new church at Winchester, Ky., which will cost $75,000, is nearing completion. It will be one of the finest buildings which we have in the state. J. H. McNeil is the pastor.

C. R. Oakley, who began work with the church at Mansfield, Ohio, in November, is getting the work in fine shape and is most highly commended by the people of his church.

President E. V. Zollars and Bro. LeMay are pushing hard their campaign for funds for Oklahoma Christian University, Enid, Okla. Since October 1 they have raised $25,000.00.

On the 19th of January E. L. Powell and his church will hold their annual banquet for the men of the city. The banquet has come to be regarded as one of the principal events in the calendar of the life of Louisville.

The church at Richmond, Ky., has raised about $29,000 toward a building fund and will begin work as soon as a sufficient amount is raised. Cloyd Goodnight will be E. E. Moorman's successor in the work at Danville, Ill.

The work of Oklahoma Christian University is greatly prospering. Its present enrollment is 250 students. About sixty of these are in preparation for the ministry, many of them supporting themselves by preaching for nearby churches. Twenty states are represented in the student body. All members of the faculty are enthusiastic over the work of the school.

Harvey Hazel will succeed W. L. Martin as pastor of the Boyle Heights Church, Los Angeles.

Charles E. McVay, song evangelist, has an open date for March. Address him at Atlantic, Iowa.

W. H. Weisheit, the new pastor at Bellevue, Penn., has been holding a good meeting with his home church.

I. H. Teel recently resigned at Visalia, Cal., to become pastor at South Berkeley. His new work is prospering with ten additions during December.

Evangelist H. Gordon Bennett began a meeting January 3 at Nanton, Alberta. He continues for some time in evangelistic work in western Canada.

Clutter and Epler are in a good meeting at Osborne, Kan., and will hold a meeting at Miltonvale, Kan., where Eli Walker is minister, during the month of January.

Granville Snell is in a good meeting with pastor Rusk at Elmo, Mo. Four added and good prospects. Mr. Snell sends the Christian Century his earnest approval of our "stand for Christian liberty."

The building being erected by the National C. W. B. M., as the home for the Mission Training School, at Irvington, Ind., in connection with Butler College, is progressing rapidly. It will be ready for occupancy by the time the flowers bloom.

It is announced that E. L. Powell, of Louisville, Ky., a prince of our preachers, and Dr. Anna Gordon, former Living Link missionary of the First Christian Church, are to be married some time in February. The Christian Century extends its felicitations.

J. F. Findley gave his lecture on the "Passion Play" at the First Christian Church on Tuesday evening, Dec. 22, to a large audience. From the fact that Brother Findley witnessed this Tragic Drama at Ober-Ammergau in 1900, made it quite impressive, and he is requested to repeat it (the "Passion Play") again in the near future. The net proceeds for the church were something over forty dollars.

Albert Stahl, recently pastor of the Second Church in Akron, O., has accepted the pastorate of the church in Steubenville, O., and will begin his work with the opening year.

E. J. Church will close a successful three and one-half years' ministry at Granby, Mo., April 30, 1909. Would like to hold two or three meetings in the spring before locating elsewhere. Terms reasonable. Have had 67 additions this year.

Edward Oliver Tilburn will hold meetings in Montana for several weeks under the auspices of the Montana Christian Association by whom he is highly recommended as pastor or evangelist. He can be engaged for meetings during 1909, and proposes holding summer meetings under a new but tried and successful plan with him. Would consider a pastorate. His address is 119 West Galena St., Butte, Montana.

The church at Veedersburg, Ind., closed a four weeks' meeting last Snuday night with a service in the Opera House that broke all records for attendance in that auditorium. There were 71 added to the church, and the meetings accomplished far more than any one dared to hope. Harry A. Davis of Chicago was the evangelist, and he proved himself to be one of unusual power. The church and community were delighted with his work. Mr. Kelley begins at Wayntown, Ind., Jan. 10.

The church at San Angelo, Texas, is preparing to erect a new building to cost from $25,000 to $30,000.

H. B. Easterling and E. E. Nelms are in a good meeting at Lane, Ill. Seven persons were added the first week.

The church at Oceanside, Cal., Oscar Sweeney, pastor, is being assisted in a meetin by Grant K. Lewis. Prof. B. P. Stout, of Philadelphia, has charge of the music.

W. F. Richardson, pastor of the First Church, Kansas, City, Mo., spent the holidays with his wife and son and daughter at Roswell, N. M., where they are staying for the son's health.

C. B. Reynolds has accepted a call to the church at Alliance, Ohio, and will soon close his work with the church at New Philadelphia, where he has served for two and one-half years.

H. H. Peters of Eureka College delivered an address in the Christian Church of Rantoul, Ill., the evening of Jan. 3 to a large and enthusiastic crowd. Mr. Peters was pastor of this church for three years, resigning to enter Eureka College eight years ago.

The church at Ionia, Michigan, will celebrate the semi-centennial year of its history January 24. A special invitation is extended to "all Disciples who have been members of this church, whoever or wherever they may be, to come home and spend a few days under the old roof-tree." G. W. Moore is the present, much-beloved pastor.

The church at Woodward, Okla., where E. S. McKinley is the pastor, is planning to raise all money for their expenses by the tithing system, thus abandoning the conventional contribution basket. They have pledged $1,350 for Christian Education this year, and have given their pastor an increase in salary.

Food Knowledge on the Farm.

With the Rural Free Delivery of mails, the farmer is as closely in touch with what is going on in the world, as his city brother.

What to eat, in order to get the best out of one's brain and body, is as important for the modern farmer as the manufacturer, business man or professional worker. An Illinois farmer writes:

"I am a farmer and was troubled with chronic indigestion for two years—suffered great agony and could find no permanent relief from medicines.

"A friend suggested that I quit using so much starchy foods, which are the principal causes of intestinal indigestion. I began to use Grape-Nuts and have continued with most gratifying results.

"Grape-Nuts food has built me up wonderfully. I gained 6 lbs., the first four weeks that I used it. My general health is better than before, my brain is clear, my nerves strong.

"For breakfast and dinner I have Grape-Nuts with cream, a slice of crisp toast, a soft boiled egg and a cup of Postum. My evening meal is made of Grape-Nuts and cream, alone.

"This diet gives me good rest every night and I am now well again."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

DOINGS AT DIXON, ILL.

With the exit of 1908 I close ten months of service in this important field of northern Illinois. The visible result shows that fifteen have been added to the church at regular services.

All departments of the church reveal a marked increase. The Sunday-school won the banner in a midsummer contest with three other schools. We celebrated the victory with a week's rally, at which the various interests of the church were presented by visiting ministers.

The church has strugg'ed under a growing indebtedness for several years. We began a campaign to provide for this and make needed improvements, among which was a splendid light plant. We have succeeded.

The church is growing in power. We begin an evangelistic campaign under the leadership of Lockhart and Lintt.

The minister has been honored by the office of secretary of the Ministerial Association, also selected to teach the Union Y. M. C. A. Teachers' Training Class which has grown to a Century Class.

The minister has made ten special addresses and conducted a three weeks' evangelistic meeting with the historic Old Pine Creek Church, at which there were 17 added, this in addition to the regular work.

Fraternally yours,
A. R. Spicer.

THE TEXAS MINISTERIAL INSTITUTE.

Three important meetings lasting ten days, combining the Ministerial Institute, the Texas State Mission Rally and the Texas Lectureship, will be held in the Chapel of the Texas Christian University, Waco, January 26 to Feb. 4. The three programs will furnish a rich variety of thought and inspiration, and promise to be a valuable contribution to the progress of the cause in the southwest. The Central Christian Church in Waco unites with the University Church in extending a hearty welcome to visitors whether living in Texas or elsewhere. An effort will be made to secure special rates on railroads, and free lodging will be provided for all. It is earnestly hoped that a large attendance will continue through all these meetings.

The Lectureship will discuss among others the following subjects: "Christ and the Human Soul"; "Principles of Scientific Criticism"; "Our Church Polity"; "The Supreme Apologetic"; "Christian Science"; "Legal and Spiritual Effects of Our Plea"; "Method of Scientific Criticism"; "The Growing Church and Ministerial Supply"; "The Declaration and Address in Relation to our Present Day Problems"; "Historical Problems in Daniel"; "Studies in the Psalms"; "Studies in Isaiah."

The Institute will discuss: "The Place of the Doctrine of God in preaching"; "The Breadth of the Twentieth Century Ministry"; "The Septuagint Translation of the Old Testament"; "How to put a Church to Work"; "Pastor and Church College"; "The Church and Foreign Immigration"; "The Minister in His Library"; "Missionary Co-operation of Texas with other States"; "The Impending Prohibition Battle"; "The One Faith"; "Studies in the Psalms"; "The Minister and Social Problems," and a series of four addresses by representatives of four different churches on the attitude and tendency of these churches towards Christian unity.

The State Mission Rally will present a session of the Christian Woman's Board of Missions, a Business Men's session, a Bible School session and a Missionary session. A few of the subjects are: "The Texas Bible Chair"; "The Imperialism of Christ and His Gospel"; "The Best Method of Reaching Southern People with the Gospel"; "Our Duty to our German Citizen"; "Our Field and our Forces"; "Business Men and the Church."

On each school day an address will be given to the entire university and visitors. These programs will be exceedingly valuable to all persons interested in a study of religious questions, whether preachers or other workers in behalf of Christian truth. The program is modern, and the speakers are among the best in the south.

Chas. G. Stout was with us in Denver, Colo., at a most delightful meeting, closing on the 21st of Dec. Stout is an ideal evangelist, and a most pleasant yoke-fellow. He goes to Longmont next. There were twenty-one additions in our meeting at the East Side Church; ten baptisms.

THEN AND NOW.

Complete Recovery from Coffee Ills.

"About nine years ago my daughter, from coffee drinking, was on the verge of nervous prostration," writes a Louisville lady. "She was confined for the most part to her home.

"When she attempted a trip down town she was often brought home in a cab and would be prostrated for days afterwards.

"On the advice of her physician she gave up coffee and tea, drank Postum, and ate Grape-Nuts for breakfast.

"She liked Postum from the very beginning and we soon saw improvement. Today she is in perfect health, the mother of five children, all of whom are fond of Postum.

"She has recovered, is a member of three charity organizations and a club, holding an office in each. We give Postum and Grape-Nuts the credit for her recovery."

"There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

"SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION."

The Southern California Christian Ministers' Asssociation is one of the most pleasant and most helpful factors of the church work on this coast.

For years it has met regularly on the first Monday in each month, pro-rating traveling expenses so that all of our ministers in our southland can afford to attend.

With the rapid extension of our churches in recent years, the association has enjoyed a proportionate growth. Formerly the meetings were held in different localities, going from church to church, but for the last three years, to avoid confusion and for convenience of all, the meetings have been held at the First Christian Church in Los Angeles.

The attendance of "laymen" has been encouraged until now the monthly sessions have an attendance of from one to two hundred, and this is constantly increasing.

This attendance is fostered by the social hour including a luncheon in the basement of the church, served by the Ladies' Aid Society.

Doubtless the attendance will be augmented this year by the unusual character of the program. The chief feature is to be Centennial themes, assigned as follows: "Beginnings of the Restoration Movement," by W. H. Martin, of Whittier. (This was discussed in December.)

"Thomas Campbell and the Declaration and Address," W. E. Crabtree of Central Church, San Diego. January.

"Alexander Campbell," by A. C. Smither, of First Church, Los Angeles. February.

"Coadjutors of Alexander Campbell," by Geo. Ringo, of Westside Church, Los Angeles. March.

"Isaac Errett's Contribution to the Restoration," F. M. Dowling, of First Church, Pasadena. April.

"Christian Union," by F. M. Rodgers, of First Church, Long Beach. May.

"The Outlook," by J. B. McKnight, of Magnolia Avenue Church, Los Angeles. June.

"Distinctive Doctrines of the Christian Church," by J. N. Smith, of the Eastside Church, Los Angeles. July.

These addresses will be carefully prepared and are expected to be fairly exhaustive in treatment. They will constitute the morning lectures at the Long Beach Convention next August, and are the same themes which will be discussed at the Centennial Convention at Pittsburg.

All members of all our congregations are invited to these meetings, and these addresses with other high class features of the program each month ought to insure an attendance that will tax the capacity of the lecture room of the First Church. The committee and the association say, "Come!" Let him that heareth say, "Come!" And whosoever will let him come. Geo. Ringo.

THE CENTENNIAL EDUCATION DAY.

For several years the third Lord's Day in January has been designated "Education Day." Most of our colleges have sought to utilize it as the occasion for making reports of their work to the churches. Many churches have earnestly coöperated with them in making the day yield a better understanding between the college and the church. Where this has been done an intimate relation exists that is second in its force and tenderness only to the personal relation between the graduate and his Alma Mater. The Christian college belongs to the church and the church in a very real and reciprocal way belongs to the college. One cannot thrive without the other.

There was one confession at Maywood last Sunday.

The church at Harvey had a number of additions last month.

Rev. G. W. Thomas, who is in a meeting at West End, was in the ministers' meeting Monday. He comes from Lynnville, Ill.

Sheffield Avenue Church has been having a series of free Friday evening entertainments to enlist their neighborhood.

Dr. Gates preached at Chicago Heights last Sunday. No pastor has been located there yet.

J. K. Arnot preaches at Armitage Avenue Church now. He is making a canvass of the neigborhood to see how many are unchurched.

I recently assisted Carey E. Morgan of Paris, Ky., in a two weeks' meeting, the numerical results of which were sixty-six additions to the congregation. Rarely, if ever, have I led in a meeting where there was more beautiful harmony and more perfect co-operation and sympathy with the plans and methods of the evangelist. The congregation is cultur d, hospitable, responsive and consecrated. Brother Morgan is a princely preacher and a royal leader of men. He and his wife take the initiative in every forward movement in the community.

The Sunday-school of this congregation is doing a notable work. Its superintendent, Wm. Hinton, is a man of vision. During the afternoons of the meeting I delivered a series of lectures to the teachers of the Sunday-school and others especially interested in this work.

On the last evening but one of the meeting, about thirty of the alumni of Transylvania University met in reunion and banquet and discussed most enthusiastically the interests of the institution. Three of the trustees of Transylvania University, Messrs. John T. Hinton, Robert C. Talbott and Carey E. Morgan, are members of this congregation.

Charcoal Purifies Any Breath

And In Its Purest Form Has Long Been Known As the Greatest Gas Absorber.

Pure willow charcoal will oxidize almost any odor and render it sweet and pure. A panful in a foul cellar will absorb deadly fumes, for charcoal absorbs one hundred times its volume in gas.

The ancients knew the value of charcoal and administered it in cases of illness, especially pertaining to the stomach. In England today charcoal poultices are used for ulcers, boils, etc., while some physicians in Europe claim to cure many skin diseases by covering the afflicted skin with charcoal powder.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges go into the mouth and transfer foul odors at once into oxygen, absorb noxious gases and acids and when swallowed mix with the digestive juices and stop gas making, fermentation and decay.

By their gentle qualities they control beneficially bowel action and stop diarrhoea and constipation.

Bad breath simply cannot exist when charcoal is used. There are no ifs or ands about this statement. Don't take our word for it, but look into the matter yourself. Ask your druggist or physician, or better still, look up charcoal in your encyclopedia. The beauty of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges is that the highest pharmaceutical expert knowledge obtainable has been used to prepare a lozenge that will give to man the best form of charcoal for use.

Pure willow and honey is the result. Two or three after meals and at bedtime sweeten the breath, stop decay of teeth, aid the digestive apparatus and promote perfect bowel action. They enrich the supply of oxygen to the system and thereby revivify the blood and nerves.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are sold everywhere in vast quantities, thus they must have merit. Every druggist carries them, price, twenty-five cents per box, or send us your name and address and we will send you a trial package by mail, free. Address F. A. A SPLENDID ACHIEVEMENT IN RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

On Sunday, December 27, the congregation formerly known as the West End Christian Church of Richmond, Va., dedicated the Sunday-school section of its new building in Lee District, and will hereafter be known as the Allen Avenue Christian Church of that city.

This church was organized eight years ago with a membership of 61. A lot valued at $3,000 was leased for five years with the privilege of purchase at the end of that term, and a modest building erected at a cost of $2,000. Henry Pearce Atkins, then of Harrodsburg, Ky., was called to its pastorate in April, 1901, with promise of support from the A. C. M. S. and C. W. B. M. From the beginning, however, the church proved self-supporting and the appropriations made by these societies were returned. In 1906 the church bought the lot which it had leased and shortly afterwards sold its property for $4,500. A new site, six squares west of the old, was selected; and a lot, 80 by 129 feet at the corner of Allen and Hanover Avenues, was purchased for $5,200. In February, 1908, plans were drawn for a building to cost about $30,000; and the contract for the Sunday school section was let shortly afterwards. This section was occupied on December 27.

The building is of brick and terra cotta, of Gothic design, planned to accommodate a Sunday-school of about 400. It is equipped with class rooms, gallery, dining room, store room and kitchen; and so constructed that the main auditorium with a seating capacity of 550 may be added without mechanical difficulty to what is now the front of the building.

This section, furnished, cost $17,500—or $22,700 including the lot. $10,000 of this was provided for by the sale of the old property for $4,500 and $5,500 raised in a building campaign last April. Before dedication the total amount to be raised or carried was $12,700. The Society of Church Extension offered $8,000 on its usual condition. To meet this condition it was necessary to raise $4,700 on the day of opening, which was done in a spiritual service under the direction of our Peter Ainslie of Baltimore, who dedicated the old building eight years ago. The Sunday-school of 160 and the membership of 230 have given about eighty per cent of all money raised. Friends everywhere had part in the rest. The largest gifts were $300, but the accumulation of the many smaller ones made the enterprise possible.

FROM THE NEW MEXICO EVANGELIST.

A three days' trip from Las Vegas brought me to Aztec in the northwestern part of New Mexico. Near here are the old Aztec ruins which have been standing for many centuries. For thirty years this country has been settled by a fine class of people. Apples of an extra fine quality are raised here. You will not find a more orderly community anywhere in the east. It is the second place in New Mexico to vote out the saloon. Bro. John Hay preached here a number of times this year and prepared the way for the meeting which resulted in an organization of 23. Three baptisms.

THE SOUTHWESTERN STUDENT CONFERENCE.

A religious meeting which deserves more than a passing notice was the Students' Conference which met at Ruston, La., Dec. 26-Jan. 3. At this conference there were delegates from many of the colleges and universities in Oklahoma, Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, and Arkansas. There were about 125 men present. The Bible classes, Mission classes, Institutes on the Ministry and Personal Evangelism, the Volunteer Band, as well as the great sermons and addresses set many a man on edge spiritually and sent him back to his college determined to do a great work among his fellows for Jesus Christ. Some of the leading religious men of the South as well as several international secretaries led these students in their thought and devotion. Several men took their stand for Christ and many Christians decided on life callings.

It is well to keep one's eye on the great growth of this organization among the students of our land. The church though infinitely older has many valuable lessons to learn from this organization on the questions of Christian union, business methods, effective organization, genuine earnestness and consecration.

This organization is really getting the cream of the Christian young men of our colleges and land for effective Christian work and for this, one can only express the deepest gratitude to God. Frank L. Jewett.

Jesus as a Religious Man

It is a great achievement of faith when our souls abandon all Christian religions and accept the religion of Christ. The Christ who is made the center of a so-called "Christian System" may be very unlike the Christ who actually lived in Galilee. In our habit of making him the object of our faith there has grown up a more or less artificial conception of his personality which can only be corrected as we call ourselves back to contemplate him as a man of faith himself. A system of religion even with Jesus as the center of it may be and usually is something quite different from the religious faith by which Jesus himself lived.

Yet there is nothing clearer, once we think of it, than that Jesus came among us not to give a new religious system to the world but to live the true religious life among men, who, catching his spirit, possessing his mind, would carry this new life to others even as he had brought it to them. Christianity is not a dogma of any kind, not even a dogma concerning Jesus' person; it is a life, the life Jesus himself possessed. This life of Jesus was religious through and through. It was the perfect expression of God's holy will. It was divine life, but we must not on that account yield an iota of its human reality.

It should be instructive and wholesome for us to consider Jesus as a religious man, for then we will have a clearer conception of his right to be an object of our religious faith and worship. This right to be worshipped is not an arbitrary one asserted by virtue of Jesus' official relation to God, but a moral one certified to us by the character of his actual experience of fellowship with God.

What are the basic convictions upon which Jesus risked his all? This is the question we are to ask if we would discover any man's faith. For faith is not what a man believes through argument, but what, perhaps without proof, he feels so strongly must be true that he risks his soul's goods upon its being so. Upon what basic convictions did Jesus build his life?

He built his life upon the faith that God was his Father. This was the deepest conviction of Jesus' soul. Here is the fountain head of his religion. Men knew something of God ere Jesus came, some had even had glimpses of the truth of the divine fatherhood. But no one had ever made this insight central and normative in conduct until Jesus made it so. He took God's fatherhood seriously.

Men had taken God's power seriously. He is the God to be feared. The storms are his, the thunder and the lightning; the stars he flings out as a boy a handful of marbles. Men had taken God's wisdom seriously. They had seen order in the universe and knew that the Creator of all things was himself a rational being. They had even taken God's righteous character seriously. "Be ye holy for I am holy" was one of his revelations to them. But now Christ comes and, for the first time in history, takes God's love seriously. He started his life early upon his childhood's perception of God's loving care, and built his conduct through all the years upon that conviction.

Nothing could destroy that faith in God's loving fatherhood. He knew himself, obscurely born, possessing no rank nor insignia of power, a common man among the sons of men—he knew himself to be the child of the Father in heaven. He based his life upon the conviction that this Father cared for him personally, that he was not lost in the crowd of men, but that the very hairs of his head were numbered. In every experience of his life, therefore, he could be sure his Father had a share. Out of this conviction of God's fatherliness grew his habit of prayer. If God was sharing his child's life he would surely hear his child's prayer. Therefore his prayer was unlike the prayers one would hear in that time. He asked in a simple way for simple goods believing neither that God heard on account of much speaking nor that he must be placated with offerings. God, to Jesus, was > "Closer * * * than breathing, > Nearer than hands or feet."

The second conviction upon which Jesus staked his life's goods was that every event of his daily life would be significant of the Father's will. The religion of Jesus' own soul, unlike some of the Christian religions, was not treasured in a compartment by itself, but belonged intrinsically to the whole of his experience. There was no interest or activity that lay outside the religious sphere. Religion and life were, to him, identical. Every event of life he regarded religiously; that is, he conceived it as a disclosure of the Father's will and as indicative, therefore, of his further duty.

In this view of life's daily experiences every thing commonplace became luminous. All the artificial distinctions between men became absurd to him. There was no place for envy and covetousness of another's lot when he was vividly aware that God was speaking to him, through these common experiences of his at school, at home, in shop and street, on hillside and in temple, alone or with his twelve or surrounded by the multitude. Common things were linked together in a progressive design by the gradually unfolding purpose of God. So he moved onward step by step, now and then at pivotal crises halting to make special inquiry of his Father and receiving the reassuring word, "Thou art my beloved Son; I am well pleased in thee; thou hast read aright the meanings which I have spelled into thy circumstances; go forward and fear not."

The third affirmation upon which Jesus built his personal religion was that the Father's will was satisfied by loving service to fellowmen, nothing more and nothing less.

This was a brave risk to take in Jesus' day. It is a brave risk to take in our day. It is taking the world a long time to learn that the only way to reach God is through God's children. Even our modern creed tells us that the chief end of man is "to glorify God and to enjoy him forever," as if there were some direct way in which we could glorify God without serving his children. In olden times, before Jesus' day, they thought God loved the smell of burning bull's-flesh and so they made shambles of their temples. But a prophet came that way who told them that the Lord required them to "love mercy, to do justly and to walk humbly before God." Jesus of Nazareth took this teaching seriously. He found men trying to honor God by legal correctness in keeping the Sabbath and he told them that they dishonored God. God is honored by your using the Sabbath for the good of man, not merely by your keeping the Sabbath, he said.

He showed no respect for any form or ordinance or institution that assumed to honor God without performing some service to human life. The practical helpfulness of any such exercise he regarded as the test of its being commanded of God.

Human life was vividly conceived in the mind of Jesus. Man was the one important thing in the universe about which God cared. So Christ saw men, he felt men; he shared their griefs, their weaknesses, their shames, their sins, their aspirations, their blind gropings after the eternal. This vast world of people, children of God, souls born to everlasting life, with infinite capacities of pain and joy and growth, this is what Christ saw. And in the midst of this picture he saw the great God, his Father, moving among the children of men, bearing their burdens, carrying their sorrows, cleansing their sins, guiding their growth. He saw that God cared for men and women and little children and set store by no thing or ceremony or institution or even civilization itself, save as it could be used as an instrument of service to human life. He therefore took God's mission for his own mission, his Father's business became his life-task. No scribe could deflect him from his saving enterprise into an argument on the mere legalities of religion. The scribe thought God was very finical about being worshipped and served in a certain manner. But Jesus saw that love and brotherliness, the forgiving spirit and the coöperating will were the things that pleased God because they furthered God's main purpose of establishing his kingdom among men.

The fourth postulate underlying the religion of Jesus was that it is infinitely better to do God's will and seem to fail than to compromise the right in order to succeed. This conviction was the trouble-maker for the Son of God. It was his clinging to it that brought him to Calvary. At the outset of his ministry he defined this principle and planted it deep in his will. The temptation in the wilderness was simply the suggestion of the devil to realize his mission by investing his vast powers, of which he was now fully conscious, in a partnership with the world. "All these kingdoms I will give thee, if thou wilt only fall down and worship me. Do not be too idealistic. Do not be a purist. You have divine powers within yourself. Use common sense in exercising them. You can become a ruler of men, a Caesar; you can restore the lost glory of Israel. But you must use the politician's ways. The end, the goal, you have set yourself—to save your people—is good, is grand; but take heed and be not over-nice in your choice of means. Be practical. Your dream will not come true unless you compromise your ideal with the actual world that you hope to save."

This was Christ's constant temptation. Put behind him at the opening, it was vanquished at every crisis of his mission. Because the world is spiritual, because the reality in it is personal primarily, and not material or formal or legal, he discerned that an obscure, quiet, unambitious life, lived on the humble level of common humanity, counted for more to the man who lived it and to humanity and to God than a life gathering into its hands great power through a series of compromises with evil. This is what God's heart aches for more than for any other thing: that a common man should live the common life divinely and be conscious of its full value to himself, his fellows and his Father. If a man should live that way from dawn to the end of the day he would set going forces of salvation through the whole spiritual world which at last would level all false distinctions and preferments and establish brotherhood among men.

Therefore Jesus refused political honor, he refused the patronage of the social leaders of his time. The kingdom in which he would establish God's reign was not external like Caesar's. It was a kingdom of truth, that is, of true personal relationship amongst men. It had no external sign or blazonry. No trappings of rulership belonged to it. Its lot was service and its purple was the garment of a meek and quiet spirit. To be a citizen of this kingdom of God, to have a right to the communion of souls because one possesses the spiritual graces that make one at home with simple and sincere people, is the highest boon of life. But the price of citizenship here is purity of heart, hands that are undefiled with compromises and a conscience that cannot be deluded into believing that the purposes of God are ever advanced by doing any kind of wrong.

This is the religion of Jesus, the son of man. It is not a philosophy. It has no metaphysics in it. Its contents are not the stuff that creeds are made of. It is religion pure and essential. More than that, it is life, the one life that ever was and ever will be worth living.

THE TREND OF EVENTS

By Alva W. Taylor

"BETTER AN INSPIRATION OF OXYGEN THAN ALCOHOL."

Prof. Simon N. Patten of the University of Pennsylvania effectively answers Prof. Munsterberg of Harvard who recently defended liquor drinking in an article for McClure's Magazine, in a short, aphoristic article in Charities and the Commons for November 21. Prof. Munsterberg epitomized his case by saying, "Better is America inspired than America sober" and contended that drinking relieved the depression and monotony of life for masses and inspired them. Of course he did not defend drunkenness but drinking. Here are some of Prof. Patten's epigrams and arguments:

"If patient, plodding, everyday life cannot be harmonized with the courage and hopefulness of our best moments, there is an eternal discord that no argument or compromise can efface."

"Nothing is so tragic as the wasting of heroic endeavor in hopeless causes."

"Situations change with lightning-like rapidity; arguments die only of old age and are never so perfect as in the defense of a lost cause."

"I grant that inspiration is a nobler end than sobriety but at the same time I affirm that an inspiration of oxygen is better than an inspiration of alcohol."

"Why not then put days in the country instead of hours in the saloons?" "The rule of alcohol is broken when health is sought by expanding lungs, instead of drugging stomachs."

He argues that misery and suffering is mainly due to depletion and depression. Depletion is the running down of the human system and demands, not stimulation, but nourishment. Depression is due to the presence of something that has not been properly transformed and demands not stimulation but a better matabolism, more air in the lungs. The need is for stimulus, not stimulation. "The one is a physical tonic and the other a psychic motive." We need to go in nature's ways. "Civilization would advance more rapidly if we waited to see what nature is doing before we act."

NOT A "WAVE" NOR EVEN A "TIDE," BUT A CURRENT.

No day seems so poor as to bring no news of a temperance victory. Defeats must be expected, battles lost, but National Superintendent Baker coined the phrase that maks a battle-cry in saying: "This is not a battle but a war." Some time ago we read that the Kaiser had become a teetotaller, then that the King of England had ordered that his toast could be drunk in water instead of wine, then President-Elect Taft gets on the "water-wagon" and President Eliot reverses his attitude. Switzerland abolishes the making of absinthe by a huge majority in a referendum vote and Russia enacts more stringent laws for governmental control. The latest news is from Canada where Saskatchewan votes in favor of a local option law and Manitoba goes one-half "dry." New Zealand adds nine new electorates to the six that had already become "no-license" and the convening of the legislatures will doubtless bring new victories.

YUAN SHI KAI DEPOSED.

News comes from China that the powerful Yuan Shi Kai has been deposed and that his discharge was attended by danger to his person, which he escaped by claiming the protection of the British Consulate at Tienstin. He has been the chief minister of the Chinese court since the return of the Dowager Empress to power, and has been steadily for reform. The world was shocked at his summary dismissal and wondered if it could mean that the new regent, Prince Chun, was turning reactionary. The daughter of Kang Yui Wei, who is a pupil of Barnard College, suggests an explanation that all may well hope is the true one. She says that when her father, who was the inspirer of the Emperor's reform edicts, gathered the statesmen about him who were to make the New China all were pledged to secrecy but that Yuan told all to the Dowager. She immediately called together the conservative elder statesmen, deposed the Emperor and out of that reaction resulted the Boxer outbreak. For this betrayal of the late Emperor, Prince Chun, who is the late Emperor's brother, has sought to punish him. Yuan reaped as his reward his high position and the old Empress, seeing a great light, by his help inaugurated reforms in a less precipitous manner. Regent Chun, says the great reformer's daughter, and his advisor are reformers and she predicts that her father, on whose head the Dowager put a price, will soon be recalled from his well-known hiding place and will assist in making the New China, the father of which he really is.

TEACHING TO LIVE AND TO GET A LIVING.

Industrial education is coming into favor. Germany has almost universally adopted it. About a year ago a number of educators, public spirited manufacturers and progressive labor leaders met in Chicago and organized a Society for the Promotion of Industrial Education. A committee of ten was appointed to investigate and report plans. In the second meeting recently held in Atlanta, this committee formulated a number of suggestions rather than presenting any cut-and-dried schemes. They suggested that a department of Industrial Education be established at Washington to serve as a clearing house of ideas, to encourage the development of industrial schools, and to render practical aid to all efforts in that line. They also recommended that the effort be to establish industrial education in the present public schools without adding more to the curriculum but by substituting it for some less needed studies. The plan would be to give general instruction in the grammar grades and allow election of specific lines in the high schools. This would provide for the years of life between the grades and the time when the boys can take up practical work. The high school, with its academic course, does not appeal to many and they are left to idle for two or three years at the time when idleness is prolific as the devil's work shop. The compulsory education laws and the child labor laws too often leave this critical age in forcible idleness; the lad cannot go to work and he is not willing to go to high school. The industrial school appeals to him. Indeed, there is never any trouble about attendance, discipline or devotion to the task in the manual training classes, for it is creative and fits the demands of the boy nature. Here is a clue to true education in following the lines of interest. The Committee further would encourage teaching of rudiments of agriculture in the rural schools and the extension of industrial night schools in the cities for workers. To these night schools the ambitious and efficient young workers come to learn the science of their craft and to progress in its art.

REDEEMING THE TRUANT.

Good pedagogy studies the nature of the child and creates a discipline for his benefit instead of putting all children through a sort of mill of academic lore. China has done the latter successfully for centuries, but America lives for the future rather than the past. Yet even we cling to medieval "classics" as if they were God-given and inspired for the sake of education. The modern truant school has to deal with an extreme case and in its efforts to devise adequate remedy proves a good rule for all cases. It finds the "incorrigible" truant a boy of positive character, and in all but few cases, that that positive cast, which makes it possible for him to be bad in spite of coercive measures, is a splendid asset for good once it is put in the right current of habit. To do this it keeps him busy at an interesting task; it finds his natural creative instincts and directs them to the construction of useful objects; it trains him as a workman and a citizen, not merely to become one at some future date. Here again industrial education comes to the fore. It is not impossible that "system" is responsible for many of these truants. They possess too much individuality to conform. The oft repeated formula for the best education, viz., "Mark Hopkins on the other end of a log," is lost in modern system. There is a strong suspicion that Germany is pedagogically crystallizing in the shell of a system. We ought to put as much thought on the good boy as the bad one and we should perhaps have fewer bad ones.

PROGRESS IN THE CONQUEST OF THE WORLD.

The past year has been one of notable triumphs in the world-wide conquest of Christian missions. Statistics are usually considered dry enough but we could arouse in ourselves the most feverish interest in a column of figures that meant a new-found fortune for us. These figures ought to be very interesting to Christians because they are clothed with the romance of missionary adventure, the tragedy of missionary sacrifice, and are dramatic with a calling together of the peoples of the earth as are none other that the times present.

The increase in Protestant church members at home last year was one and one-half per cent; that of the missions on foreign fields, twelve per cent. The 141,000 ministers at home can report a gain of two apiece to the home churches, while the missionaries, if their wives are not counted, can report a gain of eleven for each worker. In all there were 165,000 added to the churches on mission fields last year and the total Christian body there now amounts to 4,300,000, about one-half of whom are admitted to the inner fellowship of the churches.

There are now engaged in this work 19,900 white missionaries and nearly 100,000 natives are employed in all capacities as assistants. This is a mighty army and it is doubtful if the world ever saw so many devoted souls enlisted in a task requiring an equal amount of unselfish consecration. They have established 41,600 stations and places of work, teach 1,300,000 pupils in their schools, care for multitudes in their hospitals, run printing presses, translate books, preach to millions, and in their multifarious work do all things for all men.

The total income for this stupenduous task was last year $29,700,000, of which nearly $5.000.000 was contributed on the field. When a comparison is made between the income of these mission Christians and that of ours at home it will be seen that their liberality makes ours look beggarly.

America sends 6,600 missioners and gives $10,000,000 to the cause. Great Britain sends 8,300 to the field and gives $9,265,000. Continental Europe sends 2,300 and gives $1,650,000. America is more prolific in money and Britain in men. Britain gave a few thousands last year less than the year before but sent thirty per cent more men. America contributed $600,000 of the total increase of three-quarters of a million in income and increased her year's quota of new workers by 15 per cent.

The following table shows the contributions of the great Christian bodies of the United States and Canada:

M. E. (North)	$2,487,000	Bap. (South)	435,000
Presby. (North)	1,643,000	Disciples of Christ	413,000
Congregationalist	1,102,000	Presby. (South)	364,000
Bap. (North)	1,050,000	M. E. (Canadian)	321,000
Episcopalian	781,000	Christ. & Miss. Alliance	258,000
M. E. (South)	540,000	Presby. (Canadian)	234,000
United Presby.	484,000

The great British Societies contributed as follows:

Church Missionary Society	$2,175,000
Wesleyan Methodist	1,745,000
Society for Propagation of Gospel	1,063,000
United Free Church of Scotland	1,044,000
London Missionary Society	977,000
Chinese Inland Mission	478,000
Baptist Society	470,000

The contribution of the great religious bodies of America and Great Britain were as follows:

Methodist	$5,629,000	Baptist	2,582,000
Presbyterian	4,950,000
Episcopal	4,523,000	Congregationalist	2,079,000

The missionary host is distributed as follows:

India	5,800	Mohammedan Lands	1,450
Africa	4,800	Japan and Korea	1,350
All Americas	2,950	Oceania	600
China	2,750	Europe	300

Each minister at home would have 600 souls to his care were parishes made so none overlapped. On the foreign field there are 600,000 to every white missionary. Twenty thousand is a great host of workers but 1,200,000,000 is a multitude like unto the sands of the sea for numbers. This is the most far reaching enterprise in an epoch that will be known by its world-movements. The harvest is ready; the sicklers are few.

"We're Coming Up To Pittsburg."

BY L. O. THOMPSON.

We're coming up to Pittsburg a great and mighty throng;
We're coming up united a hundred thousand strong.

We're coming up from Nashville, from Cincinnati, too;
From Lexington, St. Louis, from Chicago not a few.

Take down that ugly scare-crow and let this clamor cease;
We're coming up to Pittsburg and coming up in peace.

We're coming up to Pittsburg this our centennial year.
We're coming up united, "All hail and do not fear."

We want to hear our Willett, our Lord and Garrison.
Dan Somer, Bell, Dowling and Rowe, (all we still are one.)

Take down that ugly scare-crow and bid this wrangling cease;
We're coming up to Pittsburg and coming up in peace.

We're coming up to Pittsburg, from the islands of the sea.
We are a mighty people and have a mighty plea.

We're coming up in triumph, with songs of victory;
To pay a fitting tribute to the ones that set us free.

Take down that ugly scare-crow, and bid the clamor cease;
We're coming up to Pittsburg and coming up in peace.

We're coming up to Pittsburg, and spread a merry feast;
We're coming up united and in the name of Christ.

Our plea is Christian union, thus let it ever be;
We've broke the bands that bound us and are a people free.

Take down that ugly scare-crow and bid this clamor cease;
We're coming up to Pittsburg and coming up in peace.
Londonville, O.

The Good God and a Sad World

The biggest question the soul asks is probably that concerning the relation of God the Creator to the evil of his universe. Given a good God, how shall we justify him for making a world with any evil in it at all? How can we defend him in the presence of suffering and injustice and death? We are not responsible for being here. We cannot save ourselves from the pain of living. Some may be able to add up the joys of life in one column and the griefs and pains of life in another and prove that there is more joy in living than grief—and thus justify God.

But not all of us can reckon in this mathematical way with our experience. And besides, if we could, who would dare to say that in the cases of some the balance would not be on the other side? And if there be so much as one soul whom God has made and whose lot brings more loss than gain, then what of the justice of God?

The problem gets especial point in the searching crises of personal experience, as when a dear one on whom we leaned falls on death, or a little child, the knotting place of all our hopes, is taken away, or a business project fails, carrying our all with it—then the heart asks, Why? and often cannot find an answer.

A great cateclysm of nature involving in its ruin the lives of thousands of our fellows starts the question in the universal soul. Certainly such an event as the Sicilian earthquake cannot be traced to human responsibility in any way. Much injustice and suffering man could avoid if he were more thoughtful and temperate and just. But Jesus himself taught us to look elsewhere than in the character of the individual for the causes of certain large classes of woe and pain. "Neither hath this man sinned, nor his parents, that he was born blind"—he answered his disciples who after the philosophy of their time and their sacred book traced misfortune to some sin. "Think you that they upon whom the tower in Siloam fell were sinners above all that dwelt at Jerusalem? I tell you nay." Thus he answered the question of the relation of sin and suffering.

Who will say that the dwellers in Sicily were sinners above the dwellers in Calcutta or Chicago? Evidently no such naive explanation is possible. The good are not always protected from suffering; the bad do not always receive in material physical misfortune the just penalties of their sin. We must search elsewhere if we shall have our problem solved.

Certain old Greek philosophers had an interesting way of getting out of the problem. They said the man of self-control would not allow himself to suffer. He would live above the vicissitudes of circumstance and find his satisfactions in philosophic contemplation. He would be neither glad nor sad, but wise. Good fortune or ill, he would take it all in the day's work and let it go at that. He would find neither pleasure nor pain in the senses, but in the mind. Therefore his counsel was to steel the heart against both pleasure and pain. These men were the Stoics of that day, of whom Socrates, though not theoratically one of them, was in his practice a splendid illustration.

The superiority of Jesus, our Master, to the sages who preceeded him is disclosed in his attitude toward pain. He was keenly alive to it. He is the man of sorrows and acquainted with grief. Match Jesus' death with Socrates'. The one sitting in cool, balanced reflection and discoursing philosophically on the soul's immortality; the other sweating drops of blood in the garden and falling helpless under the weight of the cross! There was an exquisiteness about Jesus' suffering. His face was more marred than any man's. His fine nature lent itself to a pain more keen than a common soul could have felt. Truly in him the old philosophy of Job's comforters and the Stoics finds its absolute denial.

No doubt it is a hard question we have asked our hearts. Has it ever occurred to us, however, that it is a fictitious problem, a made-up question that theologians have perplexed their heads with and suffering hearts have been broken over? This is an abrupt thing to suggest, perhaps. But it seems to us that there is a point of view which, if we are able to take it, will cause such problems to fade out. They may not be solved but they will be dissolved. There are two or three truths we must bear in mind, truths we have so recently learned that the full force of their bearing has not yet been felt in our vital experience.

The first of these truths is that the world in which we live is an unfinished world. The conception of the world as having been created in six days by a God who thereupon departed into a long Sabbath's rest has such a hold upon our imagination that until we consciously shake it off and substitute for it Jesus' conception our hearts will be caused no end of trouble. Jesus said, God is still working as I am working. The whole world, says Paul, groans and travails together in the birth pangs of the sons of God and the ideal social order. The world has not been made yet. It is in process even now. God has not retired from it to rest, but is in the midst of it to finish and perfect it. It has imperfections in it—moral imperfections, physical imperfections. Natural processes and forces and provisions from primeval and primitive aeons lap over into the present. Wicked men with volcanic passions are no more truly a survival of a prior stage of development than are uncontrolled physical forces which break through the crust of the earth and wreak havoc upon the children of men.

If we are convinced that the world is a growing, unfinished world and if we take this conviction seriously into our heart-life as well as our intellect, we shall find ourselves in possession of a principle by which our experience can be interpreted without danger of falling into the pocket of traditional theodicy. If once we think of God as really in his world, in every point of it, and as actually working all the time to finish and perfect it, we shall have a starting point at least for a simpler interpretation of pain than we can have on the traditional premises.

A further consideration for our hearts is that the world's end and character are not fatally determined but remain to be defined by God and man working and thinking together. This idea, at its first suggestion, may shock our feelings and seem to uproot the motives for conduct. But the longer it is dwelt on the more stimulating it becomes to believe that our conception of the world and our conduct in the world are real factors in defining what kind of a world it shall be. The faith that this is so lays upon us men a responsibility which we cannot feel if we assume, as many do, that things are coming out all right anyhow. The truth is that things are not coming out alright anyhow. They are coming out all right if you and I do our duty, if we have wide vision and firm purpose and make sacrifices. Man shares in the creating as well as the creation. He is co-worker with God. That this glorious fact should be true involves defect in the work. There will be flaws. There will be misfits because of man's clumsiness. There will, therefore, be pain.

But such reflections as these do not quite give our hearts courage to suffer in hope. Where is the guarantee of the worth of such a world? An unfinished world, an unfated world, and therefore a suffering world—how may we be assured that it will be worth the suffering? It is a vast price to pay! The age long heart-ache of man, the wars and bloodshed, the accidents, the hates, the injustice, the crying of women, the bruising of little children, the perennial death with its groans and its tears and its silence—who knows that the world will be worth this sadness when it is finished?

God knows! And he certifies his knowledge to suffering men by suffering with them! He sits not off serenely on a throne removed from us while hosts of angels burn incense to him and chant his glory. He is a dust-covered God, a working God, a burden-bearing God—aye, a heart-broken God. In the struggle of men, his sons, he struggles more than they. In the sorrows of women, his daughters, he suffers more than they. In the earthquake God loses with men, and more than men.

If it pays the great God, whose anguish in creating the world must be infinitely deeper than man's, to bear his suffering for the sake of perfecting the world, then we men have here our guarantee that all the anguish of our human life will work out for us an exceeding and eternal weight of glory.

This is the glory of Jesus, that he disclosed the heart of God to us—a heart of love, of pity, a heart bleeding from the foundation of the world.

Paragraphic Editorials

Professor T. M. Iden, of Emporia Kan., has long been the leader and teacher of a club of young men, called the "Upper Room." It was organized first in Butler College, during his professorship there, and has grown during his stay in Emporia, until it now numbers not only the local membership of about 500, but a world constituency which is devoted and loyal to the interests of the "Upper Room." Indeed it is now proposed to erect a structure for the accommodation of this large class. Professor Iden sends out an annual letter at the close of the year, and no one who receives this message, which for the present year covers twenty-six printed pages, can fail to feel the uplifting power of the words of this consecrated man, who is both brother and father to these young men, now, many of them approaching maturity of life and living wherever energetic and successful Americans find their way throughout the world. We know of no nobler work than this which Professor Iden is accomplishing through the ministry of the "Upper Room."

We are perhaps overconscious of our virtue in restraining our editorial impulses to write a bit on the theme of believing anything you like so long as you do not say anything to anybody about it. This, we understand, is the twaddling philosophy that has been conjured up from the hard-pressed brain of a certain editor to make an appearance of justifying his employer's recent wanton invasion of the liberty that Christ has given us. If the brethren knew how strong our desire is to "say something" they would canonize us as editorial saints we are sure. But we have started to take the Foreign Missionary collection and while we are helping to pass the sacred plate it is our earnest prayer that we may not be compelled to stop half way down the aisle to attend to the brother who, after an absence of over ten years has come to church today to make a disturbance. Nevertheless, if we restrain our own utterance we feel like giving the statement of Dr. J. H. Garrison to our readers. It has the value of being both pointed and harmless, and if we quote it instead of saying something ourselves we are being perfectly consistent, are we not? in our determination to give our Cincinnati brother the last word in the controversy. Certainly the sullen mutterings of the man in the back pew will not call for any further attention from those who are taking and making the Missionary offering.

Here is what we found in the Christian Evangelist of last week.

"It will not do to say that a man is entitled to liberty of opinion, but he must keep his opinions to himself, for that would often be a great wrong to the public. We must have liberty of speech, as well as of thought, but liberty of speech must be held and exercised subject to unity in faith and charity in all things. In other words, liberty is not to be made a cloak for producing schism. That would be to violate the law of unity, and the law of love. It would be a poor sort of liberty that only allowed a man to think but never tell his brethren the results of his thinking. There are at least two good reasons why he should declare his conclusion on any subject of importance. The first is, if his opinion is right, others ought to have the benefit of it. The second is, if it is wrong, he is entitled to have it corrected by others; and in either case it is through the expression of opinions, even when they differ, that truth is elicited.

That was a revealing moment in our ministerial fellowship in Chicago when after an absence of nearly three months Rev. C. G. Kindred come into the circle again, almost as one raised from the dead. He had believed the ailment from which he suffered was fatal. One chance in a hundred, some doctors had told him, for him to recover. His brother ministers had been led to expect the worst and his congregation with agitated hearts had gathered—one hundred and fifty of them—at the hour of his operation to beseech God's gracious guidance and mercy. Mr. Kindred came back to his congregation two weeks ago and to the minister's meeting last week. He told us of the hour before his operation in which he had been left utterly alone, at his own request, to face God. The Bible was the pillow of his heart in that hour. The seventeenth chapter of John and the second epistle of Peter were especially precious. And heaven seemed near and the gate of it ajar. But God spared him to his family, his church and the city in which he counts for so much. Some had been talking about the sacrifices a Chicago pastor made. But Mr. Kindred said, "I make no sacrifices by being in Chicago. To be loved by my people and by you is a boon so rich as to pass calculation."

Our Lord's Prayer For Unity

By Vernon Stauffer

Let us begin to say it with emphasis and without equivocation, no matter what rebukes it administers, no matter what traditions it overturns, no matter what shibboleths it repudiates, nor what creeds and party standards it flings into the dust: Jesus Christ meant a unity visible and invisible, vital and external, organic and spiritual, outward as well as inward. The world was to see it and to feel it and to be convinced by it. Because of it, where every other appeal failed, the unbelieving world was to respond to the challenge of Jesus: "Believe me that I am in the Father, and the Father in me: or else believe me for the very work's sake." What else can his words mean: "That they may be perfected into one that the world may know that thou didst send me, and lovedst them, even as thou lovedst me"? All too long we have been making our apologies and drawing out our fine distinctions between "spiritual unity" and structural unity;" between "an invisible oneness" and "an incidental non-conformity." The world mocks at apologies, and confesses itself hopelessly muddled over the fine distinctions. With entire appropriateness did Dr. Goodchild represent that skeptical, scoffing world standing, listening to our vociferous affirmations that we are not divided, and answering with Emerson: "What you do speaks so loud that I cannot hear what you say?"

Are the words with which Principal Fairbairn closed his magnificent volume on The Place of Christ in Modern Theology too hard for us to hear?

"It were to affirm no paradox, but rather a position capable of the clearest historical proof [said he], were we to maintain that the higher the theory of the church the meaner the conception of God, or that the growth of high church doctrine is always coincident with the decay of the highest theistic belief. For an absolute or infallible church means a limited God, a God whose working men condition, whose mercies they circumscribe, whose grace they regulate and distribute. Their limitations are imposed on him; his attributes are not transmuted into their energies. They but repeat on a larger scale the sin of Israel—God belongs to their church rather than their church to God. . . . For the more worthily churches think of God, the more will they feel the fallibility of their popes and pastors; the more they are possessed with the faith of his sufficiency, the less will they build on the idea of their own; the more infinitely good and gracious he seems, the less will they be able to claim to be his sole and adequate representatives. The virtue of a church does not differ from the virtue of a man: all are but earthen vessels, even though they be vessels that bear the treasure of the Lord."

From this unworthy, ignoble love of church (I speak not of the body of the Lord) God grant we may be speedily delivered! To the passion of bringing a lost world to faith in Christ, God grant we may be as speedily and effectually committed!

Of the bearing of this divine prayer for unity upon the important and inviting theme of the authority of Christ, all this I pass over in silence, that I may come to the plain and impressive implication of the passage with respect to the office of prayer in bringing about the consumation for which the Master himself prayed. We go back again to that sacred presence-chamber. The heart of the great Master is burdened for the welfare of his kingdom after he shall have passed into the heavens. As nothing else, he fears the danger of schism. Above everything else, he desires that his church may be preserved in perfect unity. And what does he do? Does he talk with his disciples about it, earnestly admonishing them, laying down for them a programme, marking out for them a method? Nay, he meets the great subject with prayer! For him, our Lord and Master, this is the first thing, the most immediate duty, the most practical and effective method by which to attain to the desired result. He has given us an example. Oh, for the fulness of faith, the completeness of devotion, to apprehend its tremendous import! Shall we say it today:

Hushed be the noise and the strife of the schools,
Volume and pamphlet, sermon and speech,
The lips of the wise and the prattle of fools:
Let the Son of man teach!
Who has the key of the future but He?
Who can unravel the knots of the skein?
We have groaned and have travailed and sought to be free:
We have travailed in vain!
Bewildered, dejected, and prone to despair,
To Him, as at first, do we turn and beseech.
Our ears are all open: "Give heed to our prayer!
O Son of man, teach!"

Ah, he will give heed soon enough when we are ready for the lesson. And has not the time now fully come for us to turn to him and let him show us the way to do the thing which we desire but know not how to bring to pass? Despite all the methods we have tried—fraternal conferences, campaigns of union evangelism, the federation of churches, the exchange of pulpits—none will deny that the movement toward unity still waits for the really powerful impulse that shall give it irresistible momentum and speedily carry it forward to a triumphant issue. In view of that which Jesus did in the upper room, it were well worth while for us to consider whether prayer, secret, individual, congregational, universal prayer, is not now church's first great duty and resource. "In the last analysis the source of power of any spiritual movement is God, and the energies of God are released in answer to prayer." More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of. If the whole church, feeling at least in some small sense the necessity of unity as Christ felt it, should give itself to prayer, to prayer as a passion, as an entreaty, as the utter engulfment of the will in the great achievement, prayer that fulfils Coleridge's conception:

> An affirmation and an act
> That bids eternal truth be fact!

who shall say what blessed results might not quickly follow? Where is the ministry of prayer on this behalf magnified as it ought to be? Where are the strong cryings and tears? Where are the ceaseless supplications and the blood-sweat intercessions? It is our shame that we are leaving to the last that which by divine precept and example ought to have come first. Brethren and fathers! The cause of Christian unity drags itself painfully forward today because the church is not possessed by the spirit of prayer on behalf of the great end! In the last analysis, Christian unity will come, as every work of God comes, not by might, nor by power, but by the Spirit of the Lord. To have the mind of Christ is to make the solution of the problem immediately inevitable. Somehow, in some way, we must see to it that there is lifted upon the soul of every follower of Christ the vision of that scene in the upper room: the Master in the midst of his disciples, praying with impassioned yearning that all who believe in him may be one that the world may know that God sent him into the world and loves the world even as he is loved of God. Thrilled by that vision the church will enter upon a ministry of supplication and intercession because of which it shall see the travail of its soul, and be satisfied!

The Sin of the Heresy-Hunter

By Harry F. Burns

The sin of the heretic is nonconformity. What shall we say of the heresy-hunter? If nonconformity is a sin, then heresy-hunting, which is an effort to secure conformity of opinion, should be classed with the virtues. But if we concede the right of the individual to think, though his conclusions may not always conform to accepted statements, then heresy-hunting must be placed under a different category.

The distinction between conservatism and heresy-hunting must be borne in mind. The former is the natural attitude of many minds towards change, and is of great value in society. The latter is an attack upon what is with other minds a natural attitude toward life, an attitude which also has its place in social progress. The peculiarity of the heresy-hunter is not that he holds certain views about religious teachings, but that he aggressively attacks those who hold different views.

The heresy-hunter does not hesitate to destory, so far as he can, the reputation of a brother preacher, who may, perchance, differ from him on some of the teachings of the faith. The unbrotherliness of this procedure has been presented in these pages, not many weeks since. It is a denial of the spirit of brotherliness, even between members of the same religious body. It is a sin against the nonconformity brother, but one which he can endure because of the vitality and strength of his faith. Nor will the truth for which he stands be defeated by such treatment. Indeed, if it be the truth, it will grow the more rapidly. But the real sufferer from the attack is the church or college with which the nonconforming brother is associated. This evil against the college or the church is accomplished by the working of the law of suggestion. The method is simple. Here is a picture which fairly describes what has occurred in many churches within the last few years.

One of the most promising young men of one of our colleges, upon his graduation, determines to continue his studies in a "denominational" seminary, or a great university. He wants to preach. But he wants his life to result in the greatest possible service to the cause of Christ. He accordingly resists the temptation to go to work at once, and spends three or four years in further study. Upon graduation from the University he is called to a prominent church. He sets about the work with enthusiasm, and with an earnest desire to render the largest service to his church and the community. He is aware that while he has at much effort acquainted himself with the results of the best scholarship of his day, that his business as a preacher is not to correct people's scientific and philosophical views, but to strengthen their faith, and to build them up in the Christ-life. Because this young man has gone deep into the truths of the religious life, he is able to supply the spiritual hunger of his hearers. He brings forth from his treasure house "things both old and new." Because he has come to understand the truth himself he does not always use the same words which his fathers in the ministry used, and perhaps does not always emphasize the same things which they emphasized. By many of his congregation, the freshness and vigor of his thought and style are especially enjoyed. The young man is attracting people who have not usually attended church. Audiences are increasing, the church is in every way taking on new life, and the discouraged officers begin to take heart again. The church is harmonious and happy. But one day a heresy-hunter strays into the fold. He inquires about the work of the new preacher and is surprised to find everyone so well pleased. Then he suggests to some of his acquaintances in the congregation that the young man is from a school where Higher Criticism is taught, and that the officers of the church should be on their guard, lest this young man be teaching heresy, and especially lest he "poison" the minds of the young.

Our heresy-hunter may have held some large meetings and, in his way, accomplished a good work for the church. On this account his suggestion has greater weight. Next Sunday morning this member who was before in sympathy with the preacher, sits in the pew suspecting the preacher of "Higher Criticism"—a something which he would hardly know how to define, but he knows it has a bad name. He is not in position to be helped by the preacher's work. He will not let the sermon get at him. He looks for the symptoms of heresy. He of course finds what he looks for, before many Sundays have passed. He tells others of his suspicion. Other heresy-hunters are busy with the church membership. Some of the people are reading a religious journal which devotes columns each week to attacks upon Higher Criticism and heretics. The young preacher, it is found, is friendly toward some of these heretics. He feels the estrangement of these members of his flock, but does not know the cause. If he knew, he could not take these people through all the study necessary to settle the questions that have been raised. The suspicious members talk together. The preacher is conscious of the lack of harmony. He tries harder than ever to make the work go, but can not undo what has been done by the heresy-hunter. The tares have been sown, and now can not be rooted up without destroying much of the wheat. He could endure to be misunderstood, and the unbrotherliness of the preacher who caused the trouble; but he can not endure to see the work of the church suffer. He feels that the only way to restore harmony is for him to resign. This he does, at the expense of his reputation. But the church suffers under short pastorates. Who is at fault? Who is the sinner? The sin of the heresy-hunter is not alone against the brother preacher, whose reputation is injured, whose work is hindered, but it is against the church. The church is the greater sufferer. Many changes in pastorates can be traced to the heresy-hunter's door, whose interest in his peculiar point of view is greater than his interest in the church. The sin of the heresy-hunter, then, is not only unbrotherliness, but disloyalty to the church and a dishonor to Christ.

A Plea for the Christian Life

(From Prof. T. M. Iden's "Upper Room" Letter.)

Christianity does not stop with justice, it requires mercy. It says: "Do more, go farther than mere fairness demands, farther than the moral law requires." It calls for something more than fair play and the square deal. It goes two miles when the law requires but one. It gives the cloak also when judgment for the coat only is rendered. It does more than seek to restore, it makes amends. It loves its enemies and returns good for evil. It gives prayer for hatred, and forgiveness for malice and cruelty. It does not ask, "Will it pay to be good? How much will you give me to do right?" It does not say, "I will do as much for you as you will do for me, love you as long as you will return my affection." It does not have the commercial, bargaining spirit. It bears the burdens of the weak. It reserves judgment of others, but examines itself. In lowliness of mind it "esteems others better than itself." In honor it "prefers one another." It serves, even to the extent of being "all things to all men in order that it may win some" to a better life. It denies itself for others' sake. It refrains from meat if the eating of it cause a brother to stumble. It lends a hand. It helps. It does everything through love. Is Christianity a rare thing in the world? You must answer that question for yourself. I hope it is not. A question more to the point is: "Am I myself a living manifestation of its spirit?"

The little plant has grown in 100 years to be a great tree. India, China, Japan, Africa and the Islands of the Sea are seeking shelter in its branches, and they will not be denied.

Abraham's Sacrifice of Isaac

By Rev. David Smith, Author of "In the Days of His Flesh."

Whatever difficulties it may present, the story is sublime. The heroism and pathos of it send a thrill through one's heart, and the man who scoffs at it may have a critical intellect, but he has also a prosaic mind; and he has certainly not a judicial intellect, for he circumscribes the area and excludes facts which are essential to a just verdict. He forgets that the incident occurred nearly 4,000 years ago. Of course, we stumble at the story. It was, according to our notions, a monstrous thing that Abraham attempted. And the main difficulty is that the Lord commanded it. Nowadays, if a man bound his son and lifted a knife to slay him, he would be arrested as a murderous criminal; and, if he pleaded that he had done it at the command of God, he would be accounted a lunatic. Yet this is precisely what Abraham did. The difficulty disappears if we grasp the principle of the progressiveness of Revelation. This is an essential factor in the case, and it is unjudicial to leave it out. Abraham lived at the very dawn of Revelation, and many things were then believed and practised which are now shocking to the moral sense developed by centuries of divine discipline. Human sacrifice was a religious institution, and it persisted long; it was hardly eradicated from the Roman Empire. His first-born son was a man's most precious possession, and was accounted the most acceptable sacrifice he could offer to his God. It was nothing unusual, nothing abhorrent to the moral sense of his generation, that Abraham did when he bound Isaac and laid him on the altar. And what suggested the sacrifice? It may be said that the Lord commanded it; but then the Lord does not speak, nor did He speak then, by a voice from Heaven. He speaks to men through their experience. And it was through his experience that He spoke to Abraham. After the birth of Isaac Abraham had, in deference to Sarah and in the interests of domestic peace, perpetuated a cruel wrong, not merely removing Hagar and Ishmael from his tent, but turning them adrift, like wandered beasts, to perish in the desert. When he had watched them wandering away and disappearing over the horizon, he would heave a sigh of relief. It had been a painful business, but it was ended, and he had seen the last of it. And, indeed, he never saw the wanderers again, but his sin haunted him like a malignant ghost; and now, when Isaac is some six years of age, as we gather, his remorse becomes intolerable and demands expiation. Abraham had expelled Ishmael to make room for Isaac, and now there is no fitting atonement but the sacrifice of Isaac. It is thus that men are ever haunted by their sin. The prize which they have sinned to gain becomes a thing accursed, and they would gladly surrender it to get back the peace which they have forfeited. This is the pathos of the story. It shows us a man haunted by his sin and endeavoring to shake it off, to cut, as it were, the poison out of his flesh at the cost of sore and cruel anguish. It was a brave sacrifice. The promise hung on Isaac, and his death was, according to all human reckoning, the forfeiture of the splendid future whereof God had spoken. Yet Abraham would put himself right with God at all costs, even a cost like that; and he clung, with a grand defiance of reason, to the faith that God would find a way of fulfilling His promise (cf. Heb. xi. 17-19). The incident taught him two truths which constituted a far advance in the progress of Revelation: (1) He learned that the Lord did not desire human sacrifices—the truth which the Prophet Micah proclaimed with indignant emphasis in after days (vi. 7-8). (2) He learned the true and only expiation. He would have atoned for his cruelty to Ishmael by slaying Isaac, but this would have been simply a second wrong and a further mutilation of his life. The only possible atonement was not the death of Isaac, but the service of his consecrated life. This is Sacrifice—not death but consecration, the taking of our broken lives to the altar and the glory of God. What the arrested sacrifice on Moriah suggested, the finished Sacrifice on Calvary proclaims. Christ has reckoned with the past, and He bids us leave it with Him and neither mourn over it or attempt vainly to undo it, but consecrate ourselves forthwith to the service of God and live henceforward to His glory.—British Weekly.

Book Review

Acts, by George Holley Gilbert, New York. The Maemillan Co., 1908, pp. 262, $ .75 net.

This is one of the first volumes of a new set of eommentaries, called, "The Bible for Home and School," edited by Shailer Mathews. Its appearance is timely, for the International Sunday-school Lessons for the entire year are found in the Books of Aets. Among the commentaries from which one has now to choose are the small and useful "Cambridge Bible for Schools and Colleges," which however lacks up-to-dateness in a number of respeets, ehiefly its use of the authorized texts, and its conformity to a scheme of eommentation now rather outgrown. The International Critical Commentary is for this generation the most eomplete and satisfactory, but its volume on Acts has not yet appeared. Then there is the "Expositor's Bible," which is by no means of uniform quality, and whose two volumes on the Book of Acts by Professor Stokes are hardly to be compared with the stronger books of the series.

Professor Gilbert has put into remarkably small compass the essential features of the Book of Acts. In the introduetion he discusses the charaeter of the work, the author and date of composition, and the historical value of the book, adding a list of the best works on the subject, and a table of approximate dates for the apostolic age. The commentary is full enough to serve the purpose of any teaeher or student, and it has the unusual merit of eonsidering the more difficult rather than the merely obvious features of the text. Full justice is done to recent eriticism of the Book of Acts, and the reasons for accepting the Lucan authorship and the general trustworthiness of the work as a background for the Epistles of Paul are presented. Appendices upon such important topics as the Holy Spirit in Acts, Speaking with Tongues, the community of goods at Jerusalem, etc., are included at the end of the volume.

On the whole, Professor Gilbert's little commentary is the most servieeable work now available for the average student of the Book of Acts.

A. McLean's New Book Free

Our proposal to give a copy of A. McLean's new book on "Alexander Campbell as a Preacher" with each new subscription of $1.50 has proved so attractive that we have decided to continue it beyond the date (January 2), which we had set for its expiration. During January the offer will hold good. Ministers may have the paper (new subscription), and the book for $1.20.

YOUR OWN PAPER FREE

FOR A LITTLE WORK.

Any minister (who is not in arrears to us) can have his subscription date set ahead one year by sending us 2 New Yearly Subscriptions with $3.00. This applies to ministers who are not now subscribers as well as to those who are.

BALANCING THE BOOKS.

Every good business man strives to have his accounts square by the end of the year. In doing so he should no more overlook his standing with the Lord than with the grocer or the landlord. Among the affairs of God's Kingdom he should be equally careful to see that each has received its just consideration. What have you done for Ministerial Relief in the year 1908? What has your church done?

For us it is not only the end of the year but the end of a hundred years. It is only for the last few of these that the work of Ministerial Relief has been organized. There are a few churches of Christ that have faithfully made an offering to it every one of these years. The great majority have not yet given the work even one recognition. Are you willing to let the century close and the Centennial celebration be held with such an unequal record against your congregation?

While we have been neglecting this holy work, one after another of those who should have been cheered and helped by its ministry have been called away from our ungrateful disregard. Let us praise God that many of them yet remain with us, and let us gladly make such an offering this year as will not only justify our affection and relieve their distress, but will be a worthy Centennial memorial of those to whom we can no longer minister in the flesh.

W. R. Warren, Centennial Secretary.

CORRESPONDENCE ON THE RELIGIOUS LIFE

By George A. Campbell

The City and the Country

THE CITY

The Correspondent:—"After my brief visit to your mighty metropolis I am back again to my quiet and restful country home. The change suits me. Although I was raised in the city I could not now be induced to take up my abode again there. It may be that because I am growing old I have become wedded to the accustomed and to the quiet; but I think the real reason is quite different and deeper.

The city with its vast numbers, with its ceaseless noise and bustle, with its gigantic sky-scrapers, with its superlative alertness and extreme inquietude in business, with its dress and pomp, overwhelms me with astonishment.

I could be astonished and still enjoy it.

But in looking closer to the life of the city I find myself greatly perplexed. There is dark mystery hanging over its throng ceaselessly moving to and fro. Their faces are anxious faces. Their nerves are strained. Where did they all come from? I suppose they have gathered to this seething center from every country and clime—I suppose ten thousand mothers have wept over these who have broken the old home ties. 'How do they all live?' has been asked countless times; but to me it is still unanswered. To me there is a mystery about every building and every face. There are the mansions of the rich, the clubs and many other exclusive places that I may not enter. But for that matter every place where breathing people live is fraught with the mystery of tragedy and comedy.

Mystery and Injustice of the City.

The friends in the country live in the open. We can somewhat measure their souls; but in the city the people are protected from us by convention, and then their number is so great, that, do the best we may to explore, we are always entering the region of mystery. Although I grant I am greedy to know the motives and movements of my kind, yes, I have a sort of a Sherlock Homes eagerness to unravel human complications and perplexities; yet I could endure the mystery of the city. Again the injustice of the city is everywhere apparent. The palace and the ash barrel with an orphan boy in it; the ten-dollar meal with the rarest wine and the dirty morsel snatched from a refuse can; the seal skins and the rummage-sale garment; the thousands made in an hour and the pittance only made in a year; the large profits of a few and the no profits of the many, these are contrasts the injustice of which are apparent to kindergarten students of economics and Christianity's doctrine of brotherhood. The poor people surprise me with their patience. However, I could endure even the injustice of the city. It is the immorality of the teaming centers that most oppresses me. Life here is cheap. Physical life is eaten up by the mills of men that grind quick and mercilessly; but the life of the soul seems cheaper. It is bartered away for death. In the seven thousand saloons in Chicago is written the text that wise men discovered to be true thousands of years before it was a text, 'the soul that sinneth it shall die.' And if there be a text more terrible in its threatenings of awful punishment to the sinner it is written in the unnumbered brothels of the city.

Do not misunderstand me. Distorting as the revolting sin of a great city is to me I could endure the sin, be it as loathsome as can be imagined. What then, you ask, is it about the city I could not endure? Perhaps you are saying, "If he could endure the noise, the business, the hurry, the injustice and the sin he surely ought to endure anything. It is this that would drive me wild—my own helplessness.

I could endure the noise and hurry—if I could calm it even a little.

I could endure the injustice if by any judicial or frantic procedure of my own I could in the least ease oppression's hand.

I could even be in the midst of sin all day and every day if I could replace profanity by reverence, drunkenness with sobriety or immorality with purity.

But the irresponsiveness of the city would kill me. How long would John have cried in the desert without success? Unlike thousands of city workers Job was finally successful. I repeat I could not endure my own helplessness amidst the vast and crying need of the city.

Hence I live and rest and enjoy and serve in my happy country neighborhood."

THE COUNTRY.

It was my good fortune to grow up with the flowers, the weeds, the birds and the bumble bees of the country. With palpitating heart have I gone many a time into "the backwoods" after the cows at night. As I watched the "gap" in the old rail fence I learned the music of the insects and the bees. The fence corner in the "back-field" was my first pew and the whispering winds my first preacher. The motes in the air were fairy angels. The humming-bird and the roses were messengers of the eternally good and the eternally beautiful. I did not go to "Sunday" School in my early days. How we cramp God! It is sinful to be ever confining Him by our creeds and terms and organizations. We attended the universe's school with its flowers and birds and stars and plantings and harvests and brooks. Under the splendid hard maples, in the old barn, beside the creek with banks of meadows, among the kindly sheep, on some large boulder we read the words of the God who made all things that are.

A Ten Mile Walk in the Country.

But I must check memory. Today I live in the city and like it right well; of course I must get a fresh breath of country once in a while to keep a proper proportion. Today I have walked about ten miles in the country. Please notice that I walked and that by choice. I was offered a ride. Credit me with refusing. It was zero weather too. I wore a derby and no ear covering. The clear beautiful snow carpeted the earth. It was terribly quiet. Both men and mice kept to their shelter. The only sound, positively the only sound, that came to my ear for miles was the mournful singing of the telephone wires. I never liked that sad sighing. I had gone almost three miles before I saw a living thing, and it was in an open country, then two crows flapped their wings. They were in no way inspiring. However, they gave some diversion to my thoughts. I wondered how they had survived the day before when it was 26 below zero. I wished some naturalist was with me who could enlighten me. How often I wish some wise man near me to answer my perplexities. Sometimes, however, wise men are disappointing. I still wonder what those crows did during that extremely cold weather and more what they thought. But I err, our Bible professor at Drake used to solemnly address us, "Animals do not think, with them it is instinct, not thought." We were all satisfied. The crows were the only living things I saw in my walk save a rabbit, and a few people towards its end. The quiet of the place felt uncanny. I would have hailed with delight a Halsted Street car with its motley crowd. I almost imagined myself on some planet alone, cut off from all social concourse. On the white snow I saw muskrat tracks; but these were only suggestive of memories of things long since passed.

Beside a Lonely Church.

As I traveled my planet alone I passed a church which from its high place looked most lonely. A church unoccupied, to me, is always a place to avoid. Why is it? Perhaps because it belongs to everybody and therefore to nobody. Perhaps because it scarcely expresses the life that is homelike and of the fire side. Perhaps because the church suggests the spirit world, ghost land. I do not know. However, all about this church was the neighborhood's city of the dead. The loved ones from every home were there; and the snows were over them. The wires continually sang their monotonous dirge and the sable crows flapped solemnly by.

I hastened not away from the cold white monuments, I paused to wonder if the dead, should they be like us, would prefer their graves in the country or in the city? Vain to thus wonder! The dead live in a city where is no loneliness and where there is no sin.

I passed from the quiet of the cemetery to the not less quiet of the road beyond.

I come to my destination, a farm house. Here again I felt as if I were in a planet alone, almost alone. My friends to whom I came were of a foreign tongue. It would not have been better if they had been of foreign souls, not interested in the things of my deepest thought and feeling.

Country People Do Not Play Enough.

I shall not attempt to answer "The correspondent." I am simply trying to say that it is the lack of fellowship that keeps many from the country. Of course I know that my picture does the country an injustice; but having had just the above experience I give it to set forth a very patent truth.

My country friends, speaking now soberly, do not usually have fellowship sufficient for their own good. They do not play enough. City people usually take more recreation; and enjoy much more society. If they do their serious work well and if they are not overcome by the tragedies all about them they must. Country women age far too quickly. They need more opportunity and more time for the feminine foibles (Is there a better word?) than they and especially their husbands think necessary.

My space is gone and lo, I have not touched on the more directly moral phases. But can I bring "The Correspondent" to time by unsettling his despair as to his influence upon the city by asking one simple question:—

Which is the harder headed, less subject to easy influence, the farmer or the average clerk or stenographer? I like the country and country people.

DEPARTMENT OF CHRISTIAN UNION

By Dr. Errett Gates

Meaning of the Silence

I wrote concerning Prof. J. W. McGarvey recently in these columns as follows:

"Does he realize what a menace to free, scholarly inquiry, and what a gag to free speech among the Disciples, his department of Biblical Criticism has been for more than eighteen years, all because of the reign of fear established by the easy use of the word "infidel"? To which he replies as follows:

> "No, I don't realize this. The class to whom he refers, though few in number, have made so much noise for more than eighteen years, that I thought maybe they had the courage of their convictions. If the most of them have been scared into profound silence, it would have been well had Bro. Gates followed their example. A man who can not defend his belief, had better keep still about it. And if a man is so near being an infidel that to call him one will hurt him, silence is good policy. During all these years I recollect no one who has called me an infidel, and I have not known the day when to call me one would have hurt me. A believer ought to be so well known as such, that the charge of infidelity would always prove a boomerang to the man who prefers it."

The foregoing quotation affords interesting subject matter for reflection. I will make the various sentences texts for a few observations:

1. Bro. McGarvey thinks it would have been well if I had kept silence with the rest of them. That may possibly be; it may be that I have not carefully counted the cost of taking issue with Lexington. I lay no claim to great courage or to great fitness to speak. Perhaps I am being led as a lamb to the slaughter. I do not mean to go to martyrdom for the cause of free faith and free speech if I can help it. But the opportunity was offered to speak some things uppermost in my heart, and I find that I have stumbled into saying some things a few of my brethren think ought to be said. I can only entreat that Lexington deal as gently and mercifully with me as my great temerity derserves.

"It Might Have Been."

What a different history the department of Biblical Criticism might have made for the reading of posterity if it had been characterized during the last eighteen years by all the geniality of personal nature possessed by its editor. If those myriads of pages sent forth to the brotherhood had borne the spirit of openness to new truth, faith in the equal sincerity and loyalty to the truth of other teachers and inquirers, and sympathy with the desire and effort of young men to find the truth, they would have been like leaves of healing for the brotherhood. But how does it stand after eighteen years of ceaseless writing? The new light and truth that have been fought have marched quietly and steadily on to victory in the brotherhood; suspicion and enmity have been created among those who ought to be brethren; and at the first hundred years of their history, the Disciples, largely as a consequence of the department of Biblical Criticism and the paper that has carried it, have been threatened by an open breach in their ranks. Good and earnest men who would not refuse to hazard their lives for Christ, have been named as faithless to him and marked for avoidance.

The aim of the department of Biblical Criticism was to prevent the spread of the new ideas; it has resulted in preventing the spread of good will and unity among brethren, and has actually propagated the ideas it proscribed. Such is the ill-fate that overtakes every effort to prevent the progress and growth of the truth by appointing authoritative bounds beyond which it cannot pass.

Why the Silence.

But why this silence of our teachers and students? Because they have not had the courage of their convictions? Have they feared the superior insight and knowledge of Prof. McGarvey? Have they avoided matching swords with him because of his greater strength and skill?

The most exasperating thing to Lexington has been the way the "flocks of fledgling critics" have gone on believing their "infidel ideas," and making converts to them, in spite of her knock-down-and-drag-out arguments against them. Lexington has so often inquired: Why do they not turn and defend their teachings. The department of Biblical Criticism is open to them. Then she reasoned: Silence is confession of guilt.

No, that is not the correct explanation of the silence. Silence may be confession of guilt sometimes, but in this case silence was confession of despair—the despair of Jesus when he was silent before the judgment seat of Caiaphas and of Pilate and the crowd that cried, "Crucify him!" "Crucify him!" He had no arguments to oppose to the settled convictions and the fixed determinations of his enemies to stop his teaching. He did not know—he was not skilled in the use of their arms. If they had been earnest, humble seekers after the truth, as he was, he could have responded to them. They were not seeking the truth, but his life; they took what they were seeking.

Civilized and Uncivilized Warfare.

Brother McGarvey, we have felt all along that you were not seeking the truth; you acted as if you had already found it and there was but one thing left for you to do, and that was to punish the holding and the utterance of opinions opposed to yours by all the implements of torture in your possession. We could not engage in intellectual combat with you because our consciences would not let us use your methods of warfare. You know that civilization has outlawed some ancient methods of carrying on war. Civilized nations no longer tolerate the maxim: "Everything is fair in war." The conscience of the civilized world no longer sanctions the slaying of non-combatants in the enemies' territory. The missionary societies and colleges are the non-combatants of the Disciples. They should not be made to suffer in a theological conflict any more than the women and children in civil warfare. Where they are likely to be made to suffer by a conflict, it should not be started without long reflection and wide consultation with the brotherhood. The poisoning of wells and streams of water on which the enemy depends is no longer tolerated in conflict between civilized nations. The officers and members of churches, and the trustees and supporters of colleges, on whom pastors and teachers depend for support should not be poisoned against them in theological conflict.

The teachers and preachers among the Disciples have kept silence, not because they did not have courage, the courage of their convictions, but because poorly clad wives and unfed little children did not have courage; and because officers and trustees of colleges did not have courage. They would have been very glad to risk their ideas in the conflict, but they did not think it fair to be asked to risk their homes, their work, and the vested interests of the brotherhood, along with their ideas. It was not fair to expect them to risk so much for difference of opinion; and it was not human to threaten so much. Why the silence? The methods of the contest were not fair.The use of aspersion and innuendo are ruled out of discussion among brethren in most Christian circles. No self-respecting Christian man will enter into contest with a disputant who persistently twists disagreement with his opinions into disloyalty to Christ and infidelity.

2. Prof. McGarvey says that during all these years no one has called him an infidel. He ought to be very grateful for the kindliness with which his brethren have treated him. But he ought also to do unto others as they have done to him. That would have been a square deal and a golden rule of action even in an editor. For an editor ought to be subject to the same principles of action as ordinary mortals.

Boomerangs.

Prof. McGarvey further says that "a believer ought to be so well known as such, that the charge of infidelity would always prove a boomerang to the man who prefers it."

This is a wise observation, and a correct representation of Prof. McGarvey's own case. His arraignments of the faith of his brethren have proved to be boomerangs to him. If he had been the only one to suffer from the recoiling boomerangs, we could forget the sufferings of his victims and the wounds of the brethren.

Let it be taken for granted that he intended to hunt only the immediate object of his attack. Is it not a rather complacent attitude for one man to take toward another man, to hold him responsible for being hurt when he is shot at? Prof. McGarvey's attitude is precisely the attitude of a man who should take his rifle and point it at his neighbor saying, I want to see if you are completely covered with a steel armor. If you are protected with armor as you ought to be this bullet will not hurt you; but even if it does penetrate a soft spot in your armor and injure you, then you can get damages from me in the courts.

What a delightful neighbor such a man would be! Any morning you came out of your house he would be likely to take a shot at you, and suavely say to you: Why dont' you defend yourself? There are plenty of revolvers and the courts are open. Any man who can not defend himself had better stay in the house!

How long would a community suffer such a man to run at large? Most men would feel that they had a right to be safe from assault in the public streets in time of peace. Yet it is possible for a single man to terrorize a whole community of peaceable citizens. Not every man could or would do it. Not every one is so gifted. It requires a peculiar but not very enviable order of talent to do it.

I trust that I do not overdraw the facts in the case when I say that Prof. McGarvey

Peter and John at the Temple*

The closing verses of the second chapter of Acts form an interesting commentary upon the first Christian community. The believers in Jesus were a company more than three thousand in number. Organization was not thought of as yet. The first passion of these followers of the Master was testimony to his name and to the wonders of his work. Signs were wrought by the apostles in demonstration of the power of the new life which had come into the world. All the believers were united in spirit. So generous and universal was their sense of comradship that in recognition of the need in which many of their brethren stood they freely committed their possessions to a common fund, from which all might secure the needed help. There was no communism in the technical sense of the word, for their fund was entirely voluntary. No obligation save that of brotherhod was laid upon them to contribute to this central treasury, but many of them gave conspicuously of their possessions, and some disposed of all they had in this good way. They met daily, having abandoned nearly all other interests than those which centered in the name of Jesus. Their Christian recognition of one another, both in the ordinary meals and in the Lord's Supper, which probably was observed daily at first, made them of one heart and soul. It was a time of great gladness and power, and daily additions were received by the Christian community.

Peter and John.

Among those who were conspicuous in this work was the apostle Peter. The words of Jesus at the time of his great confession had designated him as the spokesman of the movement. None of the disciples had any authority save as witnesses to the truth, and in this capacity Peter was always first and foremost, his temperament being admirably adapted to the work. With him, as an associate and prominent member of the group of twelve, was John; and a third, James, his brother, had not yet witnessed to the faith by his early martyrdom. These three are the only members of the apostolic group whose names are mentioned in the book of Acts, after the calling of the roll in chapter two; and it will be remembered that these were the three disciples whom Jesus admitted into most intimate companionship with himself, at least on three notable occasions. It is in connection with Peter and John that the present lesson is recorded.

Jewish Christians.

The first disciples were Jews. As yet no Gentiles had entered the community of believers. Indeed, perhaps the thought of Gentile Christians had not yet occurred to the early Christians. Certainly on the day of Pentecost when Peter quoted Joel to the effect that the Divine Spirit was to be poured out on "all flesh," naturally the apostle and the prophet had in mind no others than the chosen people. As Jews they observed all the regular practices of their nation. They did not for a moment consider it necessary to leave off the observance of the ordinary feasts, fasts, sacrifices, and other ceremonies of Judaism. They seem to have regarded Christianity as in no sense an attack on Judaism but only an extension of the privileges which they had hitherto enjoyed. Peter and John, therfore, and probably other members of the group of disciples, went up to the temple from their homes in the city of Jerusalem at the appointed daily hour, 3:00 o'clock in the afternoon.

The Beggar at the Gate.

At the door of the temple, that gate "Beautiful" which was probably situated at the entrance to the court of the women, they saw a man, one of the beggars accustomed to sit in the gates of the temple begging. In the East beggary is practiced so continually that mendicants came to be among the recognized features of almost every public place. A lame man was there who demanded of these two Jews the customary trifling gratuity with which the passer-by salves his conscience at the importunity of a beggar. Where there is so much poverty and the practice of beggary is tolerated so generally, it becomes the custom to give a trifling amount to almost every one who asks, and the refinements f civilization have subdivided the money of the East until one can seem to be fairly generous without actually giving away more than he wishes to spare. This beggar became the object of earnest scrutiny by Peter. If he was to do him any good he wished it to be the greatest possible. The apostle demanded of the beggar his full attention. Fixing upon him his penetrating gaze, he said: "Look upon us." Then while the beggar held them in absorbing regard. Peter said: "I have no gold to give you, but what is much better I bestow in the name of Jesus the Messiah of Nazareth: walk." Then seizing him by the right hand, he lifted him to his feet, and the man, instantly aware of a new strength within him, leaped up and in the utter joy of the discovery walked and leaped about the court, lifting up his voice in praise to God. Such unwonted action on the part of a familiar figure like that of the beggar brought the crowd together in astonishment at what had taken place.

Peter and the People.

This was precisely the opportunity Peter and John wished. They withdrew to a place where greater space could be found. That was in Solomon's porch, the great cloister on the east side of the temple aria, where Jesus sometimes taught. Here Peter addressed himself to the interested multitude. It was no marvel that this man had been healed of his ailment. It was to be expected since a Servant of God had recently lived among them. Jesus had been glorified in spite of the denial of him before Pilate when he might have been released if only they in mob violence had not demanded his death. Rather than have him saved they had chosen the murderer Barabbas, but this was a verdict which God had reversed. The Prince of Life had been raised from the dead, and of this fact the apostles were witnesses.

Peter's Demand.

By faith in his name this poor man had received soundness of limb; everything depended upon that faith. Had that man doubted or refused the profered aid, nothing could have been done for him. But all things were possible to him who believes. And now behold the result: the man is perfectly sound in the presence of all beholders.

Then Peter turned at once to the need of the people themselves for repentance and amendment. They were guilty of the death of their Messiah, but in ignorance they had done it, led on by evil rulers. Yet their Scriptures were full of prophecies looking forward to this divine confirmation. Here, of course, Peter speaks with the freedom of one who is addressing an audience. The prophets had spoken of better times; few of them perhaps had spoken of the Messiah, yet this was the forward look of the Old Testament as a whole. If Peter seems to exaggerate the fact when he says that all the prophets had declared that Christ should suffer, he is justified by the tendency of the Old Testament. Then he came to the heart of his message: they must repent and turn to God that their sins might be removed and that the blessings so long promised of the Lord might arrive. Jesus had gone away, but he would soon return, and with him would come those times of beauty and of blessedness of which the prophets had spoken.

The Return of Jesus.

It is quite likely that Peter connected the good time to come with the return of Jesus for his personal ministry in the world. And whether he meant a visible return or that coming in the spirit which is the promise of the Lord himself and of the apostolic writers, is immaterial. The first preachers of the Gospel laid stress upon the return of Jesus. We cannot do better than to follow their example, understanding that return in its largest sense. It is still the message of the Gospel to insist, as did Peter, that the forward look of the Old Testament is toward Christianity, and that in his coming, both in spirit and visibly, the world is healed of its sin and of its diseases. Christianity is accomplishing today by the regular processes of its teaching and its employment of the healing powers of nature, those same wonderful if not equally speedy cures wrought by the followers of Jesus in early days. But this is of small moment as compared with spiritual and moral healing. The man who awakens from his life of sin to righteousness and begins the embodiment of the ideals and passions of Jesus for holiness and purity is the most marvelous of miracles, and is the living personification of the divine power of the Man of Nazareth.

The stranger advanced toward the door. Mrs. O'Toole stood in the doorway with a rough stick in her left hand and a frown on her brow.

"Good morning," said the stranger politely. "I'm looking for Mr. O'Toole."

"So'm I," said Mrs. O'Toole, shifting her club over to her other hand.—Everybody's Magazine.

TEACHER TRAINING COURSE

By H. D. C. Maclachlan

PART II. SUNDAY SCHOOL PEDAGOGY

I. RESPONSIBILITY. The officers of the school are the representatives of the church. The proper administration of the school depends upon them. If any one of them fail, the efficiency of the school is, to that extent, lessened. The officer who is irregular in his attendance, who comes late, or who is listless in the performance of his duties, has no place in the modern Sunday School. He is filling the shoes of a better mn, and if he cannot mend his ways, he should resign, or if necessary, be asked to resign.

II. NUMBER. The number of officers will, of course, vary according to the size and need of the school. No offices should be be created for their own sake merely, nor for the otherwise laudable design of bringing so-and-so into the Sunday-school. Every office should stand for a specific and necessary duty. At the same time, there should be enough officers for the work so that no one shall be over-burdened.

III. ELECTION. None of the officers of the school should be elected by popular vote. In some schools the Superintendent is appointed by the church, and appoints all the other officers. It seems better, however, for the Official Board, or other governing body of the church, to appoint not only the Superintendent, but the assistant Superintendent, Secretary and Treasurer, giving them ex-officio, a place on the Sunday-school Board, and for this latter board to appoint all the other officers of the school.

IV. DUTIES IN GENERAL. Duties of officers are defined by their responsibilities, which are both spiritual and temporal. On the one hand, however, they should be men of prayer and bible knowledge. On the other hand, they should "magnify their office," giving to it such study and attention as they give to their daily business. No officer can expect to "make good" who does not keep in touch with the latest developments in Sunday-school work. He should be a member of the Teacher Training Class. He should attend Sunday-school conventions and institutes and read at least the best books that have to do with his work. Above all, he must be able and willing to give much thought during the week to the proper administration of his office. This is imperative. The failure of most Sunday-school workers lies right here.

V. THE PASTOR. The Pastor bears the same relation to the school that he does to the church at large, namely, that of general oversight and spiritual watch-care. Unless under special circumstances he should not be superintendent, nor should he teach any of the classes. He should be free to go from class to class, keeping in touch with their work, and getting personally acquainted with every scholar in the school. Nothing can fill the place of this personal touch of the minister with the young people of his church. He should also know what is being taught by every teacher, and be brave enough to correct serious error wherever he finds it. Some ministers conduct a Catechumens' or Young Communicants' Class, for the purpose of training young people for church membership. This should be in some way connected with the work of the school. Even where such is impossible, the pastor has golden opportunities for urging the young people to give themselves to Christ. The wise pastor will hold a children's service at stated intervals, and by frequent references from the pulpit, keep the work of the school constantly before the church.

VI. SUPERINTENDENT. The Superintendent is the administrative head of the school. He is responsible for its discipline and general efficiency. His specific duties are to open and close the school with appropriate exercises; supervise the work of each department, and when necessary, suggest changes in the teaching methods; visit the classes regularly during the study-period; preside at all Board and Faculty meetings, and direct all the officers to carry out his plans. Of all the officers he should be the best informed in Sunday-school work. He should attend every available Sunday-school convention and institute, and keep in touch with the latest literature of his subject. The man who is too busy for these things, is too busy to be a Sunday-school Superintendent. Only the specially gifted Superintendent should give "talks" from the platform. The Assistant Superintendent should aid the Superintendent in his regular work, and fill his place in his absence. He should also have some specific duties to perform, which may be suggested by the requirements of every individual school. In some schools he is assigned the task of communicating with the teachers each week and securing substitutes for the absent ones. In no case should he be allowed to feel that his office is a synecure.

VII. DEPARTMENTAL SUPERINTENDENT. The duties of the Departmental Superintendent in relation to his department are identical with those of the General Superintendent in relation to the school at large. In addition to these, however, he should be equipped to teach the lesson, and drill the department as a whole on missions, temperance, bible work, etc. A knowledge of black-board work is here desirable. The success and esprit de corps of all the departments up to the senior, depend largely on this superintendent.

THE PRAYER MEETING

Silas Jones

Our Fellowships

Topic, Jan. 20. Mt. 18:19; Rom. 1:8-12; 2 Tim. 2:11, 12; Ps. 133:1-3.

Our fellowships are sources of Strength.

We who have declaimed the sentiment, "Liberty and Union, One and Inseparable," ought to have at least a partial understanding of the strength of political fellowship. We ought to be able to read with sympathy the last paragraph of Mr. Lincoln's first inaugural: "I am loath to close. We are not enemies, but friends. We must not be enemies. Though passion may have strained, it must not break our bonds of affection. The mystic cords of memory, stretching from every battle-field and patriotic grave to every living heart and hearthstone all over this broad land, will yet swell the chorus of union when again touched, as they surely will be, by the better angels of our nature." Great tasks have been accomplished by the reunited nation. Great tasks await the united church of God. If two or three can prevail in prayer, what will be the power of the united church on its knees asking for the triumph of the kingdom of justice and mercy? Evangelism, temperance, the care of the dependent classes, prison reform, justice to the child, the redemption of cities from the spoilsman, religious education, all demand the united action of Christian people. In many churches some of these important matters are never mentioned because the preachers have been trained in the art of theological warfare and not in the art of winning men to the love of God and of their fellowmen. The united church will be strong because it will put the emphasis where it belongs.

Mutual Benefits.

Paul longed to be with the disciples at Rome that he might both confer and receive benefits. A great orator once said that he gave back to the people what he got from them as he looked into their faces. Great preachers owe as much to their hearers as the hearers owe to them. The time-server's complaint that he is not appreciated is an announcement that he is not receiving the spiritual stimulus which contact with people gives to the true man. Those who serve best are blest beyond all others. But they must really serve. Sunday exhaustion comes from running a treadmill as well as from expending spiritual energy. An organization is good if it is a channel for the stream of human sympathy. For our own profit we must refuse to run church treadmills just to keep up appearances. There is too much joy to come from the best of life, too much growth for the one bestowing, for a sensible man to be satisfied with anything short of purest fellowship of giving and receiving. There is no salvation outside of fellowship. We smile at the presumptuous sectary who says there is no hope for people outside of his sheep-pen, but we dare not mock him who says we cannot be saved apart from the fellowship of those who love God and their brothers. Spiritual death is the portion of him who separates himself from his fellows. We live only as others live, by our strength. The misanthropist is dead. Frowning, sulky, sullen men and women are nigh to death. They are not entering joyously into the life of the world. They think of what the world owes them and not of what they owe the world and therefore they have not their hearts open for the world's gifts.

A Common Destiny.

"If we died with him, we shall also live with him." Like Peter, we would linger on the mount of transfiguration. The valleys below have difficulties we would shun. But the fact remains that the Lord lived in the valley and that he is still to be found there by those who do his will. Would we have fellowship with him? Then we must share his suffering. "Then to side with truth is noble when we share her wretched crust." Oh, we like to be in the big church whether it is true to the Master or not. We will wink at injustice in order to escape the discomfort of being in a minority. By entering into fellowship of unworthy men we choose their destiny for ourselves. "If we deny him, he will also deny us." "Our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son, Jesus Christ." "We shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." It is only as we do the work of God that we have fellowship with him and have a part in his life. We cannot live cowardly, cringing, selfish lives and at the same time enjoy the destiny of God's elect. The joy of the new life in Christ is for his people in this world and in that which is to come.

Home and the Children

The Doll Family

See the chubby little maiden,
Lap so full and heavy-laden
With her toys.
Hear her laugh and hear her scold
At her dollies, young and old,
Girls and boys.

Such a funny zig-zag row,
Winding up with Jimmy Crow,
Quite jet black.
Some are minus arms and legs,
Some have only wooden pegs
And crooked back.

But she makes them toe the mark,
As old Noah in the ark,
Two and two;
They must walk beside each other,
And not try to choose another,
Nor say boo.

Then she gives them sugar candy,
Calls them cracker jack and dandy
If they're good.
Next she takes them all to town,
Gets them each a pretty gown,
And a hood.

When they got all they required,
They came home so very tired
From the store
That they fell down in a heap—
Dolls and mother—fast asleep,
On the floor!

CANDID.

When the minister, who was a bachelor, had been helped to Mrs. Porter's biscuits for the third time, he looked across the table at Rhoda, staring at him with round, wondering eyes. "I don't often have such a good supper as this, my dear," he said in his most propitiatory tone, and Rhoda dimpled. "We don't always," she said in her clear little voice. "I'm awful glad you came."

What Happened to the Parlor Clock

By Clara L. Brower.

"Oh, dear," said the Parlor Clock, "I am so tired of keeping up this endless ticking all the time. I don't see the use of it."

"Well," ticked the Kitchen Clock, "I get tired too and sometimes I am ready to stop, but some one winds me up and that puts new life into me and I go on."

"That's just the trouble," complained the Parlor Clock, "when I think I am going to get a little rest and quiet I have to go on. It isn't half so nice as when I stood quietly on the shelf in the store and every one stopped and talked of how handsome I was."

"Ever so many do that now," said the Kitchen Clock, "I hear them tell how fine you are, and I sometimes wish I too were handsome but I was very much admired once when I was young," and a faint sigh seemed to come from the old clock.

"Well, you were never as handsome as me, that's certain," replied the Parlor Clock unfeelingly, "but still I'm tired. I don't see how you have run all these years. It would not be so bad if I didn't have to run nights too. What is the use of keeping at work when its dark and no one to see or hear. And during the day sometimes there will be hours when no one hears me strike my beautiful chime. I think it is a great waste. I am sure I shall wear out much sooner with this useless work."

"That is true," said the Kitchen Clock, "I don't see the use of all this work at night and when I am alone, any more than you, but it seems to be what I was made for and so I shall keep on day and night as long as I am able."

"I have an idea," said the Parlor Clock suddenly. "I am going to stop running when I am alone! Some one must end this useless effort and I will begin."

"Oh don't, don't" cried the Kitchen Clock, frightened at the thought. "I am sure no good will come of it. We must do our duty whether anyone sees us or not."

"Yes," continued the Parlor Clock firmly, "some one must begin a new period in the history of clocks. I will be the first one to set the example, all will soon follow," and the onyx clock gave a joyful tick but the old clock struck the hour of seven with a melancholy sound for one usually so cheerful and urged its companion to go on in the good way it had followed for so many years.

"It's no use for you to talk, my mind is made up. I shall not waste my strength working when no one is about. I believe I will stop now, when I hear some one coming I'll begin again." Then all was quiet in the room for a while though the Kitchen Clock ticked louder than ever, trying to make up for the silence of the Parlor Clock.

"Mamma," cried Fred, rushing in, "may I go round to Will's and see his white mice before school?"

"Run and look at the clock, and if there is time you may," answered his mother.

"The guilty clock started and was ticking busily when Fred came into the room. "Oh, yes," he shouted, "a whole half hour and it's only a block and I'll go on to school with Will." So away he ran and the Parlor Clock said complacently, "You see I am right and how much pleasure I have given Fred. I am sure this will be a great success. You had better rest, too. Norah's down cellar, she doesn't pay any attention to you."

"But," protested the Kitchen Clock, "you have made him late for school. I am fully twenty minutes ahead of you."

"You are such a croaker," fretted the proud Clock, "one cannot please everybody," and then it was silent again.

"Have you any errands this morning?" inquired the master of the house to the mistress in the hall.

"If you will you may go to the greenhouse and order a pot of hyacinths sent to poor Miss Marah. She is sick and lonely these days."

"I must not miss the ten o'clock train for I have an important engagement in the city," began the master, "but—yes," looking at the Parlor Clock, "I have plenty of time." And the gentleman went away to do the kindly deed. "I am afraid you have made trouble this time," called the Kitchen Clock, "for you are way behind me now and I have heard it was very important to be at the train on time."

"Nonsense," replied the Parlor Clock confidentially, "I rode on the cars when I came from the city and had to wait a long time for them. Anyway you forget that poor woman has some flowers she would not have had if I had not given more time."

"Perhaps you are all right. I trust so," said the honest friend hopefully.

"Well, do rest yourself and see how nice it is," urged the Parlor Clock. But the Kitchen Clock would not listen and ticked away steadily all day and the hours wore away until evening when the family all gathered in the parlor. "Mamma," said Fred, "will you please write an excuse for

The Children's Pulpit

RICHARD W. GENTRY, PREACHER.

THE SNOWFLAKE

A snowflake came tumbling down from above, from nobody knows where, and after bobbing around on the ground as if it didn't feel very much at home in its new big world finally sank down beside a plank in the walk and went sound asleep. The next morning the sun came out warm and clear. A fairy ray stole shining down upon the snowflake, and before it could rub its sleepy eyes and wake up, it was changed from a baby snowflake into a dancing drop of water. It ran around on the ground as restless as a small boy, and finally, looking up at the clouds, cried out, "Mama, Mama, what'll I do next?"

Then the little drop of water went running on down the valley and became a creek, which rippled and bubbled and ran in frolicsome curves with all the joy of youth But finally this same creek grew into a great river, straight, steady, big and strong, which moved on to the sea.

Every boy and girl was once a baby, as new and sleepy in this big world as a snowflake. And these same boys and girls are now as restless as water drops, seeking what to do and where to go. Soon they will be young people, as full of life and joyous as the creek. But best of all, boys and girls will some day be men and women, big, strong and steady, helping to carry the burdens of others, as the rivers carry ships. So let us remember while we are boys and girls that this is what we are living for—to help others. Then some day the beautiful fairy, "Growth," will say, "See, I have made rivers from water drops, and men and women from boys and girls."

CHICAGO

THE REDEMPTIVE WORK OF THE JUVENILE COURT. O. F. JORDAN VISITS THIS SPLENDID INSTITUTION, DESCRIBES HIS OBSERVATIONS AND ASKS A PERTINENT QUESTION.

The subject of boys is one that is interesting to all classes of people. Whether it be a day-school teacher, or whether it be a Sunday-school teacher, at home or on the street, the "Boy Problem" which Forbush handles scientifically, is always full of human interest. The other day we determined to go where the boy problem was acute and watch a master in the art of handling boys at his daily task. We set out for the Juvenile Court, which is held in the Detention Home on Ewing street.

This building is located around the corner from Hull House. One goes down Halsted street past the Greek stores with the Greek signs advertising the wares of that section in the language of Xenophon. We shall hope that Xenophon and Demosthenes did not live in such abandon of filth as appears in the modern Athens of our commonwealth. Ewing street crosses Halsted and its small houses and dirty streets would attract attention to the student of social problems were these features not outclassed in interest by the Detention Home and the Juvenile Court.

In Presence of Delinquent Boys.

Once in the court-room we handed a professional card to an officer and were assigned a seat with the lawyers within the railing. In here was a chair which is reserved for "his reverence," the Roman Catholic father, who is always there when any cases appear involving the disposition of homeless children. Lately a new chair has been added, and now Mr. Colby in the interests of the Federated Protestant church, watches out for the welfare of the Protestant children.

As we took our seat, we looked out on a court-room filled with women and children, almost all boys. One did not need to be told that he was in the presence of the delinquent boys of Chicago. The faces told the story. They ran in ages from six to sixteen, if one might make a guess. On this particular day, the attorney for the board of education was making a statement of the cases of delinquency that had appeared in the school room and on the school grounds. In the course of that day, perhaps fifty boys against whom the school board had complaints, were gathered into court to have their cases investigated by the judge in charge. A German father is called into court and his young hopeful put on a chair where the judge might be able to see him. The German insisted that the boy was good at home but admitted that the boy made another boy, nicknamed "The Chinaman," laugh at times, and that he had manufactured various paper missiles with which to bombard students who set a dangerous precedent of studying. He complained that the school teachers had not a severe discipline and explained his views in some such language as this: "Your honor, did you efer go to what's you call'em, a sircuss?" His honor smiled and admitted the gentle impeachment. "Did you see how when a hund, a dog I vas to say, do wrong, they w'ip 'im? In von veek, ven die dog do wrong some more, dey w'ip 'im again. Pretty soon, die dog vas good already, and he need not to be w'ipped some more. Dot vas die way to make good boys. Die lehrer, die teacher, I vas to say, should w'ip the boys. Den dey vould all be good already." The judge explained that the training of boys and dogs might be different and said he was going to give this particular boy the chance of the parental school where a different view of education prevailed from that of the zealous German. The boy lacked but six months of fourteen and in the next six months he could under the law attend the parental school at St. Charles. He was ordered sent to St. Charles, as the judge said, to give him the last chance he would get for a proper view of life.

The Boys' Welfare at a Premium.

Pretty soon an American woman, a widow, came into court with her boy who was a persistent truant. She had placed him in the school of her faith, the Sacred Heart school let us say, but she complained that the Sister took no interest in him and she had removed him from this place to the public school. She claimed that she had to keep the boy out some to carry laundry while she turned it out. When the judge told her the boy must be sent to the parental school, she wept and asked who would carry her washing when it was done. The judge asked if her only interest in the boy was to have laundry carried. Then he told her that the court was set to give the boys a chance and that adults would have to do the best they could. The unitiated would probably have decided that case differently. The pity for a widow who had to wash for a living would probably induce a jury of ordinary citizens to rule in her favor and keep the boy out of school. The social expert, however, would place the interest of the child above that of the adult. He would say the child had a right to his education and his chance in life even at the expense of a widowed mother for only thus might we hope to avoid producing the criminal and the incompetent.

On other days, larger juvenile questions than these must be settled. Boys sometimes commit crimes against property. In a town where the juvenile court is not yet well known, a group of boys bought liquor from a saloon that sold it to them illegally. Under the spur of this liquor, they burglarized a gas meter in the back of a store, taking out the coins. The zealous prosecutor found the boys who had broken into the gas meter but was unable to secure any evidence against the saloonist, though it was offered by citizens. Only when threatened with newspaper notoriety would he consent to having these boys sent to a parental school rather than to a penal institution like the one at Pontiac. In Chicago, public sentiment gives the boys all the chance that can be given them. The theory of the police and officials of the city is that it is not necessary for society to get revenge, but only that boys shall be reclaimed from the error of their ways.

Legal Formality Laid Aside.

In the old days, boys were herded together with common criminals in the public jail. Here they were taught that they had done their crime clumsily and experts showed them how to do it without being caught. They were taught vices hitherto unknown to them. They found the idleness of the prison life not half so terrifying as they had fancied. In fact, in days gone by, the county jail was the most important school of crime in the entire community.

Under the juvenile court act, the judge lays aside much of the formality of the law court. A lawyer of the older order appeared in the juvenile court while we were there and pleaded technicality. The judge insisted that the facts should be arrived at in spite of rules. The lawyer insisted. The shrewd judge allowed the constitutional privilege and then threw the lawyer into a legal predicament where he was glad to forego his privilege and allowed the investigation to proceed unhampered by the technicalities of court procedure. The judge sometimes gives the boys fatherly talks. He exhorted one boy to go to the Catholic church every Sunday. He liberated another only on the promise that he would attend Sunday-school. More than once did he appeal to a boy to make his mother happy by good conduct. We opine that the judge gives more religious advice than any clergyman in the city.

Another interesting feature of the court-room was the probation officers. There are men and women who donate their time in part, or in full, to watching over wards of the court. A boy taken in petty crime is often sent home but placed under the supervision of the probation officer. This officer investigates the condition of the home and every other element of his environment and does the work of god-father or god-mother to him. These servants of the court have no salary. Their services will come to be recognized in such a way that they will be paid. It is certainly as worthy a cause as the raising of the salaries of our aldermen.

Is the Judge a Rival of the Evangelist?

Since we have gone home from the juvenile court, we can see that row of delinquent boys in our dreams. In our waking thoughts some mighty solemn questions have presented themselves. Is the church losing the last remnant of her once glorious calling? Once she did healing, but the doctor came and she lost that function. Once she furnished the courts of justice but now these pertain to the state. Once she had exclusive control of education. Now the state furnishes primary schools that have driven the church out of that work. The church fell back on the church college but this is driven from the field by the state university. If there was any function that the church had always supposed was exclusive, it was the saving of souls. But here comes a juvenile court with a judge who pleads for the better life, and hopes to lead boys into it, not through ordinance or dogma but through new environment and through the discovery of a boy's own soul and capacity. If the judge is now the rival of the evangelist and the pastor, of what more use are the ministers? Do they cumber the ground?

But let us remember that even the judge must come from somewhere. Whence came his fraternity, his human feeling? From what source is his insight into the problems of souls? The judge himself is a Christian in ideals and perhaps a church-member as well. If Christianity cannot reach all the delinquents through her own machinery, it is her glory to create the men who shall do it in her behalf. If we truly long for the day when the knowledge of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea, we shall rejoice ever that Christianity has become so full that it has overflowed its containing vessel and is rapidly filling home and state as well.

CHURCH NOTES

Dr. Gates preached last Sunday at Morocco, Ind.

Rev. G. W. Thomas has had four confessions at the West End Church in his meeting.

Dr. Willett is making a trip East, visiting a number of important places. He will preach at Yale University on Sunday, January 24. On January 21, he will speak at a men's ban-

The March Offering—Centennial Echoes

Voices from every quarter indicate the great interest in the March Offering for Foreign Missions, March 7th. We could fill pages of Centennial sentiments like the following. If you have not ordered March Offering supplies, please do so today. Address F. M. Rains, Sec., Cincinnati, O.

As a personal Centennial endeavor I will try to get an offering from a non-contributing church. Jos. Armistead, Eminence, Ky.

Our most worthy commemoration of the publication of the "Declaration and Address" will be in realizing to the full our Centennial aim in Missions. Roy O. Youtz, Burlington Jct., Mo.

God's clock is striking in the passing of the year and the century. Whether it toll for our decline or ring the peals of progress and victory, depends upon us. God calls to glorious action. W. W. Sniff, Paris, Ill.

We expect this church to be a Living-link. W. S. Lockhart, Fayetteville, Ark.

By God's help I must encourage at least one congregation to become a Living-link in 1909. The Lord gave to the churches a missionary conscience. W. H. Book, Columbus, Ind.

A Centennial without an increase of interest and offerings to Foreign Missions will be a sore disappointment and a cause for shame. E. M. Flinn, Lewiston, Idaho.

A crowning glory of our movement must be its consuming missionary activity. Without that we have only a name to live. Vernon Stauffer, Angola, Ind.

The pulpit should give the same emphasis to Missions as the apostles did. Neglecting to do so is to invite failure. Randolph Cook, Enid, Okla.

The little plant has grown in one hundred years to be a great tree. India, China, Japan, Africa and the Islands of the Sea are seeking shelter in its branches, and they will not be denied. A. F. Sanderson, Houston, Tex.

This year the number of Living-link churches should double. The foreign work is the greatest enterprise of the church. A. C. Parker, Midland, Tex.

Missions is the heart of our plea. C. C. Smith, Orrville, O.

The evangelization of the world is close to the heart of God. Any ambition which falls short of that is unworthy a Bible people. Our Centennial aim ought to be "Every member a giver to Missions." Geo. L. Peters, Joplin, Mo.

I would to God our churches were apostolic in missionary zeal! It would mean the half of them Living-links by October, 1909. W. C. Crider, Fortuna, Calif.

I trust that our missionary interest may reach a high mark both in material and spiritual achievement during the Centennial year. J. E. Moyer, Allendale, Ill.

We have too long regarded ourselves as a young and feeble people. It is high time that, with a century's growth and history behind us, we should realize that we must take a larger part in the world's evangelization. J. H. Wright, Lovington, Ill.

The best possible celebration of this or any other notable occasion in the history of our churches is a larger and more intelligent effort to spread the gospel everywhere. H. D. Smith, Hopkinsville, Ky.

May we in this Centennial year, understand as never before, the real purpose of our plea; union in order that the world may be evangelized. J. H. MacNeill, Winchester, Ky.

May the deeds of 1909 prove to the whole world that we have meant the words of earlier years. Chas. S. Medbury, Des Moines, Ia.

A hundred years of fruitful history looks down upon us, one hundred years of progress lives in us; not to use this vantage to give the gospel to all the world would be a crime against God and humanity. J. E. Stuart, Washington, D. C.

Carrying on our organized Missions is putting the Golden Rule into practice in the surest and most Christ-like way in this Centennial year. F. M. McHale, Richland Center, Wis.

Our church building has just been burned, but we shall not cut down our foreign missionary offering. P. E. Hawkins, Hartford, Kans.

I am going to do my best to make this Centennial year the banner year for this church in our foreign missionary offering. L. L. Shaw, Raton, New Mexico.

An ounce of offering is worth a pound of talk. Jesse W. Grubbs, Lexington, Ky.

Another hundred years and the ends of the earth will be reached with the gospel, if the Foreign Society is supported as it can and should be. Wm. C. Maupin, Johnson City, Tenn.

Missions is the test of a church's sincerity; it is the pulse beat of Christianity. May the pulse of the Disciples of Christ be normal for the Centennial. M. H. Garrard, La Porte, Ind.

The whole world is open and ready for the gospel. More Living-link churches and individuals in the great foreign work. More support from our great brotherhood so that more workers may be sent. E. M. Johnson, Kearney, Nebr.

I expect to raise the largest offering for Foreign Missions next March that I have ever sent to your office. L. A. Chapman, Elmwood, Nebr.

Since we began to support our own missionary in India we have raised more money for local work and done it easier than ever before in the same length of time. The best possible stimulus to the work at home is to become a Living-link in the foreign work. We know it from experience. J. W. Holsapple, Hillsboro, Tex.

No pretext nor any circumstances whatsoever should keep any disciple of the risen Lord from doing his full missionary duty in this strategic year of our history. H. O. Pritchard, Bethany, Nebr.

Few know the joys of being a co-worker with God for the salvation of the world. They get no joy out of Missions because they put notbing into the work. (He gave $10,000). L. F. Lasoelle, Danville, Ill.

The noblest monument we can raise for our Centennial is a great missionary offering. E. F. Randall, Tonawanda, N. Y.

The biggest tbing of the twentieth century is Foreign Missions. It is the glory of the church that our Centennial year preëminently emphasizes this. Bruce Brown, Valparaiso, Ind.

We ought to be satisfied with nothing less than one-half million for Foreign Missions this Centennial year. I assure you of my heartiest co-operation. Wm. P. Shamhart, Ft. Wayne, Ind.

If we do the Lord's will as expressed in the commission, the offerings for the evangelization of the world this year will make that of other years look as a mere pittance. J. F. Smith, Loraine, Ill.

The aims of the Foreign Society ought to be easily surpassed this Centennial year. The nations will judge us by our zeal for world-wide Missions. V. G. Hostetter, Fostoria, O.

May those who are Christians only, have the spirit of obedience only, and "Go into all the world." D. J. Howe, Nickerson, Kans.

WHAT HAPPENED TO THE CLOCK.

me? I was late this morning. Will had gone when I got to the house and I was more than fifteen minutes late. Our clock must be slow."

"Something must be wrong with the clock," said the master of the house, looking up from his paper. "I was late for the train and missed my appointment and fear I may lose the sale of that property. Why! its way behind time."

"Yes," said the mistress, "I found it out this afternoon. It has run by fits and starts all day. I was late for my committee meeting and was so sorry!"

"We will have to take it back to be regulated," said the master. "We cannot have such a time as this. We might better have no clock or bring the old Kitchen Clock into the parlor. That has been faithful for a dozen years."

Then the Parlor Clock grew frightened and ticked very fast and tried to tell all about it, but no one understood and the master opened the glass door and turned the hand around and the clock became so excited trying to explain how it was only resting awhile that it struck seventeen all at once, but it only created a laugh. Next morning it was taken down, packed in a box and nailed up tight, and away it went to the clock store.

"Good-bye," said the Kitchen Clock, sadly, "I'm real sorry for you."

"Good-bye," wailed the Parlor Clock. "If I come back I will never let you get ahead of me again, and I'll try to do my duty day and night, whether any one sees me or not."—The Advance.

CHRISTIAN UNION

has terrorized the entire company of teachers and college presidents among the Disciples for a decade or more except those who have been his theological pals.

Perhaps Prof. McGarvey does not realize that his boomerangs have returned upon him. Perhaps he does not know what dread and amazement at himself he has produced in the brotherhood. He has moved in an admiring circle that has deceived him; a circle that has grown steadily smaller as the years have passed. It ought to have grown larger, and would have grown larger but for the method of his warfare upon his brethren. He could have propagated the same ideas and opposed the same teaching, and had been held in universal esteem, if he had only done it in a different spirit and with different methods. I know what I am talking about when I say that the rising generation of teachers and ministers among the Disciples hold him as the theological bete noire of the brotherhood. He need not deceive himself into thinking that "the class to whom I refer, is few in numbers." They are a rapidly increasing company, and are making the future of the Disciples.

It seems difficult for Prof McGarvey to see himself as others see him. His close friends and admirers have not been perfectly frank with him. If he stands in doubt of the injury he has done himself in the esteem of his own brethren, perhaps the contemplation of the following words from an eminent preacher and writer among the Disciples, equal in age, and abilities, and almost equal in fame, with Prof. McGarvey himself, will help to disillusion him. They are taken from a private letter of recent date.

"McGarvey is a brilliant illustration of the truth of Henry Ward Beecher's observations, that 'old age generally cures men of all their weaknesses except egotism. This, instead of being abated with years, becomes more pronounced and prominent.' The exemplification of this in McGarvey is pitiable."

This is just one of the ways his boomerangs are returning to him. Are the achievements (failures) of the Biblical Criticism department worth what it is costing Prof. McGarvey, to say nothing of what it is costing the brotherhood in peace and goodwill? It looks like the spending of money for that which is not bread.

Summary of Annual Meeting Reports

FREMONT, NEBRASKA

Our annual meeting was held on New Year's day. All reports showed a good year for the church in Fremont. Church treasurer reported about $2,150 raised for all purposes, and all debts paid and a small balance on hand. The different departments had fine reports, and each a balance in treasury to begin with this year. We are hopeful for the future. I. H. Fuller.

EMPORIA, KANSAS

The annual report of the departments of the First Church in Emporia, Kansas, for 1908, showed that 144 persons had been added to the church, of whom 140 united during the evangelistic meetings conducted by Dr. H. O. Breeden, in April, and the remaining 40 at regular services. The minister made 165 addresses, of which 19 were delivered outside of his own pulpit. There were five deaths in the church, and the minister conducted 49 funerals outside his membership. All the ten departments are in excellent condition, and indications point to the best work in the history of the church, in the year just begun. A total of more than seven thousand dollars ($7,000) was consecrated to the Lord, of which $4,300 was for the building fund, and nearly $500 was for missions. The minister, Willis A. Parker, is beginning his tenth year with this excellent church.

FORT WAYNE, INDIANA

The Third Church held its yearly meeting New Year's night. Encouraging reports of the year's work were read. During the year a C. W. B. M. and Training for Service class were organized. The former has grown from 7 to 18 members. The latter numbers over 90. Every offering of the Brotherhood was taken and apportionments reached. A thousand dollar mortgage paid off and the first floor of a building (at a cost of $2,300) built and all provided for, save $1,000. The Bible School has grown from 70 to 212, and is crowding out the walls of our present building. H. E. Stafford, Minister.

KEOKUK, IOWA

The report of the treasurer shows the church to have raised for all purposes $3,-251.01, with the following amounts by departments: C. W. B. M., $368.07; Ladies' Aid, $271.63; King's Daughters, $320.38; Sunday School, $258.49; Y. P. S. C. E., $136.10; Junior Mission Band, $92.09, making a grand total of $4,697.67. The church is out of debt, with a balance of $139.46 in the treasury. The church gave $276.17 to missions.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

On January 1st G. A. Miller began his third year of labor with the Ninth Street Church. The members and friends of the church have shown the minister and his wife every kindness and have greatly aided in lightening the burdens of a great work. Progress has been made along all the lines of church activity. During these two years 166 persons have been received into the fellowship of the church without any outside assistance in the pulpit work. There has been a net gain of 100 to the congregation. Bible School has increased one-third. The church has paid $3,400 on building debt, $1,000 in repairs of building, $800 to missions. Every department is now in most prosperous condition, and is united and harmonious.

AKRON, OHIO.

The year 1908 was the best in the history of the First Church of Christ, and more money was raised for church purposes than any previous year. The reading of the annual reports of all departments of the church at the annual meeting Monday night showed this fact. New officers for the coming year were elected at Monday night's meeting.

Rev. George Darsie, the pastor, is in his fourth year as minister of the church. During his ministry 529 new members were taken into the church. Reverend Darsie delivered 270 sermons and addresses during the year and officiated at 21 weddings.

The total sum raised in the church during 1908 was $12,504.64. Of this amount the church proper raised $9,712.06 and the other organizations $2,792.58. Out of the total sum given by the church and allied organizations $3,855.72 went to home and foreign missions. In addition to this two members of the church gave $600 to support their own foreign missionary.

The Sunday-school now has a total enrollment of 1,050, with 140 on the cradle roll. The average attendance during 1908 was 640, the largest in the history of the school. During the present year the school will make an effort to boost the enrollment to 1,900. The slogan adopted by the Sunday-school for this year is "1,900 in 1909."

DAVENPORT, IOWA.

The annual meeting of The First Christian Church was a great success in every respect. Never in the history of the church was there as much unity and enthusiasm. Over 200 members were present and everybody was rejoicing over the past year's successes and were particularly happy. Through the able leadership of our beloved pastor, Brother Perkins, the work of the past year has advanced steadily on every line and in every department. The church is unified and we are all one and of one mind.

In the Treasurer's report, $4,537.67 had been raised. All outstanding bills paid leaving a balance in the Treasury for the coming year. Every society reported showing gains and all having a cash balance on hand. Accessions to the church since Brother Perkins commenced his work the 1st of last February, 114. Seventy-three by Baptism. Net increase, ninety-eight. Sunday-school average for the year, 145, against 132 in 1907. Endeavor Society has 104 members. Largest in the three cities by far. All of these 104 at work. Our Sunday evening Endeavor meetings fill the annex of the church and meetings have the old time endeavor ring. G. W. Muckley will be with us Sunday evening to enlighten us on "Centennial Aims for Church Extension."

Another Training Class has been organized with a membership of about twenty-five. This class will be led by one of the elders, S. P. Willett. Total amount of money raised of all departments for missions, $826.41. Over 100 subscriptions were cheerfully made for 1909. Take it all in all it has been a great year for the Davenport Church.

We were certainly very fortunate in securing Brother Perkins as our pastor. He is a great leader. He is strong in every department of the work. E. R. Moore.

SPRINGFIELD, ILLINOIS

The First Church, Springfield, Ill., reports 108 additions during the year with total receipts of $8,834.50. The church's contribution to missionary and benevolent purposes was $2,377.87. This is a splendid record for the historic church and reflects great credit in the pastor, F. W. Burnham.

Mr. Burnham's pastoral report shows a multitude of activities in which he has labored.

DECATUR, ILLINOIS.

O. W. Lawrence, of Decatur, Ill., reports his great church there as having 366 additions in 1908—224 baptisms, net gain 306. Money raised in all departments $6200, for missions $875. Imposing as these figures are, we know that a much more significant element in the year's ministry is the spiritual influence and uplift of the church through the gracious personalities of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence.

CHAMPAIGN, ILLINOIS.

University Place Church of Champaign and Urbana, Ill., where Stephen E. Fisher ministers, has the custom of an "Annual" on the afternoon and evening of New Year's Day. This year the attendance was the best in the history of the special day, so also were the reports. The business session was held at 3:30 and reports and election of officers; then followed the annual dinner, after which the evening was given over to social features. Notable among the details of the clerk's summary of reports is the fact that there has been added to the membership 356 during the year; raised for all purposes, $10,-079.17; reduced the indebtedness to $5,000, with plans to care for all this by the time of the Centennial convention; maintained the living link in the person of Mrs. Lulu M. Burner in Buenos Ayres through C. W. B. M. Made substantial gains in Bible School work; maintains five thriving classes in Training for service; established two mission Bible Schools in centers for future churches in Champaign and Urbana, one of these housed during the year; held five evangelistic campaigns with their own workers, the minister doing the preaching; one of these at the church with 245 additions; three of them in the missions in tent and tabernacle and one of them a missionary meeting for the little church at Ogden, Ill., resulting in forty added to the church. The present net resident membership of the congregation is 1,130. It is needless to say the church begins the new year with great joy, and its outlook is of the brightest, situated as it is in the midst of the 4000 students of the University of Illinois, the church has peculiar opportunities both at home and abroad. No special evangelistic campaign has been planned for this year; there are additions at practically all services, ten last Sunday with which to begin the new year. The slogan with which the year's work is being undertaken by pastor and church board is "A Deepening of the Spiritual Life all along the line."

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

The annual meeting of the Portland Avenue Church of Christ, Minneapolis, Minn., of which P. J. Rice is pastor, was held on New Year's Eve. A picnic supper was served in the early evening and followed by reports and routine business. The church has suffered by the removal, during the past year, of many families, but has gained a number of excellent workers so that its strength is not depleted. The financial report was especially gratifying. For the first time in its history the church and all its auxiliaries were declared to be absolutely out of debt, and in the woman's treasuries a neat balance was shown. During the two and one-half years of the present pastorate, 100 members have been added and all of whom remain faithful. The church has been repaired at a total cost of about $1,500, and a previous debt of $1,000 has been cleared away. The church and its departments give approximately $1,000 annually to the various missionary enterprises.

WITH THE WORKERS

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Varney are in a meeting at Hartford, Mich.

C. T. Runyan will hold a meeting at Hennessy, Okla., during January.

J. N. Nicholson, after a successful pastorate at Milton, Iowa, goes to Moulton.

C. E. Polson has closed his work at Exira, Iowa, and begun work with the church at Akron, Iowa.

The church at Rockwell City, Iowa, is looking forward to the coming of its new pastor, G. W. Coffman.

R. H. Miller gave an illustrated lecture at Jefferson St. Church, Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 1st. B. S. Ferrall is the pastor.

Roger L. Clark began work with the church at Maysville, Ky., a few weeks ago, under very encouraging conditions.

The C. W. B. M. of the Church at Fairfield, Iowa, where G. W. Burch is the pastor, reports a C. W. B. M. Day offering of $168.55.

W. H. Zenor closed his work with the church at Montieth, Iowa, with the close of the year 1908. He had served the church two years.

T. L. Lowe changes his address from Union City, Ind., to 460 W. Fourth Ave., Columbus, Ohio, where he goes to take charge of the Fourth Avenue Church.

Good reports have come to the editor's desk regarding the work of T. L. Noblitt, at Guthrie, Okla. There have been more than 100 additions during the last year.

Geo. A. Miller is preaching a series of Sunday evening sermons on, "The Apostolic Age," at the Ninth Street Christian Church, Washington, D. C. The meetings are well attended.

The church at Augusta, Ill., under the leadership of H. M. Garn, is in a meeting, assisted by Geo. F. Chowder, of Youngstown, Ill. Mr. Garn is doing excellent work with this church.

There are about 200 members in our church at Grand Junction, Colo., where A. B. Elliott of Iowa has just begun his ministry. The city has a population of 10,000,—a fine opportunity for service.

The Law School of Transylvania University is giving its students the privilege of the trial of actual cases at the bar under the direction of the members of the faculty, who are active practitioners at the local bar.

"The Church at Work" is the significant title of the weekly paper of the First Christian Church, Lincoln, Neb., where H. H. Harmon is the enterprising pastor. This church presented its pastor and his wife with a beautiful set of china at Christmas.

The first Sunday in January was observed as "Family Day" by the Jefferson Street Church, Buffalo, N. Y. An effort was made to secure the attendance of all the members of the families represented in the church.

C. L. Organ, who was for three years State Bible School and Endeavor Superintendent for Iowa, has resigned that he may again give his time to Evangelistic work, in which he has always been very successful. Mr. Organ writes appreciatively of the men composing the State Board with which he has worked during these years.

A. R. Adams is pushing the work with vigor at Freemont, Mich.

The church at Webster City has called John Roland to become their pastor.

E. Ewell, minister of the church at Durant, Okla., has been elected to the state legislature.

Drake University Alumni recently held a very successful banquet at the Savory Hotel, Des Moines.

James Mailley has resigned his pastorate at Colorado Springs, Colo., and will devote his time to lecturing.

The church at Lehigh, Iowa, loses its pastor, J. A. Saum, who has accepted the work at Pocahontas, Iowa.

The Capitol Hill Church, Des Moines, is in a meeting, led by John L. Brandt, of St. Louis. J. M. Van Horn is the pastor.

J. L. Wilkinson, of Indiana, has been heartily welcomed to the church at Canon City, Colo., where he began work in December.

Prof. R. G. Sears is interesting the students at Oklahoma Christian University in the study of Hebrew, and has at present a very large class.

The Lyob Street Church, Grand Rapids, Mich., where E. B. Barnes is minister, observed C. W. B. M. day by making an offering of $800.00.

Miss Bertha Denney, the daughter of B. S. Denney, Iowa's beloved state secretary, was married on Christmas Eve to Chas. L. Coffman, of Spokane, Wash. Mr. Coffman is a successful young business man in Spokane, where he and Mrs. Coffman will make their home.

Dean A. M. Haggard of the Bible College, Drake University, on Dec. 20th dedicated the new $2500 church at Maloy, Iowa. The membership consists of only forty people, none of whom possess much wealth. Yet, by the most heroic sacrifice they were able to build a beautiful little church and to dedicate it free of debt.

The church at Ionia, Mich., which was organized by Isaac Errett fifty years ago, will hold an anniversary service the last of this month, one feature of which will be a men's banquet, at which an address will be made on "The Reformation of the Nineteenth Century." On Sunday there will be read a history of the church and a lecture on the life and work of Isaac Errett. G. W. More is the enterprising pastor.

The First Christian Church, Bloomington, Ill., where Edgar D. Jones is the minister, has adopted the following Centennial aims, for the realization of which they are already enthusiastically at work: 1st. Three young men for the Christian ministry—either in the home or foreign mission field; 2nd. Six hundred dollars for foreign missions; 3rd. Two hundred dollars for state missions—reached; 4th. Two hundred dollars for home missions; 5th. One hundred dollars for ministerial relief; 6th. One hundred dollars for Eureka College on "Educational Day"; 7th. One hundred dollars for church extension; 8th. One hundred average attendance Christian Endeavor meetings; 9th. One hundred average attendance at mid-week prayer-meeting; 10th. Four hundred average attendance at Bible school; 11th. Close year, October 1, 1909; with all bills paid and money in the treasury; 12th. Send at least twelve delegates to the Pittsburg Convention.

H. F. Lutz has recently held a meeting with the Calhoun Street Church, Baltimore.

C. J. Tanner has recently held a meeting at Hiram College with sixteen accessions to the church.

The church at Nevada, Iowa, where B. F. Shoemaker is minister, is in the midst of a building enterprise.

H. D. Williams has begun work at Kalamazoo, and feels most hopeful for the future growth of the church.

The church at Lawton, Okla., besides making a $200.00 improvement in its property, has liquidated a debt of $1,000.00.

B. L. Allen closes his work at Kingfisher March first and begins service as financial agent of Christian University.

A. L. Ward, Boulder, Colo., is preaching a series of Sunday evening sermons on "Elements of Strength in the Early Church."

The church at Long Beach, California, where F. M. Rogers is the new minister, has introduced the Duplex Envelope System for the missionary and current expense offerings.

Oliver W. Stewart continues to push the Prohibition interests with his accustomed vigor. He has just addressed a meeting at Christian Temple, Baltimore, where Peter Ainslie is pastor.

Chas. Reign Scoville is in a meeting with the Central Church, Des Moines. The Church is expecting results surpassing any that have yet been attained by any single body of people in Des Moines.

David C. Peters, pastor at Trinidad, Colo., has accepted a call to the church at Fayette, Idaho, and will begin work with them about the first of March. The Colorado churches thus suffer the loss of one of their best pastors.

The church at Logan, Iowa, where Lew C. Harris is the minister closed a very successful meeting Dec. 22, 1908. They were assisted by General Evangelist C. L. Organ. The churches at Woodbine and Missouri Valley sent delegations to the meetings.

Three important meetings are to be held at the University Church, North Waco, Texas, during the month of January: The Ministerial Institute, January 26-30, Tuesday to Saturday; the South Texas Missionary Rally, January 30 to February 1, Saturday afternoon to Monday afternoon; the Texas Christian Lectureship, February 1 to 4, Monday evening to Thursday evening.

"None of our people can afford to be without at least one of our church papers in this Centennial Year," is the word of the Bulletin of the First Christian Church, Long Beach, California. Mrs. H. W. Johnson, Supt. of Literature for the Woman's Missionary Society also acts as agent for the papers.

The Highland Christian Church, Denver, Colo., recently celebrated its twentieth anniversary with a four-day service. Only nine of the charter members were present to respond to their names at roll-call, five others by letter. The present membership is 400. In these twenty years the church has been served by J. C. Anganier, John L. Brandt, W. A. Harp, Melvin Putman, Grant K. Lewis, H. A. Davis, and J. E. Pickett, who has been with the church for nearly eight years, during which time 422 members have been received. The church is determined that the next twenty years' effort shall in every way surpass the past.

WITH THE WORKERS

A. W. Taylor is in a meeting with the church at Normal, Ill., where Roy McColley is the pastor.

The church at Alliance, Ohio, is rejoicing over having paid its mortgage and having all debts paid.

H. R. Murphy, pastor of the Christian Church at Effingham, Kan., has been elected president of the ministerial association for the year.

By request of the church at Washburn, Ill., Rachester Irwin will remain with them until Spring or such a time as they can secure a suitable successor.

Lewis R. Hotaling is at work enthusiastically at Hoopeston, Ill., and reports frequent additions to the church, and a very encouraging outlook.

The church at Mason City, Iowa, where G. E. Roberts is the enterprising pastor, will begin a meeting in February under the leadership of W. F. Shearer.

The address of the Ohio Christian Missionary Society, H. Newton Miller, Corresponding Sec'y, has been changed from 300 Beckman Bldg. to 864 Rose Bldg., Cleveland Ohio.

L. O. Lehman, Rantoul, Ill., has accepted a call to the church at Gibson City, Ill., where he begins work February 1st. We commend the action of the Gibson City church in sending a committee to Rantoul to hear Mr. Lehman, when he did not know of their presence, thus saving the unnatural situation of a "Trial Sermon."

Under the title, "A Kentucky Ideal of a Century Ago," Hon. Z. F. Smith, the Kentucky historian, contributes an illuminating article to "The Register of the State Historical Society," which gives an account of the founding and growth of Transylvania University, the oldest institution of higher learning west of the Alleghenies.

Another example of the benefits to be derived from federated work among the churches is to be seen in the following announcement: The Home Missions Council, consisting of the Home Mission Boards of the evangelical denominations throughout the United States, is planning for an extensive publicity campaign, which will be conducted in two series, the first being as follows: Brooklyn, January 25 and 26; Hartford, January 26 and 27; Buffalo, January 27 and 28; Cleveland, January 28 and 29; Pittsburg, January 31 and February 1; Baltimore, February 1 and 2; Atlanta, February 3 and 4; Philadelphia, Feb. 9 and 10. The second series will be in the Central West as follows: Cincinnati, March 21 and 22; Nashville, March 22 and 23; St. Louis, March 23 and 24; Kansas City, March 24 and 25; Omaha, March 25 and 26; Minneapolis, March 28 and 29; Chicago, March 29 and 30. A two days' conference will be held in each city, beginning with the afternoon of the first day and closing with the afternoon of the second day. The following subjects will be discussed: "Today's Outstanding Problems of Home Missions;" "The Unity of the Church in its Mission to America;" "A Christianized America —for Nation Building;" "A Christianized America—for World Redemption;" "The Backward People;" "Our Expanding Frontiers;" "The Immigrating and Emigrating Peoples;" "The Church and Its Resources—the Men and the Means;" "City Evangelization;" "The Church and the Labor Movement." It will not be the primary purpose of this campaign to raise money, but to present to the churches of America the importance of the home mission enterprise, particularly as it has developed in recent years.

The church at Oswego, Kan., is to hold a meeting during February. They will be led by Edward Clutter.

W. T. Barbe and the church at Rockville, Ind., are in a meeting assisted by Chas. E. Shultz.

Clarence L. DePew held a Bible school rally at Clayton, Ill., Jan. 10th.

Rolla G. Sears, minister, and Oscar Ingold, evangelist, have been in a successful meeting at Billings, Okla.

Christian Union is being cultivated at Alma, Kan., where R. R. Atkins, pastor of the Christian Church, recently occupied the pulpit of the Congregational Church.

His Double Marriage FREE

OR, THE DEATH-BED COMPACT, By ELLIS CAMPBELL

"Give me the Name of Wife to be buried in?"

Critics pronounce this story one of the greatest love stories ever written When we say free, we mean free, and the book is yours if you will send us five cents to prepay postage, etc. This is not part of a story, it is complete in itself from beginning to end. There are twenty-three chapters embellished with seventeen line drawings. We want you to have a copy free to show you the kind of stories we print in Woman's Home Journal, that handsome ladies' magazine. Woman's Home Journal is a big 20 to 32 page, 4 column magazine, that prints such stories as "Her Strange Marriage! or Wedded to One and Loved Another," Bootb Tarkington's "Conquest of Canaan," "The Fatal Ace," by the author of "Rags and Riches," Mary E. Wilkins' "A New England Nun," Herbert Myrick's "A Swim for Life," and Libbie Sprague Phillips' "The Stolen Name of Wife." Besides the special articles, editorials, serials and short stories, there are departments edited for every member of the home; The Family Garden, Good Cooking, Poultry, On Sunday Afternoon, Jottings from Women, How to Live, Embroidery, Practical Fashions, &c., &c. Just now considerable space is being devoted to "Motherbood and Babyhood" Articles, offering helps and hints to young motbers, &c. Each issue is embellished with a new and striking original cover. The type is clear and readable; like the story "His Double Marriage," the magazine is entirely different from the ordinary run of publications. The regular subscription price is 25 cents a year, but if you send your subscription in reply to this advertisement, we will also send you the complete story, "His Double Marriage." This offer gives you the magazine at our special club rate of 20 cents a year and 5 cents for the book, 25 cents in all. Here is a synopsis of the story: Goeffery Berris, an Englishman, while in Africa marries an adventuress by the name of Alicia. Later it is discovered that instead of being heir to his uncle's estate Berris is expected to marry Leila Merron, who has been left the estate, and thus come into a fortune. Leila thinking herself on her death-bed sends for Geoffery and asks him to marry her. But why tell the plot? The book is free. Send 5 cents to pay postage and 20 cents for a year's subscription, 25 cents in all. Either offer separately, if you desire. Satisfaction guaranteed. Send today.

WITH THE WORKERS

H. G. Bennett is in a meeting at Nanton, Alberta, Canada.

A. W. Conner and his helpers are in a meeting at Worthington, Ind.

The church at LaPorte, Ind., is being assisted in a meeting by C. M. Hughes, singing evangelist.

Clarence Yeuell is in England, visiting relatives and supplying the churches at Liverpool and Southport.

J. D. Garrison, minister at Somerset, Pa., received a check for $40.00 as a Christmas present from his church.

B. D. Adams, returned missionary from India, has been supplying the pulpit of the church at Rochester, Minn.

On Jan. 1st, J. T. Alsup, formerly pastor at New Hampton, Mo., began work in his new field at Metropolis, Ill.

The church at Newkirk, Okla., has just held a very successful meeting, led by W. E. Brickett and wife F. D. Wharton is the minister.

John Young, after six years of successful work at Lodi, California, has closed his work and become pastor of the church at Hollister, California.

There are now 100 members of the training class for preachers and missionaries taught by Bruce Brown at Valparaiso University, Valparaiso, Ind.

The church at Chillicothe, Mo., is to begin a meeting Jan. 21st. They will be assisted by Louis Cupp, pastor of the Hyde Park Church, Kansas City, Mo.

The church at Belding, Mich., W. Winters, pastor, will hold a meeting the last of this month. They have called to their assistance Evangelist W. A. Ward.

H. D. C. Maclachlan is enthusiastically leading the Seventh Street Church, Richmond, Va., in co-operation with the interdenominational Evangelistic Campaign, with the Chapman-Alexander people.

Frederick F. Grim, Corresponding Secretary for New Mexico, recently held a meeting in San Juan County, which resulted in the organization of twenty-three members. This is a new and very promising country.

The King Hill Church, St. Joseph, Mo., has received eighty-five new members in the past three months. They recently held a reception for the sixty who were received in a meeting held by J. T. Shreve, the minister.

R. L. Prunty has closed a successful eight years of service with the church at Brookfield, Mo., and will labor with the churches at Labelle, Lewistown and Monticello. He leaves the church at Brookfield in most excellent condition.

J. A. Serena, pastor of the church at East Onondaga Street, Syracuse, N. Y., sends us a very interesting and attractive church calendar. It contains full announcements of Sunday-school lessons, prayer-meeting, and Christian Endeavor topics for the year, besides much other attractive material.

Charles Henry Frick, for two years pastor of the church at Grafton, Pa., was married on Dec. 22nd to Miss Bessie Jackson. Mr. and Mrs. Frick were students together at Hiram College, of which Mr. Frick is a graduate. They will be at home at Wilkesbarre, Pa., where Mr. Frick becomes pastor. The Christian Century extends best wishes.

N. H. Sheppard has just closed a four weeks' meeting with the Linden Avenue Church, South Bend, Ind.

The church at Medford, Ore., is in a great meeting, led by Evangelists Whiston and Logan. The audiences have been so large that the second week the church was compelled to go into a tabernacle. It is to be used for the regular work of the church until a new building can be erected for the old one is entirely outgrown. Mario F. Horn is the capable leader of the church.

Mrs. L. G. Bantz, 5664 Vernon Ave., St. Louis, Mo., well known in the state for her service to the C. W. B. M., together with her husband and parents with whom they lived, on January 3rd suffered the loss of their home by fire. The fine brick house with all of its contents were totally destroyed. On account of the loss of the records, THE ADVANCE, the state C. W. B. M. paper cannot be issued this month. Mrs. Bantz will have the hearty sympathy of many in Missouri and other states.

The last year has been the best in the history of the church at Eureka, Ill., where A. W. Taylor has ministered for six years. There were 170 accessions to the church and $4,000 given for missions and benevolences. During the six years there has been a net increase in the membership of 200, with a decrease of 100 in the non-resident membership, owing to a continued effort to induce those who had removed to take membership with churches where they were living. The Sunday-school has doubled in membership and every department of the church is in the best condition.

WITH THE WORKERS

A. J. McLaughlin, pastor at Barry, Ill., has accepted a call to Burlington, Iowa.

W. B. Hopper will reliquish the work at Pana, Ill., to accept the church at Bethany, near Decatur.

A. B. Cox of Salina, Kans., was ordained Sunday, Jan. 3, and has taken up the work at Tescott, Kans.

The Jacksonville, Ill. church is having a prayer meeting of six or seven hundred, since the great union meeting closed two months ago.

David H. Shields of Salin, Kans., will be one of the preachers who will occupy one of the pulpits in Pittsburgh during the centenial.

W. S. Racey, a member of the present Indiana legislature, is a prominent member of the First Christian Church of Vincennes. He is a deacon in the church.

James A. Beaton, for four years pastor of the First Christian Church in Warsaw, Indiana, has resigned his pastorate. He was led to this because of failing eye-sight.

The church at Alexandria, Ind., will graduate its second class in Teacher Training. The exercises will be held on the evening of January 15. There will be ten graduates.

Geo. A. Miller is teaching a Thursday night Bible class at the Ninth Street Church, Washington, D. C., which has enrolled 140 members. They study the "History of the Early Christian Church."

The official board of Pontiac, Ill., has extended Allen T. Shaw a unanimous call to continue indefinitely. The Bible-school raised over $350.00 the past year and other departments make good reports.

Miss Edna P. Dale, of Wuhu, China, made an address in Atlanta, Ill., church on January 3. The audience showed its appreciation of Miss Dale by giving thirty-five dollars for missions. Ralph V. Callaway is the pastor.

William Petty was elected to the superintendency of the Peru, Ind., Sunday-school for the seventeenth time. He has served in that capacity from the time that the church was orgnized. The Sunday-school is in a flourishing condition.

The occasion of W. M. Groves leaving Petersburg, Ill., was taken by citizens as an opportunity to express their appreciation of him after a seven year pastorate there. A large union meeting was held in the town. Mr. Groves will devote his time to his work as state representative at Springfield.

After four years of constructive ministry with the First Christian Church of Sioux City, Iowa, in which the membership has been more than doubled and a new building erected, the pastor, John Kendrick Ballou, will terminate his ministry with that church about the first of April. The church does not solicit correspondence ior the pulpit.

W. H. Allen, pastor of the Jackson Street Church, in Muncie, Indiana has been appointed to served on the Metropolitan Police Board of the City of Muncie, by Gov. Hanly. The appointment pleases the Law and Order citizens, but it not much relished by the "liberal element." Mr. Allen is also president of the county Anti-saloon League. No man has done more for high civic ideals in Muncie than he. His appointment by Gov. Hanly is a well deserved honor.

TELEGRAMS.

Des Moines, Iowa, Jan. 10, 11, 1909:—In the midst of zero weather. Forty-six added today, twenty-four at great Men's meeting this afternoon. One hundred and eighty-three added in six days of invitations. A great meeting in down town church in city of ninety thousand, a problem, yet whole city deeply stirred. Shop meeting arranged for every noon hour this week. Ministerial association addressed by Brother Scoville. Colleges arranging special meetings. Brother Scoville at his best and his helpers are invaluable in their assistance when rendered by these friends of Jesus.

Finis Idleman.

The Butte, Montana, Church has called Bro. W. M. Jordan of this place to serve them as pastor. This would take him back within a few miles of his boyhood home, and within less than one hundred miles of two different churches, each of which he has served five years as pastor. He will probably accept, though the Billings Church is very sorry to let him go. Butte is the largest city in the state.

Billings, Mont. O. F. McHargue.

Nine additions to the Central Church today. Five young men baptized at evening service.

Denver, Colo. Wm. Bayard Craig.

The church at Freelandsville, Indiana is without a pastor. Mr. Watts who served the church last year closed his work the first of the year.

The church at Franklin, Indiana, is making arrangements to have C. R. Scoville in a great meeting early in the fall. M. B. Ainsworth, of Danville, Ill., has been called to the pastorate of the Franklin Church. He will commence his work about the first Sunday in February.

We are informed of the sudden death of Rev. H. Genders, pastor at Rome City, Ill., January 5th. Mrs. Genders and her father went with the body to Canada where burial will be made. The church people feel the loss keenly as the pastor and his wife were greatly beloved by them.

R. F. Whiston and C. W. Longman, are conducting fine meetings on the Pacific Coast and will probably remain there until June. Their last meeting at Medford resulted in 127 additions. They are now at Albany with J. J. Evans and will be at McMinnville during February. March, April and May are still open.

C. B. Kessinger has been serving the Sunday-school of the First Christian Church in Vincennes, Ind., as superintendent for twelve years. He was elected to serve again for the coming year. Mr. Kessinger is one of the most prominent lawyers in southern Indiana. He is never too busy to look after his Sunday-school.

P. J. Rice, Minneapolis, Minn., announces the following series of Sunday evening sermons: Jan. 10. "What can we do for our children?" A discussion of child labor, care of orphans, care of delinquents. What can the Home, the Public School and the Church do?, etc. Jan. 17. "What about young women?" A study of women in industry, etc. What can the Church do? Jan. 24. "What About Young Men?" A study of actual conditions surrounding us. Boarding houses, etc. What can the Church do? Jan. 31. "Setting Up a Home." A study of the newly-weds, etc.

Pastor Welton is holding a revival at Ashland, Ill.

J. M. Francis of Mt. Vernon, Ill., has accepted the pulpit at Athens, Ill., and will begin work there at once.

The meeting at Atlantic, Iowa, is beginning with large audiences. E. E. Mack, the new minister, is preaching. Charles E. McVay is soloist and song leader.

A. W. Conner and daughter are in a revival meeting with the church at Worthington, Indiana. D. G. Waterman, of Linton, Ind., is assisting also in the meeting.

J. A. Lord is helping W. H. Book, of the Tabernacle Church, Columbus, Ind., in a revival meeting. J. W. Wilson has charge of the music. A splendid meeting is looked for by the church and the pastor.

Geo. L. Snively closed a meeting at Washington, Pa., Jan. 4th. Eighteen additions the last service, 176 in all. E. A. Cole is pastor. Accompanied by singer Altheide, he began on the 10th with B. T. Wharton at Marshall, Mo.

R. F. Thrapp was called twice last week to a conference with the ministerial association in Springfield in preparation for the revival to be held by Mr. Sunday in February. Mr. Thrapp was chairman of the executive committee in his city for Mr. Sunday's meeting.

A. B. Cox, one of our prominent young men, was ordained by this church, Sunday, Jan. 3, to preach. He came to us from a sister church for whom he had preached about a year. He will give half time to Tescott and to Harmony. This is the eighth young man to enter the ministry from this congregation within the past seven or eight years.

The church at St. John, Washington, has just closed a meeting in which there were seventy accessions to the church, seventy-five per cent of whom were men. A much larger number would have probably been received, had the church been able to accommodate the crowds that came, many of whom could not gain entrance to the church. The Bible school has increased from an attendance of 40 to 130. The church is planning to build a larger house of worship, and to call a strong man as pastor.

ROSY AND PLUMP
Good Health from Right Food.

"It's not a new food to me," remarked a Va. man, in speaking of Grape-Nuts.

"About twelve months ago my wife was in very bad health, could not keep anything on her stomach. The Doctor recommended milk half water but it was not sufficiently nourishing.

"A friend of mine told me one day to try Grape-Nuts and cream. The result was really marvelous. My wife soon regained her usual strength and today is as rosy and plump as when a girl of sixteen.

"These are plain facts and nothing I could say in praise of Grape-Nuts would exaggerate in the least, the value of this great food."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

WITH THE WORKERS

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA AND ARIZONA.

Our treasury is greatly in need of funds. Pastors are urged to call loudly and urgently from the pulpit for help for our Home Missionaries. We plead for the payment of the Long Beach convention pledges at once. Send checks payable to the order of the Secretary.

E. W. Thornton is back from the East, a flaming fire-brand in the Sunday-school field. Look out for a conflagration in Los Angeles and vicinity. His first work will be with the great Sunday-school of Magnolia Avenue, where S. J. Chapman is superintendent and Jesse P. McKnight pastor.

Willis S. Myers recently took three weeks from his strenuous city pastorate and held a great meeting at Escondido, with a dead church revived, twenty-two added to the membership, and funds for pastorate support pledged.

The sounding of the hammer and the driving of the plane has been heard in the land in spite of the off year in finance. On Dec. 6th a $2,000 chapel was dedicated at Oceanside, where Oscar Sweeney ministers, Grant K. Lewis officiating; on Dec. 13th, at Holtville, where C. J. Upton takes care of the flock, a $4,000 house was consecrated, R. P. Sheperd being master of ceremonies. Eugene Burr and his thriving congregation at Sawtelle have pushed out the walls and doubled the capacity of their house of worship, which was re-dedicated on Jan. 3rd at the hands of C. C. Chapman; and on Jan. 10th the services of the same Master-dedicator will be required at Huntington Beach, where T. L. Young preaches the word in a new $4,000 edifice.

That intrepid evangelist, John T. Stivers, has just closed a great meeting at Oxnard, with sixty-one additions to the church. This truly wonderful meeting places another long-time mission point safely across the line of self support and makes it by far the largest and most influential church in this great sugar-beet town. The man behind the evangelist, and whose wise leadership makes such a meeting possible is Pastor E. N. Phillips. Our prayers follow the evangelist to the Capitol City of Arizona where he is already in a good meeting with the Central Church where Lawrence Williams is pastor. Roland S. Davidson and wife have recently joined this successful evangelist as personal workers.

The Missionary Boards of the West Coast States have negotiated with Berry Bros. for the purchase of the Pacific Christian, and will assume control March first. J. R. Perkins, pastor at Fresno, will become managing editor. H. Elliott Ward is among the churches canvassing for money. May the brethren be glad to see him and speed him on his way with joy!

Mrs. Princess C. Long is again among her own rejoicing a multitude of friends and the churches with her gift of song. At this writing she is singing with O. P. Spiegel in a meeting of weeks at the Broadway Church, Los Angeles. She is here for service and can be addressed at Long Beach.

Clark H. Marsh closes a happy and successful three years' ministry with the church at Monrovia with the old year. He joins the globe-trotters and leaves for Japan immediately, where he will be occupied for a time in teaching. With his wits sharpened and his heart enlarged by experiences abroad we hope to have him again in our fellowship of California preachers. Chas. T. Radford, son of B. J. Radford of Eureka becomes pastor at Monrovia and is already in the field.

Prof. B. P. Stout, singer and personal worker, has just closed a successful meeting with Oscar Sweeney and the Oceanside Church. The Secretary did much of the preaching; twenty-two souls came out on the Lord's side, greatly strengthening our little church, which now has a membership of fifty. Prof. Stout is a wise personal worker as well as a most gifted singer and has had wide experience in meetings with the great evangelists of the land. Although a Baptist, his work is highly satisfactory to our churches as Brethren Spiegel, Utter, Coulter, Brandt, Smither, Trundle, Martin and others with whom he has served, will attest. We commend him to our churches.

Leander Lane is supplying the work at South Figueroa Boulevard, Los Angeles, recently resigned by E. H. Kellar.

Miss Zonettee Vance, of Deoghur, India, Missionary with the C. W. B. M., is home on a leave of absence and will sojourn in Southern California for a time, and at Long Beach, where she has a number of personal friends. We are glad to welcome, also, to our genial, health-giving clime, another returned missionary in the person of Dr. Olivia Baldwin, who is now at San Diego.

Walter G. Menzies and wife, of Ratn, India, will spend the last week in January and all of February among our churches in Southern California. Everywhere they will be heard with delight and profit. They will be the chief speakers at all the district C. W. B. M conventions now about to assemble. These missionary meetings mean so much to all our churches that we here publish the schedule, urging all our pastors and brethren, as well as sisters, to attend:

Pasadena—Jan. 28th. Ontario—Jan. 29th.
Redlands—Feb. 5th. San Diego—Feb. 9th.
Orange—Feb. 12th.
Magnolia, L. A.—Feb. 16th.
El Centro—Feb. 19th.
Santa Barbara—Feb. 26th.

I. H. Hazel, of Imperial, became the new pastor at Boyle Heights, L. A.

F. W. Emerson's work at Redlands begins with seventeen added the first month.

W. H. Martin, of Whittier, delivered the first of the series of Centennial Addresses, which will make this year's "preachers' meetings" memorable, at the December meeting. His subject was, "Our Origins," and the address was most thoughtful, eliciting much discussion. At the January meeting W. E. Crabtree has the address on "Thomas Campbell and His Compeers." These meetings are largely attended by both men and women. A. C. Smither and his great church make ideal host and hostesses for this all day meeting without which our delightful fellowship and great work could not be done. P. C. McFarlane, the Secretary of the National Men's Organized work is to visit our section the last week in January. He will meet with a royal welcome. The Men's Social Union of Los Angeles is planning a great gathering of men to meet him on the afternoon and evening of Friday, Jan. 29th. Let the men in all our churches of Los Angeles and environs respond at sound of the bugle call!

Grant K. Lewis, Secretary.

ILLINOIS CENTENNIAL AIMS.

The first aim is an evangelist in each district. There are eight districts and we now have four evangelists. These are in the third, fifth, seventh and eighth districts.

The second aim is fifty thousand dollars in the Permanent Fund. This amount and more is already secured but not yet available. A "Friend" just bought the second annuity bond of $300 on which we pay six per cent. and Bro. Redding Boosenbark of Cambridge who recently died remembered us with a good sum to go into the Permanent Fund as a memorial gift.

The third aim is twenty-five Living-Link churches to our society. It takes $200 from a church to make it a Living-Link. The following churches and ministers are now Illinois Links: Arcola, John I. Gunn; Carthage, W. W. Denham; DeLand, W. T. McConnell; Normal, W. G. McColley; Quincy, Clyde Darsie; First Church, Springfield, F. W. Burnham; First Church, Bloomington, Edgar D. Jones; Camp Point, H. J. Reyuolds. Tazewell county, Mackinaw, J. W. Street; Minier, Harry Walston; Armington, J. C. Lappin and Concord, A. A. Burr.

We are now at the middle of the missionary year and it will take unusual energy to reach our aim in regard to the Links.

The usual number of contributing churches for the past few years is 350 but we ought to go to 450 this year. But it cannot be done by giving State missions the last consideration.

If any church fails to support state and district missions this year the whole service fails so far as that church is concerned.

This is to ask once more that the churches that have not yet contributed will kindly do so.

J. Fred Jones, Field Sec.
W. D. Deweese, Office Sec.

Bloomington, Ill.

THREE OF A KIND

Dropped Coffee, Picked Up Postum, and Health.

The harmful action of caffeine—the drug in coffee and tea—is the same in all cases, it is only a matter of degree.

One person may suffer more in the way of heart palpitation, sour stomach, nervousness, or insomnia, than another, but the poison is there all the time, if one continues to drink coffee or tea.

A Penn. lady and two friends learned the truth about coffee in the same way. The lady writes:—

"About four years ago I had an attack of nervous prostration and a great deal of trouble with my heart. Sometimes feared I was dying, and my doctor seemed unable to find out the cause of my trouble.

"I would frequently wake at night with these attacks and the doctor said there was some constant irritation of the nerves, and he began to think some organic disease was at work.

"One day I was told of a case very similar to mine, and that the woman could find no relief until she stopped using coffee. I did not like the idea of giving up coffee, for I was very fond of it.

"Having read frequently of Postum, I determined to try it. It certainly made a great change in me. Those spells left me entirely.

"My most intimate friend was afflicted as I was. In fact the similarity of our afflictions drew us together in the first place. When she saw the great change Postum had made in me she tried it and was benefited as I was.

"The beneficial effects of Postum on us two induced a neighbor to follow our example and so we are three of a kind who can't say enough in praise of Postum."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full o. human interest.

THE HOLIDAY MONTH AND KENTUCKY MISSIONS.

R. B. Baker added four in Laurel and Clay counties. He finds it difficult to supply the churches with preachers.

Jellico enjoyed the services of R. G. Sherrer all the month and everything moves well.

Twenty-five added at Latonia under preaching of Harvout and Runyon. Many of these additions at regular services. A great loss is sustained in the removal of Dr. Sullivan to Covington.

Two added at Paintsville and A. Sanders thinks that the outlook is good for continued success.

Eleven added by the labors of G. H. Thomas in the second division of the London district.

J. W. Masters reports eighteen added. He is now in Leslie county where we have not a church building. Has found twenty-three people at the county seat who have been members of the church and hopes to organize a congregation and build a house. He reports that we have no house in three other counties—Perry, Letcher and Knott. Some brethren in each county. That is a vast territory—unevangelized—so far as we are concerned.

J. K. Reid closes his work with the Munfordville congregation. Three added. It is proposed by the church not to have regular preaching for a while and to have a strong man for a meeting in the spring.

J. B. Flinchum was sick most of the month. He hopes to be able soon to wage a vigorous campaign in Breathitt county.

J. B. Lockhart and the South Louisville mission are planning a revival in January. The work is responding to the earnest efforts he is making.

W. J. Cocke was sick a part of the month, but was able to be some where every Sunday. He held no meeting. He is now in Trigg county engaged in evangelistic work.

W. J. Hudspeth was at work twenty days of the month. Five added. He was at four points during the month and raised $10.25 for Kentucky Missions.

D. G. Combs preached thirty-seven sermons and added 102 in various ways. With unfailing vigor he continues to preach the gospel in many needy communities in Eastern Kentucky.

Jackson is without a preacher since C. M. Summers closed his work there.

W. F. Smith is leading the religious forces at Morehead with good results.

H. H. Thompson continues to do good work in Pike county. He is planning the most active campaign he has made in that field.

Lebanon House is approaching completion. It is expected that W. J. Cocke shall dedicate it and hold a meeting.

Bromley and L. A. Kohler continue with good outlook the work at Bromley.

Bardstown and J. B. Briney continue to work together during the new year and with continued hope for this hard field.

W. L. Lacy is continued as evangelist in the District of Morgan, Wolf, etc., with plans for the best year's work in their history.

Z. Ball is unceasing in labors in Jackson county and some contiguous fields.

H. W. Elliott reports a good month for the work. $1,628.00 received. We have made an increase over the corresponding months of last year—since the Convention—of about $1,000. Our load is heavier. We urge prompt remittance of all collections. We need them now very much.

quet at Ionia, Mich. This is the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the church and is Dr. Willett's home church. On January 24, Sunday evening services, Dr. Willett will preach in New York, at the West 56th Street church. On Monday night, January 25, he will speak for the Disciples' Association in New York. On Tuesday morning, January 26, he will speak at the Friend's College, in Philadelphia.

The Monroe Street C. W. B. M. held an evening program, Saturday evening, January 9. The occasion was significant in that the papers were read by members of a neighboring Baptist society. Mrs. Estelle L. Russell furnished beautiful music through a chorus of her vocal pupils. A reception with refreshments followed the exercises.

The rally of the Foreign society held in the Jackson Boulevard Church last Monday was a great success. The crowds were large and the addresses of high order. Stephen J. Corey presided and the returned missionaries who spoke were Dr. Dye, Dr. Layton, H. P. Shaw and M. F. Adams. The local preachers making addresses were A. T. Campbell, Guy Sarvis and O. F. Jordan.

At the dinner hour the King's Daughters of the church served a fine turkey dinner. The dining room was full to overflowing, with three hundred present, we should estimate.

The work of Secretary Corey is unique, and of a fine religious tone. He redeems the missionary addresses from the sickly sentimentality that characterizes some of that work, and puts into it a fine religious tone. His idea of using stereopticon pictures and moving pictures was unique and successful in point of getting a crowd and in educational effect. A crowd filling the church was at the evening service.

On Wednesday, Jan. 13, at 4 p. m., in Haskell Assembly Hall at the University of Chicago, will begin the series of Haskell lectures on The Religion of Persia, to be given by Prof A. V. Williams Jackson of Columbia University, New York. These lectures, six in number, will be in part illustrated with the stereopticon, and should be of much interest to the general public. A hearty invitation is extended to all members of this congregation to attend the series.

If you want a beautiful complexion, free from liver spots, pimples and freckles and other discolorations, purify your blood.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers cleanse and clear the blood, remove all poisonous and irritating influences and permit it to flow gently and uniformly all through the veins. These little wafers are famous for their beautifying effects and every lady may use them with perfect freedom.

They do their good work remarkably fast owing to the wonderful power of the ingredients which they contain. Here they are: Calcium Sulphide, Quassia, Eucalyptus, Golden Seal and an alterative and laxative. Ask your doctor what he thinks of these as blood purifiers. He prescribes them many times every year.

The popularity of Stuart's Calcium Wafers is great and growing constantly every year. They do a wonderful work with apparently little effort and do not necessitate suffering and expense as so many complexion cures occasion.

You may enjoy a fair complexion if you will use these little wafers. They are taken after each meal and go into your blood, just like food. They do your entire system a great good. They help your intestines and relieve constipation, thereby giving the system the power to remove and exclude poisonous gases and fluids which filter through the intestines into the system and contaminate it.

Don't despair if your complexion is muddy. Write today for a free trial paekage of Stuart's Calcium Wafers or go to your druggist and buy a box. Price 50c. MISSION AND BENEVOLENT NOTES.

Last week the Foreign Society received two gifts of $500 each on the Annuity Plan; one from a friend in Virginia and one from a friend in Texas. There is a steady growth in the Annuity Fund of the Fereign Society.

The churches are now beginning an active campaign of preparation for the March offering for fereign missions the first Sunday in March. There is a wide-spread feeling that the churches will make a great record this year. Already a number are considering the Living-Link step.

Pres. A. McLean and Sec. Stephen J. Corey of the Foreign Society, are again holding foreign mission rallies with the aid of moving picture scenes on the mission fields. Two missionaries are with each. They are doing great things in awakening missionary interest and creating a missionary conscience. The attendance upon these rallies is large and enthusiastic.

The National Benevolent Association has just received an annuity of $6,300 from a friend in Missouri. This good man is preparing to close up his business so as to be in readiness to "go Home." He said, "I want to remember my Lord and I do not know how better to do it than by helping to provide for some of the "least of these my brethren." Another man and wife are about to give $5,000 for the work in behalf of the aged, indigent brethren.

The Texas brethren and the National Benevolent Association have decided to raise a sum sufficient for the erection of a Home for the Aged in Dallas. This is to be one of Texas' Centennial gifts. What more fitting testimonial could be made of our gratitude to God for one hundred years of blessing.

After twenty years of residence at 915 Aubert avenue, St. Louis, Mo., the Christian Orphans' Home has removed to its new home 2949 Euclid avenue, St. Louis. This is a beautiful building costing about $80,000 of which amount Robt. Stockton gave $50,000. The home was badly needed. Mr. Stockton required the Benevolent Association to furnish $30,000. This with the furnishing has taxed the resources of the Association. There is an indebtedness. All the frienas of the orphans are invited to help clear this beautiful Centennial Home from indebtedness.

The C. W. B. M. and The National Benevolent Association will again unite in observing Easter. In the absence of a calendar of days giving each interest of the church the recognition due it, this seems the best that can be done. The churches, Bible-schools, Junior societies and Mission Bands will make a joint Easter offering for the Christlike ministry of feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, and sheltering the homeless children of all lands. They are to make their own division of the offering, sending a portion to the Benevolent Association for orpnans in our homeland. Easter supplies should be ordered at once. All should have fellowship in this holiest of ministries. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Wanted: An Idea Big Enough For Our Men

Our men are looking for a name. They have advertized to give twenty-five dollars for the most satisfactory one proposed.

A good name is a good thing. It will be worth more than the prize they offer for it. As a handle helps a tool, so a good name will help our men's movement.

But a much more serious consideration for the infant organization is: What shall it live for? What end shall it accomplish? What goal shall it seek?

The men's movement is well under way in other churches. It would be advisable for the Disciples of Christ in organizing their's to take advantage of the experience of others. Thus our slight tardiness in taking up the work might be atoned for by the excellence of our organization.

The weakness of the men's club in the local church is that it has no idea big enough for men to work for.

The ordinary men's club has ideas—many of them. But these ideas are not organized together by a single idea that is big enough and worth enough to appeal strongly and constantly to men.

Is not this the history of the men's club in your church: The proposal for the men to have an organization of their own met with instant popularity: a goodly company turned out at the first meeting: perhaps a banquet was served and paid for by some devoted member of the church who wished to avoid the necessity of charging the guests, or it may have been the pastor who stood this expense: speeches were made, songs were sung, the men "limbered up" and told stories: the pastor was toasted, the coming revival was talked up, a shot was taken at the saloon in the next block, some hard blows were given the alderman of the ward or the city administration which were applauded with cries of "hit 'em again": the company broke up with a feeling of acquaintance, of fellowship, which they had never been able to realize in a mixed social gathering: the sense of power, too, was awakened, the feeling that this company of Christian men could almost work miracles if it worked together in organized fellowship: the next meeting was held pursuant to adjournment: not half as many were present: there was no banquet this time, only coffee and doughnuts: the pastor hadn't been buttonholing men for ten days previous: the officers elected at the banquet had not taken their positions seriously and had not "worked up" the attendance: the evening passed with a little desultory entertainment: the pastor exhorted a bit: and the meeting adjourned: four weeks later, just before the sermon, the usher brought a notice down the aisle to the pastor from the president of the men's club saying that next Tuesday evening was the regular time for that organization to meet and inviting all men to come: a half dozen came, talked a bit and went home: the names of the officers of the club appear in the monthly paper of the church, and being men of prestige in the community, the casual attendant is impressed with the formidableness of the enterprise—but the men's club lives only as a memory in the minds of those who attended that first banquet. Why should such an auspicious beginning prove so abortive?

The reason is not that the men were not in earnest, but that they were not given an idea big, clear and worthy enough to command their allegiance.

They were brought together for a good time or for fellowship or to promote a specific enterprise like a revival; but they never had a big enough conception of their business to keep them working at it after the banquet was over and the novelty was worn off. Perhaps the assumption upon which most efforts to organize men have proceeded is either that men are hungering for fellowship, that they want somewhere to spend their evenings in good companionship or that they ache for something to do, some task to work at. This task is usually some practical matter about the church, the financing of a building enterprise or a revival, or it may be to clean up the community morally by ousting a saloon or widening prohibition territory or wiping out a nuisance of some sort.

Over against these considerations we are now saying that men must have an idea to work for and to work out.

Why do we say an idea, and not a task? Is not man a worker primarily? We answer, no. He is primarily an idealist. No man is just aching to work for its own sake. He wants to work because the doing of that work fits into an ideal scheme of his life. The work must mean something to him.

Likewise the church man will do church work, will support his men's organization, if he feels that it is necessary to the working out of an idea that has already gripped him. If your men's club is organized for doing a task the task will soon be done and your men's club with it. But if it is organized on account of an idea, a vision, possessing the minds of its members, there will be not one task, but many, that will follow in the wake of this idea as means to the end devoutly wished for. No organization comes to much which is principally for work. It must become idealized in order to be worth while.

In our observation the men's clubs have not become idealized. Some of them approach it in those denominations which have set up their sectarian principles as ends for which the men are to strive.

Nor will men long support a club that bases itself on mere good-fellowship. Men tire of their social clubs, there is no ideal worth to them. No big ends are being wrought out through them.

The fine, rich fellowships of life are rooted in co-operative service for some idea.

Masculine fellowship in the church does not need to be planned for. Like happiness, if you seek it you miss it. But let our men get hold of a big idea and feel that they are responsible for its working out and you will be astonished at the fellowship they develop in the process.

That was the way Jesus got men. He did not coax and coddle them with promises of ease and indulgence. Neither did he bluntly point them to a task to do. He opened their minds, he made them see, he gave them an idea that burned in their consciousness and they left all and worked for it and found such fellowship in the doing that the world pointed to them and marveled, "how those Christians love one another."

The next step in the organizing of our men is to agree upon an idea that is worth while and to enlist our men in it. From the very start our men's clubs should take on this ideal character. They are not interested in merely adding another organization to the already overloaded congregation unless the organization can be pointed directly at some goal. But they will respond with might and enthusiasm if we can suggest to them an end that is worthy their enthusiasm.

What the men's movement needs is some idea corresponding to the idea of our plea for union which shall possess the men as our plea possesses the whole brotherhood. It is this conviction of a plea, of a big idea worthy to command us, that has made the Disciples the mighty brotherhood we are, and marks us as unique among our Christian brethren. Is there any idea like this, big enough for the men? We believe Mr. Macfarlane would give more than a twenty-five dollar prize for such an idea. Not in the hope of a reward, but out of our deep concern for the great cause we would suggest an idea that is worthy. Our suggestion may seem too obvious to need consideration. But the longer it is thought on the more pertinent and satisfying it will appear.

Here is an idea big enough and worth enough for our men's movement to make it their motive and goal: THE UNION OF ALL CHRISTIANS OF ALL SECTS UPON THE LORD JESUS CHRIST ALONE.

But that is the plea of our whole brotherhood, some one objects? Precisely so. And our reason for suggesting it as the idea that is to be made vividly conscious to our men is that this plea of our brotherhood will not be realized until our men take it to heart and go about doing it. The time is ripe for doing as well as preaching the plea. The preachers have been doing their part and have almost finished it. The call is now for doers.

Our laymen in our local churches are in a position to actualize Christian union through their organization more in the next ten years than our preachers and editors and colleges can do in fifty years.

THE TREND OF EVENTS

By Alva W. Taylor

ALL THE WORLD'S AKIN

We may curse the "Dago" when he seeks his living in our neighborhood or honestly deplore his intrusion in such great numbers upon our shores but our hearts turn to him and we brush away the sympathizing tear that we may more adequately show our sympathy with that which his great need demands. The national government votes an unprecedented sum, the states vie with one another to aid, the cities become veritable depots for collecting funds and, all-told, more than two millions of dollars has been sent with another million in fair way to come. The Red Cross has handled already over eight hundred thousand dollars and not only prove its efficiency but again defied all provincial and national boundaries and marked the way of fellow-help as the golden road to world-wide unity. It is probable that a quarter of a million lost their lives. The world has seen few such calamities.

PUNISHMENT OR REFORMATION

Judge Cleland was elected to the new municipal court bench in Chicago and, being both a good Christian and a social student, he used his legal right to the utmost to suspend sentence on good behavior and found that out of over 1300 cases, only 10% failed to live up to their chance. It did great good, demonstrated its economy to the city, proved that reformation is better than social revenge (otherwise called punishment), aroused the wrath of legal dogmatists and the envy of some on the bench, and resulted in the Judge being transferred from a criminal to a chancery court. Now an Adult Probation Law will be urged before the legislature and if social good proves mightier than legal tradition, Judge Cleland's sacrifice will not be in vain, for whereas he may have strained the law in the name of mercy, he will have constrained all courts to a custom of mercy.

FOR THE COMMONWEAL

The principal subjects for sober legislation in the various state assemblies this winter are for the social welfare. There will be the usual amount of political jockeying, and Illinois bids fair to lead all competitors in that line, but most of the state legislatures are immaculate as compared with those of ten year ago, and sober efforts for the weal of the common folk get a chance. The most progressive of the middle-western states will be concerned with Employer's Liability, Industrial Safety and Temperance laws, while in the trans-Missouri states Mr. Bryan's Bank Deposit Guarantee idea will be considered, and in the South, temperance will have the center of the stage. Oklahoma's success with this insurance of depositors will force consideration in Kansas, Colorado and Nebraska. The Tennessee House has already passed a state-wide prohibition law and both Texas and Arkansas are expected to submit the proposition to a popular referendum. The fact that 30,000 die annually in the peaceful pursuits of industry while 2,000,000 are wounded, ought to make Industrial Safety and Employer's Liability laws a question as burning as a war issue. Many of the states will consider schemes to elect U. S. Senators by popular vote and in Ohio particularly the effort to obtain the Initiative and referendum will be vigorous. All these are measures for the common weal and challenge the interest of all who believe government exists for social welfare.

HOW THE RAILROADS FARED

We have heard much of the pitiful conditions of the railroads the past year and of how "adverse" legislation was making paupers of them. That ever-warning cry, "the workmen's wages," has sounded out to deter legislatures and those executives who have insisted that public servants such as our common carriers, owe allegiance to that same public whom they serve. The Interstate Commerce Commission rudely brushes the tear from our eyes in revealing the true state of railway earnings. They show in that the two years before the last were exceptional in railroad prosperity and that while there was a falling off the past year, there was yet a great increase over the average of previous years. In other words, that we must not judge the state of railway finance by taking the most plethoric years of their life as an irreducible minimum. They were less crowded with business last year and accidents were cut in two. It may be questioned by Christians whether or not some hundreds of lives saved and countless maimed and injured are not a slight recompense for reduced dividends, and also whether shorter hours and greater safety is not some compensation though trains must go a little slower, be a little less luxurious and earnings be so reduced that stock-watering is no longer a considerable source for railroad millions. People who are content to earn their bread by the sweat of their brow cannot really see the objection urged against putting the whole railroad business on a basis of actual investment and most of them will say a devout "amen" to the revolutionary demand of the Commission that when Mr. Harriman assumes control of both the Southern and the Union Pacific, two great competing transcontinental lines, he "can no longer claim the protection (of secrecy) which as a private citizen engaged in a strictly private pursuit he might insist upon." The reason it gives is that "if this gentleman is allowed to accumulate from the manipulation of these public agencies, vast sums of money which must finally come from the body of the people, we think he is so far a trustee of the people that he cannot object to stating the manner in which these accumulations have been made."

CHRISTIAN UNION ON THE MISSION FIELD

The "regions beyond" are leading the world in actual Christian Union. They are not prejudiced by our traditions and cradled in our creeds. The missionaries, howsoever sectarian when they go, are soon so overwhelmed with the need before them that they become one that the world may believe Christ was sent.

One of the most notable of late achievements is the founding of Chentu Union University in Western China by seven missions there, viz.: American Baptist, Canadian Baptist, Methodist, Friends (of England), London Missionary Society (Congregational), Church Missionary Society (Episcopalian), and the Chinese Inland Mission (Interdenominational). Both Western and Northern China have educational Unions. In Peking is the Union College of Theology and in Nanking the Disciple and Presbyterian colleges have united and it is expected the Methodist will soon join in the merger. In Calcutta the two great Presbyterian bodies of Scotland have united their schools under the name of Calcutta Christian College and going a step further have merged the work of all their missions in that city. Will it not follow as the day the dawn that the churches at home will follow? Everywhere the schools tend to get together and this means the education of a native ministry knowing more and more the one church of Christ only, and as they have in their hands the evangelization of the next generation and will mould the transition period from the missionary to the independent and self-supporting native church they will make of it the one church.

This is already illustrated in Japan where the churches of the Congregational and Presbyterian missions tend to get together as soon as they become self-supporting and the Kumai or Independent Movement is for one church of Christ in Japan. There the Presbyterian missions of all bodies have united under the title, Church of Christ in Japan. In Korea they have done likewise and also in North India while in South India the various Presbyterian bodies first united and the Congregational missions of the London Society and the American Board had merged interests and now these have joined in a union of the unions as the United Church of South India. In Japan the American and English missions are united and the various Methodist bodies have both joined forces and elected a native bishop.

The general movement received its greatest impetus in the great Shanghai Conference in celebration of the Morrison Centenary. It published to the world that they were "one in Christ," resolved to form both National and Provinsial councils many of the latter of which are already organized, engaged to try to prevent trenching upon one another's fields, and asked all the churches of China to pray every Lord's day for the unity of the church. What men pray for devoutly they soon attain. In India the Anglicans have met with all others in a General Missionary Conference. Japan has a Standing Committee of Co-operating Christian Missions, and it is planning for a jubilee celebration of missionary effort there this year. In Korea the Presbyterian and Methodist bodies have a General Council planning to create one church for all Korea which Dr. Dennis says is "the most unreserved approach toward a practical answer to our Lord's prayer for unity which has been presented in the annals of modern church history."

The Y. M. C. A. is a powerful factor for unity in the foreign field for it stands as a living realization of its working basis, organized as it is for Christ and the deed rather than for the Christ of a creed. It has eighty secretaries on the foreign field and ten thousand studying missions at home.

Robert Speer sounded a ringing note at the recent Federal Council of Churches in Philadelphia, when he said, "I believe it is far more important that the Presbyterians of Japan should relate themselves to the Methodists of Japan, than that either of these bodies should retain any connection whatever with any ecclesiastical organization in the United States."

Forty Years

With the close of 1908 Dr. J. H. Garrison completed forty years of service as an editor among the Disciples of Christ. This is an event of unusual character. In our times journalism is not sufficiently definite as a profession to enlist the life-long services of a large group of men. Most men, however expert in editing or publishing, especially in the field of a religious journalism, are more or less loosely attached to that task, and spend only a part of their lives in active relation to the paper. But Dr. Garrison has consistently maintained his place and has grown in the esteem and affection of the Disciples through all these years.

It is not too much to say that the Disciples of Christ have produced three men who successfully led the brotherhood toward the larger things of the Kingdom of God. These men have been Alexander Campbell, Isaac Errett, and J. H. Garrison. Each of these men has been chiefly an editor. It is not to be forgotten that their services rendered in other ways have been notable. Alexander Campbell was a debater and a preacher of great power and was for many years a college instructor. Isaac Errett was perhaps one of the most effective public speakers the Disciples have ever known. Dr. Garrison has been in great demand as a preacher during the whole period of his public work. And yet it is as editors that these three men have made their influence felt upon the lives of the Disciples of Christ.

If any one thinks that the course of religious journalism is smooth and easy it is highly probable that Dr. Garrison could disillusion such a dreamer. There were stormy days in the early times of the Christian-Evangelist. The great success and the wide-spread influence to which that journal has come in later years has been the result of the strong and vigorous purpose of its editor. Dr. Garrison has always maintained a mind open to the enlarging truth of the Kingdom of God. He has set his face to the future while maintaining the assured verities of our faith. If at times some of us have felt that his attitude was lacking in boldness and that he was hampered by elements of conservatism that threatened to diminish the value of the Evangelist as a strong and virile journal, we have also to remember that he has been as vigorously assailed by those who felt that he was radical and rash. Perhaps his success as a true leader of the Disciples has been in no small degree owing to his ability to sense an average opinion and to express that opinion in pleasing and brotherly fashion.

Dr. Garrison has led the Disciples past a number of side-paths into which they might easily have been diverted. He has kept to the open highway of New Testament teaching and has assisted in the formation of the right sort of sentiment not only by his weekly utterances through the columns of the Christian-Evangelist, but in those small volumes which he has dropped from time to time in the progress of his work. Among these such titles as, "Alone with God," "Helps to Faith," and "The Heavenward Way" are familiar. He has also edited two volumes, "The Faith Re-stated" and The Reformation of the Nineteenth Century," which have consisted of papers contributed by others.

During the past year a great deal of uneasiness has been felt by hosts of his friends owing to his long continued illness, with the suffering which it caused him. But it has been a joy of late to see him once more at his place, refreshed and apparently as vigorous as ever. No tolerance could be given for a moment to the suggestion that his work is approaching its end. Rather is he in position to render the most valuable service of his life in these days of reconstruction. We have had occasion to differ with Dr. Garrison at times over methods and interpretations, but never for a moment has there been any failure on our part to recognize his loyalty to the Scriptures and the Christ of whom they speak. We hope that these relations may continue for many years to come and that the Christian-Evangelist may continue to be a leading force in the brotherhood of the Disciples.

Religious Education and Social Duty

There is to be held in this city during February another of the great conventions of the Religious Education Association. These conventions have done more to bring together workers in the different fields of religious education and moral betterment than any other single force in the history of American Christianity.

The Convention returns to Chicago after an interval of six years. It was in this city that the first Convention was held, and great as was that gathering it is hoped that the approaching one may be of even greater significance. The sessions are to be held February 9, 10, and 11 in Orchestra Hall, in other nearby halls, and in churches in the vicinity of 22nd St. and Michigan Ave. The central theme of the Convention will be "Religious Education and Social Duty," and some of the most notable names in education and religious work will be upon the programme. Among others there will be President Francis G. Peabody, President Eliot of Harvard, President C. S. Mitchell, Professor Geo. A. Coe, President King, Miss Jane Addams, Professor Charles R. Henderson and Bishop Lawrence.

The principal sessions are to be held in the Theodore Thomas Orchestra Hall on Michigan Avenue, and the departmental sessions will meet in neighboring halls and churches. While the open meetings will be of interest because of the greatness of the themes discussed, such as the "Social Consciousness and the Religious Life," the "Annual Survey" of progress in religious education, the "Ethics of Industrialism," the "Reaction of Modern Life upon Religious Development," and "Religious Training in the Modern World," the departmental meetings will be of almost equally interesting character.

These departments include Universities and Colleges, secondary schools, fraternal organizations, correspondence associations, young people's societies, the home, the Sunday-school, public libraries, art and music, and churches and pastors. Chicago has entertained nearly four hundred conventions during the past year, but not one of them has been of greater moment to the city and country than will be this approaching gathering.

Many ministers and teachers from among the Disciples will be present. All who can possibly arrange to attend the Convention should do so. As far as possible the visiting delegates will be accommodated either in private homes or in hotels at special rates. The Lexington Hotel at Michigan Ave. and 22d St. will be the hotel headquarters. All delegates will be registered there upon arrival. Most of the departmental meetings will be convenient to this hotel.

Those who are desirous of securing information regarding entertainment, programme, or any other features of the Convention may do so by addressing the Religious Education Association, 72 East Madison Street, Chicago. On request, bulletin of programme and arrangements will be sent to any inquirer.

The Pioneers and Foreign Missions

As we turn our eyes toward the March Offering for Foreign Missions this Centennial year, it is altogether fitting that we recall the attitude and temper of the pioneers of the Restoration on the absorbing question of the world's evangelization. The following excerpts are only samples of many of the same tenor that might be quoted. A consuming passion for the spread of the gospel among all men took complete possession of them. If our people should lose that temper, it will be the beginning of the end with us. This fact should be continually emphasized in all our churches.

"Let all Christians, therefore, unite in prayer, that God would send forth faithful laborers into his harvest; that the word of the Lord may have free course and be glorified; that his Spirit may be poured out upon his ministers and people; that through them he may 'reprove the world of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment.' That he would collect and unite into one his scattered flock, that the whole world may believe in Christ the Savior of sinners."

Barton W. Stone.

"The diffusive benevolence of Christianity is nowhere more strikingly exemplified than in the establishment of Foreign Missions.

"This missionary enterprise is, by universal concession, as well as by the oracles of God, the grand work of the age; the grand duty, privilege, and honor of the church of the nineteenth century.

"We shall do more at home by doing something abroad. If the apostles had continued in Jerusalem until all its citizens were converted, they never would have planted a church in Samaria nor anywhere else."

Alexander Campbell.

"Christs's soldiers are like him. They love one another as he loved them. His mission was to save a lost and ruined world, and in obedience to his mandate, it is their delight to lift his banner to the heavens and bear it to the earth's remotest bounds. They ask no furlough until Ethiopia shall stretch forth her hands to God and all the Islands of the Sea rejoice.

John T. Johnson.

"What a splendid field for holy enterprise was laid open to the apostles when Jesus said to them: 'Go ye into all the world, proclaim the glad tidings to the whole creation.' Before his death and while they aided him in his personal mission, the commandment was 'Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of Samaritans, enter ye not'; but now, having consummated his mission, and arisen from the dead, the sphere of their mission was to be extended to the utmost bounds of the habitable world. 'Go ye into all the world!' Great was the field, and we do not read that these illustrious ministers, who alone enjoyed the distinction of being ambassadors instead of Christ, ever addressed to angels or demons the word of reconciliation. Their mission was glorious and extensive, but it was limited to the children of men, and like their Master, they discovered no desire to transcend the limits to which, in his instructions, he had restricted them."

Walter Scott.

Let us remind ourselves that our plea is essentially a missionary movement. Our slogan for the March Offering should be: An offering from every church; a gift from every member. Please order March Offering Supplies today. Do it now lest you forget.

Remember March 7th!

Paragraphic Editorials

The Foreign Society is just in receipt of another Annuity gift, amounting to $2,000, from a friend of the work. This friend formerly gave $10,000. This gift swells his benefaction to $12,000. He is a consecrated, level-headed, business man, with a high appreciation of the safety and value of the Annuity Fund of the Foreign Society. All the indications point to a large increase in the number and the amount of Annuity gifts for Foreign Missions for this Centennial year. Two friends are considering a gift of $5,000 each.

Dr. Royal J. Dye reports fifty more baptisms at Bolenge, Africa. Some of these came as far as 250 miles up the main Bosira River, and others came as far as 200 miles. The great need for the work in the Congo is a steamer, to enable the missionaries to go from point to point. A new station has been granted our Foreign Society by the State authorities at Longa, 100 miles beyond Bolenge, up the Bosira River.

The articles by Burris A. Jenkins and Vernon Stauffer printed in our last two issues, were portions of their respective papers at the Triangular Congress of the Baptists, Free Baptists and Disciples in Chicago in November. They are typical of the temper of the speeches at that significant gathering and should whet the appetite of our readers to possess the published "Proceedings" of the Congress which form a volume of rare interest. This book is just off the press. The contents are as follows:

I. Does the New Testament Contemplate the Church as an Institution?—Prof. John A. Logan, Rev. A. W. Fortune, Rev. W. B. Wallace, Prof. Shirley J. Case.

II. Addresses of Welcome—President Harry Pratt Judson, Rt. Rev. Samuel Fallows.

Response—Rev. John L. Jackson.

III. What are the Legitimate Limits of Free Speech in a Republic?—Hon. Wallace Heckman, Prof. James Q. Dealey, Rev. Bayard Craig, Rev. C. D. Case.

IV. The Doctrine of Atonement in Terms of Modern Thought—Rev. B. A. Jenkins, Rev. Frederick Lent, Prof. Leroy Waterman, Prof. Allan Hoben.

V. What Definite Steps Should be Immediately Taken in the Organic Union of Baptists, Free Baptists, and Disciples of Christ?—Rev. I. J. Spencer, Rev. L. A. Crandall.

VI. Is Psycho-Therapeutics a Function of the Church?—Rev. Robert, MacDonald, Rev. J. Stanley Durkee, Rev. Allan B. Philputt, Rev. Rufus P. Johnston.

VII. Christ's Prayer for Unity—Rev. A. W. Jefferson, Rev. Vernon Stauffer, Rev Henry M. Sanders.

VIII. Closing Words—President's closing address, Rev. W. C. Bitting, Prof. Errett Gates.

Proceedings of the Baptist Congress at Chicago, 1908. The University of Chicago Press, postpaid 59 cents.

The students and faculties of the University of Chicago as well as many others very greatly enjoyed last week the presence and utterance of Professor A. Williams Jackson, Ph. D., of Columbia University, who delivered a course of six lectures on the Religion of Persia. These lectures began with a general statement regarding Persia and its ancient books. The second lecture was devoted to Zoroaster, one of the great religious teachers of the east. The remainder of the lectures were given to Zoroastrianism, Mithraism, Manichaeism, and Mazdakism. These lectures were particularly interesting as bearing not only upon the relations of Israel to the ancient Persian faith, but also as noting the influence of certain of these doctrines upon the early church, notable in the case of Manichaeism. Professor Jackson is probably the greatest American authority on the religion of Persia, and his scholarly and yet popular presentation of his theme greatly pleased and instructed his hearers.

The fifth annual conference on Child Labor, under the auspices of the National Child Labor Committee is being held in Chicago this week, the day sessions at the Auditorium Hotel and evening sessions at Orchestra Hall. Prominet workers in this field of social service from many parts of the country are on the program, and such themes as The Child and the Law, Child Labor in the Ohio Valley, Child Labor and the Public Welfare, The Federal Children's Bureau, and Types of Working Children. are being discussed.

The contribution on Yuan Shih Kai, by Dr. Paul Wakefield, will be read with interest by all who have gained so much as a taste of things Oriental in the past few years. Dr. Wakefield was a missionary in China until a year ago and had occasion to study Chinese conditions at close range. Since coming home he has kept in touch with doings in that land through regular reading of Chinese newspapers. He suggests three available books, "China and America Today," by Arthur Smith; "The Coming Struggle in Eastern Asia." by Putnam Weale, and 'Tomorrow in the Orient," by Douglas Storey.

Next week it is our purpose to send the Christian Century for the fourth time to all the ministers of the Brotherhood. The Department of Biblical Problems will contain a communication from Z. T. Sweeney, which we have been saving for this issue that it and Professor Willett's response might be read as widely as possible. This we know will gratify the group of brethren who have collaborated with Mr. Sweeney in preparing his contribution and who have shown through correspondence with us and in the columns of a contemporary paper that they were a bit fearful their literary effort would go to the waste-basket. We confess to being somewhat puzzled, however, in spite of our firm purpose to risk our Biblical Problems Editor in a further encounter with the giant. The Christian Standard insists in one issue that a man's opinions on matters of philosophy may be what he wills, but let him hold them in private. If he speaks, let him speak only of his faith and not of his opinions. But Mr. Sweeney insists on Mr. Willett's pronouncement of opinion. The Standard taunts him because he has not yet published his opinion in reply to Mr. Sweeney. Doesn't this look like baiting a man to do what you know is wrong for him to do? Really our Biblical Problems Editor would like to obey the Standard, but if he obeys the Standard of January 16, he falls under condemnation of the Standard of January 9! It is a hard position! Anyhow, Mr. Sweeney's communication will be responded to next week.

Professor J. W. McGarvey in a recent number of the Christian Standard complains of a statement made in the Christian Century last fall that he held a doubtful opinion of the canonicity of the Song of Solomon. We received a denial of this position from Prof. McGarvey. We wrote him that before correction was made in the Century concerning his present views, we would like the privilege of looking up his public utterances on the question and asked him where we might find such utterances. This information he refused to give and continued to demand the correction in the Century. Press of other duties has made us slow in publishing what Prof. McGarvey really said. This we do now, quoting from his "Guide to Bible Study," in the Bethany Reading Course, a series of books for young people of the Christian Endeavor Society, on page 76:

"The title which the short poem assigns itself is 'The Song of Songs, which is Solomon's.' If there be any book in the Bible which found a place in it by a mistake or a misjudgment of those who put the inspired book together, it must be this; for it is so totally unlike all the rest that it is difficult to see what connection it can have with the general design of the whole. Many interpreters have affected to find in it a parabolic meaning, and even a foreshadowing of the love of the Church for Christ; while others have regarded it as nothing more than a love song with a very obscure connection of thought. According to either view, it has afforded little edification to the great majority of Bible readers; and unless some significance can be found in it hereafter which has not yet been pointed out, it will continue to be but little read, and of but little practical value."

Below this statement is a note by Dr. Willett who worked with Professor McGarvey on the book stating his view of the matter, and expressing a belief that the book had a useful message for the present age.

We have four good things to congratulate our readers on this week. First, that we are about to begin a superb serial story by Harold Bindloss entitled "Winston of the Prairies." Mr. Bindloss is the author of the "Cattle Baron's Daughter." Second, we have "annexed" Rev. Burris A. Jenkins, of Kansas City, to our contributorial staff. He is only giving a bit of an appetizer this week. The title under which his article will appear "The Gate of the West," gives him room to write significant news from Kansas City, or to make a contribution to any subject he is prompted to undertake. Third, Rev. Richard W. Gentry, of Chicago, one of our younger writers, will begin to write suggesively on the Christian Endeavor topic, keeping company with Professors Jones and Willett in their articles on prayer-meeting and Sunday-school. Fourth, Mr. Nicholas Vachel Lindsay has put into our keeping certain literary treasures such as the Outlook is now printing from his pen. These we shall purvey to our readers as fast as space will allow. Certainly the character of material going into the Christian Century promises to make it not only a reflector but a leader of sentiment and taste among the Disciples of Christ. That it shall be this, at any rate, is our desire and prayer.

Yuan Shih Kai

By Paul Wakefield, M.D.

There was strife in the Royal Palace. The "Son of Heaven" (Kuang Su) had gained control of affairs and put into effect numerous reform measures, setting aside the "Customs of the Ancients," and threatening the whole corrupt political machine at Pekin. The ministers were in terror. Should the Emperor go further, they would probably be ousted, or executed. Appeal was made to the Head Eunuch, (the most crafty politician) to save them. Alas, he was madly trying to save himself! The Empress was powerless. The army was out of her hand. But the Empress, above everything else, was a politician, and won every fight of any account she went into. So—we shall see.

In the Province of Chili, there was an ambitious young military officer named Yuan Shih Kai, who very strangely had used the military tax coming into his hand honestly, to build up his army. It seemed a foolish thing to do, but Yuan Shih Kai saw far. In a few years, by aid of German officers and foreign guns, he had built up a small army of really efficient fighting men. A small army, yet, without doubt, his army could withstand the Imperial thousands.

In the crisis, the Empress and Emperor as well, rushed to our petty officer of Chili, and from that day till the death of the Empress, Yuan Shih Kai ruled China.

There have been many books written upon the choice of Yuan Shih Kai. No one but Yuan can solve the puzzle. That is the way with Chinese puzzles. There is no solution. Your house servant will tell you he can tell what a foreigner will do in a given case. No Chinaman would be so foolish as to attempt to guess what a Chinaman will do!

However, the case is like this: Yuan Shih Kai, the ardent reform military man, chose to aid the Empress who was ever reactionary, and placed the reform Emperor in such position that he gave up his title and virtually became state prisoner. The best explanation of this action I have seen is this: The Emperor while a reformer, was not a wise or tactful man. He was going too fast, too far, and was in danger of wrecking all reform, Yuan may have felt he could not hold the Emperor in check. The Emperor moreover, who was then in control, was apt to hold highest place, putting Yuan under him. Soon His Highness might be able to utterly oust him. On the other hand, the Empress in her dire need must have Yuan, or perish. She must pay any price to get his aid. By taking her side, Yuan Shih Kai could and did, name the terms. He became the ruler, and from the day he chose this course, Yuan Shih Kai has ruled China. A treaty to be signed, a contract to be let, must be taken to Tien

Tsin to be read, signed and sealed by His Excellence Yuan, now a viceroy.

He pushed reforms. Not so madly as did Emperor Kuang Su, but with much more force. He was opposed bitterly by the old order, but he pushed and the Empress backed him up. Every trick was played. One example—Civil Service based upon western learning was introduced. This meant death to the old ring. They fought madly. Finally there began to be an agitation throughout all the Empire for the revival of Confucianism, a patriotic appeal for things Chinese.

At the climax of the excitement a memorial was presented to the Throne, asking that Confucious be made a god! This would mean reaction. This would mean a return to the classics, and an utter sweeping away of all reform. The prejudice of the people, the excitement of the agitation, gave the Reactionaries, so skillfully worked up, great force. No political campaign was ever better managed. A misstep meant the utter destruction of Yuan. He made no misstep. Calling to the scholars of the Empire, he bade them give witness that in all his teachings, Confucius claimed the honor of being an ordinary man. Further, he distinctly forbade his disciples paying him any special honor. They should honor their ancestors, not him. Then turning upon the Reactionaries, he denounced them as ignorant, the greatest of Chinese crimes, and therefore utterly unworthy of place or honor, and demanded and obtained their immediate removal for so insulting the memory of Confucius.

From that day no one has questioned Yuan's power. He became the idol of the Chinese, he being Chinaman not Manchu. Until, an evil day, a bond issue was sold for building a railway, to the English, when Chinese capitalists wanted to own the road themselves. For the Chinese see plainly, they must own and control their railroads, mines and factories, or become slaves to other nations.

We who do not know the history of Christian commerce and finance in the Orient cannot understand how foreign powers and foreign business methods are hated! Maybe it will be enough to tell you that Yuan, the Chinaman, the hero, became Yuan the outcast, the traitor. College boys, who formerly made him their hero, spoke of him as the hope of China, now look the other way when his name is mentioned, and if you are lucky enough to have a real friend among them, he will tell you in a voice you will not misunderstand that when the time comes, and the opportunity, Yuan Shih Kai will die!

But we must remember Yuan has been hard pressed before this. When ordered to proceed against the foreign army at the time of the Boxer trouble, he "proceeded" a mile a day. Thus he obeyed the Empress and was wisely cautious, and he who has befriended the foreigner, has tremendous backing not only from England, but from every country including the United States.

It would at present be very unwise and unsafe for Yuan to die, and he has a way of keeping very quiet until he chooses to act. With the Reactionaries who sought the godship of Confucius he said nothing and made no move for weeks. They, to all appearances, had him killed, when suddenly they found they had put the ropes around their own heads and Yuan sprung the trap so quickly that all the hangmen were hanged, and he stepped forth with power he never held before, capturing the applause and approval of those who came to rejoice in his death.

So, it will be well to wait and watch. As long as Yuan Shih Kai lives and thinks, he will be worth watching. It is the fascination of a Chinese puzzle that "presently we shall see what we shall see!"

Spiritual Dangers of the Minister

By H. D. C. Maclachlan

II. DOGMATISM

Another spiritual danger of the minister is dogmatism. Dogmatism is a disease of truth. It is truth stall-fed and apoplectic. It is the theoretic side of prejudice. It is found in all callings that have to do with truth. Even science has its dogmatists. Rousseau complained truly enough that if scientific men have perhaps fewer prejudices than other people, they make up for this by holding all the more tenaciously to those they do have. Even liberalism may grow dogmatic when it gets prosperous.

Of all callings, however, that of the minister is, perhaps, most exposed to this danger. It needs a large supply of grace to wholly withstand it. For, to begin with, there is a sense in which the true minister must be dogmatic. His peculiar relation to truth on the one hand and to life on the other, demands it. This may be brought out by the contrast between the preacher and the scientist. Both are the servants of truth; but the scientist seeks truth for truth's sake, the preacher seeks it for life's sake. The scientist is concerned with facts, the preacher with values. The scientist is a man with a question, the preacher is a man with a message. The scientist deals in experiments, the preacher in results. The scientist moves in the realm of opinion, the preacher in that of conviction. To this extent the preacher must be a dogmatist. The truth he declares is that of inner experience, not outer experiment; and he who would be a prophet to his generation, may have no clouds of doubt drifting across the face of his sun. He must be able to say: "I know in whom I have believed."

Moreover, the needs of his people demand a certain dogmatism. Men do not come to church to hear arguments, or criticism, or apologetics, but to have the truth of spiritual experience applied to their daily lives. The man who is in the grip of a horrible temptation, has no time to listen to nicely balanced arguments as to how God answers prayer. He must be told God does answer it, and be sent away to pray. The man whose loved one has just been laid away in the cold earth, does not want immortality discussed: he needs to have it asserted as the immutable truth of God. The hungry need bread, not the chemical formula of foodstuffs. The thirsty need water, not a learned elucidation of H2 O. Faith is not aroused by argument, still less by criticism, but by live coals from off the altar of conviction.

Thus far every true preacher must be dogmatic. Yet he must not be a dogmatist. And he becomes a dogmatist whenever he strikes the note of infallibility in matters that belong to the region of inquiry and research, rather than of personal conviction. Just here lies the subtility of his temptation. The dividing line between conviction and dogmatism is so thin that most of us glide over it insensibly. From the spiritual fact we easily pass to the theological theory and give each the same note of infallibility. We demand the same certainty for our theory of the atonement that we have for the fact of it. We want to be omniscient. We want to play the eavesdropper in the councils of eternity. We want to make everybody subscribe to the infallible system. We want to compel all men to see through our spectacles and call our special refraction of the light the very sun itself. Thus we place opinion on the throne of conviction and become dogmatists.

Now the sin of dogmatism is three-fold. To begin with, it is the suicide of truth. It is an enlargement of the head, just as fanaticism is an enlargement of the heart. Men do not grow bigger by putting on more clothes; neither does truth become larger by the accretions of dogma. I once saw in a hymn book the statement that the theology of John Wesley was embalmed in its pages. That was an unwitting criticism of dogma. Dogma is "embalmed" truth. The dogmatist is the undertaker, and the spirit of infallibility the embalming fluid.

Dogma easily becomes blasphemy.

There comes a time when it straightjackets even God. It is related in the Talmud that there arose a dispute in heaven, between God and the angels about leprosy. The soul of a Rabbi was called in to settle it and decided on the side of the angels.

Deeper than the hurt to truth, is the hurt to sincerity. It is hard for the dogmatist to be intellectually sincere. The intellectually sincere man stands ready to overthrow any system at the call of a single verified fact. But the dogmatist makes puppets of all his facts. He is a wire-puller. Since the truth must be such-and-such, a little twisting of facts or changing of emphasis matters very little. The result is a lowering of the whole intellectual tone. The truth lover becomes a partisan. The end justifies the means. True, this is not done consciously, but it is the very unconsciousness of the thing that constitutes its greatest danger. "Ye know not what spirit ye are of," was one of Christ's severest rebukes to His disciples.

But the most serious indictment of the dogmatic spirit, and that which constitutes it most literally a spiritual danger, is that it is the enemy of love. It arms truth against love. It is anti-social. The evangelist is social He has a passion for souls. He craves company. He must people heaven, but the dogmatist is not social. At heart he does not care for the conversion of others: he only cares that he shall be left in possession of the logical field. Heaven may be a desert for all he cares. He would depopulate the universe, if necessary, to vindicate his system. He would "make a solitude and call it"—truth. Even helpless infancy would not be spared, as the dogma of infant damnation shows.

Persecution is the logic of dogmatism. Intolerance, vindictiveness, insincerity become virtues in that loveless world. "Faith need not be kept with heretics." Crusades are more religious than missions; polemics than evangelism; uncharitableness than the "love that thinketh no evil."

Let us, therefore, beware how we divorce love from truth. "If I have all knowledge, and have not love, I am nothing." What God has joined together let no man put asunder.

An Introduction.

Harry was walking with another boy, when he was joined by a friend, a year or so older and inclined to manners.

"Introduce me, Harry," the new-comer whispered pompously.

Harry twisted, reddened, and at last turned to his companion with: "Jim, have you ever seen Gilbert Spencer?"

"No," the other boy answered.

"Well," Harry blurted out, reddening still more, and jerking one thumb over his shoulder towards the new-comer, "that's him."—January Lippincott's.

Past History a Lesson for the Hour

By Clark Braden

From 1865 to 1872 an earnest controversy over the question, "What measures, what actions have Scriptural authority?" agitated our Brotherhood. In a convention in DeSoto, southern Illinois, in the summer of 1866, the writer criticized what was the almost universal position of our Brotherhood. For more than a year there was earnest discussion. "The Herald of the Truth," Jacob Creath and others insisted that the writer be deposed from the presidency of Southern Illinois College, for heresy, and Creath presented charges against the writer to the congregation in Carbondale, insisting that the writer be expelled for heresy. In 1870, in the Ministerial Association in Abingdon, the writer presented his views. They were violently assailed, the writer bitterly denounced. In the American Christian Review B. Franklin dubbed the writer "the Beecher of the Reformation," and declared that not one-third of the pulpits in Illinois would hear to him.

The heresy of the writer was the claim that Scriptural authority should not be demanded for everything connected with religion. Scriptural authority should be demanded only for what the Scriptures clearly taught as matters of religious faith, worship, practice, duty. No Scriptural authority should be demanded for mere opinions, methods, aids, means, instrumentalities, expedients, used in living religious faith, worship, practice, duty. I know that it will be doubted that such position was ever regarded as a monstrous heresy, but years of bitter experience taught the writer that it was so regarded. In a Ministerial Association in Normal, in 1877, the writer enumerated the heresies so violently assailed in Abingdon in 1870, and challenged all former assailants present to specify one that they would assail, one that they were not then advocating. It was amusing to see the almost silly attempted smile with which the challenge was met in profound silence by former assailants.

In 1871, in a debate with R. N. Davies, in State Line, Indiana, the writer stated that we understand and believe that the Bible teaches certain things like all others; that we preach and teach what we believe the Bible teaches like all others; that we invite persons to unite with us because they believe that the Bible teaches what we believe the Bible teaches like all others; that we make it uncomfortable, impossible for persons who do not believe that the Bible teaches what we believe the Bible teaches, to remain with us like all others. In each and all of these meanings of the word creed we have a creed the same as all others. The only difference is freedom to use the Bible itself, appeal to the Bible where others used human opinions, where the Bible should be used, and as the Bible should be used. There were about thirty preachers present, who, after an indignation caucus, demanded that the writer be silenced and discarded, "because he misrepresented the cause and the Brotherhood." The official board of the church sustained the debater. At the close, preachers apologized and confessed that the debater's position was correct.

In a meeting of the Illinois Ministerial Association, in 1872, in Eureka, the writer took the position that all who believed that the Bible contained a revelation from God, and that Jesus was the Christ, the only begotten Son of God, and realized in their lives these two great beliefs, were Christians, and that we should treat them as such, though errors did make them Christians in error. The writer was told by one who was then state secretary of Illinois that he had no business to pretend to belong to the Brotherhood, and should go to the "sects" where he belonged; and the language was applauded by some. In 1870, in a convention of the Southern Ministerial Association and Ministerial Association in Du Quoin, the writer made the same statement and the secretary of the association used identical language. Were not such statements, was not such treatment identical with what is manifested now? Are they Christians?

In 1878 the writer, as a member of a committee, tried to find someone to lecture for the Ministerial Association in Eureka on "The Inspiration of the Bible." In declining, Isaac Errett said he dare not state what he knew to be true. The other members of the committee compelled the writer to deliver the lecture in which the writer insisted that such utterly untenable a priori assumptuous, as plenacy verbal inspiration, the absolute inerrancy of the text, and the inspiration and consequent inerrancy of all speaker's acts, writers of the language of the Bible, should be discarded. The questions should be, "What does the Bible itself, in fair expression or implication, claim for the acts, utterances, writings on its pages?" That only what the Bible presented as the acts, utterances, riting, of Divine Beings, angels, men that the Bible declared were inspired in such acts and utterances, should be regarded as inspired. That only such acts and utterances and those of which inspiration expressly approved, should be regarded as inculcations of the Bible.

At the close of the lecture the meeting house resembled a beehive into which a stick had been thrust. The writer said to assailants, "Ten years from now not one of you will think of questioning what you now assail." The writer has the MSS. he read, and not a critic now living, even the most violent, will assail a position then so violently assailed. Many have gone far beyond the most extreme positions of the lecture. The writer had to hurry from the pulpit to the deathbed of his wife. He has been told by one who said that he was a member of such committee, that a committee prepared resolutions denouncing the lecture, and censuring the lecturer; and that only the death of his wife saved the writer from such action. The writer is ready to read the same MSS. to all who so violently assailed it in 1878. They will not only be ashamed of the proposed resolutions, but also of their assaults on the lecture. All accept them now. Some have gone far beyond them.

The writer need not point out the moral or its present application. He would suggest to all parties certain practical considerations. As president of a school, the writer has had persons lecture to the school that he would not have employed to teach the same topics. He wanted students to hear all sides. As overseer of congregations and as preacher for congregations he has had persons preach and lecture to congregations that he would not have employed to preach regularly to the congregations. He wished the congregations to hear all sides, and a discussion of all sides. He is in favor of such a course in all instances where truth has an equal showing with error. He does object to allowing teachers or preachers to teach error where the antidote is absent.

Is it true that in all conventions of the past no one has ever been allowed to speak whose views did not harmonize with the views of the majority in the convention, that a considerable element of the convention did not accept as true? Is the fact that one speaks to a convention, in any sense an endorsement of all of his views? Or of any of them? By the audience? Or officers of the conventions? It has ever been our boast that we have a free platform, free pulpits. That we hear on all sides, expose, refute, error, and secure a triumph for the truth. Would it not be well to continue such course?

The Gates of the West

By Burris A. Jenkins

You have asked me to write a line now and then for your paper, Mr. Editor, your blood be upon your own head.

I begin with a prescription for the soreness in the head, and possibly heart, symptoms of which have been appearing once and again in our Christian papers. One has prescribed "To Our Knees." Let me set this beside it: "To the Open Air." Some of us have been living so much in the office, the study, or the sanctum that our brains are cobwebbed and moth-eaten, and possibly even out hearts are sheep-skinned. Let's get out of doors. Air is a wonderful sweetener and disinfectant. Trees are great preachers; grasses and flowers, great singers; and waters powerful in prayer.

Now, Brother Theologue, please don't inject a dry-as-dust stream into this pastoral of mine, and declare that that last sentence in that last paragraph is all mysticism, smacks even of pantheism, or is at best all tommyrot. Granted anyhow. Still lots of people believe it is so. They had found it "function serviceably." Suppose you try it once. Personally, I have always believed it so, in a measure, but had no idea how profoundly true, until during the last two years or so, I have been taking this prescription for body and soul. Pardon the personality, but what is testimonial to a prescription worth if not given in the first person?

And I have wondered, time and again, as I have read the writings of our good brother, who dips his pen in gall and stabs it into another brother equally good, or rather, as I have turned away, unable to bear the sight, I have wondered, I say, whether Brother Horatio Pen-of-gall ever sat by a marshy lake at sun-up, watching God's colors spread fanwise to the deep purple zenith, too absorbed even to fire his gun, as the mallards came tumbling out of the blue to his decoys. I have wondered whether he ever waded by a stream-side, lashing its waters for the speckled trout, listening to its bickering, entranced by its sparkling.

Now Brother Horatio, please don't cry out about the cruelty of shooting and angling. Hang it all, why will you be argumentative? Can't you smile once, and breathe the woods' breath? Can't you find sermons in stones, books in the running brooks, and good in everything? I maintain, pantheism or not, that part of God's message to us comes from his out-of-doors, and you, Brother Horatio Pen-gall, if it does not come to you, I fear it is because it can be said of you as of a certain Peter, (not Simon) and for similar reasons:

"A primrose by the river's brim
A yellow primrose was to him,
And nothing more."

Now then, since it has been suggested that a council of representative brethren should "sit on" this controversy, let them be heavy men, let us apply the prescription and if they sit this winter, let them sit on the shores of the Gulf of Mexico, with rods and guns and cameras, and a camp outfit. It verily makes me laugh, God wot! To think of Brother Pengall in khaki breeches, leggings, cap and shooting coat. Maybe it would make others laugh, even himself. If so, then the fight's half over! But if they sit next summer, let it be on the shores of Northern lake or the side of Northern mountain, where mayhap, they can see Governor 'Gus Wilson, "Billy" Taft, or "John D." himself, in knickerbockers knocking a golf-ball.

Such knocking knocks out knocking. But Brother Pengall is frowning heavily at such levity. I see him now, Oh, well, I give up! I did not expect the prescription to be taken seriously, though in heaven's name, I mean it seriously enough.

Alexander Proctor once, here at the gates of the west, was pruning his vines and weeding his flowers on a Saturday, when a gall-vizaged seventh day adventist, with a limp-back Bible under his arm, limped up and began to argue with the great seer, saying: "I'm afraid you'll never go to heaven, brother, working here on the Sabbath day."

"I'm in heaven now," smiled the sage, "I'm in heaven now."

And there are more things in those four words than are dreamt of in your philosophy, Horatio Pengall.

CHRISTMAS ON THE RED SEA.

By H. T. Morrison.

Christmas on the Red Sea is an event in one's life that does not often occur. It was, however, an experience the writer had in his homeward trip from Australia to Egypt two days ago. Considerable preparation was made in various ways on our good ship Ophir of the Oriental-Royal Mail Line, to make the day not only a joyful one, but one long to be remembered by all the passengers on board. The bill of fare at all the meals in three saloons was about all that one could expect in the best hotels on shore. And the dinner at night, served in courses, was superb.

At 11 a. m., a Christmas Anglican service was read by an English officer who was among the passengers, Captain Seeley of the Ophir being a Roman Catholic, and, therefore, not qualified to preside at such a service. The stewards had beautifully decorated our saloon, even to the point of representing snow and a snow-storm. This was done by a liberal use of cotton batting picked into small pieces and tied in various forms. The snow, however, did not serve to cool the atmosphere very much, for a good part of the day we found the heat above ninety degrees in the shade.

These ocean-going steamers have a bar for each of the three passenger saloons, at which all kinds of liquor can be procured day and night, and on Christmas they were most liberally patronized—especially by many of the third-class passengers. At ten o'clock, on looking in for a short time, I found many of them much under the influence of liquor, and yelling around the bar like a lot of mad-men. It was most manifest that we had on board a large class that were moving on a very low plane. And yet our passenger list is considerably under a hundred—about the smallest ever known in one of the ships of this line. Christianity is rather at a discount with many of those on board. Most likely those who make any pretensions to being Christians could be counted on the fingers of one's two hands. With the most of them Christmas has no higher meaning than that of feasting, drinking and having what so many people call "a good time."

There is no better place to find out what men and women are than during a voyage in one of these ocean-going steamers. The other evening, while in conversation with an officer of high standing, who has spent years in the service, he told me that it was most amazing to witness how people who bear good characters on shore would let themselves down when once they found themselves in the crowd on shipboard.

I sailed from Perth, Western Australia, December 7, and disembark at Port Said tomorrow for my tour in Egypt. The only place of call during the twenty days was at Colombo, Ceylon. Twelve hours were spent there seeing the city and the American fleet which was still there on its return trip from the far East. We felt the heat at Colombo more than we did on any other part of the entire trip. This is the time of year for comfort in these waters. I have enjoyed every hour of the entire trip. I have not been sick an hour nor missed a meal.

These notes are written on the Gulf of Suez, a few hours sail from where the Israelites crossed the sea. We reach Suez some time this evening, and pass through the canal at night. Today is the third Sunday we have had since leaving Australia. I have attended Anglican service four times and preached two Sunday evenings to those on board.

NOTE FROM PROFESSOR M'GARVEY

Editors of the Christian Century: In your issue of December 26, 1908, page eleven, I find an article over the signature of H. M. Brooks, Seymour, Texas, beginning with the following lines:

I am satisfied that the department of "Biblical Criticism," as conducted by J. W. McGarvey, in the Christian Standard, does an injustice to the Christian Church for the following reasons:

First. He persists in making tests of fellowship of things that are neither commanded nor prohibited by Jesus or any of the New Testament writers.

Second. He makes a test of fellowship of things that no man knows or can know in this life. As an illustration, the chronological order of the books of the Old Testament is a thing that neither McGarvey nor any other man knows. Nor is it essential that any one should know.

Third. He makes a test of fellowship of the mysterious relationship of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit, a thing that he knows no more about than ordinary mortals, a thing that each and every man must settle for himself.

Had these statements been written and published for readers familiar with my contributions to the Christian Standard, I would have no need to refer to them, but inasmuch as many of your readers know little or nothing of what I have written for that paper, and will be inclined to believe what H. M. Brooks thus charges if it goes uncontradicted, I solicit the privilege of saying through your columns that I have never proposed any of the tests of fellowship which he names.

J. W. McGarvey.

THE OTHER HALF OF THE TRUTH.

By W. L. Hayden.

Since the Christian Standard of January 2, 1909, concedes the "Half-Truth," why not make a clean breast of it and concede the other half of the truth at once and so end this inexcusable controversy over the centennial program precipitated by its lack of discernment.

proval and endorsement of "Campbell's bi-

The principle stated by Dr. Richardson involved in the Raines case cited with apographer," covers the other half-truth. His statement is, "There should be no contention henceforth in regard to opinions of men however wise and learned. Whatever private opinions might be entertained upon matters not clearly revealed, must be retained in silence, and no effort must be made to impose them upon others."

Evidently Dr. Richardson did not mean that there should be no courteous and complete discussion of opinions on proper occasions, for if so, the pioneers were "the chief of sinners" in this regard. He explains the retaining them in silence to mean "no effort must be made to impose them upon others." That is, they must not be made tests of fellowship or occasions of unbrotherly contention.

The violation of this principle is the cause of the current controversy and the responsibility must finally rest upon the violator who is misleading good brethren that are protesting without reason or justice. Let us kindly turn on the light.

THE PASSING OF "WILLETTISM"

Edwin C. Boynton

A sample copy of a notorious journal has fallen into my hands, containing a lengthy protest from a contributor against "Willettism," and repeating the offered solution of peace by silence on the part of Mr. Willett. The "Century" feels that the personal phase of the controversy has passed, and I hope does so correctly. For Prof. Willett to resign from the Centennial program would be so grevious a mistake that one could almost say "to falter would be sin." Let us hope his resolution is fixed to vindicate at Pittsburg in the freedom of a disciple "the lordship of Jesus." But I feel the force of the "Century's" contention that beyond the personal focus lies the area of the general right of disciples. "Willettism" being a closed incident, who is to be the next victim of innuendo and misrepresentation? It is no time to clamor for an impossible peace purchased by ignoble surrender to petty despots. To those who would spy out our liberty let us give place no, not for one hour. I commend most heartily the program of the Century.

Huntsville, Texas.

We should so plan and work the Centennial propaganda that 1910 shall be greater than 1909. Only fundamentals should claim our attention. Missions is the one thing that gives excuse for and direction to every activity of the church.

CORRESPONDENCE ON THE RELIGIOUS LIFE

By George A. Campbell

A Minister's Books

The Correspondent:—"Will you not give a list of books that will be helpful to a preacher in his ordinary work. We need the books that will inspire us and thus keep us going. When I was in college Prof. ——— recommended to me a set of commentaries which I bought; but from which I have never received any good. I would be glad to let any one have them to whom they might be of service."

I will be glad to furnish the address of "The Correspondent" to any one who cares to write him as to his set of commentaries.

How can I suggest a list of books that will "inspire" a man in the routine of his daily task? The need of the most of us is to have eyes trained to see the glory of the common. If books shut up our enjoyment of life and things to the study. Then they are a curse. They should be but means to the interpretation of life. If they make the daily task distasteful, they should be closed. But to him who has read books aright,

"In the mud and scum of things Something always, always sings."

What books can I recommend? The output today would be amazing even to Solomon. We are embarrassed by the enormity of publications, hence I prefer to deal now with the question, What class of books should have first place?

There are the grim commentaries. If they were men the most of them would be literalists, measuring men, ever drawing their rule. I admire every commentary I see. It is the result of vast labor. Its author has had a will to plod. The commentator has centainly been of great and good service to the world. With ease we come into the possession of the rich heritage he has bestowed upon us by his arduous and patient labors. I have profound admiration for the commentators; but it is my weakness that I seldom read them. I sometimes try to get excuses for not doing so. I have said that they are woefully lacking in agreement, that they are never satisfactory in just the thing you want to know, that like the lawyers they are slaves to precedent and that they often miss the sweep and spirit of him they are trying to explain. Doubtless mine is the fault.

History and Biography

Again there are the histories. Here is a rich field. History is not the tabulation of the births and deaths of kings as I used to think when I was younger. It is not the record of battles merely. It is the story of man learning, suffering, contending and conquering. Surely knowledge of the past ought to be both a pleasure to us and a guide away from the errors of life into its best.

Biography which is history centered in persons is a far too neglected field of study. The life of any person written with a discerning pen is well worth reading. Literature is rich with the biographies of the world's great and good. There are no missionary books comparable with the biographies of the first men in zeal for the spread of the Gospel. I know of no better way to helpfully mould young life than to place in its hands strong, simple biographies. As the reader peruses the story he will be gathering strong material out of which he will be, even while reading, building his own character.

Fiction has a large place in the libraries of today. It is easy reading. Its laws allow the author to enter into the intimacy of the life of the characters he is portraying; and consequently the reader of fiction comes into more intimate acquaintance with the character than he does in biography. Then there is the plot that is fascinating. "Make 'em laugh, make 'em cry and make 'em wait," Charles Reade gave as the design of the novelist.

The novel has a rightful place in every balanced library. Generally speaking women ought to read less fiction and preachers and men more.

With such standard authors as Hugo, Eliot, Dickens, Scott, Meredith, Thackeray, Hawthorne, Macdonald, etc., there is no excuse for any to waste time on trashy novels. All modern novels, however, are not trash, very far from it. There is a social breath in our fiction today that is most helpful. First place must not be given to novels, however, but reserved for another class.

Essays are coming, I am glad to notice, to have a larger reading. Such writers as Benson, Brierly, Chesterton, Wells, Tonsur, Mabie, Lucas, etc., have a wide constituency of readers. There is the splendid note of our throbbing present day life in all their writings. They are among the best commentators on actual life that we have. They help the eyes to see. Surely preachers could learn of them.

Devotional Writings

We continue our search for the first class. The devotional books must have a large place in the libraries of those who are leading the people's devotion. Great care must be had here. There are countless spurious works on piety. The easiest thing in the world is to talk or write pious platitudes. Be suspicious of the pious twang. The great devotional books have come to us out of the reality of stress and storm. They always sound the note of stern reality. Their prescriptions have been tried, fearfully tried, by the authors. I wonder if there is even one great devotional book that has not come to us out of the burning fires of trouble and conflict? Some of the greatest of them were penned in prison. The devotional books worth while can be read again and again. I fear most of us are satisfied in reading a book once. A book with a soul should be treated as a rich personality. We do not content ourselves with one prolonged conversation with the best people we know; but by repeated visits we come to feel and know the depth of their personalities and appreciate the richness and fullness of their minds. So with books that have endured the testing of time, we should give them frequent oportunity to speak to us the fullness of their message. Bunyan, Samuel Rutherford, a Kempis, Law, Taylor, Whyte, Mathewson, etc., are writers for our daily companionship.

I must pass over the drama and philosophy, two of the greatest classes of books in which men choose to write their thoughts. The drama measures the heights and depths of the soul's movements. We cannot ignore it if we are seeking comprehensively to know man. Philosophy, I think, is for the few. Happily the laughter and song of the ordinary worker is not disturbed with the insolvable problems of the philosopher. The most men believe in God without recondite reasoning as to why. The most men accept sin as a reality without agonizing over its origin. The most men believe in immortality without reading Fiske or Lodge to find a rational basis. A little philosophy disturbs and makes afraid. Much philosophy, I have noticed, often leads to a simple, strong and splendid faith.

Poetry First.

Because it is lamentably neglected and because of its intrinsic spiritual value I accord first place to poetry. It is the history of the delicate and mighty movement of the soul. It is the biography written in the Holy of Holies. It is devotional literature that makes all the universe divine. It is essay in finest attire. It is drama at its best. It is philosophy that hopes and believes. Strange that preachers so neglect this field of God. The psalms are easily the first devotional portion of the Bible. They are the eternal singings of the soul. They may bear David's name; but they belong to the common soul of humanity. The poets can help in all things needful.

Is it more sympathy with the homely and common lot of our fellows we need? We can nowhere find beter teachers than the poets. Burns is a master just here. Is it more faith with the good God we need? Then let us read such a poet as Browning with his hilarious optimism and his buoyant faith, a Whittier who sings of "Eternal Goodness." Do we need to feel that the science of today is not going to engulf our religion? Where a better teacher than Tennyson? Do we need to be calmed as the mountain and brook calm us? Then we must read the great master Wordsworth who saw far into the heart of nature. Do we need hope in the hour of defeat, sympathy in our loneliness, hope at death's grave? Then we may almost risk any of the poets. There are a few who despair, but not many. Do we need to be stirred for noble endeavors for our kind? Who can do it better than Lowell?

It would be well for our souls, well for our churches, well for our pulpits, if our grown up preachers would set themselves to the task usually asigned children, viz., committing poems. One good poem learned by heart each week would have a sweetening and strengthening effect upon the learner and upon all those to whom he afterwards gave it. It is more profitable to learn poems than to do—well, many things that we are at present doing.

To the Bible Professors at Drake, Lexington, Hiram, and the Rest

While writing this article, a suggestion has come to my mind. I must pen it at once for when it grows cold it will seem unimportant. Now, only a few moments old, it is welcomed by me as of great importance and with great enthusiasm. The suggestion is this: On the morning of graduating your students, call them into your most sacred room for a last word of counsel and questioning. Make the meeting have the spirit of prayer. College doors are about to close on these graduates and life's wider doors are to open. It is a time for richness of fellowship. You have come to the last hours of daily fellowship and it is a time for tender words. Say to them that you can no longer be constantly their guide but you now name to them certain great authors with whom they can go for counsel every day.

Then with great reverence mention the names of ten great novels, ten great devotional books, ten great essays, ten great poems. By "great" I mean good, genuine, vital, artistic, gripping, etc. By no means minimize the importance of this hour. It may mean as much to them as their whole college course; for if they come to know these forty you will name to them, know

Sunday School Lesson

By Herbert L. Willett

Before the Sanhedrin*

The healing of the lame man at the beautiful gate of the temple was an event so astonishing that a multitude soon gathered from the neighboring courts and streets to see the man and the disciples who had healed him. In the narrative of the previous chapter Peter is the one who takes the lead and does the speaking, and yet from a closer reading of chapter 4 it is apparent that John had not been unheard in what had transpired. In verse 1 are the words "as they spake unto the people," indicating that both Peter and John had been witnesses for the truth. And again in the 13th verse we have a statement concerning the council before whom the disciples were summoned, beginning, "when they beheld the boldness of Peter and John." From both of these texts it seems clear that John was no voiceless companion of the more active and eager Peter. It is possible, indeed, that the two disciples had each gathered about himself a circle of listeners, to whom an explanation of the strange events of the day was given.

The Arrest.

While the crowd was thus listening the authorities of the place came suddenly upon them, interrupting the message the disciples were giving. The priests were the leaders in this disturbance. They belonged for the most part to the Sadducean party, and jealous of their rights both as priests and as the owners of the rich temple franchises they had summoned the temple guards under their captain and now seized the two disciples and bore them away. Their action might seem perfectly justifiable on the ground of public safety, for the gathering of a crowd under any pretext is likely to be something of a disturbance of the peace and fraught with danger, especially when under the spell of such preachers as Peter and John. But there was a deeper motive than this on the part of the priests and Sadduceans. The disciples were preaching Jesus and the Resurrection; in neither one did the Sadducees believe, and they were not minded to allow this Galilean sect, the followers of Jesus, to gain headway in the city where he had so recently perished. Little further could be done that day, for it was now evening, three hours later than the time at which Peter and John had gone up to the temple. They could only put the two disciples into confinement for the night; perhaps in some of the rooms about the temple. But the preaching of the Gospel had not been without effect. Many accepted the message which the two disciples gave, and the writer adds that by this time the total number of believers in the city had come to be about five thousand.

Before the Council.

As soon as the night was passed the Sanhedrin, or governing body of Jews in Jerusalem, assembled to proceed with the trial of the two prisoners. This body was the supreme court of the Jews. It was composed of the high priest, the ex-high priests, the scribes and the leading men of the city. Annas is here called the high priest, though he had been deposed from this office by the Roman government, and the honor conferred upon Joseph Caiaphas, his son-in-law. Indeed Annas virtually held the office of high priest for a long time, his five sons and his son-in-law following him in due succession. While they were nominally in office, he was in reality exercising this function from which he had been deposed for cause. Others of the high priest's family were present and are named in the text.

Peter's Reply.

When the two prisoners were brought in it was demanded of them by what right they had gathered the assembly of the previous day and had preached. The council in which they were gathered was a public one, and many of the people who had made up the crowd on the former day were present; with them was the man who had been healed of his lameness. It was a splendid opportunity for the disciples to re-affirm the truths which they were most anxious to get into the hearts of the Jews. They had done, they said, a good deed on the previous day, and this was in contrast with the brutal treatment they had received from the rulers. The authority by which they had done that deed and the power that they had for its accomplishment were both in the name of Jesus, the Messiah of Nazareth. This was the very one whom the Jewish rulers had put to death, and Peter's charge that they had crucified the Nazarene was appropriately linked with this statement that God had raised him from the dead. In the power of the risen Christ the lame man stood there at that very moment before them all. The prophets the psalmists had spoken of Israel as a stone which the builders of former ages, the nations around them, rejected with scorn; only to find at last that Israel was intended to be the corner stone of all nations. Likewise said Peter of the Christ, the builders, the Jews, had rejected him, but he was now seen to be essential to their own history. Without him that history was a torso without a head, a history without a sequel. In no other name is there salvation of body or of soul. In his name alone are men made whole. In that name righteousness is preached, and for that name the faithful will be willing to die.

The Secret Conference.

Such boldness on the part of these disciples, neither of whom had any university experiences as had the scribes, astonished the hearers. And yet they remembered that these very men had been seen with Jesus during his work in that city. Moreover there stood the man whom they had healed on the previous day, and there was no argument that could prevail against what they had done. Their only safety lay in private conference, and so they sent the disciples forth.

One wonders how Luke the writer of the Book of Acts knew what went on in the secret council-chamber of the Sanhedrins, as all witnesses had been executed. No modern reporter was on hand to learn by secret and mysterious means what transpired in that conclave. But it is more than probable that some of the members of that distinguished body later became Christians, for we soon read that a great company of priests became obedient unto the faith. We read that in their deliberation over the matter they were compelled to concede that a remarkable event had occurred, and that the sympathies of the people were enlisted with the Apostles. The utmost that could be done was to prevent them, as far as possible, from teaching in the name of Jesus, on the ground that this was likely to raise sedition in the city, and to disturb the peace.

The Apostolic Refusal.

But this condition Peter and John refused at once to accept. They were witnesses, they said, of the things which they had seen and heard, and had no liberty to suppress the truth as they understood it. Seeing that it was useless to further hold the Apostles, the council dismissed them, insisting that they must not gather crowds, not otherwise press the claims of the prophet from Nazareth. Thus ended in failure the first official effort made in Jerusalem to restrain the growing enthusiasm of the early church, and it seems that this was the only effort of the sort attempted. Presently the Christian community was recognized as a perfectly licit and law abiding section of people. They lived on terms of goodwill with their Jewish neighbors, in fact, they were themselves Jews. It was not until a more ringing and vigorous statement of the independence of Christianity from Judaism was made by Stephen that the peaceful conditions which then prevailed were again disturbed.

The Apostles retired to their company, probably the 120 who were accustomed to meet together for prayer and they rejoiced together over their deliverance, and the glorious proof that had witnessed to the name of Jesus. In such an assembly the spirit of God was manifestly present and later as they recorded the facts they were impressed that God had manifested himself in mysterious signs of power.

Thus the early church work in Jerusalem prospered and love abounded everywhere. The Apostles preached and held the power. All things were held as if belonging to all, rather than to some particular owner. Many and numerous possessions were later laid at the feet of the Apostles for distribution for those who needed it. One conspicuous example of this generous bestowal of personal possessions was that of Joseph Barnabas, a man of the sacred tribe of Levi, whose people had migrated to Cyprus. He brought the money which he had obtained from the sale of some particular part of his patrimony, and added it to the common fund. This man became a notable worker in the later history of the church, as the companion of the Apostle Paul on his first missionary journey.

TEACHER TRAINING COURSE

By H. D. C. Maclachlan

PART II. SUNDAY SCHOOL PEDAGOGY

LESSON VIII. OFFICERS AND THEIR DUTIES. (Continued).

VII. GENERAL SECRETARY. Next to the Superintendent, the Secretary is the most important officer in the school. On him largely depends the proper working of its machinery. His chief duties are to keep a complete, statistical record of the whole school; keep the minutes of all board and faculty or teachers' meetings, and order as directed all supplies. His reports should be kept in one of the many books on the market designed for the use of Sunday-school secretaries, and should give an accurate birds-eye-view of the financial and numerical strength of the school from week to week. It is all important that he should keep a complete roll (preferably a card list) of every scholar and teacher in the school, showing among other things, address, age, birthday, church membership or otherwise, date of entering, joining church, removal, etc. He should furnish a weekly, quarterly and yearly report to the whole school. The assistant secretary assists the secretary in all of these duties as directed by him, and in his absence takes full charge of the office.

VIII. GENERAL TREASURER. The general treasurer has charge of all funds belonging to the school, and pays them out on requisition of the proper authorities. He should keep a permanent record of all financial transactions, and present to the school a weekly, quarterly and yearly report of same.

IX. DIVISIONAL SECRETARY-TREASURER. This officer bears to his department the same general relation that the general secretary and treasurer bear to the school at large. As treasurer it is his specific duty to take the offering of his department each Sunday and hand it in to the general treasurer. As secretary, he should keep a record of all statistics of attendance, contributions, etc, and furnish same to the general treasurer for his weekly report. This office is only needed in the larger schools, where the divisional superintendent cannot perform its duties.

X. SECRETARY OF ENROLLMENT. This office is one of the most important in a graded school. In the smaller schools it may be filled by the assistant superintendent, but where new scholars are constantly coming in, a special officer is required. His duties are to receive all new scholars, determine by personal examination, their proper departmental and class grading; take them to the general secretary for enrollment; and introduce them to their teacher and class. He may also be required to keep a record of the class standings and promotions of the scholars. Some Sunday-schools have a special officer for this purpose called the secretary of promotion. In others, the secretary of general enrollment keeps the roll books in place of the secretary.

XI. LIBRARIAN. The librarian should have charge of all books, maps, magazines and supplies, and should attend to their distribution. He should also be responsible for the safe-keeping of all models, bible objects, missionary curios, etc. But he should be more than a custodian. A wide-awake librarian can do much to keep the best books in his library before the school, and to suggest to the library committee what class of books are most interesting to the scholars. No book should be given out by him to any pupils under the intermediate department, without an order from the teacher of the class . To prevent confusion all books should be given to the departmental superintendents for distribution to the classes under their control.

XII. CHORISTER AND ORGANIST. The chorister leads the singing of the main school. If the superintendent does not select the hymns the chorister should do so, having the musical program for each Sunday carefully prepared beforehand. He should not allow the singing to get stereotyped, but should teach the school from time to time new hymns. The organist presides at the piano or organ under the direction of the chorister.

XIII. DOORMEN, USHERS, ETC. There should be a doorman at every door entering into the main room, for the purpose of welcoming strangers, preserving quiet in the corridors, and keeping anyone from entering during the reading of the scripture or prayer. The doorman can do much to create a favorable impression on strangers upon their first visit to the school. In addition to the doorman, every school should have ushers to see that the places occupied by the regular scholars are reserved for them; to conduct strangers to comfortable seats; and at the conclusion of the exercises to introduce them to the superintendent and secretary of enrollment. Both ushers and doormen should be in their places a reasonable time before the opening of the school.

XIV. MESSENGERS. In large schools it is well to organize a band of messenger cadets, drawn preferably from the Junior Department, whose duty it is to carry messages for the superintendent or other officers, and to deliver the supplies of the Home and Cradle Roll Departments under direction of their respective superintendents. Boys may be thus early taught to serve in the Church. A similar band of girls may also be organized, for the purpose of visiting and carrying flowers to the sick; reading and singing to them; and holding song services in the various charitable organizations of the neighborhood.

XV. MANUAL DIRECTOR. In schools which have adopted manual training, a special officer called manual director, should be appointed, to superintend the work of this branch.

XVI. HOME DEPARTMENT AND CRADLE ROLL SUPERINTENDENTS. These officers should appoint and remove their own district visitors, subject to the approval of the Sunday-school board or other authority; pay over to the general treasurer the contributions from their department; and hand in to the general secretary a written report of their work, to be incorporated in the quarterly and yearly reports of the school. The success of these departments depends almost entirely on the work done by their superintendents.

XVII. COMMITTEES. Every school should have the following committees:

(1). Missionary Committee. The duty of this Committee is to arouse and maintain a healthy missionary interest in the school at large. It should keep itself informed on the latest methods of missionary work in the Sunday-school; provide for occasional missionary programs to take the place of the ordinary opening or closing exercises; and organize missionary exhibits, to which the whole church should be invited.

This committee should also suggest to the library committee new books to be added to the missionary section.

(2). Library Committee. It is the duty of this committee to maintain the efficiency of the library by adding new books from time to time. Its members should keep in touch with the literary needs and preferences of the different grades, and no books should be added to the library without its consent.

(3). Relief Committee. This committee has charge of all the relief and charitable work of the school, and sees to the distribution of the Christmas and other contributions for the poor.

(4). Temperance Committee. The temperance committee has charge of the temperance interests of the school. It should provide for stated temperance programs, and arrange for addresses from time to time in the line of temperance and good citizenship.

(5). Social Committee. This committee devises plans for developing the social side of the school life, and has full charge of all picnics, entertainments, etc.

LITERATURE. (Same as the preceding lesson.) QUESTIONS. (1.) What is the responsibility of an officer in the school? (2). How shall the number of officers be determined? (3). How should they be appointed? (4). How would you describe the general duties of an officer of the school? (5). What are the duties of the following officers—pastor, superintendent, general secretary, general treasurer, librarian, chorister? (6). What are the duties of divisional superintendents and secretary-treasurers? (7). What are doormen, ushers and messengers, and what are their duties? (8). What are the duties of the manual director? (9). What are the duties of the home department and cradle roll superintendents? (10). Name five committees that every school should have? (11). Describe them, and state briefly their duties and responsibilities?

THE PRAYER MEETING

Silas Jones

Topic, January 27: Heresy of the Heart. Philippians 2:17-20.

"With me, mistakes of the understanding and errors of the affections are not to be confounded. They are as distant as the poles. An angel may mistake the meaning of a commandment, but he will obey it in the sense in which he understands it. * * * There are mistakes with and without depravity. There are willful errors which all the world must condemn, and unavoidable mistakes which every one will pity. * * * Many a good man has been mistaken. Mistakes are to be regarded as culpable and as declarative of a corrupt heart only when they proceed from willful neglect of the means of knowing what is commanded." So wrote Alexander Campbell in 1837. Doubtless he would have answered, if authority for his statement had been demanded, with a quotation from the Bible, such as, "The whole law is fulfilled in one word, even in this: Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Or, "He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love." It is true that terrible wrongs are committed by men who think they are doing God service, but even in their case it may with reason be asked whether they have not put forward their own selfish schemes as the mind of God. We are bound to respect the conscience of men, but we are entitled to know whether the conscience of any particular man is that of a hog or of a human being. Is his citizenship earthly or heavenly? Does he glory in his shame? Is he an enemy of the cross of Christ? Or has he set his affections on things above?

Heresy of the heart discloses itself in business. A real estate agent, finding himself in possession of a piece of property on which he cannot realize what he paid if he tells the truth about it, deceives another and saves himself from loss. Is his heart right toward the other man who is not equipped with the knowledge of an expert? Perhaps it is a widow whose money he gets. Is he any better for having robber her through his superior knowledge than he would be if he had thrust a pistol into her face and compelled her to give up her savings? We demand of the minister and the scholar that they employ their knowledge for the benefit of mankind. Has the expert in business the right to deceive and defraud by virtue of his skill? No one can answer in the affirmative unless the cross of Christ is to him foolishness. To lay upon others the burden of our mistakes or to forget the spirit of brotherhood in the struggle for riches is to display the brute in us. The jerry builder endangers the lives of innocent children in order that he may save something for himself and the thievish architect who planned the schoolhouse. An inspector accepts a bribe and allows a rotten boat to continue in the service. The boat goes down and hundreds of lives are lost. The contractor thinks more of his gains than of the lives of men and so he saves expense by building a bridge that will not bear the strain to which it is to be subjected. He may commit suicide when he hears that an awful destruction of life has come from his greed, but that does not convince the world that his heart was right when he built the bridge. Love sacrifices for its object. The benevolent man does not make spoil of his weaker brother.

The pleasures of a man reveal whether his heart is heretical. Joseph Parker says: "The fool gets his pleasure out of the mischief he does, and the wise man gets his enjoyment out of the wisdom which he cultivates and increases. As mischief is the sport of the fool, so wisdom is the sport, in the sense of enjoyment, of the man of understanding." How many of the men who leave their homes for the sake of "affinities" have ever made notable sacrifices for the spiritual culture of the wives they cast aside? How many of the women who leave their homes for the sake of public careers and the notoriety to be gained thereby have any appreciation of the significance of the home and of the self-restraint that is required to make a good home? The mother denies herself for the sake of her children, for her heart is sound. The real man masters his appetite for drink, for he will not spend on it money needed to feed and clothe his children. He has the right attitude toward life and he endures the torture that may come from defying a perverted appetite in order that he may show love to his own. He declines to believe the lie that the drunkard loves the children that he starves as much as the sober man loves those for whom he cares with fidelity and tenderness. The pleasure-seeker who is indifferent to the moral damage he may work is a bad heretic. The theological errors of an Arius, a Servetus, or a Tolstoi sink into insignificance by the side of the heresy of a world wrong at heart. A self-satisfied church, no matter how loudly it may proclaims its continuance in the faith once for all delivered to the saints, is fundamentally heretical. There is no sound church except the one that is doing the will of God and in it will be found love pure and undefiled.

DEPARTMENT OF BIBLICAL PROBLEMS

By Professor Willett

Dear Bro. Willett: I have carefully read your recent articles in the Century. I have no desire to discredit a single statement you make. There are some things about your position, however, that are not entirely clear to my mind, and as I do not wish to misjudge you, I write you this note of inquiry.

For instance you say: "The older arguments of skepticism which were fatal against a Bible which the orthodoxy of the day insisted was verbally inspired, inerrant in matters of historical and scientific character, and equally authoritative at all points, are pointless and futile now. Mr. Ingersoll's shafts of wit, which seemed unanswerable to audiences trained to believe in the doctrine of a 'level Bible,' all portions of which were of precisely the same value for belief and conduct, would appear witless and absurd today to students of the historical method."

You here teach that the student of the historical method has some peculiar niew of the inspiration and erroneousness of the Bible that makes him superior to the orthodox student in meeting the arguments of skepticism.

What is your peculiar view of inspiration that would enable you to meet sceptics, such as Ingersoll, more effectively than the man who holds to the orthodox view? I do not like the term "verbal" as applied to inspiration, not because I do not believe in it, but because advantage is taken of its indefiniteness to evade the true issue. To you, for instance, it means "verbal dictation" or "mechanical inspiration of the documents." To those you call orthodox it has no such meaning. The most devout and scholarly advocates of "verbal inspiration" would repudiate all such representation of their view as mere caricature. What they mean by verbal inspiration is that the words of Scipture were written by men so guided by the Holy Spirit that the very words are just the words God wanted written, and hence are true, trustworthy and of divine authority. In repudiating verbal inspiration am I to understand that you repudiate this well-known position?

I do not like the term, "inerrant," because it involves the affirmation of a negative. As applied to the Holy Scriptures it simply means that they are not erroneous, or affirmatively stated. They are true, trustworthy and of divine authority. This is all that can be meant by a "level Bible." All parts of the Bible may not be of equal value to our faith and conduct, but when it comes to truthfulness and trustworthiness all parts of the Holy Scriptures are on a level because the whole is God's word. By denying "inerrancy" you are logically bound to affirm erroneousness of the sacred scriptures, or to deny their truthfulness and trustworthiness; for any writing that is erroneous cannot be truthful and trustworthy. Furthermore, by repudiating the infallibility of the Bible, as you do in your second article, you are logically compelled to affirm its fallibility, by which must be understood the liability of those who wrote it to err and be misled in what they wrote. Do you accept the logical consequence, and affirm erroneousness and fallibility of the Bible? If you say yes, in some things, then I ask in what sort of things and how many things? How do you determine the extent of such erroneousness? To illustrate what I mean. I understand that you deny that Moses raised a brazen serpent in the wilderness; if you do, is it because you exclude it as no part of the record, or because you consider it an error of the writer who gives us the rest of the record?

Again in commenting on Solomon's Choice, you say that the record may have been "colored by the favorable views of later biographers," and that his wisdom in part was the result of natural shrewdness and in part the result of the close observation of men and things. You surely do not call this an interpretation, for it can be nothing less than a rejection of the record. As I understand you, you regard First Kings as a part of the inspired Word of God. Am I to understand you then as admitting that this particular record of Solomon's Choice of wisdom may be erroneous, due to some coloring given it by the favorable views of later biographers?

I do not cite these two records because I hold them to possess any saving value but simply to draw you out on your views of erroneousness. Many things recorded in the Bible may have no saving value, yet to pronounce the records erroneous would seriously affect our faith in the whole Bible record as true and trustworthy.

My library is well supplied with critical works of both the conservatives and radicals, and as I understand the subject, the plea of erroneousness is relied upon for just two things. (1.) To explain what you term "perplexing variations." (2.) To justify the rejection of that which seems to conflict with reason. The radical critic may go further in the application of his rationalistic principle than his more conservative coworker, but the principle of erroneousness and untrustworthiness of scripture is the same with both. I have never found a critic who advocated the doctrine of erroneousness in opposition to inerrancy who did not treat the Bible as indefinitely erroneous and plead for the liberty of every man to reject what his reason might decide to be erroneous. I do not charge this upon you, but until you specify some safe and clear rule of limitation to the doctrine of erroneousness you will certainly be classed with the "indefinite errorists."

Here I believe is the ground upon which all the trouble has arisen over your teaching, and I could but wish you would deal with this phase of the question fully and clearly. You must not be too severe on us non-critical fellows if we are afraid an erroneous Bible will cease to be the divine standard of the fathers.

Fraternally,

Charlottesville, Va. H. G. Fleming.

No inquiries could be more timely than those which Bro. Fleming has raised, and I only regret that the number of questions received for this department compels us to postpone, at times, those which press for consideration, because others earlier received require attention. This, I hope, will explain to several of my correspondents the reason why their questions have not been answered. I have been delighted at the earnestness and candor of the letters I have received. With few exceptions they deal with profoundly important and interesting phases of biblical teaching. In due time I hope to answer every one.

The trouble that lies at the root of Bro. Fleming's problem seems to be the failure to discriminate between the essentials and the non-essentials of the Bible. Like every other vital organism, the Scriptures are made up of various elements. The seed from which a plant or a grain springs is composed of the germ and then several layers of covering affording nourishment and protection. These latter are merely incidental, and may perish without affecting the value of the seed. So of the Bible. The message of the divine Spirit is given to us in the lives and utterances of men of greater or lesser capacities, of greater or lesser clearness of vision, of greater or lesser consecration to their sacred tasks, but all of them guided in some true sense by that divine Spirit. Their lives were set in a framework of national history, and they used that history in fragmentary recitals or writings, to enforce and illustrate the ethical and spiritual truths which they gave to the world. Their knowledge of the national history was not the measure of their power as preachers or prophets. But it was of great value in their teaching, because it secured for them the interest and attention of the people to whom they preached. They nowhere seem chiefly concerned with historical facts. In the books that bear the names of particular prophets, like Amos and Jeremiah, the references to historical events are merely incidental to the message to the people. In the books that are chiefly made up of historical narratives, like Samuel and Kings, the interest of the writers, who were also prophets, was not in the facts themselves, but only in their religious value. For this reason they so frequently disappoint the mere student of history, because they tell only a very little of what he deems so interesting, and for the rest refer him to the state records, or "chronicles," which unfortunately have perished.

These men, the spiritual teachers of Israel, were also the possessors of certain virtues regarding nature and the world. Those virtues were a part of the common heritage of their race. Wherever they had occasion to speak of the world, its structure, its origin, its laws, they spoke in the language of their time. Their many references to the flat world, with waters below and above, separated by the bowl-shaped "firmament," with its pathways for sun and stars, or to the "pillars" on which the world stands, the "sheol" or pit beneath it, and the "mountain of God" or pole of the earth above are familiar. We are interested in their views of these things and recognize in them the common conceptions of their age regarding nature. But when they speak of the divine purpose for men, and the duties of individuals and the nation toward God, we recognize in their words a note of authority and power which is of a different sort. Their knowledge of history, shown in their use of it as affording examples of God's dealings with men, is valuable as enabling us to reconstruct with something of certainty the events of the past. But it was no vital part of their utterance, and therefore we see in it merely the means and not the end of their work. To distinguish between the truth and the form in which the truth is stated, between the kernel and the shell, between the gem and its casket, is the task of the biblical student.

This is the only "peculiar view" of inspiration which the historical method provides, but it is sufficient to account for nearly all of the difficulties which have perplexed Bible students in the past. When the same event is described in two or more different ways, not merely variant in details but in substance, which is frequently the case, especially in the Old Testament, from the two accounts of creation onward, no one is troubled if he understands that by different groups of narrators the same story might be told in different and even contradictory ways. But if he holds that "the very words are just the words God wanted written, and hence are true, trustworthy and of divine authority," he is involved with a theory which will not bear the test of facts, a theory which is as objectionable as the one Bro. Fleming disclaims. Let that theory be tried with the two different stories of Saul's choice as king, or of David's introduction at Saul's court. No difficulty is experienced by the Bible student who holds that the sacred writer ("inspired," because impelled by the spirit of God so to speak and write that his people might be led to clearer perception of the divine will) found value in both narratives of the events recalled, and put the accounts side by side in his record. But the two accounts are quite incompatible with any theory of verbal inspiration.

I have before me the questions of a Sunday-school teacher, who, in working over the Book of Acts in preparation for the lessons of this year has come upon and is perplexed by the following facts: (1) Matt. 27:5-8 says that the priests after Judas' suicide, purchased a field with the money he had given back to them. Acts 1:18 says that Judas himself purchased the field. This is a very simple variation, if one accords the writers of the Bible the free use of the materials at their disposal. But it is fatal to the doctrine of verbal exactness. (2) The different manner of Judas' death in 27:5 (hanging himself) and in Acts 1:18, (hurling himself from a cliff). Here also it seems probable that two different reports of the death of the traitor were current in different localities. And the same problem arises regarding "verbal" accuracy. (3) Peter referred the words of Psalm 69:25 to Judas (Acts 1:20). But the psalmist clearly refers to many enemies, not one man, much less Judas. I have discussed the free use of Old Testament Scriptures by the apostles, in the Sunday-school lesson exposition of Jan. 9, to which the questioner is referred. I only note here the bearing of the New Testament passage upon the doctrine of verbal inspiration. The remainder of this list of questions, all of similar nature, and all taken from the Book of Acts, I shall deal with at a later time. I have cited these three only to point out to Bro. Fleming the fact that no biblical student, so far as I know, is searching the Bible for the purpose of finding errors in it. But when in his study he finds records at one place clearly at variance with those in another, or finds chronological data difficult to reconcile with the facts as presented, or finds the frequent use of language inconsistent with accepted views of nature and the world, he has the choice of ignoring these facts, or of "reconciliation," which usually only increases the difficulty, or lastly of recognizing the facts as pointing to the real character of the Bible, not as an inspired text-book on history and science, but as the record of the religious education of the race through holy men, who used all the means at their disposal to make clear to their fellowmen the truths they had learned from God—truths not of history or of science, but of religion. If then in the framework of their teaching we discover statements that do not agree with other statements, or with history or science as these disciplines have taken form through the efforts of reverent and patient workers, we are not perplexed nor disturbed. We look rather for the abiding and imperishable truth in what the prophets taught. And happily here we have a standard of absolute values in the teachings of our Lord.

Bro. Fleming asks the question as to how we are to discriminate between the more and the less valuable. The answer is very simple. In matters in the range of the mere framework of the religious message of the Bible, we are to judge in accord with the recognized standards of historical and scientific character which we apply to any work of the past. But in matters of ethical and spiritual value our appeal is always to Christ. Every prophet's message must be judged, as to its permanent value, by its conformity to the teachings of Christ. This is the meaning of the Transfiguration scene. Moses had spoken; let him speak no more. Elijah had preached; let him henceforth keep silence. "This is my beloved Son; hear ye Him." Nor must we forget for a moment the wonderful advantage which the discovery of this principle of the appeal to Christ gave the fathers of this reformation against the armed and confident sectarianism of their day, with its doctrine of a "level Bible," all parts of which were equally the word of God and equally valuable. No force has been more potent against this unsatisfactory view of the Bible than our own movement, especially in its earlier years.

Of other matters referred to in Bro. Fleming's letter, such as his references to the serpent in the wilderness, and the wisdom of Solomon, I should have been glad to speak had space permitted. If desired, I shall be glad to give them consideration in a later issue.

The Men's Bible Class of the Gibson City (Ill.) Church was organized about a year ago with 45 members. At that time there were 136 men in the fellowship of the church. All but 14 are now members of the Bible class. Every member of the Official Board is in the class and active. The class has an attendance of from 60 to 100. The teacher, J. P. Lowry, is a young man of rare ability and a teacher of the first magnitude. This class gives $25 a year to the campaign now on in the interest of Eureka College, and all the men rejoice in the work.

CHICAGO

TAKING AMERICAN IDEALS AND MANNERS TO THE FOREIGNERS CONGESTED IN OUR GREAT CITIES. O. F. JORDAN WRITES OF THE SOCIAL SETTLEMENTS OF CHICAGO, ESPECIALLY OF HULL HOUSE

In Chicago there are twenty-five social settlements. Probably none of these was in existence twenty-five years ago. The theory on which these social experiments have been conducted is that there is no way by which foreign populations can be Americanized except by association with Americans. There is no way by which the higher life of the educated can be transmitted to the less favored other than by daily contact. These social settlements, then, are groups of educated people, usually from the great universities, who have lived in daily association with the less fortunate individuals of our cities.

It is interesting to note that many of these social settlements are conducted by women. The most eminent woman in a settlement in Chicago, all would agree, is Miss Jane Addams. She with one companion rented a house at 335 South Halsted in September, 1889. For the first five years, the enterprise was her personal enterprise. The success of the enterprise led to its incorporation with a board of seven trustees. This is its present form of organization.

Hull House Coffee Room

We took lunch the other day in the coffee room of the Hull House. We had asked a policeman in the district where there was a clean restaurant. The air was reeking with strange smells and the restaurants were far from inviting on the outside with promise of unmentionable horrors within. Besides, we would not have been able to order a dinner in this vicinity anyway. Every store had its sign in Greek or Italian. Here was the office of the Greek newspaper. Here were signs in which our feeble memories supplied meaning from the long neglected Anabasis. Our policeman acquaintance proudly told us that there was no better place in Chicago to eat than in the coffee room of the Hull House and that it was cheap too. This fulsome compliment led us to investigate and we were compelled to admit that everything was up to the reputation assigned the place. The dining room was a unique affair. It was fire-proof with the tiling and other construction showing. An effect highly artistic and unique had been secured with permanency at less cost than more elaborate dining rooms sometimes had. Everything was spotlessly clean and the food was cooked by a past master. Even the waitresses had lost the dowdiness that characterized the women of the section and fitted into the atmosphere of the place if indeed they did not help create it. In the dining room was a Bohemian group. There was everything from public school teachers to diggers in the streets. They sat across the tables from each other and often conversed. The snobbery of the city life was forgotten and the brotherhood of man preached in the churches was here in actual practice. Though we saw much about the place, nowhere were we more impressed with the absolute democracy of the Hull House than in its dining room where snobbery would have been the surest to have manifested itself.

Nine Thousand Visitors a Week

On inquiry, we found the number of people visiting the place in the course of a week was enormous. It is true that the buildings cover the most of a city block on Halsted street from Polk to Ewing streets, but we did not realize that the institution reached as many people as it did. Nine thousand people come to the institution each week to participate in its benefits. We think the audience of Gunsaulus in the great Auditorium a great tribute and it is, but here is something which gathers more people together in a week than any church or any two churches in all Chicago.

High Grade Lectures

There is much in the program of the institution. Only a minor feature of the program is the supplying of athletics and amusement. Lectures by professors of the University of Chicago are given and the inhabitants of this section of Chicago come in such numbers that Bowen Hall with its seating capacity of eight hundred is not sufficient to seat the people. Such scientific lectures as "The Plant Life of the Seashore" have gotten such audiences. We venture the suggestion that this lecture would never fill a church in an American section of the city. These foreigners have a zeal for learning that puts to shame the careless and pleasure-loving American.

Some of the methods of the place may prove a bit shocking to the conventionally religious. We confess to a bit of question when we saw the announcement of the dance to be given at Hull House. The leaders there claim, however, that the dance combines physical exercise with social feelings in a way that no other exercise does. From the first the settlement house has taught dancing, and has hoped to put the dangerous dance halls of the neighborhood out of business with a clean dance. We are not familiar enough with this experiment to pass judgment on it.

Another favorite exercise of the Hull House is the giving of dramatic productions. The Italians and Greeks go into this work with the greatest zest. The Shakespeare club—composed of Greeks, Italians and Poles, you must remember—is large and popular. The Greeks give both classic and modern plays in their own language. The Italians and the Irish also present native plays.

Educational classes meet on the different evenings of the week. We read with difficulty a Greek sign which exhorted native Greeks to take the English lessons which were taught in the Greek language. Printing is taught several evenings in the week. Other classes are those in millinery, dress-making, pottery and drawing.

Training for Self Government

The Jane Club is a coöperative boarding club for young women. It was established in 1891. It is a four-story brick building with room for thirty young women. They live together here in a self-governing club at an expense of three dollars a week for rent, service, food and heat. What such a club would mean to the girls of department stores, only they could appreciate.

Miss Addams proceeds on the familiar theory that boys will exhibit the gang instinct in adolescence. There are many small clubs connected with the Hull House with officers and some definite interest to further. These are too numerous even for enumeration. What these will mean, however, in teaching democratic institutions to the children of foreign parents is beyond our full appreciation. Self-government is taught in self-governing clubs and our future voters taught the nature of their responsibilities.

The Hull House is the center of various kinds of political discussion. The exponents of the various economic theories gather there and in the best of humor discuss socialism, trades-unions and other questions of interest to the people of the district. This freedom of discussion in Hull House has led to the charge that it is the center of a socialistic propaganda. This is far from the truth. The settlement is not made the medium of any propaganda other than that of clean living and high ideals. It is true, however, that the thinking of most social experts has been profoundly modified by the theories of socialism. Perhaps few of them are thorough-going socialists, and few would accept the central socialistic principle that the government should own the tools of industry, but they would all go with the socialists in demanding better conditions for the toilers of the nations.

Religion Without the Name

Perhaps you have waited in vain to hear how religion is benefited by the Hull House. Such a movement may seem to some a dangerous rival to the church. A square from the Hull House stands the little Ewing Street Congregational Church. This little chapel compares unfavorably with the great institution nearby which covers a block. Religion is never taught at Hull House. Perhaps a sermon has never been preached there. That may seem to some a serious indictment. When one studies the variety of religions and points of view in this vicinity, however, it will soon be seen that the Hull House could not go on as a distinctly religious propaganda. In the near vicinity is the Ghetto with its thousands of Jews. The Greeks are members of the Greek Catholic Church with congregations near them. The Polanders are Roman Catholics. The Socialistic contingency which is numerous here is opposed to institutional Christianity and could not be induced to set foot in a church for the most part. This varied population could never find unity in a religious institution but can find neighborhood spirit in an institution which appeals only to the more fundamental human instincts. The Commons conducted by Prof. Graham Taylor has a bit more of a religious flavor, though even here the institution is not formally religious.

There are those, however, who do not hesitate to say that the most religious thing in all Chicago is the social settlement. Where else in our city do people forego the society of their own kind to radiate their culture to those less fortunate? The churches rent pews, while here is the true democracy. What the foreign missionary is in China, the settlement worker is in Chicago, minus the preaching. When we remember that Jesus was content to do good, and to talk about life, with little concern about building up institutions, we can understand those in the slums who are concerned only that man and women shall be made better.

A Valuable Lesson for the Church

In spite of this splendid example of the good that can be done outside the church we still confess that we are ardent in our devotion to the church. There is still power and authority in its history and character. Modernized. or as we used to say, brought back to the primitive ideals, it would be today a greater power than ever before. The church could not do what Hull House has done in Hull House neighborhood, but it can in its own locality do a work of similar character. Instead of being a grim, closed house which allows men to enter and pray once or twice a week, it may become a very beehive of activity. Instead of losing sanctity by night classes, it shall acquire sanctity through service, which is the only kind of

Summary of Annual Meeting Reports

CENTRAL CHURCH, INDIANAPOLIS

The annual report of the Central Church, Indianapolis, Allen B. Philputt, pastor, is one of the best in its history. The amount raised for all purposes was $11,882.08. Of this amount $3,034.40 was for missions and benevolence. This church supports three missionaries, two in the foreign field and one in the home field. It has for years observed all the offering days both in the church and Sunday-school. The Sunday-school has a total enrollment in all departments of eight hundred and thirty-four and raised last year over $1,200.00.

There were one hundred and nine additions during the year and a net gain of fifty-eight.

Plans will soon be undertaken for the enlargement of the building.

FIRST CHURCH, FORT COLLINS, COLORADO

During the year there were three hundred and eight additions to the church; the Sunday-school has an enrollment of two hundred and twenty-seven, not including the thirty-nine members of the Home Department, and the forty-nine enrolled in the Cradle Roll. The Senior C. E. Society has forty members and raised $217.49 during the year; the Juniors have fifty members and raised $35.00; the Intermediate Society, fifty members and raised $106.34. The Ladies Aid raised $940.36; The C. W. B. M., forty eight members, raised $291.40; Men's Brotherhood, sixty-two members, raised $162.95. The treasurer's reports show the church proper to have collected $2,639.52, aside from an improvement fund of $1,176.00 and to have given to missions, $637.65. J. F. Findley is the successful pastor.

The Independence Boulevard Church has called to George P. Taubman to the associate pastorate. Brother Taubman will give himself largely to the educational and evangelistic work of the church through the agency of the Bible School. We are expecting large things from his coming. Our people have received Brother Taubman with open arms and hearts and he measures up every inch to our liking.

George H. Combs.

Jan. 13-09.

TAYLORVILLE, ILLINOIS

Have organized a training class here with forty members. A. M. Bloxam is the teacher. We began our Sunday-school the first Sunday of the year with two hundred and four present and $5.70 collection. Have expended $2,600 in improvements the past year and have had one hundred and fifty-one additions during the past fifteen months. All departments of our work active.

M. L. Pontius.

CHICO, CALIFORNIA.

The Chico Church held its annual roll call and business meeting January 1.

A banquet was served by the ladies, after which, reports showing a gain in membership of sixty-five for the year, were read.

Total membership to date four hundred and ten. Amount of money raised for all purposes $4,258.92. Pastor's report shows ninety sermons preached, four hundred and sixty-five visits, thirteen weddings and fifty-one funerals. All departments in good condition. The pastor is also conducting a teacher's training class of fifty members.

G. L. Lobdell, Pastor.

LEBANON, INDIANA

At the annual dinner, and business meeting of the Central Church, January seven, three hundred of the members were present. The yearly reports were given by the head of each department of work showing that during the past year the total amount of money raised by the entire church was $4,470.16, of this amount $707.17 was for missions. During the year there were one hundred and twenty-two members received. There was a loss of twenty-six by removal, eighteen by letter, and nine by death, making a net gain of sixty-seven. The present resident membership is six hundred and sixty-seven. The entire debt on their splendid building has been paid. The church is helping a young man through Lexington school who is preparing for the ministry.

THIRD CHURCH, PHILADELPHIA.

At the annual congregational meeting of the Third Church, Philadelphia, Pa., January 13, the records showed that our church, as a whole, gave $809.00 to missions during the year. I began my twelfth year here February 1.

SANTA BARBARA, CALIFORNIA.

Total present membership 234. Added in 1908, fifty-four. Net gain for the year twenty-two. Total money raised for local expenses $2,631.99; for missions and benevolences $367.55. The average attendance at Sunday-school was 112 for the year. The Senior C. E. has twenty-seven members. Intermediate thirty-one, Juniors fifty-five and C. W. B. M. twenty-seven members. Sumner T. Martin has been pastor since August 15.

JOPLIN, MO.

W. F. Turner closes ten years and one month of service with the First Church at Joplin, Mo., Jan. 24. These have been faithful years. Exactly 2,000 persons had taken fellowship with the church at the close of the ten years. The ties that bind Bro. Turner are very strong. He was born and reared in Southwest Missouri, and with the exception of four years ministry at La Belle, Mo., his entire ministry, since graduating from Kentucky University has been given to this section. At the recent Jasper County Convention the following resolutions were passed, expressing the appreciation of the brethren of the county of his services in behalf of the Master's cause.

"Whereas, Our beloved brother and fellow-worker, W. F. Turner, who for the past ten years has been a moving spirit in the cooperative work of our county, has resigned the work of the First Christian Church at Joplin, and is soon to remove from Jasper County to Peoria, Ill., therefore be it

Resolved, That we express to him our appreciation of the inestimable service he has rendered the cause of our Master in this county and district during his long residence here, and that we deeply regret his departure from our midst.

Resolved, That we commend him to the brethren in his new field of labor as a man of earnest piety, a deep student of God's word, a preacher of spiritual power, and a wise and capable leader, and earnestly pray that the blessings of our heavenly Father may rest richly upon all his work."

F. F. Walters, of Springfield, succeeds Brother Turner, beginning his work about March 1. Brother Walters has done a splendid work at Springfield and he comes well-equipped to lead the First Church into larger things.

Villa Heights Church held ordination services Jan. 3, setting apart their minister, J. W. Fomuliver, to the work of an evangelist, and two elders and five deacons. W. F. Turner and the writer conducted the service.

South Joplin continues to go forward. There were 263 in Bible-school Jan. 10, although the day was stormy. We are pushing for 300 in regular attendance. The writer and H. M. Barnett, of Webb City, exchange meetings during Jan. and Feb.

Geo. L. Peters.

WOODLAWN, ALABAMA.

Every department of the church is in working order and the spirit of progress is in our midst. We closed the old year with two additions at the last Lord's Day service. We are observing the Week of Prayer.

J. David Arnold.

A MEMORABLE MEETING.

On the very historic ground, most hallowed in the hearts of Disciples all over the world, a most remarkable revival has just closed. This historic spot is Washington, Pa., the first American home of Thomas Campbell. The place where the Declaration and Address first saw the light. The revival was held by George L. Snively with C. H. Althiede as singer. Things which justify us in saying it was an unusual revival are better appreciated by those on the field than those away from us can possibly realize. First, the First Church had closed a great meeting, having 134 additions, in March, 1908, and had not planned another until about the same time this year.

Second, Henry Ostrom, and three associates began a great union campaign on the 25th of November and closed on Dec. 13th. The town was greatly stirred and more than 118 persons signed cards preferring the First Church. We dared to begin our meeting Dec. 20th with only two weeks and three Lord's days in which to compass this great work, and with all these seeming difficulties in the way we persuaded our Brother Snively and singer to hold this meeting. It has resulted in a great victory. Brother Snively is a loyal, eloquent, powerful preacher. He has withstood every comparison possible with other noted evangelists heard recently, and stands higher in the esteem of the people than any. There were 176 additions. A very great number of these are men. The union of divided families was a striking feature of the results. His illustrated sermons to the Bible School were such as never to be forgotten in their applications to great and vital subjects of life and religious faith.

The most remarkable and beautiful service was a special service called "A Tribute to the Pioneers," held in connection with the Communion services on the last Lordsday afternoon. It was inspirational to the young and soul-reviving to the veterans in the church.

Bro. Snively's work is not complete without his solidifying and unifying the whole membership in greatly increasing the revenue of the church by plainly and most practically enlisting the new and old members in a strong bond of fellowship in the Lord's work, home and world-wide.

The additions were classified as follows:

One hundred twenty-five confessions—eight by letter from other religious bodies.

Twenty-seven by letter and statement from Christian churches.

Sixteen reclaimed.

Of the 118 cards signed preferring Christian church in union meeting, 69 united during the revival. E. A. Cole, Minister.

Washington, Pa., Jan. 5, 1909.

WITH THE WORKERS

The church at Lawton, Okla., recently burned a $1,000 mortgage and improved their building at a cost of $200.

The Highland Park Church, Los Angeles, where E. A. Child ministers has doubled its membership in the past ten months.

A. C. Parker has resigned the pastorate of the church at Midland, Texas, to become field agent for the Midland College.

Douglass Weber, of Providence, Rhode Island, has been holding evangelistic meetings to reach the Chinamen of that city.

Miss Edna P. Dale, of Wuhu, China, recently spoke at the Christian Church, Atlanta, Ill., where Ralph Calloway is the minister.

The church at LaPorte, Ind., is in a meeting. H. M. Garrard, the pastor is doing the preaching, and C. M. Hughes has charge of the music.

All obligations for 1908 met with a balance in the treasury. Church happy and in the best condition in its history, is the word of J. T. Ogle, pastor of the church at Paris, Texas.

Drake University will have a summer school of ten weeks, this year, according to a recent decision of the Board of Trustees. The work offered will be especially adapted to the needs of teachers.

The Second Church, Brooklyn, under the leadership of their pastor, Joseph Keevil, will devote the month of February to evangelism, in which they will have the help of Lowell C. McPherson, vice-president of Keuka College.

The Iowa State Board has appointed W. T. Fisher, C. C. Davis and J. J. Grove, a committee to secure a successor to C. L. Organ, as superintendent of Christian Endeavor and of Sunday-school work for the state.

Education day approaches. It is well to note the words of President King of Oberlin, in a recent address before the students of Yale University: "The prominence of the Ohio man is due to the prevalence of the Ohio college more than to any other single cause."

The church at Oskaloosa, Iowa, has a fine Sunday-school. The average attendance for the year 1908 was 292; the average collection was $9.81. Such a church must experience a continuous growth in membership, and will be composed of those who have come into church membership through intelligent choice.

Nelse C. Hansen is the teacher of a class of seventy-five messenger boys in the Sunday-school of the Capitol Church, Des Moines. The boys are from eight to twelve years of age. This is a commendable plan, for the boys belonging thus to the same industrial class will naturally be in the more sympathetic accord.

The semi-centennial of the church at Ionia, Mich., will be celebrated January 20 to 24. There will be addresses as follows: "The History of the Disciples of Christ in Michigan," F. P. Arthur; "The Church and the Brotherhood," Dr. Herbert L. Willett; "The Reformation of the Nineteenth Century," W. T. Moore; "The History of the Ionia Church," C. A. Preston; "Isaac Errett," W. T. Moore. This celebration will be followed immediately by evangelistic meetings led by M. J. Grable, evangelist, and Una Dell Berry, singer. G. W. Moore is the pastor of the church.

C. C. Buckner goes from Aurora, Ill., to South Bend, Ind.

The church at 169th street, New York, S. T. Willis, will install a new pipe organ in the early spring.

Louisiana has a new corresponding secretary, R. L. Porter of Baton Rouge, who will also edit the state paper.

David H. Shields of Salina, Kan., delivered one of the educational addresses in Eureka, Ill., Sunday, January 17. He graduated from Eureka thirteen years ago.

The church at Paris, Ky., held a recent meeting, in which they were assisted by President R. H. Crossfield, of Transylvania University. There were thirty-six additions to the church. Carey E. Morgan is the princely leader and much beloved pastor for this church.

The Capitol Hill Church, Des Moines, Iowa, under the leadership of H. E. Van Horn, is in a meeting, assisted by John L. Brandt, Evangelist, B. L. Burdette, leader of song; Mrs. J. L. Brandt, personal worker and organizer of the Sunbeam Chorus. The meeting is succeeding beyond the expectation of the church.

The Oxnard Mission under the Southern California Board has just closed a very successful meeting, in which John T. Stivers did the preaching. E. N. Phillips has been pastor of the church for a little more than a year and has rapidly developed the church, so that now the church has declared its ability to support its work without depending upon the State Board for help.

J. J. Morgan who has been for three years pastor of the First Church, Fort Worth, Texas, has resigned, and will close his work in ninety days. Mr. Morgan's work is most highly commended, both for his pulpit ability and his efficiency as a pastor. He is indeed one of the most successful pastors in the brotherhood. Mr. Morgan's plans for the future are not announced.

The $100,000.00 endowment fund for Hiram College has been raised, and the institution will enter upon a new era. It will be remembered that Mr. Carnegie promised $25,000 on the condition that the friends of the college raise $75,000. Through the prompt and energetic efforts of President Bates this has been accomplished. Our colleges are thus rapidly coming to the front in the educational work.

In his annual report, E. R. Moore, the clerk of the church at Davenport, Iowa, says: "Through the able leadership of our beloved pastor, S. M. Perkins, the work of the church has advanced steadily on every line and in every department. The church is unified and we are all one and of one mind. The treasurer's report shows $4,537.67 to have been raised; all outstanding bills paid, and a balance in the treasury for the coming year. There has been a net increase of ninety-eight in the church membership."

The pastors of the Christian churches in Fort Worth, Texas, say regarding J. J. Morgan, who has just resigned the pastorate of the First Church: "He has been a faithful co-worker and preacher of unusual ability. His fine social qualities added to his fine scholarly instincts and training, his unwavering good judgment and spiritual force, make him fitted to lead any people to the highest planes of Christian living and service. He has done a most commendable work and we deplore the decision that takes him from us."

F. B. Elsmore has resigned the pastorate at Russellville, Ill.

President McLean held a missionary rally at the First Church, Bloomington, Ill.

C. A. Lowe and C. L. Harbord are the new evangelists of the Missouri State Board.

Fifteen Disciples are studying in the Divinity School of the University of Chicago.

I. N. McCash of Berkeley, Cal., writes in highest appreciation of the work of Lockhart, Linnitt and Garmong, in a recent meeting with the church at Berkeley.

The churches of the Pacific Coast are enjoying the privilege of hearing Walter G. Menzies and wife who were for seven years missionaries under our Foreign Board in Rath, India.

Rev. W. F. Reagor, for seven years pastor at Sacramento, Cal., has resigned to accept a call to the church at Portland, Ore. His work at Sacramento has been attended with unusual success and it was with reluctance that the church consented to his departure.

The church at Lincoln, Neb., H. H. Harmon pastor, has moved into the basement of their new church where they will worship until the completion of the building. Their problem is where to stow away their 300 members of the Sunday-school for these three months.

O. C. Bolman, pastor at Havana, Ill., is doing the preaching in a meeting held by the church there, and is being assisted by J. W. Sniff as leader of song, who has organized a chorus of seventy voices. The efforts of the church are meeting with encouraging success.

On January 17, the church at Clinton, Ill., under the leadership of the pastor, Albert Schwartz, began a series of special meetings. Mr. Schwartz, who will do the preaching, has announced his sermons, which are of an educational type. This sort of work will make for permanent progress in the church. Mr. Schwartz is doing a successful work at Clinton.

The American Christian Missionary Society, and the Disciples Missionary Union of New York City have united in the support of the work of the Second Church of Christ, Brooklyn, New York. Joseph Keevil is the minister. The church plans the erection of a building to cost not less than $50,000.00, with institutional features so as to meet the needs of that community and to in some adequate measure reach the foreign population about the church. This is business in Christianity. Only as the Disciples of Christ adopt such far reaching, effective measures will they be able to exert any influence upon the great cities. Chicago needs such work.

The current issue of the Illinois Christian News is devoted to the interests of Eureka College. The committee to raise an endowment of $250,000 in the next four years is beginning aggressive work. Other colleges have been raising large endowment funds. Drake, Butler, Hiram have made great leaps forward. The Disciples of Illinois have the money and certainly they will not allow Eureka to be behind the others in this matter. For small endowment means a limited teaching force, and this means that many of the best young people of our churches will not attend our own college at all. The people have the money. They will respond to the call.

WITH THE WORKERS

D. S. Henkel is the new pastor of the church at Harrisonburg, Va.

O. H. Williams has become pastor of the church at Lebanon, Ohio.

Colby D. Hall, Waco, Texas has been called to the First Church, San Antonio, where he will succeed W. W. Wharton.

E. E. Mack, and the church at Atlantic. Iowa, are in a meeting. Chas E. McVey is leading the singing.

C. F. Ladd reports five accessions to the membership of the church at Rock Falls, Ill., on a recent Sunday Morning.

The Virginia Christian College is erecting two new buildings; one to be used as dormitory and the other a lecture hall.

O. P. Speigel is in a successful meeting with the Broadway Church, Los Angeles. Mrs. Princess Long is in charge of the music.

The Primary Mothers' Circle is an interesting feature of the work of the First Church, Bloomington, where Edgar Jones is pastor.

James S. Meyers and the Central Church, Kansas City, Kan., will hold a meeting in February and will be assisted by W. A. Gardner.

The Sunday-schools of the Christian churches of Richmond and Manchester, Va., have an association, with H. O. C. MacLachlan as president.

The church at New Castle progresses under the leadership of L. C. Howe. There are frequent additions to the membership. They have just paid $650.99 of indebtedness.

George H. Combs, pastor of the Independence Blvd. Church of Kansas City, is to leave shortly for a trip in the Orient to Egypt and the Holy Land. James Small will supply the pulpit during his absence.

A. C. Smither has been pastor of the First Church, Los Angeles, Cal., for nineteen years, and occupies a leading place among the religious workers of the city. He was called upon to deliver the address before the Y. M. C. A. on the first Sunday of the New Year.

The 1908 report showed 160 sermons and addresses, 1564 calls, twenty-six funerals, thirty-one weddings, and 695 additions, not including the twenty-seven added at Camden Point, Mo. 598 of these came during the Scoville meetings.

W. A. Wherry, Norman, Okla., reports twenty-five additions to the church since the beginning of his work there last September. The church debt has been provided for, and the church is in an encouraging condition. They are planning to hold a tent meeting next summer.

On January 3, J. W. Lowber preached his farewell sermon of the Central Church, Austin, Texas, where he has served for twelve years, with strength and efficiency, bringing the church to occupy a leading place in the life of the city. Mr. Lowber will lecture and hold evangelistic meetings.

President McLean conducted the missionary rally at the First Church, Bloomington, January 13. Addresses were made by Ralph Calloway, Atlanta; C. C. Wisher, Bellflower; Albert Schwartz, Clinton; Dr. James Butchart, China; B. H. Sezlock, Lexington; H. L. Maltman, Saybrook; W. H. Hanna, the Philippines; C. W. Marlowe, Stanford; C. J. Robertson, Heyworth; W. G. McCooley, Normal.

The church at Lima, Ohio is in a meeting assisted by Roy L. Brown, pastor at Bellefontaine.

The Miles Avenue Church, Cleveland, Ohio, is being assisted in a short meeting by J. J. Tisdall.

W. F. Richardson and family are back from a sojourn in New Mexico. Mrs. Richardson is much improved in health.

The churches of Richmond, Va., are entering enthusiastically into the work of the Chapman meetings which began there January 6.

L. L. Carpenter dedicated the new church at Dunnith, Ind., January 17. The church is the outgrowth of a meeting held there two years ago by L. C. Howe, of New Castle, Ind.

In a recent contest between the Sunday-school at Alexandria, Ind., and one at Elwood, of the same state, the former won. Both Sunday-schools were greatly helped by the contest.

L. O. Bricker has resigned at Cameron, Mo., and accepted a call to the church at Maryville, Mo. Mr. Bricker has been with the church for four years; the best four years in the history of the church.

The Bartholomew County Christian Missionry Association, comprising all the Christian churches in Bartholomew County, Ind., has just closed a most successful year. The new trustees are Mr. T. Reeves, Joseph I. Irwin, William E. Springer, B. M. Hutchins, and William F. Kendall. It raised more money for missions the last year than in any previous year of its history.

E. L. Powell, of Louisville, Ky., and Mrs. Emma Gordon, the widow of Dr. Gordon of India, were married on January 12.

F. E. Jaynes is conducting a revival in the church at Pendelton, Ind. Mr. Mannon, an evangelistic singer, of Indianapolis is assisting him.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Twelve confessions at regular services in December, 85 in fourteen months' pastorate here. Begin evangelistic services with home forces Jan. 3 The church grants me permission to hold two or three meetings elsewhere. If you want one write me.

Dec. 30, 1908. Chas. M. Fillmore.

J. E. Davis has just entered upon the fourth year of a very successful work with the church at Beatrice, Nebraska. From the Beatrice Christian Call, the weekly paper of the church we take the following statement:

The three years' work showed 450 sermons and addresses, 4,166 calls, sixty-three funerals, 110 people married, 893 added to the church, with a membership of over 1,200 residents and a total, non-resident and all, of 1,402 members. Many of the non-resident members are regular contributors. If beneath all this tabulated work the spirit of God does not flow with power, our glorying in victories is our open shame. But our church as a mighty unit has championed the moral right of the community; it has grown to be a great missionary force and has taken a forward step in sending out its pastor as an evangelist to hold one meeting a year in other fields.

We now support Dr. James Butchart at Tu Chow Fu, China, and Dr. Mary Langdon at Deoghur, India as American missionaries to the heathen world. For these two great works no public call was made on our congregation except at children's day. The church has contracted with Herbert Yewell and his workers for a meeting to begin immediately after the Pittsburg convention or about October 15 to 20. It is putting it mildly to say our congregation is optimistic and happy.

THE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR MEMBERSHIP RALLY.

Christian Endeavor has become a world-wide enterprise. There are now 70,000 Christian Endeavor Societies with a membership of about 3,500,000. Besides training these millions of young people for service in the churches, the 70,000 Christian Endeavor Societies are doing much to promote the cause of Christian union. Certainly no people should be more active in the work of Christian Endeavor, or devoted to its interests, than the Disciples of Christ, and the fact that our people held second place in the number of societies among the various churches at the time of holding the last International Christian Endeavor Convention is a reason for great rejoicing. Our Endeavor leaders soon after, set the following as our Centennial Aim:

The Centennial Aim of Christian Endeavor among the Disciples of Christ is to be, by 1909, first among the Endeavorers of the various churches in the following:

1. First in the number of organizations.

WITH THE WORKERS

2. First in the number of members.

3. First in the amount of money given for missions through our missionary societies.

Our Intermediate and Junior Societies form a large part of our Endeavor host, and must have a large part in the work for reaching our Centennial Endeavor Aim.

The first Sunday in February is observed throughout the world as Christian Endeavor Day. For several years the entire month of February has been set apart by the Young People's Department of the Christian Woman's Board of Missions for a membership rally for Intermediate and Junior Societies—and Mission Bands, as well—these three kinds of organizations composing the department. As 1909 is not only the Centennial year of our religious movement, but also the Quarter-Centennial of the Young People's Department, especial effort will be made to hold successful rallies this year. The Young People's Department is deserving of far more consideration on the part of the people of our churches generally, than it has hitherto received. It is the chief organized work for training the children of our churches for service and giving them a missionary spirit. The missionaries upon every field are telling us that the hope of success in their work is in the children; that it is by those who are trained aright from childhood that the nations are to be evangelized. The same thing is true concerning the work of our churches in the homeland and our missionary enterprises. If, like Samuel, a child shall minister before the Lord, shall virtually be brought up in the house of the Lord, shall early know what it is to give time and thought and treasure for the advancement of the kingdom of his Lord, he will be ready to listen to the voice of God and accept the divine guidance throughout his life. Not only is the individual thus blessed, but he becomes a blessing. The societies that have been training the children for service during the past quarter of a century have also been largely furnishing the church with her efficient workers. They have given her Sunday-school superintendents and teachers, Christian Endeavor leaders, and many of the chief men and women of the local churches. And many of those who have given themselves to the ministry of the word in the home and foreign lands have been led to such consecration by some faithful Mission Band or Junior Superintendent, who wrought far better than she dreamed.

Our missionary treasuries, as well as our missionaries, have been largely increased by the work of our societies and bands. The sums credited to the children in our reports have never been large, and will never be great. But because those who were trained to give largely of their small things in childhood, have grown to manhood and womanhood, and are giving largely of their abundance, other reports of receipts are and will be such as to create great enthusiasm. The year that the Christian Woman's Board of Missions was organized, the entire receipts of the National Board, that included all our missionary work, was $5,183.43—and this from some six hundred thousand Disciples. That there was reported more than a million of dollars in each of our two last annual missionary reports is due in no inconsiderable way to the fact that some boys and girls have been trained in Children's Endeavor Societies and Mission Bands, and that a still larger company have through the Sunday-school helped the work of missions on Children's Day and been helped themselves thereby. This work of the Young People's Department has accomplished more than any of us have come to know or understand, and it deserves to be brought to the attention of the entire church during its twenty-fifth anniversary in a way that will be heard and heeded.

There is great opportunity for increasing the membership of our Endeavor Societies during the February rally. Tens of thousands of young people have been gathered into our Sunday-schools during the rallies held within recent months, which sometimes continued for three months or more in one school. All the members of the Sunday-schools who are not adults should be won for our Intermediate and Junior Societies. The same methods that succeeded in the schools will succeed in the work for the boys' and girls' missionary organizations. Please arrange for this work at once.

Mattie Pounds, National Superintendent.

CHURCH EXTENSION RECEIPTS.

Receipts for October, November and December 1908, Compared With Same Time During 1907.

Churches.

For this year	$7,646.31.
For last year	6,929.98.
Gain	$ 716.33.

Individuals.

For this year	$4,645.99.
For last year	2,847.99.
Gain	$1,797.59.
Total gain	$2,513.92.

Our comparative Statement shows that we have made a total gain of $2,513.92 in receipts. There is a gain of $716.33 from the churches. We also gained 49 in the number of contributing churches. We are grateful to churches and individuals who have helped to make this gain. There are yet quite a number of churches that ordered supplies for the Annual Offering in September and that promised to take the offering that we have not yet heard from.

The first fifteen days of January show a gain in our receipts of $2,794.31. Remit to G. W. Muckley, Cor. Sec., 500 Waterworks Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

NOTES FROM THE LONE STAR STATE.

The work among "Plain Christians" in Texas is progressing nicely. The November offering for State work far surpassed that of previous years. Quite a considerable number of Living-links have been added to the list. The recent reports from the general work all along the line have been encouraging.

The writer has recently assisted in locating A. W. Gehres of Brook, Ind., at Iowa Park, Tex. W. C. Wright at Rule, Tex; W. Pearce of Dearing, Kans., at Hamlin, Tex.; W. H. Anderson, of Paris, Ark; at Brady, Texas; and J. N. Thomas at El Campo, Tex. He has assisted lately in organizing churches at Archer City, Iowa Park and Electro. The money was raised a few days ago for a new church-house at Hamlin.

The Bowie District Convention convenes at Wichita Falls, Feb. 13-15.

The Texas Ministerial Institute will be held at Waco this year the last week of Jan. Following that is the South Texas Missionary Rally and following that immediately is the Texas Lectureship.

The South Texas Convention meets this year at San Antonio, Jan. 9-11.

The prospects in Texas for the new year are very promising. There never were more open doors in promising new fields for planting churches. Texas is a great field of growing possibilities. W. A. Boggess, Sta. A Dallas, Tex. 1-9-'09 State Evangelist.

The Young People's Department of the Christian Woman's Board of Missions this year celebrating its Quarter-Centennial and is asking the young people's societies in all our churches to each give as much as $25.00 this silver anniversary year. It is hoped also that as many as 100 societies will each give $100 in celebration of the Centennial of our religious movement. Many of our organizations have already sent pledges that they will try to raise this amount. Among these organizations are the following: Arkansas, Fayetteville Junior Society; California, Los Angeles (First Church) Junior Society; Indiana, Mishawaka Junior Society, Irvington Junior Society, Bloomington Intermediate and Junior Societies, Franklin Intermediate Society and Mission Band; Iowa, Des Moines (University Place) Junior Society, (Capitol Hill) Junior Society, Marshalltown Junior Society, Farragut Junior Society, Davenport Junior Society; Kentucky, Lexington Junior Society; Maryland, Baltimore (Harlem Avenue) Junior Society; Massachusetts, Boston Junior Society; Mexico, Monterey Junior Society; Missouri, St. Louis (Compton Heights) Junior Society, Joplin Junior Society; New York, New York (Lenox Avenue) Junior Society; North Carolina, Belhaven Mission Band, Kinston Mission Band; Ohio, Akron (High Street Church) Junior Society, Kenton Junior Society, Cleveland (Franklin Circle) Junior Society, Mansfield, Junior Society; Pennsylvania, New Castle (First Church) Junior Society; Tennessee, Murfreesboro Junior Society, Nashville (Vine Street) M. B., Memphis (Mississippi Ave.) Intermediate and Junior Society; Washington, Seattle (First Church) Junior Society.

The whole world is open and ready for the gospel now. More Living-link churches and individuals in the great work. More support from our great brotherhood, so that more workers may be sent.

OLD AT TWENTY

Return of Youth with Proper Food

Many persons who eat plenty never seem to be properly nourished.

That is because the food is not digested and absorbed. Much that is eaten is never taken up by the system as real food, and so the tissues simply starve and the individual may, as in a recent case, look and feel old in what should be the bloom of life, youth.

"At twenty I was prematurely old. All the health and vigor and brightness of youth had been, as it seemed, stolen from me. I went to work in the morning with slow steps and a dull head.

"My work through the day was unsatisfactory for my breakfast lay in my stomach like a hard lump. I was peevish and the gas in my stomach was very annoying. After supper I usually went to bed to toss half the night from sheer nervousness.

"This was all from indigestion—wrong eating.

"Finally I tried Grape-Nuts and I cannot describe the full benefits received from the food. It gave me back my health. It has completely restored good digestion and relieved me of my ailments. I steadily improved and am now strong and in perfect health."

THE FAMILY ALTAR LEAGUE.

No undertaking was ever given a more cordial welcome by Christian people than has been accorded the new Family Altar League, which is just being established by W. E. Biederwolf and a few others. The thinking portion of the church realizes that the question of how to cultivate the religious of the home is one of the most vital and most disturbing problems that the church faces today. A generation ago, in almost every Christian home in the country, the family altar was a recognized custom. Every day it was the habit of the family, young and old to gather together while the father read some portion of the Word of God, and then all would kneel as a blessing was reverently invoked upon the home and its members. Today that household is an exception where united daily prayer is a custom. In most Christian homes, the sad fact is that the scriptures are seldom opened in the presence of the family, and the children rarely hear their parents' voices raised in the home.

To him who has ever known the rich blessings of family prayer and felt its influence, and who treasures the sacred memories that cluster around the family altar of his childhood, it brings a feeling of sorrow as he realizes that the good old custom has almost passed into neglect and disuse, and that children are coming up into manhood and womanhood in homes where the scriptures is practically a sealed book and prayer unknown. One can not but wonder what will be the effect when, under such circumstances this generation rises to the place of control in the nation. It does not augur well for the future of our Christian land.

It was because of this that the League was given such a glad welcome when it was first announced to the public. A great gathering of evangelists, last summer gave it the promise of their enthusiastic support, and since the plan has been made pulic in other ways, thousands of letters have been received by the organizers and others interested. These have come from all sections of the country and from other lands, and have been unanimous in their hearty commendation of the idea.

The Family Altar League is not a society as generally understood. It has no local organization and no meeting. It simply is a nation-wide company of people who have taken the same vows and are moved by the same purposes, and membership is not conditioned on any elaborate requirements. The plan in brief is this: Attractive cards are distributed by evangelist and pastors, bearing the following covenant:

Believing myself to be largely responsible for the eternal salvation and religious training of my children, and realizing the need of God's grace for my own Christian life, I covenant with God to make it the rule of my life to gather together, each day so far as possible, the members of my family, and together read some portion of His word and and pray for His blessing upon my home.

Husband.....

Wife.....

This card is signed by the husband and wife, and sent to the headquarters of the League in Chicago, 602 Lakeside Bldg., where it is filed, and in its place is sent a beautifully engraved wall-card, certifying that, "This home is enrolled in the Family Altar League," and bearing also the words of the covenant. A detached portion of the card is given to the pastor as a reminder that the family is registered in the League. Every card is numbered, and an exact record kept of every registry. Cards will be gladly sent free to any one making application at headquarters.

WITH THE WORKERS

WHAT'S THE USE?

Say these words over to each other January 17th, Education Day:

As long as the Christian Home has a place the Christian College, next to the Christian Church, will be its chief ally.

Education cannot be bought like sardines until children are reared like oysters.

When your congregation is content to meet forever in the Court House or the Lodge Room, the whole body of Disciples may be satisfied with a State University or a Methodist College.

We must put our colleges above defense.

It is cheaper to paint the college fence and pay the the professor a living wage than to explain.

"Good enough" does it satisfy the twentieth century American, while his children tolerate the best only until it can be improved!

Alien education may not warp the head, but it alienates the heart—and "out of the heart are the issues of life."

Are United States Army Officers trained in British war colleges? And yet the science and art of fighting are not difficult there, and we are zealously cultivating our affection for the mother country.

No Presbyterian Church for me!—but a Presbyterian College for my son.

"Leaders lead." We propose to lead the religious world into union—while they are laughing at our ignorance. While they are serene in their ignorance of our existence.

Dollar for dollar, through our sons who have received alien education and bestowed their gifts where they got their skill, we have lost enough to endow all our schools.

Not the "irony of fate" but the Discipline of Providence compels us individually and collectively to sacrifice to the quick for Education.

The Presbyterians educated all four of our Pioneers for us. They and others have schooled many more on whose brains we have fed and multiplied. In "the year of a hundred years" we ought to cease at once and forever playing the Educational pauper!

W. R. Warren,
Centennial Secretary.

CLARENDON, ARKANSAS.

A few words fom a cotton-patch church might be of interest to our brethren. We are not a large congregation, and are not making much fuss about our work, yet we are doing what we can to upbuild the Kingdom in this Eastern Arkansas.

Our land is low, comparatively, and Clarendon proper is levied in; yet overflows seldom effect us in this portion of the (Monroe) county. Our church was organized in July, 1902, in our court house, by Dr. C. C. Cline, who had just closed a five weeks' meeting with 116 additions and forty-five baptisms. We met for three years in the Court house with random preaching, trying to decide whether we wanted to buy a cheap lot in the suburbs of the town, or come down near the business district to build, and pay a little more for a lot, and use a little common sense with our religion just as we do in our everyday affairs. At last we decided to carry our common ordinary intelligence into our religious activities and purchased an elegant corner lot in one block of the Court Square, and thereon erected the first concrete building in the county.

At the dedication of our little church by L. L. Carpenter we felt our work was done, that we were out of the court house and that the people would flock to the new building. Brethren, in six months our own folks quit flocking, to say nothing of outsiders. We had learned another lesson. We had learned that our efforts must be unceasing if we succeed. Most of us were resting when that fact dawned upon us, then most of us quit resting immediately. We haven't rested since. We can't. We're scared to.

We worked along on this wise for some time when at the beginning of 1908 we engaged a minister for the year, Bro. R. B. Orahood. After ten months' labor among us he resigned, and now we have called Bro. A. R. Adams of Fremont, Mich., to take the work. He has accepted and will be with us quite likely, about the first Lord's Day in February. He is recommended as being a very able and worthy man and we look forward to his coming with joy.

Bro. H. A. McCarty of Little Rock, closed a four weeks' meeting for us in November, 1908, with six additions and five baptisms. Bro. McCarty is the most sweet-spirited man we ever had in our midst. He succeeded in getting us all in a good humor with one another and then getting the community in a good humor with us. He was ably assisted by his daughter, Miss Hallie. who has an exceptionally fine voice, and is also a strong congregational song leader. She succeeds in getting everybody to sing. Their services were of great benefit to our people.

Our church has seventy-five members and is growing steadily. We had eighteen additions this year and expect to make 1909 our banner year. There are more negroes than white people in this town, and county too, for that matter. I am trying to establish a little negro church in this place and give our colored brethren the benefit of primitive Christianity. This is a great problem and I will write some facts in regard to it in another paper some time later.

THE PACIFIC COAST CHURCHES AND THE CONGO.

Our people of Oregon are engaged in the heroic task of raising money for the building of a mission steamer on the Congo. This will cost $15,000. They are making the raising of this money their Centennial task for foreign missions. Geo. C. Ritcney of Newberg, Ore., is leading this work. Dr. Dye launched it last summer. Already they have $4,000 in cash and pledges. The steamer is to be called the "Oregon." No finer work in gospel extension than this can possibly be done. The "Oregon" will be a great lightbearer to millions in the dark Congo region. Our missionaries have open to them 1,000 miles of navigable waterways in our own district there. God speed the "Oregon."

Southern California has undertaken as her Centennial aim, the raising of $10,000 for a new station on the great Momboyo tributary river. Vast multitudes await the gospel in that Congo region. Already native evangelists are winning many to Christ there. The Southern California churches already have pledged $4,000 towards this great undertaking. Besides, they have paid the expense and salary of a new missionary to the Congo this year.

Northern California has put as her Centennial aim the raising of another $10,000 for a new station at far Bonyeka, 250 miles from Bolenge. Here the native evangelists have been toiling but a few months. Already 700 people have given up their evil practices and await further instruction and baptism.

This is a great work our Pacific Coast brethren are undertaking. A work which will make thousands rejoice. The Nkundo nation is ours. Our missionaries alone have entered the field. There are 3,000,000 people to be reached. The Pacific Coast brethren are determined to have their share in this pentacostal victory.

"FROM THE LAND OF THE DAKOTAS."

Here comes a renewal for 190 and order for "Alexander Campbell as a preacher" by A. McLean. Other papers also continue—not that all belong to the same class of religious journalism, but it requires all, nay more, to represent the heart and thought of a great brotherhood. Any recent number of the Century is worth far more than the annual subscription. It is already in the front ranks and is destined to become the representative paper of the greatest movement in modern times. Our foremost young men and university scholars should not forget however, that thousands of good and faithful brethren can read with much delight and some profit the "scheme," the "plan," of salvation, the "beginning" of the kingdom, etc., who cannot appreciate the best thought of such men as Alexander Campbell, Isaac Errett, A. McLean, J. H. Garrison, H. L. Willett, and scores of others, to say nothing of the great truths yet to burst forth from the New Testament revelation.

My work under the Christian Woman's Board of Missions began in North Dakota in April of the past year. We began locally in Fargo in September. Each Lord's day we had prayer and song with the communion in some Christian home. A part of the time in November and December was spent in the field. With the second Sunday in December we began regular services in Aaker's Hall, the as-

HER MOTHER-IN-LAW

Proved a Wise, Good Friend.

A young woman out in Ia. found a wise, good friend in her mother-in-law, jokes notwithstanding. She writes:

"It is two years since we began using Postum in our house. I was greatly troubled with my stomach, complexion was blotchy and yellow. After meals I often suffered sharp pains and would have to lie down. My mother often told me it was the coffee I drank at meals. But when I quit coffee I'd have a severe headache.

"While visiting my mother-in-law I remarked that she always made such good coffee, and asked her to tell me how. She laughed and told me it was easy to make good 'coffee' when you use Postum.

"I began to use Postum as soon as I got home, and now we have the same good 'coffee' (Postum) every day, and I have no more trouble. Indigestion is a thing of the past, and my complexion has cleared up beautifully.

"My grandmother suffered a great deal with her stomach. Her doctor told her to leave off coffee. She then took tea but that was just as bad.

"She finally was induced to try Postum, which she has used for over a year. She traveled during the winter over the greater part of Iowa, visiting, something she had not been able to do for years. She says she owes her present good health to Postum."

sembly room of a business college. From the start our meetings have been well attended. Our Bible School was organized the first Sunday in January with about twenty enrolled. The pastor has a class of seven college men to begin with and hopes to increase the number. The weather has not been above zero for two weeks and once as low as thirty-three degrees below.

The State Agricultural College located here has about eleven hundred students enrolled and is located five blocks from the lot we purchased some months ago. Fargo College is also full and the two business colleges have two hundred students each. The High School is taxed and the private and parochial schools are full. It would appear, in the winter time, that Fargo had been transformed from a commercial to an educational center.

Fargo has a population of fifteen thousand, and fifteen miles of electric street car line, and fifteen miles of paved streets. She is the second city in the world as a distributing point for farm machinery. Her business this year in that line was $6,742,014.00. Her bank clearances, $32,750,010.74. Post office receipts, $80,965.47. Fargo has the second largest Masonic Temple in the United States, used exclusively for Masonic purposes. Her Shrine has fourteen hundred members. Fargo buys more diamonds than any city in the United States under forty thousand—and yet has more saloons. Yesterday the New Gardner Hotel opened to the public. The cost and equipment of the same was $350,000. This is the finest hotel in the Dakotas. This hotel is thoroughly modern and can take care of five thousand people in one day for meals and furnish rooms for three hundred guests.

North Dakota has taken the lead in the nation in the matter of pure food legislation. Professor Ladd, of the State Agricultural College, has recently won a victory for the people debarring the millers of the state from the manufacture of "Bleached Flour."

Minot, perhaps the second city in the state has the proud distinction of being the National Headquarters of the "Non-Swearing Knights of America" which has grown from three thousand to seven thousand in membership. R. C. Wynn, a conductor on the Great Northern Railway is the Secretary and chief promoter. A building is to be erected. Many men of national reputation are becoming honorary members. Space fails me to do justice to such a movement. The contention is that profanity does not pay in this world nor in the world to come.

We hope to build the coming summer. The C. W. B. M. advanced the money to purchase the lot. Yesterday we remitted to them the semi-annual interest and half of the principal. We expect to pay out in full in the early spring.

The organization of a Sunday-school was the result of a short meeting I held in McLean County mid storm and blizzard. Before the storm some came fifteen miles. After the storm others came on skees, some of whom are now attending the State Agricultural College and rooming in my home.

C. V. Pence, of Iowa, is located with the church at Ellendale, North Dakota, and is doing well. J. Winbigler, of Iowa, is located at Aberdeen, South Dakota, and good reports come from there.

May the coming Centennial not be the end but the beginning of greater things in the kingdom of God. When another has rolled around we shall all be orthodox enough.

F. B. Sapp.

sanctity that is really worth while. The lesson of Hull House in its unselfish service of its neighborhood has a mighty message for the Disciples of Christ. In the future we must take on as heartily the burden of restoring the primitive service of Jesus who fed the poor, healed the sick and opened the eyes of the blind, as in times past we have given ourselves to the restoration of primitive doctrine and ordinances.

CHURCH NOTES.

The Evanston Church will install a printing press the coming week in its building. This press will furnish an opportunity for some of the boys to learn the printing trade. The press is large enough to turn out all the printing that the church needs.

Harry F. Burns and O. F. Jordon exchanged pulpits last Sunday night to the profit of both ministers and both congregations.

The Douglas Park Church has organized to take a delegation of fifty to the rally of Chicago Christian Missionary Society next Sunday. Other churches will bring large delegations. Dr. Ames will deliver the address and the meeting will be held in the First M. E. Church at the corner of Clark and Washington streets.

The Irving Park Church will have a special service for children next Sunday.

There have been seven additions in the West End, where G. W. Thomas is now preaching.

There have been three confessions already this year at the Metropolitan Church where A. T. Campbell ministers. The church has a choir of thirty young people of high school age.

West Pullman is in a local option campaign. The Christian Church and Guy Hoover are taking a prominent place in the movement.

A company of 160 men sat down to dinner together in the Englewood Church recently. They presented C. G. Kindred with a set of the Millenial Harbingers.

BETHANY ASSEMBLY NOTES.

The prospects for a successful Assembly in 1909 are the brightest known within the history of "dear old Bethany." The National Bible School Association will hold a National Bible Conference on August 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th, as a worthy successor to the enthusiastic Teacher-Training Institute held last year. Other great features are in process of development, that will make the 1909 session the best ever held.

The Secretary's annual report at First Quarterly Board Meeting held January 6, 1909, showed the present value of the Assembly grounds and improvements to be over $32,000. The Board has been offered over $50,000 for this property. Over $5,000 in improvements and repairs have been made in the last three years.

The Program Committee consists of L. L. Carpenter, A. E. Philputt and the writer. This committee would be glad to receive suggestions in reference to the program for 1909. If you know of some good features that can be secured, write the undersigned.

Taste Is Sure Stomach Guide

A Barometer Which Never Fails, Though Seldom Believed.

"Taste is the direct guide to the stomach; and the taste buds are connected by the nerves with the stomach itself, so that they represent its health or disorder. If the stomach or its juices are out of tone, the blood is fermented by a change in the alkaline or acid condition, and these reach the mouth both directly and indirectly.

"The taste buds are in the tongue, and are mounted by hairlike projections called papillae; they cover the surface of the tongue."

"When you taste these buds rise up and absorb the liquid; inform the nerves; the nerves tell the stomach, and the food is acceptable or not, just as the stomach feels."

The above remarks on taste comes from an eminent authority and simply explains why when one smells cooking or sees food one thinks he can eat, but when he tastes he learns the stomach is out of business.

To the person who cannot taste aright, who relishes no food and simply forces himself to eat, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets hold the secret of enjoyable eating, perfect digestion and renewed general health.

Most men wait until their stomachs are completely sickened before they think seriously of assisting nature.

When your taste for food is lost it is a certain sign the stomach needs attention. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets cure such stomachs. They restore sweetness of breath, renew gastric juices, enrich the blood and give the stomach the strength and rest necessary to general duty.

Forty thousand physicians use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and every druggist carries them in stock; price 50c. per box. Send us your name and address and we will send your a trial package free by mail. Address, F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

REPORT OF NEW CALENDAR COMMITTEE.

According to a recommendation of our National Convention at New Orleans, last October, a calendar committee was appointed consisting of one member from each state society and three members from each general society. This committee had its meeting in St. Louis on January 14th, and begs to make the following tentative report:

Missionary Calendar.

First: January, vacant.

Second: February and March, home missions.

Third: April, May and June, foreign missions.

Fourth: July, Educational Day.

Fifth: August and September, church extension.

Sixth: November, state missions.

Seventh: Third Sunday of November, boys' and girls' rally day.

Eighth: December, C. W. B. M.

Ninth: Easter, National Benevolent Association.

Tenth: Ministerial Relief, supported by a pro-rata appropriation from each of the general and state societies.

Eleventh: It was further recommended that the fiscal year end and the books of our general missionary societies close on the 31st of July instead of the 30th of September.

The above Calendar was adopted as a tentative report by a vote of eighteen to six. Brother McLean asked that his protest against the motion to adopt the above Calendar should be recorded, also Brother Myhr, of Tennessee, requested his protest to be recorded. It was moved that this report be sent to our religious papers for publication. The Committee desires to emphasize that the above report is only a recommendation to the National Convention at Pittsburg next October, and does not go into effect until after that Convention, provided it shall be adopted by a joint meeting of all the Missionary Societies.

J. O. Rose, Secretary.

THE NEW STATION IN AFRICA.

Dr. Jaggard and I have been here now three weeks. We have our first building already up and are now living in it. It is built for a carpenter shop and store. We are now building the first dwelling house. It is to be a three-room pole-and-mud house, with a thatched roof. Dr. and Mrs. Jaggard will live in one room and Mrs. Eldred and I will live in another, with the third room as a common dining-room till we can get another such house built. We will have to be content with these blessings till we can get our permanent houses built. At present we have no stove, so we cook on an open fire of sticks and bake our bread, etc., in an empty oil can. However, we are well and happy to be able thus to begin the work of our Master in this needy place. We have already organized a church of fifty members and will from now on work more or less separate from the Bolenge Church. We will send out our own evangelists, etc. The field for work here is as great as it ever was at Bolenge. We are hoping to be able to report good things from Longa as the months pass by. This is a great step forward in Africa. We must follow these brave men up with every necessary equipment. This can not be done without the new Bible College at Bolenge.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

ONE awakes at times with a kind of amazement to the recognition of a duty that has long stared him squarely in the face, but which nevertheless for him, has not previously seemed to exist. Much of our moral growth consists in the broadening application of well-recognized principles, in the widening of the field of obligation. The awakening of our own generation to a new social consciousness is a marked example of such broadening of the moral life.—Henry Churchill King.

THE CONGRESS AT BLOOMINGTON.

The Tenth Annual Congress convenes March 31st., in the First Christian church, Bloomington, Illinois, and continues in session till April 2nd.

The conference of the American Christian Education Society will be held Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. All men connected with our colleges and others interested in the educational problems of the Disciples should plan to be present.

W. T. Richardson, pastor of the First Christian church, Kansas City, Mo., and president of the American Christian Missionary Society 1899, is president of the congress.

Hon. Adlai E. Stevenson, ex-vice president of the United States, will make the address of welcome. Mr. Stevenson is an active Presbyterian, a southern gentleman of the old school and Bloomington's most distinguished citizen.

One of the timely addresses of the congress will be by George B. Van Arsdall, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, on "The Unshepherded Church and Ministerial Supply."

Miss Mary McDowell, one of the most prominent social settlement workers in the country, will deliver an address.

"Sanity in Evangelism" will be the subject of a paper by Earl M. Todd, of Manchester, New Hampshire.

The session devoted to Sunday School Pedagogy will be of special interest to many. Henry F. Cope, of Chicago, secretary of the Religious Educational Association, will make the principal address.

Chas. S. Medbury, of Des Moines, is on the program for the Centennial address. His subject will be "Centennial Ideals."

Dr. Chas. Hastings Dodd, a distinguished Baptist minister of Baltimore, will address the Congress on "Closer Relations Between Baptists and Disciples."

An address on "The Church and the Laboring People" by Mr. Arthur Holmes, of Philadelphia, promises much of value and interest.

During the Congress, the committee of twenty-five on publication house, appointed at Norfolk, will have an important meeting.

The Central Illinois Christian Ministers' Institute meets in conjunction with the Congress this year, holding an all-day session on Monday, March 30th. O. W. Lawrence, of Decatur, is president.

Prof. H. L. Willett, of Chicago, will have the evening address Wednesday, April 1st, on "Devotional Material of the Old Testament."

The complete program of the Congress will be given out for publication within two weeks.

It is confidently expected that a larger attendance than any previous Congress will be recorded at Bloomington. It is not too soon for those expecting to attend to notify Edgar D. Jones, pastor First Christian church, Bloomington, Ill., that arrangements for entertainment both at hotels and private homes may be perfected.

EDITORIAL

The Union of all Christians upon the Apostolic Faith, Spirit and Service.

THE MESSAGE OF THE DISCIPLES.

Not infrequently we are asked to name the essential features of the message which the Disciples of Christ have for the religious world, in other words to point out the plea of the Christian church. It is not only essential that our own members should understand the principles that have given us life and formed the guiding elements in our history but it is of equal importance that we should be able to present these statements in such a manner that our religious neighbors and the world at large shall understand something of that for which we stand.

The Disciples of Christ constitute a body of people nearly a million and a half in numbers, whose chief insistance is upon the necessity and practicability of the union of God's people in loyalty and love to Christ, and in such forms of Christian work as may be undertaken in common by the churches. The Disciples point to the fact that the church as it took form in apostolic times had a variety of activities, embraced many diverse types of membership, and employed different methods both of organization and activity in the prosecution of its work, but was still essentially and visibly one, even as the Savior had prayed and the Apostle Paul exhorted that it might be. This realization of unity in the primitive church has always seemed to the Disciples a sufficient proof that whatever differences in plan of worship or organization may arise, these are not insuperable barriers to the unity of believers in so far as these believers are loyal to the essential principles of our holy faith.

Historically the brotherhood of the Disciples of Christ has arisen from an effort to make this plea effective among the American churches. Several reforms had gone before; that of Luther in behalf of the open Bible, that of Calvin in behalf of the sovereignty of God as over against the authority of pope or council; that of Wesley in behalf of religious fervor and personal responsibility as over against the formalism of the age and the fatalism of ultra-Calvinistic beliefs; that of the Baptists in behalf of scriptural ordinances; that of the Congregationalists in behalf of righteousness in both the individual and the state. It seemed that the time had come for a new reformation in behalf of unity as over against the divisions which were marring the beauty and destroying the effectiveness of the church of Christ.

In the progress of this movement for unity it became apparent that the chief obstacles to its success were found in human devices undreamed of in the apostolic days. Human interpretations of the Scriptures called creeds, human forms of worship called ritual, and human schemes of organization called denominations stood athwart the pathway of the church. The correction of these departures from the primitive simplicity that is in Christ were believed to lie in the restoration of apostolic Christianity. This did not imply the recall of the actual conditions in the New Testament churches, from which the growth of Christianity has happily separated us. The church has no wish to go back to the limitations of view and mistakes of conduct apparent in the churches of Corinth, Galatia and Rome. But the plea of the fathers was rather for a restoration of the faith, the spirit and the service of early Christianity.

By the apostolic faith was meant not only the teachings but the requirements of the apostles, the doctrines and ordinances of the church. By the apostolic spirit was meant the open-hearted and passionate surrender to the ideals of the Christian life, the good will, brotherhood, generosity, courage, purity and hope of the first believers in the Lord. By the apostolic service was meant that definite effort to meet the needs of society which has always been the highest proof of the divine character of the church. Christianity does not exist for its own sake but for the sake of the world into which it has come. To make that the Kingdom of God is its ideal. The realization of this ideal is its program of service.

But the question is often raised whether the plea of the Disciples is different at the present time from that which the fathers made a half century ago, and if so wherein does this difference lie. The answer is not difficult to state. There is no difference in the plea itself, but there is a decidedly new emphasis upon its practical realization. When Mr. Campbell and his colleagues brought the matter to the attention of the Christian world, it was in hope that there would be instant acceptance of so simple, logical and valuable a suggestion. Who could resist so urgent a plea to lay aside the hindering results of ambition, and to unite in the great work Christ left his church?

But the denominations were not convinced by this plea, made with such fervor and eloquence by the fathers. They were in no mood to abandon their historic names and their denominational possessions. The result was that the fathers turned their attention from primary emphasis upon Christian union to the removal of the obstacles in the way of its realization. Hence came the insistance upon the restoration of primitive Christianity, its faith, its spirit and its service, with which the brotherhood has been chiefly concerned for the past generation. Christian union has never ceased to be mentioned as the ultimate object of the movement. But in the meantime the development of the organization as a further instrument for achieving evangelistic results and furthering the plea has sometimes taken precedence of every other concern in the minds of the Disciples.

To-day the time has come for a new emphasis upon Christian union by making effective effort actually to realize it, rather than to proclaim it as a distant ideal. The Disciples of Christ are the living exponents of this great principle in our modern church life. It is theirs to set the example of co-operative work wherever it is possible. They must become leaders in practical union wherever there is work which can be done by the united forces of the community. The Disciples are by right of their plea and history the leaders in the movement. For them to be hesitant or unprepared is to deny the grounds of their existence. Their only right to have a congregation in any community is that that congregation is the fervent advocate and practical leader of united Christian effort. This is not a change of attitude, but it is a new emphasis upon the original purpose of the reformation. What it requires is a new devotion to its realization, and a new abandonment to the mighty enterprise of making effective the Savior's prayer and the exhortations of the apostles.

We believe that those ends can be achieved by our churches as they now stand, without any change of doctrine or polity, without any addition of compromise or question. It is possible for us to agree with all of our religious neighbors sufficiently to unite with them in the furtherance of the kingdom of God, in almost every way contemplated in the New Testament. Our primary efforts may well be devoted, not to formal, organic or incorporating union, which is the last step in the long and happy journey toward the goal, but rather to such strengthening of fraternal ties with all who have attained like precious faith, as to make possible our co-operation with them in civic reform, in redemptive effort, in evangelism, in education and in the score of interests which are common to the churches of any community. To some of these churches, such as the Baptists and Congregationalists, we are perhaps more closely related and more sympathetically drawn than to others. Such relations should be made the ground of still closer unity which will certainly lead to the ultimate union we seek. Vexed and disputed questions should be left for the adjustment of minds prepared by the comradeship of common service. It will be found at last that no compromise upon matters of conviction will be necessary, and that a certain freedom to follow conscience and the beliefs which arise out of patient study of the word of God must be accorded to every man. When this is done, the actual difficulties will be reduced to the vanishing point, or will quite disappear.

Meantime the duty of Disciples is apparent and paramount. As truly as Luther and his followers pleaded for the open Bible; as vigorously as Calvin and the early Presbyterians summoned men to submission to the will of God; as eloquently as the Wesleys voiced the call of the gospel to the individual; and as firmly as the Baptists insisted upon the ordinances of the early church; so truly, vigorously, eloquently and firmly must the Disciples urge upon their comrades in the work of Christ the necessity and practicability of united effort in the realization of the kingdom of God among men

IN BRIEF.

A two volume work has just appeared from the University of Chicago press, entitled, "Semitic Studies: a Memorial to President William Rainey Harper." The two volumes contain valuable papers from several of the leading Semitic scholars of the United States. The work will be a prominent and valuable contribution to Oriental literature.

Professor Robert Francis Harper of the University of Chicago has been elected director of the American School for Oriental Studies in Jerusalem, for the year beginning October 1, 1908. The school has its headquarters in a building outside the city walls, in the English colony, and is possessor of a small but valuable working library and a considerable collection of materials illustrating life in Palestine. It has also conducted some excavations, and will probably be able to join in similar work in Samaria, for which a firman has been granted to Harvard University by the Turkish government.

The first international convention of the young people's missionary movement will be held in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, March 10 to 12. Mr. John Willis Baer of Occidental College, Los Angeles, Cal., will preside at the sessions, and a long list of prominent workers in the different churches will have part in the program. It will be worth attending. The attendance is limited to twenty-five hundred delegates outside of Pittsburg.

Professor T. M. Iden, of the State Normal College of Kansas at Emporia, has sent out his usual Christmas letter to the members of the "Upper Room Class," an organization of young men begun by him many years ago at Butler College, and now numbering hundreds all over the United States. Professor Iden is in constant communication with these young men by the letters which he sends out. The local "Upper Room" is a large class of young men who meet on Saturday nights in their upper room for purposes of study of the Bible and social recreation. The far-reaching influence of this splendid organization cannot be estimated. The "Upper Room" has been an inspiration to all of its members. To this group Professor Iden wrote back from Palestine the letters now contained in his volume, "Upper Room Letters from the Holy Land."

Rev. George H. Combs of the Independence Boulevard Church of Kansas City was the University preacher January 12 and 19 and conducted the chapel exercises on the intervening days. His visit was greatly enjoyed by those who had the privilege of hearing him, and it is hoped that he may be a regular visitor on the list of University preachers. In addition to his University work he delivered the noon-day address at the foreign missionary rally, spoke at a dinner tendered him by the Hyde Park Church, and was the chief speaker at the quarterly rally of the Chicago churches, Sunday, January 19, in the First Methodist church.

Mr. Clifford Roe of the States Attorney's office, and a member of the Hyde Park Church in Chicago, gave a most informing address before the Christian ministers' association on Monday morning, January 20, on the subject, "The White Slave Traffic in Chicago." Few of his hearers were prepared for the astonishing revelations made regarding the extent to which the traffic in girls is carried on in this city. Facts indicate that it is a recruiting center to which victims are brought from all over the central and western states, and from which recruits are sent for lives of shame in all the large cities of this and even foreign countries. The horrors of this traffic, and the means of bringing it under control were discussed in a telling manner.

THE MARCH OFFERING.

The great enterprise of the churches during March is the offering for the Foreign Christian Missionary Society. This begins on the first Sunday in the month and ought to be completed as rapidly as possible so that all reports may be received early in the month.

There are churches that can be depended upon for prompt and generous offerings every year. They never fail to respond to this great duty. Their offerings are as dependable as bank notes. Such churches are not only the joy of those to whom is intrusted the work of missionary administration, but they are as faithful in other things as in this work. In fact offerings to the missionary cause are an index of the faithful church.

There are other churches which are as the workers say "intermittent." They make their offering one year and drop it another. They contribute to missions when it is convenient or when there are not too many other calls. Such conduct is proof of an irregular method of doing church work. It does not meet the requirements either of the church itself nor of the cause at large.

The watchword for the month of March ought to be, "Foreign missions, the first duty; every church in line; the full apportionment raised, and more if possible."

Recent Research in Palestine.

The Lowell institute lectures this year have been on the subject "Recent Discoveries in Palestine," by Prof. David G. Lyon. He was the director of the American School of Oriental Studies in Jerusalem last year and gave an interesting lecture on the subject before the University of Chicago Travel Study Class in March. His recent lectures in Boston dealt with the discoveries made at Tell Mutesellim, Tell Hum, Jericho and Samieh. A partial report of these lectures is here given.

In all probability Tell Mutesellim is the ancient Megiddo, or a part of it. Megiddo was the scene of a great battle in which Thothmes III. of Egypt, about 1500 B. C., won a victory over the combined kings of northern Palestine. It was a place of consequence in the El-Amarna period, resisted the invasion of the Hebrews, and figured in the battle celebrated in the song of Deborah. The Hebrews were probably not in the ascendency in the city before David's day. It was included in one of Solomon's twelve revenue districts. Here Ahaziah of Judah died after his wounding by Jehu and here the pious King Josiah lost his life in battle with the Egyptians.

Tell Mutesellim lies, like Taanach, on the southern edge of the great plain, and commands the main road from that plain across the low mountains to the plain of Sharon. It rises about 120 feet above the plain and the plateau is about 100 by 750 feet. This tell was excavated by Dr. George Schumacher for the German Palestine society in 1903-1905. As yet the results have been published only in brief in a periodical issued by that society.

The surface pottery is at the latest as early as the fifth century B. C. Near by in the large tract of ruins was a Roman settlement in which are found tiles bearing the stamp of the 6th legion. Lejun, the modern name of these ruins, seems to be derived from this occupation by the legion.

The deposit of debris is much deeper than at Taanach. At one spot a pit was dug sixty-five feet deep without reaching the rock. The types of pottery and bronze found were much the same as at Gezer and Taanach. A massive city wall about twenty-eight feet wide was found at various points on the slope, from sixteen to twenty feet below the plateau. The ruins of a great city gate estimated to be of the seventeenth or sixteenth century B. C., measured 57 by 36 feet in area.

Three great buildings were found. One, about eleven feet below the surface, of the best masonry on the tell, is believed to be of the date of Solomon. Above this building, only about three and one-half feet below the surface, was made the most interesting discovery of a jasper seal, with a lion engraved in the Assyrian style, and with a Hebrew inscription in two lines which reads: (Belongong) "to Shema, servant of Jeroboam." The Jeroboam is probably one of the Hebrew kings of the name, Jeroboam I. of about 930 or Jeroboam II. of about 700 B. C.

A second building near the middle of the tell was of Canaanite origin. Through it a pit was sunk twenty-eight feet deep to the rock, passing through seven strata of building. In the two lowest strata were found fragments of pottery of primitive character, and utensils of basalt and bronze. The surface of the rock was worn smooth and contained a number of cup holes, large and small. These cup holes have religious significance, and were connected with the ritual in some manner. Near this building, but one stratum lower, was found another large structure, which, from the character of the objects found therein, the explorer calls Egyptian. Of three noteworthy chambers two are certainly tombs, one a tomb or a storeroom. In one of the tombs were forty-two vessels of most varied form, and one of the five skeletons held in his hand four scarabs incased in gold.

Between the two buildings was found what appears to have been a sanctuary. Within an inclosing wall were two pits, one containing ashes, coals and the burned bones of animals. The second was a shallow pit with plastered walls. Its main feature was three stones, now fallen down, but formerly erect, with a fourth large stone covering them and providing thus a kind of table. In the pit were also a large pointed stone and a basalt vessel.

Tell Hum lies on the northern shore of the Sea of Galilee and is one of two sites identified with Capernaum, the home of Jesus, the scene of many incidents in the gospel history. Khan Minyeh, two miles west on the shore of the lake, is the other and more probable site of Capernaum. The synagogue, built for the nation by a centurion, was one of the spots in which the great Master taught.

The ruins of Tell Hum are extensive, but not high. There is no considerable mound as in all the other sites thus far reported on. About 250 feet from the water was evidence of a large and presumably important building. This the German Orient society explored in April and May, 1905. The building proved to be a synagogue of the Roman period. It is 58 by 80 feet in size, is divided into three aisles by a colonnade along each side and also across the back end, and had a loft or gallery above the side aisles with columns around its edge. The gable front had fallen outward. In this front were three doors, about which, as well as elsewhere in the building, was much carving of fine execution representing animals, eagles, garlands, fruits, flowers and geometrical designs. The work of excavation was not complete, but the explorers hope that it may be taken up anew. Extraordinary interest attaches to this building in the thought it may be the Capernaum synagogue in which Jesus worshiped and taught. The remains are nearly all on the site and it is thought that a complete restoration may be possible. It is of course hardly more than possible that this is really the structure honored by our Lord's presence. It is quite as likely to be of a later period.

About seventy miles farther down the Jordan valley lies the modern village Eriha, Jericho. The ancient Jericho is a mile to the northwest, beside a splendid spring called the sultan's fountain. The tell is a plateau about one-quarter of a mile long and half as wide, and rises thirty-three feet above the plain. On this plateau rise seven hillocks, averaging in height another thirty-three feet.

Its depth of 800 feet below the ocean level and the consequent heat make Jericho a difficult place to excavate. But in April, 1907, Prof. Ernst Sellin, whom we have seen at Taanach, spent three weeks digging at Jericho. He made five great pits, three in the hillocks and two on the level of the plateau. These were test diggings and the results were so satisfactory that he hopes to continue the work this winter.

Sellin found a very massive wall of burnt bricks on a stone foundation, which he believes to be the city wall. Likewise a fortress or tower 65 by 39 feet and 20 feet high, of Canaanite origin, the finest anywhere found from that early period. The stone knives and the potsherds left no doubt as to the period to which the building belonged. On the platform of the tower were two bronze hatchets and twenty-two small clay tablets of the form used for cuneiform inscriptions, but without writing.

In one of the hills was a whole series of houses, in layers, one above another. These yielded utensils of very diverse epochs, but even those from the topmost layer were of Canaanite origin. Indeed, no Hebrew remains were found on the tell, which seems not to have been inhabited after its complete destruction by Joshua. Further excavation may be awaited with great interest.

Samieh is the name of a fine fountain six hours north of Jerusalem and two or more east of the road leading thence to Nablus. It is an isolated spot, with a fine valley surrounded by lofty and bold mountains. Here are two cemeteries of Canaanite origin, in which the peasants carried on extensive secret digging last winter. The members of the American School for Oriental Study and Research made several visits to the place, studying the ancient mode of burial and the objects found in the tombs. There are three kinds of tombs, the oldest and most numerous being round wells of an average depth of ten to twelve feet communicating at the bottom through a narrow opening with a circular or oval burial chamber. Some of the chambers are as much as fifteen feet in diameter and six feet in height, with dome-shaped roof. More than 100 such tombs were opened. Very few of the kind had hitherto been found in Palestine. The bodies were placed on the floor, and in some cases seem to have been covered with earth.

The burial deposits are of unusual interest. They comprise fine weapons in bronze (battle axes, spear heads and arrow heads), objects of personal adornment and use (such as bracelets, pins, needles and pigment pencils of bronze) and pottery, both plain and ornamental, the ornamentation being either raised or painted. A comparison of this material with that found in the lower levels of the wells leaves no doubt as to its high age. Further digging in this cemetery under competent supervision is greatly to be desired.

In closing the course, the lecturer gave a tentative estimate of the value of the large amount of digging already done in Palestine. The positive information largely concerned the early times before the Hebrews came on the scene. But much indirect light is cast by the digging on Hebrew and biblical times. Great things are still to be attempted and hoped for. New friends and very many of them are needed to help the cause by their contributions. The untimely death of Prof. Theodore F. Wright, honorary secretary for America of the Palestine Exploration Fund, is a heavy blow to the progress of the work.

A Growing Work at Bolengi, Africa.

Royal J. Dye, M. D.

The work is developing most rapidly as a result of the active evangelism of the native Church. Every member is an evangelist and makes it his and her business to preach wherever they go the wonderful gospel message that means life to them and has so remarkably transformed them.

Then in their poverty they give out of the abundance of their love and joy large offerings towards the preaching of the gospel among the great unevangelized tribes in the regions of Bolengi, and send one tenth of their own members out as their heralds and as messengers of Light into the terrible darkness of heathenism and cannibalism. These intrepid evangelists go far and wide, each reaching a different section of villages and from early morning to late at night in public meetings and way-side and fire-side talks they present to the astonished, ofttimes incredulous natives, the wonderful story of God's great love. And it is a wonderful story too, friends. There is no message that carries so much of import to man as the message of salvation and redeeming love.

The Bolengi evangelists go for a period of two months and then return for a two weeks' course of training and for a rally of the workers. They are men of remarkable consecration and zeal and ofttimes take their lives in their hands as they go to far distant cannibal tribes. In several instances they have been called upon to bury the deserted dead they may find putrefying in the public highways. These are unheard of things to the natives and as foreign and repulsive to them as could be imagined and in one instance a crowd gathered to marvel at the sight of these strangers giving decent burial to their own outcast and deserted dead. Here was an opportunity for a sermon and they were not slow to improve it and as a result of that deed of mercy a crowd came down to Bolengi to hear more of that story that taught men to do such astonishing deeds. When the evangelists return from their trips they bring back with them crowds of men and women who come to learn more perfectly the "Way of Life." At Bolengi we teach and believe in the baptism of intelligent believers and so when these have learned the meaning of the gospel message they are baptised. The last letter just from the Congo, tells of the great gathering of the evangelists at Bolengi and the crowds at the meetings, so many as to fill to running over the great open tabernacle that holds a thousand people. They expect to baptize thirty-five or forty of these at once. July 8th, thirty-five were baptized and so the work is growing. For a radius of one hundred miles from Bolengi as a center, this work is going on, but the little force now at Bolengi is quite inadequate to meet the needs. Brethren, we must double the force there and then there is the call, insistent and piteous, from "Longa" for teachers. Will the church at home be recreant to her great trust and opportunity and fail them. They beg you in every petition to send them more teachers and far and beyond the reach of the present force at Bolengi stretches five to six hundred miles of waterway-highways for the messengers of the King, to parts where they have never heard of a missionary or have even the faintest idea of such a message of Love as the gospel. This is our responsibility and to us (the Churches of Christ of America) these people, lying in all the dense darkness of heathen ignorance and superstition and slavery of passion as well as of body are looking for the Light and Freedom that the gospel brings for them. Why it is such a remarkable message that they at times can hardly believe the messengers and come as far as seventy-five miles to ascertain for sure if it is really so. There is a hunger in the great region where your missionaries are working, for the bread of life and we present to you this plea. Can you brethren of the favored home-land refuse these who are so hungry for the Word of Life, the message that means everything to them?

Yours in His glad service for "Darkest Africa."

We aim at a life beautiful without extravagance, and contemplative without unmanliness; wealth is in our eyes a thing not for ostentation but for reasonable use; and it is not the acknowledgment of poverty we thing disgraceful, but the want of endeavor to avoid it.—Pericles.

Among the New Books

The Folk Afield, by Eden Phillpotts. New York. G. P. Putnam's Sons. pp. 362. $1.50.

The author of "Children of the Mist" and "Sons of the Morning" would naturally be expected to give us a book full of interest. These are short stories, some of them remarkable for their strength of characterization. "The Earthquake Child" is a really remarkable story, and a sad one, too. Other stories are "The Skipper's Bible," "In the King's Chamber," "Hyacinthe and Honorine," "Pilgrimage to Pigna," etc., all of them strong and vivid. One can see the place distinctly which is described, and feel the earthquake. One critic calls the stories "Masterpieces in miniature."

Love Affairs of Literary Men, by Myrtle Reed. New York. G. P. Putnam's Sons. Crown 8 vo. Illustrated. $1.50 net.

Miss Reed's former stories, "Lavender and Old Lace" and "Spinners in the Sun," are such delightful reading that one is glad to read her recent book by the above title. She tells in an interesting way the love affairs of such literary men as Swift, Pope, Dr. Johnson, Shelley and Keats. While they may not always come up to our standards of right they add light to our knowledge of human nature, even in great men. The double love affairs of Swift, the sensitive spirit of Shelley, the hard struggles of Poe and the ponderous attempt of Johnson to act the role of lover are all interesting and some knowledge of them may add to our appreciation of the men themselves.

Light-fingered Gentry, by David Graham Phillips. New York. D. Appleton and Company. pp. 451. $1.50.

In view of all the scandals and exposures of the insurance companies within the past two years, it seems only natural that someone should make it the subject of a story. One need not doubt for a moment Mr. Phillips' attitude toward them and wonder if he is not prejudiced, though granting he has just cause to feel so. He evidently understands the "ins and outs" of the business. Men who in domestic and social life are fine gentlemen have no scruples when it comes to business. The hero of the story is an employe of an insurance company and rapidly grows to power. He is a rather selfish, cold individual who has been parted from his wife, whom he thought dull and uninteresting and really married her for the influence her family gave him. Later she goes to New York where he is in business, to study art, to which she was always devoted. She studies with a noted teacher who falls in love with her and influences her in her dress and general ideas of social life until she becomes beautiful in face and figure, partly through this influence and partly because she feels she is understood and appreciated. She does not know that the artist loves her, but has such a high ideal of his ability that she makes an apt pupil. In the meantime she meets her former husband and he falls in love with her. It is only when he comes up to her high ideals of business integrity that she will consent to be his wife, for she also loves him. Her life influences him to such an extent that when he becomes the head of a company he entirely revolutionizes their business methods; though it is a hard fight. The story is interesting from beginning to end and is revealing, even though it "turns out well."

A Tuscan Childhood, by Lisi Cipriani. New York. The Century Co. pp. 269. $1.25.

Lisi Cipriani was the fourth of seven interesting children in an Italian patrician family. Her account of their doings gives one a good idea of the discipline and education of such a family. They had Italian wet nurses, English nurses and German governesses. The discipline was strict, and yet the children were left almost entirely with nurses and governesses. They were bright, imaginative children and Lisi seems rather old for her years. A good description of high life in Pisa and Leghorn is given, and the book is quite worth one's while.

Turkey and the Turks, by W. S. Monroe. Boston. L. C. Page and Company. pp. 327. $3.00.

This is exactly the sort of volume one wishes to have in order to understand the somewhat complicated problem of Turkish life and politics at the present time. The earlier chapters describe the growth of the Ottoman state and the character of the people who make up its widely varied citizenship. Probably there is no country in the world which gathers into its embrace as many different types of people as does Turkey and all within a comparatively small extent of territory. Turkey has lost within the past half-century one after another a score of provinces over which it once held sway, but even yet the cosmopolitan life of Constantinople and the Levant in general is a constant astonishment to the observer. Here are met Greeks, Armenians, Jews, Kurds, Albanians and Persians, as well as Europeans and Americans. An account is taken of all these different factors in the population. Mr. Monroe has written as a well informed traveler should, and has painted graphically the scenes he witnessed in the streets of Turkish cities and in the courts and palaces of their rulers. An interesting chapter is that which deals with the daily life of the Sultan. There is a selected bibliography and index.

Christianity and the Social Order, by R. J. Campbell. New York. The Macmillan Co. Pp. 284. $1.50 net.

This volume forms a third in the series growing out of Mr. Campbell's recent campaign in behalf of socialism. As the pastor of the City Temple, London, he addresses weekly the largest congregations that assemble in the metropolis. He startled all orthodox England a few months since by what was deemed his revolutionary utterances both in his book called "The New Theology" and in his sermons, in which he declared that the church was ineffective as at present organized, and that most of its theological positions were moth-eaten and worthless. In the present volume this thesis is followed up in ten chapters in which Mr. Campbell insists that the ideal of Jesus was not a church but a new society, the nearest approach to which is to be found in the teachings of the higher socialism. The value of the book is to be found in its intense enthusiasm and its strong emphasis upon the social realization of the kingdom of God. Its defects are the loose methods of its biblical exegesis and its light insistence upon the great truths of evangelical Christianity which have been the grounds of hope and redemptive service throughout the ages. The radicalism of the work makes it intensely interesting, and it is most stimulating where one can least agree with its conclusions.

The New Missioner, by Mrs. Wilson Woodrow. New York. The McClure Company. pp. 309. $1.50.

"A stirring western novel" it certainly is—and a strong one. The New Missioner is a woman who is sent to a mining town by her bishop as a missionary because of her unusual success. The camp is composed of the usual rough and hardy people who have little use for a woman missionary. The "Ladies' Aid Society" drive her off the field once, but she only leaves long enough to gather herself together and get ready to fight them on their own ground. On her return she calls at the home of the chief instigator and by literally fighting back and overcoming the strongest woman she immediately wins the respect of the ladies themselves and the community at large. She becomes very much attached to the beautiful mountain country and to her work and has wide influence for good. Finally she falls in love with a rich miner who is a fine man and really gives him encouragement until almost the time to give him his answer, when sickness and trouble among some of her parishioners brings her to a sense of her responsibility to them and she renounces love. Her lover says "I thought you were a woman, capable of love; I find you are a fanatic willing to sacrifice everything to an egotistic passion for self-expression." And he goes. It scarcely seems necessary to have made such a sacrifice, but as her lover was a man of wealth and influence, it was probably best—for she could not be a "Missioner" and a "lady of position" at the same time.

Lesson Text John 4:19-29	The Sunday School Lesson The Well of Samaria	International Series 1908 Feb. 9

We owe to the Fourth Gospel some of the most beautiful scenes in the life of our Lord. The writer is less concerned with the mere events of the Savior's ministry than with an interpretation of his attitude toward men. And the Fourth Gospel is particularly the revelation of the heart of Christ. Its incidents are nearly always chosen with reference to the teachings which they elicited from the Master. It is the Gospel of interviews with individuals. Most of those conversations with men and women which fascinate the reader of the New Testament are found in this narrative.

John in Prison.

The imprisonment of John the Baptist made it necessary for Jesus to withdraw from the close scrutiny of the scribes and Pharisees. They had been so much concerned in watching the great preacher of the desert that Jesus' ministry had thus far passed almost without observation. But now that Herod had secluded John in the fastness of Machaerus, perhaps to safeguard him from Herodias' assassins, Jesus was left in the full blaze of public interest. But it was not yet time to permit himself to be drawn into public controversies. The apostles had yet to be chosen and trained before that time should come. Jesus therefore withdrew from the vicinity of Jerusalem where the first phase of his public ministry had taken form.

Through Samaria.

"He must needs pass through Samaria." Most Jews avoided the despised people residing in the district of Samaria between Judea and Galilee. The customary route from south to north was by way of Perea, across the Jordan. But Jesus wished to lose no time, and his haste dictated the journey straight through Samaria. Perhaps also he was interested in a people whose story was told with disdain in every Jewish mart and synagogue. And so he crossed the frontier which had been the scene of more than one bloody reprisal, and made his way with the disciples northward through the increasing verdure of the Samaritan hills.

Samaritan Food.

The Jews made it a rule to eat no food that came from Samaritan markets or homes, but such food was not forbidden, even by the law of the Pharisees.

At noon on one of the days of this journey they stopped near Sychar at the well which in all the history of the land has been one of the most familiar and authentic landmarks of Palestine. Not far away the present village of Askar claims identification with the Sychar of this story. It is perhaps true, however, as some modern geographers insist, that Shechem, which was once certainly further west than its present location, was called by this name. Jesus was left alone while the disciples went into the village to purchase food.

*International Sunday School Lesson for February 9th, 1908. Jesus and the Woman of Samaria, John 4:19-29. Golden Text, "If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink." John 37:7. Memory Verses, 23, 24.

H. L. Willett

Living Water.

The woman who came to draw water at this distance from the town, in which there was evidently a plentiful spring of water, must have had good reason for avoiding the townspeople by coming to an unfrequented spot, and at the hot noon-time when rest and shade are the desire of the natives. Jesus' request for a drink of water drew from her an exclamation of astonishment, and the writer adds the explanatory statement that Jews and Samaritans have no dealings with each other. The woman drawn thus into conversation, did not understand Jesus' offer of living water, deeming it some improvement in her domestic economy rather than the spiritual gift of which he was thinking.

Holy Ground.

He then probed deep into her conscience by hinting at the story of her life, and she to avoid this thrust asked of him the settlement of the long dispute between Jew and Samaritan over the rival temples of Gerezim on the heights above them and Jerusalem far away to the south. Jesus insisted that on that small point the Jews were in the right, but that the larger question concerned not time nor place but the spirit of true worship. The spot might be any shrine or whatever place a man might occupy, for the lesson which Jesus taught men is that first revealed to Moses in Horeb, "The place whereon thou standest is holy ground." All places are sacred where men meet God.

Sacred Time.

Nor is the time important. The Jew was jealous of his Sabbaths and new moons, the Mohammedan reveres his Fridays as days of prayer, and the Christian delights to honor the first day of the week, on which the resurrection and other impressive events in our Lord's ministry took place. It is to him as to the apostles the Lord's Day. Yet it is not that other days are less sacred, for all times are alike to God, and every hour is holy. The lesson Jesus taught that outcast Samaritan woman is one which the world slowly comes to learn, and Jesus is the teacher who has made it clear. What God demands is not selection of time or place, not attitude of body or form of ritual, but the upright heart and pure, the soul seeking God whatever the circumstances may be, with full recognition that time and place and circumstances are alike holy.

The Woman's Call.

Jesus must have told the story of this interview to the disciples on their return, or at some later time; for though they were astonished to find him so absorbed in reflection upon his interview with the woman who had now returned in haste to the city, they were not left long alone. The people of Sychar came running forth, called out by the woman. She had rushed into the market place, and forgetful of her former fear and outcast life had summoned them forth with cries of "Come out and see a man that told me all I ever did." Jesus' message to her had kindled in her heart the hope of a transformed life. He tarried two days with those happy people, and perhaps among those to whom Philip preached the gospel in later days were not a few who now for the first time heard the Word of Life from the Son of God.

TO BE ESPECIALLY NOTED.

1. March offering supplies should be ordered at once.
2. The offering should be announced in good time and should be made with great moral earnestness.
3. The offering should be observed by every church at the regular time, the first Sunday in March. This is the best time in the year for this offering.
4. It requires labor and care to make necessary preparation for a good offering, but it pays in every way.
5. The March Offering Bulletin should be up in every church. It will be sent in good time.
6. The Pastoral Letters and the Missionary Voice will be seut in good time after we receive your order.
7. Remember, March offering supplies will be sent only to churches ordering them.
8. If you need additional supplies at any time, do not hesitate to order them.
9. It is hoped every Church will hold a Foreign Missionary Rally, Sunday night, February 23d. A suggestive program will be provided.
10. The apportionment of your church will be sent about February 1st. Please give it a hearty reception.
11. Every morning sermon in February should bear upon world-wide missions. No other subject will more interest and inspire a church.
12. If you are building a church or holding a protracted meeting, or if your church is in debt, these are additional reasons for a large offering for Foreign Missions.
13. The new March Offering Manual is loaded to the guards with fresh, up-to-date information on Foreign Missions.
14. You can usually register the missionary interest of a preacher or a church officer by the care and promptness with which he attends the missionary correspondence.
15. All the signs point to a large number of new Living-Link churches in the Foreign Society this year. We are expecting at least twenty-five, but there ought to be no less than one hundred.

What needs no display is virtue.

In a state pecuniary gain is not to be considered to be prosperity, but its prosperity will be found in righteousness.

Scripture John 11:1-45	The Prayer Meeting	Topic for Feb. 12
	The Sympathy of Jesus

"I don't want angels, I want folks," was the response of a dying man to the suggestion that he would soon be with the angels. He craved human companionship, as does every other man. Sympathy makes possible helpful companionship. To close the heart to the needs of others is to deny that we are human. Religion is the most absurd thing in the world to the misanthrope. A profession of faith in God by one whose aversion to men prevents him from entering into happy relations with them is evidence of insincerity or of profound ignorance of what religion is. Hence we shall hardly go astray if in studying the message of Jesus we begin with his sympathy. Once we are assured that he is quick to respond to the cry of need, we may ask what desires he admits as legitimate and what are his resources for satisfying them. There is not the slightest danger of being misled by sympathy if we remember that sympathy is an appreciation of human worth and human need and that it does not deserve the name unless it takes account of the whole man.

Sympathy for Mary and Martha.

Jesus had large plans for the world.

Silas Jones

He proclaimed a kingdom that was to have no end. His gospel was for all races and social ranks. An uninstructed admirer might have thought that the physical and mental distress of the common people of the day would not engage the attention of the Master. By a strange perversity of thought men often expect the great man to ignore simple duty. Jesus spent his time in helping the plain people. The instruction he gave his disciples was illustrated by his deeds of mercy. Mary and Martha naturally wished for him in the day of their bereavement. They were sure he would sympathize if he knew. He had always been ready to help. He understood them and he would know what was best to do. A distinguished preacher said near the close of his life that his mistake was in neglecting individuals. He had delivered sermons to his congregation rather than to the individuals in it. He had often therefore missed the heart of the gospel.

The Sympathy of Power.

It is an awful experience to feel the anguish of another and have no power to lessen it. Of course the fact that you feel with another helps that one. But that is not enough. In the presence of death there is a cry for a sure word respecting the future. If death ends all, life is robbed of its meaning. The attempts of thinkers to formulate a philosophy of this world that will be a satisfactory substitute for the hope of eternal life have never been successful. They never will be while the heart remains as a part of man. Jesus came to his friends with power. He came with comforting words and the exercise of his power in the raising of Lazarus demonstrated that he spoke with Divine Authority. Convince us that the end of our efforts is not dust and silence, and we shall have something worth while to say to the broken hearted. We shall not seem to mock when we try to comfort a friend in the presence of his dead. Furthermore, we shall not be helpless in societies disorganized by selfishness. We shall have motives that will appeal to men and grip them. Until Jesus and his outlook for man have been fully preached in a community, we have no right to believe that it is beyond the hope of redemption from strife and confusion.

Scripture Matt. 25:31-46	Christian Endeavor	Topic for Feb. 9
	Ministry to the Needy

For the Leader.

We have this week two subjects that are very much neglected by many Christians. Our Christian Endeavor work must make a large place for them.

The leader in his opening talk may speak of the way Christ ministered to the sick and the lonely, showing how much of the Gospels is taken up with accounts of such deeds of Christ's, and giving many illustrations. Then compare our lives, and show that we do not give anything like as large a proportion of our time and interest to caring for the sick and the stranger as our Lord gave.

Do not allow the meeting to pass without bringing before the society many practical plans. Bring them forward in a definite way, so that they will be acted upon. For example, have committees appointed to carry out the suggestions and report to the society at a certain time. If there is a hospital near, and your society is not doing work there, visiting the sick, singing to them, holding meetings there, carrying fruit and flowers to the patients, and doing other helpful deeds—all, of course, under the direction and with the hearty approval of the hospital authorities—then take this opportunity to appoint a hospital committee. Similar ministries may be bestowed upon the old ladies' home, the orphans' asylum, and the sick and poor of the town.

Incidents and Illustrations.

The one who visits the sick in the name of Christ always gets the greater blessing. A pastor asked an active member of his Christian Endeavor society to call upon a sick member of the congregation. The young woman had thought she could not pray aloud before others, but when that sick woman asked her to pray with her she could not refuse. So she learned to pray before others that afternoon.

"A physician's little boy sitting on the steps of his home was asked where his father might be found. 'I don't know,' he said, 'just where he is, but he is sure to be helping somebody, somewhere.' Would that the intimate friends of all Christians could give as good an account of their whereabouts!"

We reverence Gladstone for his statesmanship and mental vigor, but we cannot but love him when we read of his spending time in the midst of his arduous duties to visit the sick and friendless and to read God's word to them.

Macaulay, writing of the island of St. Kilda, tells the remarkable story that, upon the appearance of a stranger, all the inhabitants catch cold. Possibly this may explain why strangers sometimes find the members of Christian circles somewhat cold in manner. A good dose of self-forgetful interest taken by both parties on the first appearance of the symptoms would dissipate these ill effects.

A Recitation.

Let the following prayer poem by Maltbie D. Babcock be committed to memory and recited in the meeting:

O Lord, I pray
That for this day
I may not swerve
By foot or hand
From Thy command,
Not to be served, but to serve.

This too I pray,
That from this day
No love of ease
Nor pride prevent
My good intent
Not to be pleased, but to please.

And if I may,
I'd have this day
Strength from above
To set my heart
In heavenly art
Not to be loved, but to love.

The Leadership in China.

G. B. Baird.

China is pre-eminently a land of changes. She has been and is being born again. The question of all importance is, whether she is being born from above or from the world about her. Two predominant forces are influencing China to-day. One is Christian and comes through the representatives of western civilization. The other is atheistic and comes through the Japanese.

With one stroke of the pen, China discarded the educational system in which she has trusted for the last few thousand years. The once famous examination halls are now crumbling in ruins. Modern brick buildings, large, well lighted and sanitary, are being erected everywhere. She spares no money in properly equipping her schools. Her plans include almost every kind of school known to the world. Many of the schools have excellent chemical and physical laboratories, also instruments for surveying and engineering. The sad part of it is that these are mostly only for show as yet, because they have few instructors who can use them. For much of their instruction and guidance they depend upon the Japanese who prove not in the least reliable. The Chinese are not slow to see this. Naturally they hate the Japanese and have but little confidence in them.

For the last few years China has been sending thousands of her students to Japan that they might be trained and return and help their own people. More than ten thousand students were in Tokyo at one time. Here again Japan shows how unreliable her people are. They receive the students, take their money, keep them a certain length of time and give them diplomas. The Chinese say that many of the students never attend classes, never study any regular outlined work. They spend their time in revolutionary and anarchistic meetings, directed by the Japanese. The schools grant the diplomas at the expiration of the time, whether the student has done little or much work. Almost without exception these young men return to China, filled with the most deadly revolutionary and anarchistic teachings. They return to tear down instead of helping to build up the government which sent them. Do the Japanese have an underlying purpose in this? At any rate the Chinese are quick to see their mistake and have decided to send no more students to Japan. The Japanese are flooding China with atheistic books. The writings of such men as Darwin, Huxley, Spencer, Voltaire, etc., pass through the hands of the Japanese and in their transactions or rather their rewritings, they receive a new element of infidelity and are much more atheistic than the original authors intended. Japanese infidelity seems to be the most deadly the world has ever known.

This, of course, comes into a life and death struggle with Christianity. Which will China receive and make the predominant influence of her civilization? Many things encourage us to believe that she will choose Christianity. Her disapproval of the Japanese is expressed on every hand. Many leading Chinese believe that Japan has rejected the essential element of modern civilization. Although they are not Christians themselves they do not hesitate to say that the essential element in western civilization is the Christian influence.

It is encouraging to know that the Commercial Press of Shanghai, the most influential publishing house in China, is not anti-Christian. This firm publishes nearly seventy per cent of all text-books used in China. They have already published one hundred and fifty different kinds of text-books and forty others are in the press. Last year their sales amounted to $850,000. The manager issued the following statement: "The work we are doing in promoting modern education was commenced by missionaries, and I think we can claim to have continued the work in the spirit in which it was commenced."

"I am a Christian and some of the men who prepare our text-books are Christians, but ours is a non-Christian firm. Nevertheless we have never published a line in any of our text-books derogatory to Christianity and we never will publish anything of that kind."

If China refuses the Japanese as her instructors, where will she turn for others? She is sending some few students to America, but in no great numbers, and even if she did it is not altogether satisfactory. An eight or ten years residence in America or Europe renders them unfit in many ways for work among their own people. They have learned to live on a higher plane and cannot enter into sympathetic feeling with a people they have ceased to know. They have much less sympathy than the American or English who come to live among a people entirely foreign to themselves. In fact, the missionary more nearly fills this position to the satisfaction of the Chinese than any one else.

The mission schools are sending out hundreds of young men. They are not revolutionists and anarchists striving to tear down and destroy. Most of them are Christians, thoroughly trained, who love their country and who enter into full sympathy with their own people. The hospitals are training young men in the art and science of healing and most of them go out to practice as Christian physicians. The evangelists reach out into the villages and touch the great masses of the population. He has a corps of well trained native workers. Carefully he distributes tracts, Bibles and Christian books. These forces are bound to have an influence in the reformation of China. The Chinese themselves are realizing that they are the most effective influence they have.

Besides the regular missionaries, many American young men are teaching in the government schools and in wealthy private families. Opportunities for this kind of work are many and they pay well, both in money and influence.

The Chinese are rising as one body to protest against those who seek any and all mining and railway concessions. The cry is "China for the Chinese." They merely protest against those who come to make them their commercial prey. The man who comes to China to teach her people and uplift them is welcome almost everywhere to-day. The Chinese are thoroughly awake to her present needs. She is in the midst of a great struggle, a crisis. Her needs call to America and England in a loud voice for consecrated young men and women to help her. Perhaps there is no place in the world where a man's life will count for more to-day. The need calls not for tens and hundreds but for thousands. Will the young people of America answer that call?

Pardon a personal testimony. I have been in China little more than a year. I have found little about the Chinese either to disappoint or discourage me. The more I know of them the more I admire them. I believe there are no people with greater possibilities, if they are directed in the right paths. The past year has been one of the most pleasant in my life and yet only one thing brought me to China and only one things keeps me away from my home and my friends in beloved America. It is expressed in Christ's words "Go ye" and uplift men and make them better. China will welcome all who come in that spirit and may there be many, for the harvest indeed is ripe, but the laborers are so few.

HOW HELEN KELLER "SEES."

Think of one blind and deaf from early childhood who finds the world "alive, ruddy, and satisfying." That is Helen Keller's own expression; and certainly it is a unique and important human document which is promised in her essays on "Sense and Sensibility," the first to appear in the February Century. Here she tells, to the world for the first time, how she "sees" and "hears":

"How can the world be shriveled when this most profound, emotional sense, touch, is faithful to its service? I am sure that if a fairy bade me choose between the sense of sight and that of touch, I would not part with the warm, endearing contact of human hands or the wealth of form, the nobility and fullness that press into my palms."

"COFFEE GRUNTERS."

Ever See One?

Thoughtful people have a laugh on coffee cranks now and then.

"I had used coffee ever since I was a small child," writes an Indiana lady, "and have always had bad spells with my stomach.

"Last spring just after I began housekeeping I had a terrible time with my stomach and head. My husband bought a package of Postum and asked me to try it.

"I laughed at it because none of my folks would ever try it. But I made some the following morning, following directions on the package, about boiling it well.

"I was greatly pleased with the results and kept right on using it. Now I wouldn't drink anything else. I tell every old coffee "grunter" I see about Postum and all my folks and my husband's people except a few cranks use Postum instead of coffee.

"When put to soak in cold water over night and then boiled 15 minutes in the morning while getting breakfast it makes a delicious drink."

WITH THE WORKERS

Doings of Preachers, Teachers, Thinkers and Givers

W. D. Starr, of Indianapolis, will preach half time at Lizton.

D. S. Dunkleberger, of Falls City, Neb., reports the work as prospering there.

Dr. Albert Buxton reports frèquent additions in his services at Salt Lake City.

W. E. Spiva, Joplin, Mo., reports that arrangements have been made to build a new church.

James W. Johnson reports his church in Clarksburg, Tenn., to be in a prosperous condition.

A delegation from Lincoln, Neb., will go by special train to Beatrice to attend the Scoville meetings.

Fred E. Hagin, missionary to Japan, spoke last Sunday evening in the Lennox Avenue church, New York city.

L. R. Hotaling, the new minister in Hoopeston, Ill., begins his services there under very auspicous circumstances.

Miss Snowy Ditch, Fort Scott, Kans., may be addressed by pastors or evangelists needing the services of a singer.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy M. Kendall will be with the church in Angola, Ind., in a meeting to begin about February 1st.

Roy Linton Porter, of the First church, Baton Rouge, La., is preaching a series of Sunday night sermons on Temperance.

C. W. Cauble, who for more than three years has served the church at Greencastle, Ind., is going to take a trip with his wife to the Orient on the "Arabic" of the White Star line, and will spend several months in Europe.

CUBS' FOOD.
They Thrive On Grape-Nuts.

Healthy babies don't cry, and the well nourished baby that is fed on Grape-Nuts is never a crying baby. Many babies who cannot take any other food relish the perfect food, Grape-Nuts, and get well.

"My little baby was given up by three doctors who said that the condensed milk on which I had fed her had ruined the child's stomach. One of the doctors told me that the only thing to do would be to try Grape-Nuts, so I got some and prepared it as follows: I soaked 1½ tablespoonfuls in one pint of cold water for half an hour, then I strained off the liquid and mixed 12 tablespoonfuls of this strained Grape-Nuts juice with six teaspoonfuls of rich milk, put in a pinch of salt and a little sugar, warmed it and gave it to baby every two hours.

"In this simple, easy way I saved baby's life and have built her up to a strong, healthy child, rosy and laughing. The food must certainly be perfect to have such a wonderful effect as this. I can truthfully say I think it is the best food in the world to raise delicate babies on and is also a delicious healthful food for grown-ups as we have discovered in our family."

Grape-Nuts is equally valuable to the strong, healthy man or woman. It stands for the true theory of health. "There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Mr. Andrew Carnegie will give $1,250 toward the cost of the new pipe organ in the new Christian Temple, Baltimore, Md.

Clay Trusty, of Indianapolis, Ind., has taken up the work in the Seventh church, recently laid down by the lamented D. R. Lucas.

Sumner T. Martin moves to Hollywood, Cal. He has had forty-eight additions in a meeting at Rock Island, Ill., in less than three weeks.

S. M. Bernard, who closed a five years' ministry in Boulder, Colo., some time ago, has accepted the unanimous call of the church at Madisonville, Ky.

Peter Ainslie and the Temple Church, Baltimore, Md., will begin a meeting February 23d. H. F. Lutz, of Harrisburg, Pa., will help in the meeting.

The Jefferson Street church, Buffalo, N. Y., is making a heroic effort to double the attendance of the Sunday school—750 was the goal set for last Sunday.

Charles H. Winders, of Irvington, Ind., will conduct a meeting for the Greenfield church, where V. W. Blair is minister. W. E. M. Hackleman will lead the music.

E. C. Nicholson, pastor of the church in Redwood Falls, Minn., will have the help of Evangelists Buchanan and Houston, in a meeting during February.

L. B. Haskins was installed as pastor of the Twenty-fifth St. church, Baltimore, Md., January 16th, in services in which other ministers of the city had part.

P. C. Macfarlane, pastor of the First Church, Alameda, Cal., has published in most attractive form an "end of the year sermon" on "The Spirit in Which We Serve."

Dr. William Thompson of Waco, Texas, is in a successful meeting with D. E. Hughes, at Monmouth, Ill. The evangelist can be secured for other meetings in Illinois.

Joseph A. Serena and the Central church, Syracuse, N. Y., will enter into a Bible School Rally, February 9th, under the direction of Miss Eva Lemert, of St. Louis.

The church at Rock Port, Mo., wants to employ a pastor for his full time. A middle-aged man of family who can live on reasonable salary preferred. Address F. A. Sizemore as above.

Geo. A. Miller, pastor of the Ninth Street church, Washington, D. C., lectured on "Through Palestine in Saddle and Tent," before the Men's Club in the Vermont Avenue church, January 27th.

Charles E. McVay will sing for the First Christian Church of Springfield, Missouri, in a meeting in November, where N. M. Ragland is minister. Bro. McVay is now in a revival at Rantoul, Illinois.

Guy L. Zerby and his church in Tampico, Ill., have behind them a work of unusual success during last year. A long-standing debt was paid; the church was redecorated and additions equal to 50 per cent of the membership in numbers were secured. Brother Zerby's ability is recognized by a substantial increase in salary.

The First Church, Youngstown, O., recently gave a reception for thirty-six new members. These additions were the fruit of a series of sermons by the pastor, John R. Ewers, and two weeks of quiet personal work.

Scott Cook reports that the Bible school at Nelsonville, O., has had one of the best years in its history, the average attendance being 330, and the average offering $21.40. The total amount of money raised was $1,212.84.

The Sunday school of the East Side Christian church, Los Angeles, Cal., has won in a contest with the Boyle Heights school. W. G. Sallee is superintendent of the victorious school. J. N. Smith is pastor of the East Side church.

J. H. Painter, of Bridgewater, Ia., recently visited the church at Carney, Okla., and preached to an appreciative audience. Brother A. G. McCown, who is in the real estate business, informs us that Brother Painter has invested in an Oklahoma farm.

J. P. Myers, of Portsmouth, Ohio, will assume the duties of minister of the Shelbyville, Ind., church February 1. C. W. Culberson says they are planning for a great work and that Brother Myers will have the hearty support of an undivided membership.

At the last meeting of the executive committee of the Foreign Society in Cincinnati the following new missionaries were appointed:: Miss Mayme Longan, St. Joseph, Mo.; Dr. Z. S. Loftis, Nashville, Tenn.; Meade E. Dutt and wife, Lexington, Ky., and C. P. Hedges, Bethany, W. Va.

President Hill M. Bell, of Drake University, was a caller in the Christian Century office recently. He was in this city attending the Industrial Education Conference at the Art Institute. He reported a very encouraging condition at Drake, with a substantial increase for the present term in the enrollment of students.

THE CHICAGO CHURCHES.

The Monroe Street church, for which C. C. Morrison is preaching, gives evidence of its prosperous condition and the loyalty of its people by weekly pledges covering entirely the amount of current expense.

S. G. Buckner, pastor of the Harvey church, reports 20 additions so far in their meeting. C. G. Kindred has been preaching and Byron Burdette has the direction of the music.

Dr. H. O. Breeden has been secured by the Austin church for a meeting next May. G. A. Campbell has succeeded in enlisting the services of a good number of strong business men in church enterprises.

W. F. Rothenburger and the Irving Park church will hold their annual meeting this week. G. A. Campbell will be the chief speaker.

There was one addition last Sunday at the First church. Miss Mary McDowell, head worker of the University of Chicago Social Settlement, spoke Sunday morning. Ladies of the church will spend Wednesday visiting the settlement in the stock yards district.

HOW TO KILL A PRAYER MEETING.

1. Forget all about it until the hour arrives.
2. Come in ten minutes late and sit near the door.
3. Work so hard during the day that you are so tired when night comes you cannot keep awake.
4. When the meeting has begun wait for others to speak and pray. Spend your time in planning your next day's work.
5. When you take part, occupy about twenty minutes. Do this especially when the leader asks for sentence prayers and testimonies.
6. Be sure and bewail the low spiritual condition of the church.
7. When the meeting closes go out as from a funeral. You can speak with your brethren or the stranger at some other time or place.
8. If you mention the meeting through the week, tell how dull it was.
9. If the above rules do not produce the desired effect, try staying away entirely. A sure way to kill the church is to kill the prayer meeting.—E. P. Ellyson.

ANNUAL MEETINGS.

ORANGE, CAL.

Reports read at annual meeting of this church, Jan. 8, showed over $2,800 for all purposes raised, $575 of this being for missions and benevolences. Seventy-five additions to the church, mostly by conversion; president active, resident membership, 250. Junior C. E. has 35 members, Senior 62, C. W. B. M. 60, S. S. enrollment 190, and all departments doing good work. Have been serving with this noble church 3 years and 8 months. Audiences best since coming here. The outlook is bright. Two conversions since last report, one here and one at Escondido, where I did some work for the So. California Missionary Society.

A. N. Glover, Minister.

IRVINGTON, IND.

The ministerial association of Butler College, known as the Sandwich Club, whose membership is composed only of students in the college, makes the following report of additions to churches at which the members preached during 1907. By the efforts of the students alone, 714 additions; through evangelists employed to hold meetings, 85; making a total of 799. We have still to hear from three students who were in the winter and spring terms of 1907, but not in the fall term of this present school year. Their report will be sent in later. The above report represents the work of 17 students, all undergraduates.

Fraternally yours,
The Sandwich Club,
Per Frank J. Lawson, 120 Butler Ave.

CENTRAL, INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

The Central Church, Indianapolis, Ind., Allan B. Philputt, minister, raised in all departments last year $10,948.75, of which $2,570.91 went for missions and $500 for local benevolence. The church supports two missionaries in the foreign and one in the home field. There were 100 additions during the year and a loss by death and dismissal of 54. The roll numbers 1,601. The Sunday-school, in an increase campaign of three months, improved its average attendance over the summer quarter 62 per cent.

CANON CITY, COLO.

The most notable achievement of this congregation in the last year was the completion of its new church building. It now has property worth over $15,000. One hundred an seventy-five are enrolled in the Sunday-school. The C. W. B. M. gave over $300 for missions and the Ladies' Aid Society raised over $600 last year. Other departments of the church are equally prosperous.

TUG OF WAR.

That is what it is raising the money for the Hot Springs Mission church. It appears that everybody is of the opinion that everybody else is rushing money to us so fast that there is no need of their sending an offering; that there is a real danger of sending us too much, and to save us the trouble of returning theirs they will not send.

This seems to be the situation from the amount of money now being received, and at the present rate of progress, we can assure the brotherhood that I will die with old age before the work is completed. If I do not die sooner with worry and nervous prostration. What are we going to do about it? I am too busy at this time to write continuously for funds from the outside. I am occupied with raising the $5,000 which we are to raise locally. I will push this feature of the work with all my might during the next sixty days, and when through, will report results.

We expect to break ground March 1st, for the new building. We must do this in order to complete the building by the time of the New Orleans convention. I now appeal to all the brethren, Ladies' Aid Societies, to whom the ladies write, for aid and co-operation to respond at once. We must have a response. The sacrifice that you will make in responding will be small compared with the one I have made, and am making. I ask you to share this burden with me. I cannot stand the strain of the worry, of the long delay, and the strenuous effort that it takes to make a success of this work much longer.

Now altogether for once, and let us make an end of this matter. Address Mrs. S. M. Howard, 311 Ouachita Avenue, Hot Springs, Arkansas.

NEBRASKA SECRETARY'S LETTER.

J. W. Walker has resigned his half time work at Miller and would like later on to do evangelistic work. He still preaches half time in the country.

The state secretary was at Nora on the 26th of January and will be at Sterling on February 2d. At Nora we have recently started the work again, and at Sterling we have an unused house and a few brethren. We are yet to see what can be done there.

The Alma brethren have organized an enthusiastic Men's Club. Was not yet named when the report came from Bro. Rambo. In the same report Bro. Rambo announced that he has closed his labors there and will go to his farm in Wyoming. He also announced that this would close his ministry. We should be sorry indeed if this latter should be ultimately true. Bro. Rambo is an earnest, capable preacher and his work is needed. He has been caring for Alma and Bloomington.

All men's clubs should report officers and name of organization to C. S. Paine, Station "A," Lincoln, Nebr., president of the Business Men's organizations for our brotherhood in the state.

C. V. Allison reports large audiences in the meeting at Table Rock. They went to the opera house on Sunday the 19th and again on the 26th. Nine added at last report.

J. A. Parker of Arapahoe would like to hold a meeting or two. He is pastor at that place and they are preparing to build a new house of worship.

Bert Wilson supplied at Plattsmouth again on the 26th. The church asked him to continue as regular supply.

F. E. Day attended the Beatrice foreign missionary rally on Monday.

H. C. Holmes was taken ill on Lord's day evening, and unable to finish his sermon. He was better on Monday.

The Lincoln and Bethany churches have chartered a train to go to the Scoville meetings at Beatrice on Wednesday night. The reports from that meeting indicate a great ingathering. Nearly three hundred had been added when last heard from. Doubtless a full report will come at the close. The large and beautiful church building is crowded to its utmost capacity. Scoville will deliver a lecture in Lincoln at the Auditorium on Monday night, Feb. 3, as a benefit to Cotner University. It will be a great lift to the university finances. Plans are being laid also for a Sunday meeting at the same place in the interest of Havelock at the close of the Beatrice meeting.

The foreign rally at Cotner University on the 24th was well attended and is pronounced the best of the series. The addresses of the visitors were inspiring and effectual, while those of the state ministry were above the average. Our young men as well as the older one's did honor to themselves and to the state. Our Nebraska churches can be depended upon to do the right thing by the foreign offering in March.

The church at Fairbury, H. C. Holmes, minister, is planning to raise $600 for missions the current year, and to add materially to the capacity of the church for Bible school purposes.

The committee for the state convention program, consisting of C. S. Paine, chairman, H. O. Pritchard and the corresponding secretary, held its first meeting last week, and drafted the outlines of the program. The date was set for the last week in August, and the opening day will be the 22d, with the 31st as closing day. No program is prepared for either the 22d or the 23d. This materially lengthens the meeting and gives more time to the various interests represented. Complaint has heretofore been made of the short time given and the effort is made to meet this with a longer session. The time is changed so as to get away from the Epworth Assembly dates, the first week in August. The program is forming and promises to be as strong in real worth, as any we have ever had. Perhaps more symmetrical. At this early date we cannot name the speakers, but announcement will be made as early as possible. If Bro. Moninger is available for Bible school work, he will certainly be secured. It is expected that W. E. M. Hackleman will have charge of the music. It is none too early to plan for this great meeting.

R. F. Whiston's meeting at Plainview has added 24 to the church to the 26th. Go on until Feb. 2d and begin at Davis City the 5th.

J. R. Teagarden preaches alternate Lord's days at Mason City and Anselmo. Had four added at Anselmo on last Lord's day.

Brother S. A. Kopp organized a congregation at Lillian P. O., about 16 miles north of Broken Bow, in December, 1906. He has been preaching there half time since. At the regular services on Jan. 19th two confessions resulted and it was suggested that Bro. Kopp continue for a few nights. On Tuesday night 12 came forward. Wednesday 10, Thursday 10 and Friday 5. On Saturday 33 of these went to Broken Bow for baptism and two more made the good confession there. Nineteen were young men and 12 young ladies. Nine more came on the 26th. This makes a total of 48 in eight days. They have a Bible school of 52. Home department with 16 and Cradle roll with 14 members respectively. W. W. Barnes is superintendent of the Bible school. This is a great meeting. It is only a country point off the railroad, and as far as we have heard, has not even a house of their own. Bro. Kopp has preached in Nebraska for many years.

R. H. Fife and son have been in a meeting at Broken Bow since Jan. 2d. Up to the 27th there had been 70 added; 49 by baptism and 21 otherwise. The meeting was to close the 28th, and doubtless many more would respond in the closing hours of the meeting. L. N. Early is the efficient and consecrated pastor. They recently finished and dedicated a handsome church house and this is the first revival meeting held within its walls. It looks bright for Broken Bow. W. A. Baldwin.

Bethany, Nebr.

MEETING AT AETNA STREET, CLEVELAND, OHIO.

In these days of large victories in the evangelistic field we are prone to measure too much in terms of numbers. All things considered, one of the greatest victories of early January was the three weeks' meeting in the Aetna Street church led by Bro. W. F. Rothenburger, of Irving Park, Chicago. There were sixty-eight additions during the meeting and several more soon after. A large number of these were men the heads of homes. Ten families were united in the Master's service. Our success is not without cause, Brother Rothenburger being a most tireless personal worker, strong in pulpit appeal, and a strong man in his personal life we were sure of victory.

After this meeting I am a convert to the possibilities of a sane, practical and hopeful gospel for evangelistic purposes. During the whole series not a single sensational nor over-emotional statement was made. Men were stimulated to deep thought and action. No music was used other than whole-hearted congregational singing. Bro. Rothenburger declares the gospel message that is vital today in terms of today, and he found large audiences willing to hear and to accept. Our church is strong, in that we have been awakened to a realization of the power that is latent in a practical gospel.

We have extended Bro. Rothenburger an invitation to be with us next year.

F. D. Butchart,
Pastor.

BETWEEN THE DAYS.

Between the days—the weary days—
He drops the darkness and the dews;
Over tired eyes his hands he lays,
And strength and hope, and life renews.
Thank God for rest between the days!

Else who could bear the battle stress
Or who withstand the tempests' shock,
Who thread the dreary wilderness
Among the pitfalls and the rocks,
Came not the night with folded flocks?

The white light scorches, and the plain
Stretches before us, parched with heat;
But, by and by, the fierce beams wane;
And lo! the nightfall, cool and sweet,
With dews to bathe the aching feet!

For He remembereth our frame!
Even for this I render praise.
O tender Master, slow to blame
The falterer on life's stony ways,
Abide with us—between the days!

TELEGRAMS

Beatrice, Neb., Jan. 27.—The sacrifice necessary for the erection of this splendid building, the consecration that built up this Sunday school of 815 Sunday, 857 Sunday before (last week's figures being a mistake), and the zeal of this ideal pastor make this great meeting, through God's power, possible.

Chas. Reign Scoville and Helpers.

Elyria, O., Jan. 27.—In great meeting with Violette and Charleton 22 additions yesterday, 161 to date. Best meeting ever held in this conservative city. Close Thursday.

John P. Sala.

Paw Paw, Mich., Jan. 27.—Mitchell and Bilby meeting at Paw Paw—53 to date. Results beyond our expectation.

Ed. Lindsay.

ILLINOIS.

Streator.—We closed an excellent three weeks' meeting at the Central Church of Christ last night. Bro. B. H. Sealock of Lexington, Ill., preached the word and did it well. Eighteen added to the church; nearly all heads of families. Eight of these formerly identified with other religious bodies. Much good seed was sown. We organize a teacher training class this week.

Chas. D. Hougham.

IOWA.

Des Moines.—Ministers' meeting, Jan. 27, 1908. Central (Idleman), 5 confessions, 6 by letter; University (Medbury), 2 confessions; Capitol Hill (Van Horn), Shellenbarger, evangelist, 16 confessions, 3 by letter; Grant Park (Horne), 20 confessions, 2 by statement; Highland Park (Eppard), 10 confessions, 10 by letter.

Jno. McD. Horne,
Secretary.

KANSAS.

Kansas City.—Our special meeting at the North Side church closed last night, after a continuance of twenty-one evenings, with one hundred and thirty-five additions. It was held by our home forces, with Prof. Dougherty assisting as chorus director and soloist. He rendered most excellent service.

James S. Myers.

Dighton.—In meeting, conduced by home forces, 24 accessions; 12 by primary obedience, 8 by letter or statement, 4 from other bodies.

Wm. M. Mayfield,
Minister.

Kensington.—Meeting here continues; 90 additions, 80 confessions. All adults except 5. Can make a date for next month.

Edward Clutter,
Evangelist.

NEW YORK.

Columbia Ave., Rochester.—Our meeting in the Columbia Ave. church closed last night. Total number of those coming forward 5, of which number 29 have already been baptized. Eighteen others made the confession and are yet to be baptized. This is a good meeting for the conservative city of Rochester. J. S. Raum, of Troy, N. Y., did the preaching. He is forceful, tactful, truthful and tireless. Arthur Borland did the singing. His address is 345 Genesee St., Rochester, N. Y. He is a good leader of song and a good soloist. He would like to be kept busy all the year as a singing evangelist.

J. Frank Green,
Minister Columbia Ave. Church.

OKLAHOMA.

Carney.—Five additions by statement. Eld. Lee May, of Enid, Oklahoma, preacher for us every fourth Lord's Day. He is a splendid young minister and has a bright future in store for him. The additions were brethren who have recently moved from the north, and we are desirous for more of our people to come and cast their lot with us in the new state. We expect to have services at least half time in the near future.

A. G. McCown,
Elder.

Avard.—Ten days ago I closed a meeting at Avard with 102 additions to the church. There was no organization here when I came. A church has been organized and every department in good working order. Am remaining here a few Sundays till they can get a strong preacher for full or half time.

Mrs. M. Wilson Mason,
Australian Evangelist.

Edmond.—Good day yesterday. Five added; one by confession and baptism; four by letter. Ten for January at regular services. Would like to arrange now with a good, live church to hold a meeting next summer.

R. E. Rosenstein.

Ponca City.—J. B. Born and L. Ward Mailley are with us in a meeting. Thirty-nine additions the first week, and we are but entering into the harvest.

Stacy S. Phillips,
Minister.

Reds and Blues Contest Buttons

REDS AND BLUES Contest plans have proved wonderfully successful in Y. M. C. A. work and are proving more so in Sunday school work. By making use of our Reds and Blues plans you can easily double your school membership in a month or six weeks. You can break up irregular attendance in a very short time. You can raise large sums of money for your needs. You can secure church attendance, bringing of lesson helps, bringing of collection, coming on time.

The Reds and Blues plans please because they set everybody at work heartily and enthusiastically and because each leaves the school in a healthy condition when the contest is ended.

Each Reds and Blues plan requires dividing the school into two sections—Reds and Blues and appointing captains, one or more, for each side, a social or other treat to be given at the close of the contest, when those on the winning side receive ice-cream and cake, and the losers crackers and cheese, or some other attraction to celebrate the close of the contest and the victory. Treat is to be paid for by the school. Complete instructions sent with each order.

Price, 1n lots of 10 or more (sent assorted, one-half each color), 1½c each, postpaid; 50 or more, 1c each, postpaid.

Secretary.

MARCH OFFERING NOTES.

We are in the day of a new era in world-wide missions. The inhabited world is now explored. The last man has been found. Since Thibet has been practically opened there is no longer a hermit nation. The churches of the world now know their task and stand face to face with the problem.

The penetrating power of commerce has made it possible for the missionary to get to the last community on the globe with comparative facility. China is operating about 4,000 miles of railway, and nearly 2,000 more are under construction. Steamship lines cross every water and touch every island.

The large gifts from the Foreign Mission fields themselves to Christian work, showing the liberality of both native churches and missionaries, ought to encourage our churches at home to make generous offerings. These gifts last year aggregated $44,000. If our churches in America gave as do our churches on the mission fields we would raise $1,000,000 for world-wide missions.

The three great hindrances to the progress of the Foreign Missionary enterprise are Ignorance, Prejudice and Indifference. They are "the lion in the way." If these three can be removed then the way will be open to the world's evangelization.

All the signs point to a large number of new Living-Link churches in the Foreign Society this year. We are expecting at least 25, but there ought to be no less than 100. This step will help a church in its new building enterprise, help it to wipe out an old debt, help it in every good word and work.

If you have not seen the new March Offering Manual, published by the Foreign Society, you ought to order a copy at once. It embraces 48 pages, strikingly illustrated, and is loaded to the guards with fresh, up-to-date information upon the all-absorbing question of Foreign Missions. Facts are the fuel with which the missionary fire is kindled, and this manual contains a large amount of facts.

The growth of the work of the Foreign Society in the Philippine Islands ought to inspire every church. The people are constantly asking to be baptized. We now have nearly 3,000 members. Remember this work has been planted only just a few years. The work is suffering for lack of missionaries, and buildings, and printing presses, and schools; but in spite of it all the work has gone forward by leaps and bounds.

Every morning sermon during the month of February should bear upon the subject of world-wide missions in all our churches. No other subject will more interest and inspire a church.

The Foreign Society has a large vision and is expecting better things still for 1908. The income should be greatly increased. Not less than 5,000 churches should be enlisted in the March offering, and $350,000 should be raised without any kind of question. To this end let us labor.

A larger number of preachers and church officers than ever before are taking special interest in enlisting non-contributing churches in the March offering. Some are undertaking to enlist all in a given district. A large number are taking hold with alertness to get every church in their respective counties to give. No more valuable service can be rendered. It is as important to interest a church in missions as it is to organize a new church. Many of our churches are weak and dying for the want of world-wide vision, and a larger interest in all Christian service.

If your church has not ordered March Offering supplies, address a postal card at once to the office of the Foreign Society, Cincinnati, Ohio, and they will be furnished promptly free of charge.

The apportionment of all the churches for Foreign Missions will be sent out from the office of the Foreign Society February 1st. Let each apportionment be cordially received. It is hoped that careful plans will be made at once to meet such apportionments. Last year 1,060 raised the amount suggested. It is confidently believed that a much larger number will reach their apportionment this year.

NEW YORK NEWS.

We are now in the fourth week of evangelistic meetings with John T. Brown, of Louisville, Ky., and about fifty accessions thus far. Bro. Brown is a manly, honest and capable evangelist. His knowledge of the Bible and the experience gained in extensive travel, with a fine disposition, make him a valuable man. He never offends people of other churches. Among his auditors here have been a number of Roman Catholics. He has done us good.

I have been preaching round about Wellsville in Allegany county and hope to see our three churches in the county strengthened and others established within the coming two years. Bro. W. H. Rogers, of New England, has recently come to Hallsport, seven miles from Wellsville, and Bro. J. H. Gardinier is in Scio, four miles from here. They are exceptionally spiritual men and blessings to their churches.

Jefferson Street church, Buffalo, held its annual meeting and mortgage burning service the evening of the 23d, and but for our meetings here, I should have accepted the invitation to be present. About seven years of my ministry, beginning fifteen years ago, were spent with that beloved church. When I went there from Atchison, Kansas, there were 300 Disciples in Buffalo. When I was called to Havana, Cuba, in 1899, we had 1,300 members in the four churches. Jefferson Street church is being blessed with Bro. B. S. Ferrall, minister.

Bro. R. H. Miller, minister of the Mother Church, Richmond avenue, announces their annual meeting for the 29th. Things always grow for good where he is. And it is reported that the Forest Avenue church is enjoying growth in every way, as never before, with Bro. B. H. Hayden, minister. The other church enjoys the ministry of one of our Jefferson Street boys.

Our church here in Wellsville gave $1,000 to missions last year. We have the best all-round Bible school in the county, superintended by Paul B. Hanks, equal to the best I know. Our Bible school offerings in the year were about $500. A history of the origin and experience of this church, started twenty years ago, would be interesting and valuable to our brotherhood. Bro. A. J. Applebee was the original backer of this plant of the Lord.

CHURCH LETTERS.

Hugh Wayt.

A letter of commendation or dismissal ought not to be given unless it means something. It should express the honest conviction of the official board and congregation from which it comes. Many are granted as a matter of course for the mere asking. Good, bad and indifferent members all receive the same form.

Some letters granted ought to read about as follows: "This is to certify that the bearer, Smith Jones, united with the church about seven years ago. He was regular in attendance and paid some to the support of the church for several months, then he became negligent in attendance and now comes only once or twice a year. This is his standing and he is not in fellowship at all, as he pays nothing to the support of the church at present. We gladly turn him over to you and if you can do anything with him we shall be thankful indeed."

Nothing approaching this work has ever been attempted before. In a series of splendid pictures the great and impressive scenes in the Bible story are depicted, true in color, costume, landscape, and all details to the life, the country and the time. ¶ To make the men and women of the Bible actual, living characters to their pupils is one of the first duties of the Sunday-School teachers, and no better help can they find for this than in the Tissot pictures. ¶ The whole world acknowledges that J. James Tissot was the greatest artist that ever lived, so far as Biblical subjects are concerned.

Only the unparalled success in the higher-priced editions makes possible this phenomenally low offer now. ¶ These pictures have received the unqualified endorsement of the leading clergymen and Sunday-School teachers throughout the United States. ¶ Nothing could be more helpful, and interesting, and delightful, when one is reading the Bible, than such a graphic interpretation of sacred stories. ¶ In no other way can the Bible stories be made so real and actual to children. Should be in every home.

The Messiah: A Study in the Gospel of the Kingdom. David McConaughy, Jr. 12mo., cloth, net $1.00.

In two parts. I. Aiming to trace the outlines of the peerless portrait of the Messiah as depicted by Matthew. II. A series of devotional meditations adapted for the "quiet hour."

Things That Are Supreme. James G. K. McClure, D. D. College Sermons. 16mo, cloth, net 75c.

Eight sermons by the popular president of McCormick Theological Seminary. These sermons were recently preached to the students at Harvard, Yale, Cornell, Princeton, Illinois, Wisconsin and Chicago.

Christianity's Storm Centre. Charles Stelzle. A Study of the Modern City. 16 mo, cloth, net $1.00. Mt. Stelzle believes that if the Church can be aroused to face the problem, investigate the conditions and alter its own methods it will win the fight for uniting the church and the laboring masses. He is hopeful with the well founded optimism of the man who knows from experience both sides of his question.

The Eternal in Man. James I. Vance, D. D. Cloth, net $1.00. Dr. Vance has the rare gift of stimulating and arousing both head and heart. These chapters dust off the commonplace of human life and its experiences and show the eternal part of us that lies underneath.

The Supreme Conquest. W. L. Watkinson, D. D. Net $1.00. To the list of great preachers who have made the British pulpit famous, the name of William L. Watkins has long since been added. His books are eagerly sought by up-to-date ministers everywhere, and are bought with equal appreciation by the general public.

God's Message to the Human Soul. John Watson, D. D., (Ian Maclaren). The Cole Lectures for 1907. Cloth, net $1.25. A peculiar and sad interest attaches The Cole Lectures for 1907. They were delivered, the author having suddenly passed away during his visit to this country, and within a few days of the date of the appointment that brought him to America. Fortunately Dr. Watson had put these lectures into manuscript form; they are therefore preserved for the wider circle of appreciative readers.

The Modern Sunday School in Principle and Practice. Henry F. Cope. Cloth, net $1.00. This volume by the General Secretary of the Religious Education Association constitutes an invaluable guide for the management of the Sunday School under modern conditions. He presents the results of all the newest experiments both with primary, adolescent and adult grades.

China and America Today. Arthur H. Smith, D. D. Cloth, net $1.25. Dr. Smith has been for 35 years a missionary to China. In this capacity he has learned much of China, which in another relation might be denied him. Being a statesman by instinct and genius, he has taken a broad survey of conditions and opportunities, and here forcibly presents his criticisms of America's strength and weakness abroad, especially in China.

Palestine Through the Eyes of a Native. Gamahliel Wad-El-Ward. Illustrated, cloth, net $1.00. The author, a native of Palestine, has been heard and appreciated in many parts of this country in his popular lectures upon the land in which so large a part of his life was spent. His interpretations of many obscure scriptural passages by means of native manners and customs and traditions is particularly helpful and informing.

The Continent of Opportunity: South America. Francis E. Clark, D. D. Profusely illustrated, net $1.50. Dr. Clark writes a thorough-going tour of examination, covering practically every centre of importance in South American continent. Panama, Chile, Ecuador, Peru, Argentine, Brazil, Paraguay and Uruguay. Dr. Clark's prime object has been to collect information of every sort that will help to understand the problems facing Christian Civilization in our sister Continent.

The Man That the Ages Want.

"The man who is strong to fight his fight,
And whose will no force can daunt,
While the truth is truth and the right is right,
Is the man that the ages want.
He may fail or fall in grim defeat,
But he has not fled the strife,
And the house of earth shall smell more sweet,
For the perfume of his life."

CHURCH EXTENSION NOTES.

Two annuities have been received recently by the Board of Church Extension, $500 is from a sister in Des Moines, Iowa, a member of the University Place Church, of which Bro. Medbury is pastor. On February 1st an annuity gift of $4,000 came from a brother in Kansas. This last is the 211th gift on the annuity plan. For information concerning the annuity plan, address G. W. Muckley, Cor. Sec., 600 Water Works Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

At the meeting of the Church Extension Board on February 4th, there were fifteen applications for aid from twelve different states, aggregating $36,000. These are the applications which have accumulated in a little over a month. A million dollar church extension fund is needed speedily.

BAPTIST CONGRESS ADDRESSES.

The addresses delivered at the Baptist Congress at Baltimore in November by Baptists, Free Baptists, and Disciples on the "Organic Union" of the three bodies have been published in a separate pamphlet, and are now ready for distribution. The pamphlet contains the addresses delivered by Rev. Warren G. Partridge, D. D., Prof. A. S. Hobart, D. D., Rev. Frank M. Goodchild, D. D., and Prof. Geo. E. Horr, D. D. (Baptists); Prof. Alfred W. Anthony, D. D., Pres. J. W. Mauck, LL. D. (Free Baptists); and by Rev. F. D. Power, D. D., and Errett Gates, Ph. D. (Disciples).

At a conference of the representatives of the three bodies it was decided that the importance of the theme and the character of the addresses made it desirable that they reach a larger audience than was present at the Congress. It was agreed to print the addresses separately and distribute them among the ministers and others who might desire them in the three bodies. I asked for 1,000 copies to distribute among the Disciples. Please announce to your readers that any one who may desire a copy may have one free of charge by sending name and address to Errett Gates, 5464 Jefferson avenue, Chicago, Ill. They will be sent as long as they last, and if the call for them exhausts the supply and warrants it, another supply will be secured.

The cost of the printing and distribution of the 1,000 copies will amount to about $75.00. I agreed to be responsible for the share that was set apart for the Disciples. If any of our readers desire to make a contribution to help bear the cost, send it to the undersigned. If more than the amount needed should be contributed the balance will be turned into the treasury of the Congress of the Disciples. Errett Gates.

WHAT MISSIONARIES HAVE DONE.

Missionaries have translated the Bible into about seven-tenths of the world's speech.

Missionaries have done more than any one class to bring peace among savage tribes.

One missionary alone, Robert Hume, in India, distributed through a great Indian famine $1,000,000 of relief funds.

"Perhaps the one most useful drug in medicine is quinine and the world owes it to the Jesuit missionaries of South America."—Dr. Keene.

All the museums of the world have been enriched by the examples of the plants, animals and products of distant countries collected by missionaries.

The export trade of the United States to Asiatic countries jumped from about $58,000,000 in 1903 to about $127,000,000 in 1905, which was due chiefly to missionary influence.

Missionaries were the first to give any information about the far interior of Africa. They have given the world more accurate geographical knowledge of that land than all other classes combined.

It is to missionary efforts that all South Sea literature is due; there is not a single case on record of the reduction to writing of a Polynesian language by another than a Christian worker.

It was missionaries who discovered the Moabite stone, thus unlocking the records of a forgotten empire; also the Nestorian tablet, by which a new chapter in early Christian history was recovered.

African rubber was first discovered by Wilson of the Gaboon mission; Khaki, the dye used for soldiers' uniforms, was discovered by a missionary of the Basel mission on the west coast of Africa.

During the nineteenth century missionaries reduced to writing for the first time 219 spoken languages, for the purpose of Bible translating. Bishop Patteson alone gave a written form to twenty-three Melanesian languages, and made grammars in thirteen of these.

The missionaries have expanded the world's commerce. The trade with the Fiji Islands in one year is more than the entire amount spent in fifty years in Christianizing them. A great English statesman estimated that when a missionary had been twenty years on the field, he was worth in his indirect expansion of trade and commerce ten thousand pounds per year to British commerce.

A mother is a mother still,
The holiest thing alive.
Coleridge.

The Union of all Christians upon the Apostolic Faith, Spirit and Service.

THE BLOOMINGTON CONGRESS

The annual Congress of the Disciples of Christ is now almost within sight. It will assemble in Bloomington, Ill., March 31, and April 1st and 2nd. In another column we print the program and a message from Edgar D. Jones, the pastor of the First Church in Bloomington, whose hospitality will be enjoyed by the Congress. The central position and the interest of the program promise to make this the best attended Congress in the series of gatherings since 1899 when the first one was held in St. Louis.

The purposes of the Congress are quite different from those of our national conventions. The latter are inspirational in character and concern themselves with the activities of the church in its organized work of missions, education and philanthropy. The Congress on the other hand is the open forum for the discussion of questions of the hour, but is not legislative in any sense. It is understood that no votes are taken at the Congress, save such as have to do with the very limited field of organization for its continuance from year to year. All the more valuable therefore are its deliberations because of their purely suggestive character and the impossibility of their becoming in any sense a legislative feature of our brotherhood.

When the Congress was first discussed in August, 1898, in a company of Disciples which felt that the time had come for such a gathering, it was suggested that the following departments of thought, with others, should be recognized upon the programs of the Congresses from year to year. 1. Education, 2. Biblical study and literature, 3. Theology, 4. Literature, including notices of recent books, discussions regarding our own literature, and special literary themes, 5. Christian worship, 6. Church organization and Methods, 7. Sociology, 8. The pulpit, and 9. Christian Union.

It will be seen by any one who studies the programs of the Congresses in the past, or the forthcoming gathering at Bloomington, that these ideals have been steadily kept in mind. A wide range of themes has been surveyed, but every one of them falls more or less directly under some of the above rubrics. The Congress is therefore the educational center for the pulpit and class-room workers among the Disciples of Christ; while every other group in the brotherhood is certain to find help and inspiration in these sessions.

R. E. A. CONVENTION.

The fifth convention of the Religious Education Association is to be held in Washington, D. C., February 11 to 13, and the theme is to be the relation of morals and religious education to the life of the nation. The program which has just been received is exceedingly attractive. Many of the most prominent educators and religious workers in the country are to participate in the session. More than a hundred addresses and papers are to be presented, on such subjects as "Enlarging Ideals in Morals and Religion," "The University and Social Conscience," "Young Men for the Ministry," "Graded Curricula in Sunday Schools," "Moral Training in the Public Schools," "The Relation of Fraternal Education to the Life of the Nation" and "The Education of the Conscience of the Nation."

One of the particularly interesting features of the convention will be the reception of the delegates at the White House by President Roosevelt, on which occasion the president will deliver an address. On the evening of the same day, February 12, addresses appropriate to Lincoln's Birthday and its general significance will be delivered.

The complete program, with full information for those who desire to attend the convention, will be furnished by request to the executive office, 153 La Salle street, Chicago.

JAMES SANFORD LAMAR.

A telegram from Howard T. Cree, Augusta, Georgia, received last week, brought the sad word that James S. Lamar had entered into rest Thursday, January 30, at the home of his son, Judge Lamar, in that city. Death came to this servant of God in his seventy-ninth year.

James Sandford Lamar was born in Gwinnett county, Georgia, May 18, 1829. He graduated at Bethany College in 1854, and was selected as pastor of the Christian church in Augusta, beginning his pastorate during the yellow fever epidemic of that year. He continued to occupy the pulpit for nearly thirty years and saw his congregation grow from a handful, meeing in a schoolhouse until the erection of the present church, to a large and influential congregation.

He took a lively interest in the various activities of the city, and was identified with its charities, and was for several years president of the Augusta Orphan Asylum.

Mr. Lamar was a man of high literary attainments, and throughout his long life was esteemed as one of the most scholarly men of the Christian church. He was co-editor with Dr. Daniel Hook and Dr. A. G. Thomas of the first periodical published by the Disciples in Georgia, The Christian Union. In 1859 he published his first book, "The Organon of Scripture, or The Inductive Method of Interpretation," and this was followed by his "Commentary on Luke," and "First Principles and Perfection, or the Birth and Growth of a Christian," and later by "Memoirs of Isaac Errett."

Several years ago the church which he served so long as pastor, conferred upon him the title of pastor emeritus, as a token of affectionate esteem, and his presence at the services was always noted with pleasure.

The death of Bro. Lamar removes a loyal Disciple, than whom none gave himself more freely to the cause he served. and none was of wider influence in southern states especially.

PASSING STRANGE.

It is strange how the missionary propaganda is ignored by many students of oriental affairs and by many Christians. Benjamin Kidd says, "It is not improbable that to the future observer, one of the most curious features of our time will appear to be the prevailing unconsciousness of the real nature of the issues in the midst of which we are living." Lecky, the historian, writing of the beginning of Christianity, speaks to the same effect. He said, "No more did the statesmen and philosophers of Rome understand the character and issues of that greatest movement in all history, of which their literature takes so little notice. That the greatest religious change in the history of mankind should have taken place under the eyes of a brilliant galaxy of philosophers and historians who were profoundly conscious of decomposition around them; that all these writers should have utterly failed to predict the issue of the movement they were then observing; and that during the space of three centuries they should have treated as contemptible an agency which all men must now admit to have been, for good or evil, the most powerful moral lever that has ever been applied to the affairs of men, are facts well worthy of meditation in any period of religious transition." Dr. Gulick of Japan, states that it is beyond dispute, that no more potent though silent influence is exerted in the removal of race-misunderstandings and prejudices, and for the upbuilding of the era of good-will between the white and the yellow man, than is exerted by Protestant missionaries. Viewed in this light the missionary enterprise becomes of the highest national and international importance.

Under the direction of Rev. Charles Stelzle, head of the labor bureau, of the Presbyterian church, correspondence courses may be taken by ministers in the study of applied Christianity. For some time these courses have been open to Presbyterians, but yielding to the demand created by the timeliness and practical value of the study and the efficiency of the leadership of Mr. Stelzle in his field, instruction will not be limited to Presbyterians. The increasing interest among Disciples in labor problems and kindred social questions gives assurance that many will wish to avail themselves of an excellent opportunity for further study along lines so practical. We shall publish in an early number an outline and description of this course.

Correspondence on the Religious Life

George A. Campbell

Ardent had seen enough of men, knew enough of human nature and was sufficiently acquainted with the schools of religious thought as not to be astonished at Critic's expressed doubt, but nevertheless replied with the unction of a stump speaker: "That we are to continue after death in glorious consciousness is as great a certainty to me as is my presence here with you two preachers." Great affirmative assertions have the peculiar effect upon Critic of some time bringing out the comedian which had a large place in his soul. So with a broad grin on his large mouth and his eyes laughing with cynical irreverence he answered: "Well, Ardent, I would like to hold your bodiless soul up against the light and see what kind of a thing it would appear to be. Woudn't it be a funny spectacle?" All laughed but none felt that the remark was in keeping with the theme of discussion.

Ministers talk on the sacred themes so much that some at times assume a flippant familiarity therewith.

Men take off their shoes the first time they visit holy ground; but the everyday inhabitants of the place are apt to be vulgarly indifferent to its sancity.

After the laughter had subsided Ardent said, "I am an optimist in everything and for three hundred and sixty-five days in the year, and a fraction thereof. This exuberant and universal optimism I carry over into my belief of the immortal dead. Yes sir. There is no ending. We are ever going to continue on and up. It is optimism you need, Mr. Critic, just robust, laughing, hilarious optimism."

"Optimism is alright," replied Critic, "if it be accompanied by clear thinking, otherwise it is simply comfortable delusion, and you must know, Ardent, that there is not a single rational argument for believing in immortality. Truth is best even if it hurts. The truth at any cost, even at the cost of all our fondly preserved religious delusions, is the object of our age. The day for hugging falsehood to your breast, caressingly petting and calling it good is past. You, Mr. Ardent, are living with the men of the superstitions centuries if you are clinging to irrational beliefs."

Ardent had been to school as well as Critic and his pride was slightly touched. At such times he defended himself by relating the names of the philosophers and church historians and psychologists he had studied under. After going over the list he said: "So you see there are great authorities on my side as well as on yours. In fact there are more."

Argument never makes progress when the disputants begin quoting "authorities." "Authorities" are often "blind men who cannot see afar." In our religious discussions we had best look to the tried light within us and go as far as we can in its rays—for there are no others that can illumine the upward way. It is good to listen to "authorities" and learn what we can from them. But to lean upon them for enduring support is for the cripple to trust the tiniest reed. Only as we ourselves have appropriated truth should we use it in our confident assertions. Every soul that seeks for support the authority of another must be a lean soul. And then the earth's great have no eyes to see beyond death. They are as limited in their vision as the most humble of us.

The argument between Ardent and Critic was now well started. It continued well towards the close of the afternoon. They touched upon many phases of the absorbing subject. We will indicate but a few.

Ardent, I would have you understand that I am strictly scientific and philosophical in my thinking. But I find no difficulty in affirming that the dead shall live beyond the grave. Why, all nations possess that faith. The very universality of it argues its truthfulness.

Critic. It argues nothing of the kind. It rather argues the selfishness of the race; and the lack of man's imagination. He exists now. He is used to being conscious. He has so little imagination that he cannot think of himself as being other than he now is.

Ardent. Instinct is never false. The animals are divinely and infallibly guided by it. Do you think their instinct is truer than the intuition of immortality within the bosom of man?

Critic. Life is full of delusions. Instinct often errs. To believe a thing is not to make it so. Life has much of the decoy. Instinct does not guard against it. The bird-going-South-in-the-winter-theory has no scientific application to the subject in hand. The illusions of life are everywhere. The mirage promises to the traveler life, but instead gives him death. Once I saw a sparrow apparently with great pleasure washing itself in water. But it turned suddenly to zero and the poor wet bird froze to death. Its instinct served it poorly.

Ardent. Nothing can be destroyed. Matter but changes its form. Is it reasonable that mind so trancendently greater than matter can be destroyed? No! It must go on, amid all changes. It cannot pass into nothingness.

Critic. Matter is wonderfully changed, though not destroyed. If your reasoning holds so may mind be. And then who knows but what mind is closely related to matter?

Ardent. This life is a probation. We just begin to learn to love here when we have to go hence. There must be some other world where our love shall come to its fruition and where the probation of this life will be seen to be meaningful.

Critic. Your theory of probation is not true. Is this life a probation for the countless children who die in infancy? Is it a probation for them who are born to crime? Is it not a place where many learn to hate rather than to love? Is it a probation for the idiots? No; it is an idiotic theory that fails to square with the facts of life.

Ardent. Very well, your argument I will use against you. Everybody does not seem to have a square deal here. In the next world everything will be made right. The very injustices of this life demand another.

Critic. "If a man cheats you once you must seek another deal with him so that he can be over liberal? Not so. If this world is unjust what right have you to suppose another would be better?"

Ardent. "Because the God who made us is just and loving and will certainly some day correct all wrongs."

Critic. "What reason have you to believe in God at all? There is no God. There is a great force in the world but a God as we have been taught never. Have you ever heard him or seen him? Or seen any one who has? No. Nature is all. There is no eye to pity and there is no ear to hear. All your beliefs in immortality rest on the assumption that there is a God; but resting on the greatest of false assumptions they must soon pass away and we will live in the light, reason, cold reason if you choose to call it such. But it is truth, and we must hold to truth at any cost."

After this sweeping negation of Critic there was silence for a few moments, after which Average said, I have not seen God, but I know Him and be assured Critic he does exist, is here now, is everlasting and we shall dwell with him forever. There are evidences that you are ignoring. You, with your eyes in the dust, are missing the stars. Your own best self has not been talking this afternoon. It is your more sensual self—narrowed by too much academical criticism that has been negating all our cherished beliefs. Your soul has evidences, if you would but cultivate them, or even if you would not suppress them, that would lead you to a firm belief in God and the eternal ongoing of yourself. Christ is a revelation to every soul who opens his heart to him. You have entirely ignored him this afternoon.

Critic. "Well, Average, it seems that you can never come to the modern way of thinking. Your mysticism is mist; and Christ too is ever shrouded in unpenetrable mist. Nothing can be proved of him. No miracle ever having happened, of course, he never rose from the dead. That is a pure figment.

Average. Critic, did death ever claim from you any very intimate friend?

Critic. No, but our beliefs can never rest in sentiment for if—

There was at this point great commotion in the refreshment place and on the street. Critic with ashen face grabbed his hat and was off before the others knew what was the matter. As he rushed out they heard him say in a weird wild voice never to be forgotten, "My God, the Iroquois Theater is on fire and she is there!"

A MOTTO FOR TO-DAY.

Once among the Scottish highlands, Queen Victoria, storm-stayed, took refuge in a cottage. Not till after she had gone did the simple-hearted housekeeper learn who it was she had been sheltering under her roof. Angels, kings, queens, princes, and princesses have been entertained unawares, but whoever today opens his home to the stranger in the name of Christ, entertains Christ Himself.—C. E. World.

The Awakening of the Lion

John Ray Ewers

Is the church at a crisis? Is the church always facing a crisis? Perhaps we are always passing through a crucial period. One wonders, however, whether every period in the last nineteen hundred years of our ecclesiastical history has been as full of mighty revolutionary forces as this period in which you and I live. On one side it is a time of golden materialism, and on the other of various mystical cults. Here are the vast multitudes of working men arrayed against the money barons. Dr. Crapsey insists that we are standing at the death-bed of a great religion, while Dr. Torrey thunders the shibboleths of orthodoxy in the ears of mixed hordes. Socialism grows with phenomenal rapidity. Its leading English exponent loudly denies his faith in God, Jesus and the church. Socialism is surcharged with many of the ideals of Jesus and many of its leaders challenge our ministers in the zeal and enthusiasm of their propaganda. Labor unions in their demonstrations of brotherliness throw down the gauntlet to the cold, dignified churches that are accused of not even noticing the strangers that hesitatingly (or in quest of copy) venture within the gates. Higher criticism gives an entirely new point of view to Bible study, while modern science gives an entirely new place to the church. Present-day philosophy gives a new perspective to all life and thus to religion. Modern invention reduces the world to a tiny ball, flashing wireless messages, throbbing with commercial industry, girt with hoops of steel, humming the tune of unending toil.

These are but a few of the many movements that rush and swirl in our present world. In the midst of all this stands the church—a rock in the flood. The church is challenged but is meeting the challenge. The church is misunderstood, hated and avoided by many, but the church was never as vigorous nor as powerful as to-day. In many ways the church needs more careful adjustment to the times. Intellectually and socially the adjustment is not now perfect, but Jesus is big enough for every age, and wise heads and loving hearts inside the church are seeking with all their might to correlate Jesus and modern conditions. "The gates of hell shall not prevail." The church shall endure. It shall do this because the sons of the kingdom are willing to love, suffer, toil and teach as Jesus did.

Not only is the church rapidly adjusting herself to the intellectual and social conditions but there are certain great movements appearing inside the church that augur well for the coming days. Chief among these is religious education, as evidenced in the wonderful Sunday school movement. This is phenomenal and epoch making. Another great movement is seen in the organization of the women. And finally the men have awakened. The church MAN is now a factor to be reckoned with. He has shaken off his lethargy. He has entered the arena. Sin trembles at his approach. The lion is awake. The modern man was not awakened roughly by the sharp prod of a desperate church. Gradually the sight of the human Jesus has taken the place of the vision of the ghostly Christ. Jesus, Lion of the tribe of Judah, has challenged the hearty admiration of virile men. To be like the real Jesus and to do work to-day in his spirit is the master motive, the ruling passion. Denying one's self and carrying a cross, men glory to tread in the footsteps of Jesus. The Christ of the scourge purges the modern city and hamlet, drives out the saloonkeeper, the grafter, and the sinner of every variety. Who dares to say that the ideals of Jesus are not very evident in the public opinion of to-day? Who dares to question the motive and the power of the churchman of this present time?

One of the most significant movements of modern times is the simultaneous awakening in nearly all the churches Protestant and Roman, of the men. In New England, the Roman Catholic Hibernian society boasts that it has taken the place held formerly by the Puritans The Romanists have one million men organized in America. The various Protestant bodies (our Protestant groups are nearly as closely united as the many divisions inside the Roman hierarchy) have thousands and thousands of men organized.

The tremendous vigor of this movement is only realized when one pauses to consider that it has taken place in spite of the intense commercial demands, in spite of the blunting effects of modern materialism, in spite of the demoralizing effect of much self-indulgence, in spite of the supposed decay of faith, in spite of the amusement craze, in spite of the rise of the cults, isms, societies and unions. Simultaneously and voluntarily this army of men has appeared. The optimist rejoices.

A writer in a recent magazine has rightfully said that too much time was spent upon methods. The one question is "How?" No method has awakened the men, no method will awaken others, no patent process will solve the problem of men in the church. The men have gotten together in response to the call of the human Jesus. The all-controlling idea is to do Jesus' work in modern society. Loyalty to him and therefore to his work is the secret of power. Only the big, brave, virile man of to-day is a Jesus-man. You cannot bait him with a pink tea. You cannot hold him with a silken thread. You cannot amuse him with a silly performance. He is "Business in Christianity." He is a king. He is a lion.

Having said so much regarding the "commanding purpose" of the men's movement, let us admit that there are some factors, in the business of reaching and holding and using men, call them "methods" if you will, that are vital. Among others the following may be mentioned:

(1) The type of men which predominate in any given congregation determines the type of men attracted and held in that church. Broad, free, cheerful, liberal, truth-loving, public spirited, devotional men will attract after their kind and vice versa.

(2) The type of preacher in the pulpit as well as the kind of men in the pews, is a factor and an important one in the attracting and guiding of men. Given a preacher who is a prophet of the living God and a disciple of the living Jesus, who is intellectually, morally, socially strong, clean and gracious, who is, with all this, virile, possessing that something called "manliness," and the men naturally gather round him. They are as loyal to him as ever was Napoleon's old guard.

(3) Sane evangelism is a powerful factor in winning men. By sane evangelism I mean that earnest, insistent upholding of Jesus which, after due teaching and emphasis upon the necessity of decision, leads a man to gladly and whole-heartedly accept Jesus as an ideal and inspire in life and work. Such evangelism will not lack enthusiasm nor persistence.

(4) When men are won by the attractiveness of Jesus, as set forth in the message and in the personalities of the men of the congregation and of the minister, then men are to be held by giving them large tasks to perform Jesus was not concerned in little, petty, trifling performances. When he talked of work he meant something that called for the most heroic effort, and the exercise of the utmost nerve and heart. Blood and iron were in his "work." Men are concerned in action. Give them the task of cleaning the Augean stables of local municipal filth. Give them the task of religious education in the church. Commit to them the work of carrying the financial load of the church in a manly way. Give them work harder even than their own business demands, and they will accept it gladly and feel and know that they are doing something worth while.

(5) The Sunday school is of so much importance, and is an organization already at hand, therefore, let me speak a word especially about men's work in it. One of the very best methods of getting hold of men is by means of the Men's Bible Class. Men should also manage the school and shape all its policies. The Sunday school cabinet should be nine-tenths men.

(6) The Men's Club is of value just in proportion as it has some worthy purpose in view, and holds to that. The object may be evangelistic, educational, benevolent, or some other equally lofty and unselfish aim. The club is a means, not an end.

The details of all these methods must be worked out to fit every local situation. Thus there would be a great difference in their adaptation to a country parish, and to a parish in an industrial center. But the adjustment is delightfully possible.

This new army of men needs directing. God send us a prophet! God send us a group of unselfish men who, under Jesus, can and will lead us out against the hosts of sin. The liquor traffic is trembling to its fall. Grafters are on the run. Corporate injustice is being attacked. Oh, men of the churches, arise and smite. Follow your king to victory.

Large Sermons in Small Space

Gleaned From Speeches in Missionary Rallies.

A comprehensive grasp of the Scriptures from Genesis to Revelation finds a purpose of universal evangelism. Every service of a church of Christ ought to be a missionary service. If you would lead in giving you must give.

Lawrence, Kan. Wallace C. Payne.

We have in this rally three missionaries; Weaver from Japan, McLean from Ohio, and Warren from Pennsylvania, and many native helpers of Kansas, all laboring to the one end—that this mind be in us which was also in Christ.

Add mission study to the work of your young men's and young women's Bible classes and put the romances of missions into your Bible school library for the girls and boys.

Myron C. Settle.
Bible School Secretary of Kansas.

Why am I interested in missions? Principally because I have known so many missionaries. Look at the story of the Bolengi Church, and then say whether Dr. and Mrs. Dye were justified in tearing their hearts out by going back to Africa and leaving their little children here? Yes, though Mrs. Dye was so sick for a year that the girls had to come to her bedside to be taught.

Mrs. Wallace C. Payne.

About nine years ago I met Dr. McLean in Cairo. Since then I notice you have trebled your offerings. If you will send him around the world again I believe you will be giving a million a year in ten years! The Laymen's Movement aims at $50,000,000 a year from America for missions. That is an average of five cents a week from each of us. Is that too much?

The great work of the church is to go and tell the world of Christ. Stamped upon the constitution, organization and offices of the church is the missionary purpose of its existence. If we want to be angels over there we must be missionaries here. If we have a plea that justifies our existence, we must be the most missionary people in the world.

FOREIGN MISSIONARY STATISTICS OF THE WORLD.

The latest statistics of the combined Foreign Missionary effort of the Protestant world shows the following:

Stations and out-stations	33,582
Number of missionaries	15,178
Native helpers	92,442
Communicants or native church membership	1,598,644
Added last year	137,714
Number under instruction	1,272,383
Total amount contributed for Foreign Missions by all Christendom last year	$21,418,869

These figures show a gain of nearly $3,000,000 over the total receipts of the previous year. The native contributions in the missions connected with the societies of the United States amount to the noble sum of $1,339,300. It should be kept in mind, however, that statistics of this kind can not possibly present the full extent and influence of the work accomplished by missions, since there are results of far-reaching importance which can not be tabulated, which are witnessed in every mission field.

Among the New Books

"Tuberculosis," Prize Essay by S. A. Knopf, M. D., Fred P. Flori, 514 E. 82d Street, New York City. 25 cents in paper, 50 cents in cloth.

This pamphlet of 104 pages is the prize essay submitted to the International Tuberculosis Congress at Berlin. The prize was 4,000 marks, or $1,000. It has since been widely published in the different languages with the purpose of staying as much as possible the ravages of consumption. It is full of suggestions to those afflicted, and to those who wish to avoid the danger of contagion.

The Way of a Man, by Emerson Hough. New York. The Outing Publishing Co. pp. 345. $1.50.

Readers of Mr. Hough's "The Mississippi Bubble," will open this book with anticipation of graphic and picturesque descriptions of American life in early days, and they will not be disappointed. The hero is a young Virginian, whose early tragic loss of a revered father compels him to make a long journey to the then unsetlted West in order to find Colonel Meriwether, commander of the United States troops on the Indian frontier. The time is just at the opening of the rebellion, and the heated state of politics forms a portion of the background of the story. In the journey across the plains John Cowles meets and falls in love with the daughter of the man he is seeking, who was his father's partner in extensive land operations in West Virginia. The complications arising from a previous engagement with a Virginia girl, the separation of Cowles and his new sweetheart from the caravan and their romantic and unconventional life together during months of wandering in the wilderness, on the overland journey, form a series of exciting incidents which gather momentum until they reach a romantic sequel back in Virginia. There is not a dull page in the book.

Poems and Songs, by Thomas Curtis Clark, St. Louis, The Christian Publishing Company.

This volume includes seventy-five poems by an author whose writings are familiar to readers of The Christian Century, for a number of his poems have appeared in its columns. Among some of the titles are "The Way That Leads Back Home," "Island of Dreams," "My Pilot Knows," "Three Lullabies," etc. The book is bound in silk cloth with gold top and is printed from handset type. A delightful volume both in content and mechanical makeup.

Lesson Text John 4:43-54	The Sunday School Lesson The Nobleman's Son	International Series 1908 Feb. 16

H. L. Willett

The Nobleman's Son.

The interview between Jesus and the woman of Samaria took place on the journey northward from Judea to Galilee. The latter was the northern of the three provinces into which Palestine west of the Jordan was divided. As we have already seen, Jesus' departure from Judea was occasioned by the imprisonment of John the Baptist, which turned public attention from the preacher of the desert to the Man of Nazareth. More than this, Jesus was as fearless in denunciation of evil as his great forerunner, and was likely to be in the same danger that had overtaken John, owing to the anger of Herod's court at his outspoken denunciation of their sins. The conversation with the woman at the well led to a two days' stop in Sychar. Then Jesus went on into Galilee, braving the likelihood of neglect on the part of his own people, for he himself was a Galilean.

Not Without Honor.

But when he arrived in the north the people of his native district received him with honor. He had remarked that no prophet is honored in his own land; but the Galileans with their impulsive friendliness were more strongly attracted to him than were the men of Judea. For once the proverb seemed wrong. These northerners had many of them seen Jesus and Jerusalem, and his words and works had prepared the way for their welcome when he arrived in the north.

His return into Galilee was to the town of Cana, where he had relieved his mother's suspense by providing wine at the marriage of some member of their family. From that gala occasion they had all gone down to Capernaum on the seashore, at the northern end of the sea of Galilee. Perhaps, however, Jesus' mother had returned to Cana during his stay in Jerusalem, and he now came to take her to their home in the larger town by the sea.

The Official's Request.

But while he was in the mountain village of Cana an official of the government of Herod Antipas, having heard of his fame as a healer, came to him and begged him to go down to Capernaum where his son was very sick. Perhaps he had heard that Jesus was returning from Judea and that in the south he had cured many sick people. At any rate he begged of him a visit to his home. There is nothing to indicate that he was one of Jesus' followers, but in these early months of our Lord's ministry the line between his disciples and the rest of the people was not very clearly drawn. None of the people were hostile to him as yet. The Pharisees had not created a sentiment of hostility against him. It was quite natural therefore that this nobleman should seek from him, even though he was a stranger, that assistance which none of the physicians he had employed could render. The child was desperately sick, at the point of death; a father will break down all reserves of hesitance at a crisis like that.

An Impatient Father.

The answer of Jesus to his request seems at first sharp and severe. It could hardly be supposed that the nobleman was merely seeking for a sign of Jesus' power. Perhaps the Lord was disappointed that he should be sought merely as a healer of disease rather than as a teacher sent from God. Perhaps to his words of rebuke for mere curiosity, the love of the miraculous, were addressed more to the multitude than to the nobleman. It is evident that they formed the text of a considerable discourse. The nobleman was all impatient to have Jesus leave for Capernaum. Every moment seemed an age to him until they started. At last, as Jesus still continued to speak, he interrupted him with an urgent request that he would come at once lest they should be too late.

The Test of Faith.

Jesus turned to him with a word of comfort which showed at once that there was no necessity, nor was there any intention on his part, of going down to Capernaum with him. He said, "Go thy way; thy son liveth." The father was to return to his home confident that the power of Jesus had been exercised in his child's behalf. This was putting his faith to a severe test. If Jesus did not go and there should be any failure of his healing power at that distance, it would be impossible to return to secure his personal presence before the child died. But he did not hesitate when Jesus bade him return in confidence to his home.

Down to the Sea.

He started down from the hill-region of Cana to the sea. This wonderful body of water lies in the hollow of the hills six hundred feet below the level of the Mediterranean. It was the scene of much of Jesus' ministry. Upon its waters he often rode in the little sailing vessels owned by his fisherman disciples. On its margin were the most thriving cities of Galilee. The only one of them which now survives, Tiberias, was just rising into being in Jesus' day; all the others have disappeared. So totally have these sites vanished that it is still an eagerly debated question whether Capernaum is to be identified with the ruins at Tel Hum near the Jordan on the northern border of the lake, or with Khan Minyeh two miles to the west.

The officer made his way down the road to Capernaum with anxious heart. It was the day after Jesus gave him the assurance. Their conversation had been held at one o'clock, and on the following morning as he was nearing Capernaum he was met by some of his own household who assured him that his son was past the crisis of his disease and would recover. It must have seemed like life from the dead to him. Upon inquiry he learned that the very hour at which he began to mend was that in which his own conversation with Jesus had taken place. The proof was complete; at least it seemed to him no mere coincidence, and his faith took hold upon the Lord with love and reverence.

Centurian and Nobleman.

The reader of this narrative will instantly recall the story of the centurian's servant in the synoptic Gospels, as given in Matthew and Luke. The scene of this healing is Capernaum. In this case also Jesus is requested by a stranger to heal a member of his family, and when the Lord assures him that a visit is unnecessary he accepts with cheerful faith the assurance Jesus gives. In both instances the emphasis is upon the faith of one who was not of Jesus' circle, and in both instances such faith, not always found even among his own disciples, was a comfort to the heart of the Lord. His joy in the acceptance of his word without question is one of the interesting and almost pathetic features of a ministry so little understood by even his best friends.

COMFORT BY THE WAY.

I journey through a desert drear and wild,
Yet is my heart by such sweet thoughts beguiled,
Of Him on whom I lean—my strength and stay—
I can forget the sorrows of the way.

Thoughts of His love! The root of every grace,
Which finds in this poor heart a dwelling place,
The sunshine of my soul, than day more bright,
And my calm pillow of repose by night.

Thoughts of his coming! For that joyful day
In patient hope I watch, and wait, and pray;
The dawn draws nigh, and midnight shadows flee,
And what a sunrise will that advent be!

Thus while I journey on, my Lord to meet,
My thoughts and meditations are so sweet
Of Him on whom I lean—my strength, my stay—
I can forget the sorrows of the way.

Dr. Elliott I. Osgood, Medical Missionary at Chu Cheo, China, has written a tract on "The Key that Unlocks the Door of Heathenism." In him we have an eye-witness of medical missions. I shall therefore give his words on their value.

The Need.

The scale of living is so low and the ignorance so dense, that when an animal dies it may be cut up and used for food. Death stalks in the path of such gross ignorance. The kitchen refuse is thrown out at the front door and forms into a cesspool; the result is typhoid fever. There is no relief from pain but the deadly opium pipe. The number of its victims is increasing at an appalling rate. A diseased eye is farther irritated by dirty hands and clothes until the eyelids are drawn in by the cicatricial tissue. The final result is opacity of the cornea. Ingrowing toenails become an adjunct of bound feet, making the large toe a festering sore. Abscesses, ulcers, fistula, and all their relation, run riot under the cover of dirty, gummy plaster. Their repulsive appearance is hid from the human eye, but natural drainage is denied, and the vitality is weakened by the poison forced back into the system. A piece of injured or diseased bone must be allowed to slowly disintegrate and discharge itself in the form of pus.

Silas Jones

The Results.

Common laborers have refused pay for little helps rendered to the doctor, because of his kindness to them. Mighty evangelists have come from the ranks of opium sots, saved by the foreign doctor from the toils of the opium demon. Thousands caught their first glimpse of the Christ at the hospital and are humbly following him today.

The large part of the servants and assistants employed in the hospitals are taken from the ranks of those who have themselves been healed. These have learned the ministry of love from the medical missionary and are pouring it out upon others who are now suffering as they once suffered.

Grateful patients in the higher classes subscribe willingly to the mission hospital and found others at their own expense among the poor people. The men called to man these new hospitals are the students of the medical missionary. They carry their religion as well as their medical skill into the new sphere of activity.

The medical missionary bears a heavy responsibility in the developing of the new church. Upon him must fall the duty of instructing these babes in Christ in lessons of cleanliness, social purity, care for the sick, and sanitary science. He becomes the family doctor to the church. They are learning that disease is not caused by the spell of evil spirits over the body. Christian medicine is an enemy to all quackery, superstition, exorcism, and witchcraft. Wherever it has come, these tools of Satan have been broken. Physiologies and anatomies have been translated into almost as many languages as the Bible, introduced among the people and taught in all mission schools. The hospital has become a school for teaching the science of health.

It is no small thing that strength and health, skill and learning, tenderness and sympathy, wealth and personality, should be given freely to the destitute and decrepit, to the foul and vile, to the poor and homeless. The medical missionary in the midst of the multitudes crowding around and on their bended knees imploring his ministrations in their behalf, is not unlike Him who made the blind to see, the lame to walk, cleansed the lepers, unstopped the ears of the deaf, raised the dead and preached the Gospel unto the poor. "I was naked and ye clothed me; sick and ye visited me; in prison and ye came unto me."

It is difficult for us in our plenty and abundance to realize how hard is the lot of multitudes of our fellow creatures who live where the conditions of life are harder than ours. In the last great famine in India there were 1,500,000 deaths reported officially. One of our papers stated recently that "in 1833, 200,000 out of 500,000 population in Gantun died; in 1837 and 1860 the deaths in northern India were respectively 1,000,000 and 200,000; in 1866 one-third of the 3,000,000 inhabitants of Orissa perished. The famine years of 1869, 1877 and 1878 cost 1,200,000, 5,000,000 and 1,250,000 lives. In 1897 there were 3,000,000 on relief; in 1899-1900, 6,200,000. These figures are so vast that they are hard to comprehend. If some disaster were to render all the inhabitants of the state of Pennsylvania helpless and were to sweep to death every human being in the state of Louisiana, we should better understand their awful meaning.

And now another famine hangs over the great section of northern India known as the United Provinces. A missionary writes from Allahabad:

"There has been no rain in the United Provinces since the end of August. This has resulted in the almost total failure of the autumn crops and it has not been possible for cultivators to sow the wheat crop which is the main crop of the year. A period of great destitution is upon us. There is no work for those who depend upon field labor for their daily bread, and they are already suffering the pangs of hunger.

"It is probable that the famine will be more severe than that of 1897. The rainfall in Fatehgarh in 1897 was twenty-five inches, and this year it has been only twelve inches."

Surely the spirit of Christ which led Christian people in America to give hundreds of thousands of dollars to India during the last great famine will prompt generous gifts now.

The Presbyterians and the Methodists, and the Woman's Union Missionary Society have missions in this part of India and money can be sent out through them or any of the missionary societies.

Why do we not have great famines like these in the United States? It is not altogether because we live in a temperate zone and have railroads. There is food in India and there are railroads to carry it. The great trouble is the poverty of the people. And Christ came to relieve poverty. He has done so. Wherever his love is in men's hearts and his Spirit in their lives, prosperity and plenty have come to the nation. When the gospel has prevailed over India and its people have come to live by the law of Christ, there will be no more such great famines there.

But even in Christian lands there are multitudes of the poor and there are prisoners also, poverty and crime alike being here because we have not fully lived by the law and love of Christ. Those who are Christ's have their duty, accordingly, to the prisoner and the poor in our own land.

Have we imprisoned any man or has he been imprisoned at our consent? Have we done aught for such a prisoner?

WITH THE WORKERS

Doings of Preachers, Teachers, Thinkers and Givers

The brethren in Clay Center, Nebr., have raised over $400 on the church debt.

A new church has been organized at Lillian Postoffice, near Broken Bow, Neb.

Milligan Earnest, of Roanoke, Ala., is the new pastor in North Birmingham, Ala.

C. B. Cox has resigned at Belvidere, Neb. He will be succeeded by C. F. Rose.

The Jefferson St. Church, Buffalo, N. Y., had a mortgage burning service in January. B. S. Ferrall is pastor.

The church in Ballard, Wash., has received 100 new members since A. L. Crim began his pastorate last August.

Charles Reign Scoville lectured last Monday in the Auditorium, Lincoln, Neb., on "A Night with the Mohammedans."

The church in Salina, Kas., of which David H. Shields is minister, gave an offering of $40 for the cause of education.

Miss Carrie Ray and O. A. Adams were married recently in Sheridan, Wyo. Mr. Adams is pastor of the church in that city.

Dr. Wm. Thompson, 123 N. 9th St., Waco, Texas, is an evangelist of ability, who has open dates for meetings in Illinois

Geo. E. Hicks, formerly minister in La Porte, Ind., is now in the Anti-Saloon League work with headquarters at South Bend, Ind.

David H. Shields, Salina, Kas., made an address to one hundred and twenty-five men of the men's class in Bellville, Kas., recently.

Joseph A. Kay is helping Wm. Cunningham and the East Side Church, Sumner, Ill., in special meetings, which began last Sunday.

A re-dedication service was held in the Pittsfield (Ill.) Church last Sunday. W. E. Spicer is the pastor and preached the dedicatory sermon.

The First Church and the Lennox Avenue Church, New York City, held union services last Sunday evening, Rev. J. P. Lichtenberger preaching.

The work of the Hillside Church, Indianapolis, Ind., continues to prosper. Charles M. Fillmore is pastor. The church raised in all departments last year $2,250.

Gilbert J. Ellis ended two years' service in Payson, Ill., and began work January 1st at Carrollton, Ill. The church is not a large one, but is working with enthusiasm.

W. C. Bower, pastor of the Tabernacle Church, North Tonawanda, N. Y., is preaching in a meeting with the First Church, South Bend, Ind. George W. Hemry is pastor.

W. W. Denham, who has been pastor of the church at Elkhart, Ind., for seven years, has accepted a call to Carthage, Ill., and will begin his work in the latter place about April 1st.

The Sunday schools of the First Church and the Bethany Church, Lincoln, Neb., are in a lively contest. The school of the First Church has best of the honors by a little so far.

Attractive services are being held in the Independence Blvd. Church, Kansas City, for young people. Dr. Combs is preaching timely sermons, which will appeal to young men and women.

Sixty men of the church in Keokuk, Ia., enjoyed a banquet recently. The chief speakers were S. G. Buckner of Canton, Mo., J. T. Shreeve, of Memphis, Mo., and the local pastor, M. J. Nicoson.

De Loss Smith, who has charge of the music in the Central Church, Des Moines, Ia., is teaching in the Des Moines Musical College, and contemplates the organization of training school for singing evangelists.

Charles E. McVay will sing in a four weeks' meeting for the Stuart Street Christian Church of Springfield, Ill., beginning March 1. C. C. Sinclair is the minister. F. W. Burnham will do the preaching.

The Sunday schools of the Queen Anne and the University Place Churches, Seattle, Wash., are engaged in a contest, which promises to increase greatly the size of the schools and the interest in their work.

Now is the time to plan carefully to reach your apportionment for Foreign Missions the first Sunday in March. More than 1,000 churches raised all they were asked last year. The number will be increased this year.

Foreign missionary rallies, missionary sermons, the discussion of foreign missionary questions, all leading up to the March offering, is now the order of the day in all our churches. The growing interest is deep and widespread.

Services of the Disciples in the city of Manchester, N. H., are held in the Odd Fellows' Hall. Earl M. Todd is gaining a hearing through two strong series of sermons. The first, on "The Gospel for Today," is followed by one on "The Coming Church."

The indications point to a widespread observance in the local churches of the Foreign Missionary Rally, Sunday night, February 23. This is an opportunity for every church to have an exceedingly interesting and profitable service with local talent.

The office of the Foreign Society, Cincinnati, Ohio, is a busy place these days. March offerings supplies are going out in large quantities. They are sent free. They are sent only to churches ordering them. The aim of the society is to be helpful to those interested in the world's evangelization.

Dr. J. J. Harper, who was president of the Atlantic Christian College, and a man of much influence in the cause of the Disciples in that state, passed away Jan. 17th. His mantel as president of the college has fallen upon Jesse Cobb Caldwell, who has already assumed the responsibilities of his new office.

Beginning February 16th, John R. Ewers, pastor of the First Church, Youngstown, O., will hold special meetings for the Central Church, Peoria, Ill. Miss Ida Mae Hannah, of Cincinnati, will direct the music. This is the second time Mr. Ewers has been the helper of H. F. Burns, the pastor, in special meetings.

L. A. Chapman has resigned as pastor in Mount Pleasant, Ia., and will leave that field May 1st. In eighteen months one hundred and twenty persons have been added to the church. Mr. Chapman is open for engagements elsewhere. He mentions the notably harmonious spirit of the congregation and the efficiency of its officers.

E. M. Gordon and his wife, Dr. Anna Gordon, missionaries of the Foreign Society to Mungeli, India, have just returned to America on furlough. Their address at present is 4020 Powelton avenue, Philadelphia, Pa. Mr. Gordon is available for missionary addresses in the east. He has a great message. The First Church, Louisville, Ky., E. L. Powell, pastor, supports Dr. Gordon.

P. C. Macfarlane, of Alameda, Cal., by his vigorous blows for righteousness has won for himself a place of influence in the civic affairs of that community. A recent sermon expressing his frank views in denunciation of the decision of the court in the extortion cases was published in the San Francisco Call and drew the fire of lengthy editorial comment on his vigorous disapproval of the action of the court.

No man ever before stirred our churches more thoroughly on foreign missions than Dr. Royal J. Dye of Bolengi, Africa. He speaks out of eight years' experience in a simple, artless way that carries conviction and creates interest. The demands upon him for addresses are unprecedented. The first Lord's day in March, he will be at Eureka, Ill. He may visit Denver and some of the churches in Colorado, later.

Very extensive plans are being made for a great home-coming at Hiram, O., next June, in connection with the commencement exercises of Hiram College. Wednesday, June 24, will be given up to the reunion purposes. A large committee of citizens has the matter in charge. It is believed that hundreds of old residents and students who have been away for years, will return to Hiram on this occasion. An effort is being made to secure Hon. James R. Garfield, Secretary of the Interior, as one of the speakers of the day. Mr. Garfield was born in Hiram. His father, President James A. Garfield, was a student in the Eclectic Institute and later president of that institution. He was a trustee of Hiram College at the time of his death.

L. L. Carpenter of Wabash, Ind., dedicated the new and beautiful house of worship at Columbia, the capital of South Carolina, on Lord's day, Jan. 26th. It was the greatest day in the history of the church at Columbia. Bro. Carpenter reports the most liberal giving on the part of the members of the church, in proportion to their means, of any dedication he has ever attended. Every member of the church, old and young, gave liberally. Stanley R. Grubb is the very successful pastor at Columbia.

The Central Christian Church at Warren this year has taken subscriptions for so much a week for current expenses, and so much per week for missions, and will endeavor to train people to pay their missionary subscriptions by weekly contributions throughout the entire year, as gifts to current expenses are made. The duplex envelope system is used. The church believes that it is easier for most persons to give, for example, ten cents a week for missions than to give $5 at one time. The subscription card used is a very ingenious one.

The Men's Club meeting, held January 22, Central Church, Warren, O., was devoted to preparation for the meeting to be begun February 22, by John L. Brandt of St. Louis. An excellent supper was served to one hundred men, after which the topic of the evening, "How the Church May Reach Men," was discussed from various standpoints. It proved to be a great meeting. The Central church adopted as their motto last fall, "Our purpose this year to reach men." J. E. Lynn is the pastor. Special attention has been paid to classes for men, young men and boys in the Bible school, with good results.

J. W. Reynolds is closing a successful pastorate with the First Christian Church of Clinton, Ill. During his ministry the congregation has paid off an old debt of eight hundred dollars, all departments have prospered, one hundred and thirty-five have been added to the church, missionary offerings have increased and all financial obligations met promptly. The board was increased from nine to nineteen members and organized into committees. Feb. 9th the elders and deacons will be ordained. Bro. Reynolds has received a unanimous call to the First Church, Salem, Ohio, for a number of years. The congregation numbers more than seven hundred members, being the largest church in the city. We predict a very successful work in this new field.

ANNUAL MEETINGS.

Jefferson Street Church, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Jefferson Street Church is but 17 years old. From its birth it has been a child of promise. At the annual meeting held, January 22, a mortgage of $2,300 was burned in the presence of a great congregation by its senior elder, B. Williamson. Of the charter members seven were present in seats of honor. The first Bible schol superintendent was there and spoke helpfully. The good reports made showed that $6,000 had been raised during the year. The Bible school had made fine progress; a new mission school had been established on Kehr street, and since its birth, nine months ago, has averaged 117 in attendance. There have been 77 added to the church, 66 by primary obedience. Six of the Centennial aims have been reached. The church is a living link in the F. C. M. S. and will aim to become the same in the A. C. M. S. by 1909. A Bible school revival, in progress at the time of the meeting, with Miss Eva Lemert of St. Louis, as leader, is revealing the possibilities of this great field. On January 26 (a bad day), the Jefferson Street School was the largest in this great city and reported but 31 visitors, among the number present. The church is united and happy and expects to go on!

Fredonia, Kansas.

The report of the First Church. Total money raised for all purposes $8,500 Number of additions 292. Bible school more than doubled. Total membership 465; new church building, including lot, worth $12,000. The church faces the new year hopefully.

BALTIMORE LETTER.

The churches of Baltimore were recently blessed by the presence of Bro. Stephen J. Corey and his helpers in a Missionary Rally held in the Christian Temple. Bros. F. M. Gordon of India, Fred E. Hagin of Japan, and Robt. N. Simpson of the Chestnut St. Church, Lexington, Ky., with Bro. Corey, compose a quartet who have certainly had a vision of world-wide evangelization, and their one aim is to give to the churches of our great brotherhood a similar vision. The afternoon session was not so well attended, but a splendid, responsive audience participated in the feast of good things at night.

There was quite a demand for Bro. McLean's latest and best book, "Where the Book Speaks." This volume is a distinctive contribution to the missionary literature, and in our humble judgment, the present output has been very much enriched by Bros. McLean's book.

The East is generally spoken of and looked upon as a very difficult field, and it does stride along with majestic step. But we must remember the East is old—and age is not expected to move with the sprightliness of youth. And yet, the results of Bro. Ainslie's work in building and equipping Christian Temple, can not be surpassed in any western field. He has a magnificent plant, and a people alive to and energetic in every good work.

One month's stay in this city has been too short a time to acquaint myself with all of our churches and the situation generally. Let me have a word with you more particularly concerning the 25th St. Church. As every reader of The Century knows, there are years of struggle and sacrifice, of burdens and toil necessary to plant a church in a great city. Our people first of all, bought a lot—one of the most desirable sites in the city—in the midst of a rapidly growing resident section, whole blocks of which have been covered with handsome dwellings within the last two years. Then too, we are but a short distance from the great Johns Hopkins University and the famous Woman's College of Baltimore.

A temporary building was erected which in a short time became inadequate both for the rapidly growing community and the needs of the congregation. Consequently, repairs and enlargement became imperative. Repairs of a more permanent nature were made which cost about $12,000. The congregation being small and all hard working people, has strained every nerve and sinew and worked as those only can appreciate who have been and are in a similar struggle. About $3,400 of this $12,000 is still unprovided for. But the Church Extension Board has kindly consented to grant us a loan of $2,000, provided we raise the other $1,400. The notes for this latter amount are held by contractors and firms here in the city. They are pushing us sorely, and almost daily for their money. And is it not humiliating to be "dunned," and have not the wherewith" to "settle up." One firm has gone so far as to threaten the sale of our property.

Now I have recently sent out one thousand circular letters to the friends of the plea for Christian Unity. As far about $200 has been received, every dollar of which is most gratefully received and truly appreciated, still we lack about $1,200 yet. My brother, sister, if you should read this and can possibly spare one dollar or more, will you not send it immediately to me c/o 25th St. Christian Church? Bro. Ainslie has been in Baltimore about eighteen years, and he says, we have the brightest prospects of any young congregation from Richmond, Va., to Boston, Mass. Help the church over this crisis in its history, and you will be all the happier and richer, and the congregation better prepared to do a work commensurate with our opportunities.

Trusting our appeal will meet with your hearty response, and thanking you in advance for any offering with which you may favor us, I am,

Yours most fraternally,
L. B. Haskins,
Minister 25th St. Christian Church.
340 E. 25th St., Jan. 31, 1908.

PANTRY CLEANED.

A Way Some People Have.

A doctor said:—

"Before marriage my wife observed in summer and country homes, coming in touch with families of varied means, culture, tastes and discriminating tendencies, that the families using Postum seemed to average better than those using coffee.

"When we were married two years ago, Postum was among our first order of groceries. We also put in some coffee and tea for guests, but after both had stood around the pantry about a year untouched, they were thrown away, and Postum used only.

"Up to the age of 28 I had been accustomed to drink coffee as a routine habit and suffered constantly from indigestion and all its relative disorders. Since using Postum all the old complaints have completely left me and I sometimes wonder if I ever had them."

Pure Food

No Food Commissioner of any State has ever attacked the absolute purity of

GRAPE-NUTS

Every analysis undertaken shows this food to be made strictly of Wheat and Barley, treated by our processes to partially transform the starch parts into a form of Sugar, and therefore much easier to digest.

Our claim that it is a "Food for Brain and Nerve Centres" is based upon the fact that certain parts of Wheat and Barley (which we use) contain Nature's brain, and nerve-building ingredients, viz., Phosphate of Potash, and the way we prepare the food makes it easy to digest and assimilate.

Dr. Geo. W. Carey in his book on "The Biochemic System of Medicine" says:

"When the medical profession fully understands the nature and range of the phosphate of potassium, insane asylums will no longer be needed.

"The gray matter of the brain is controlled entirely by the inorganic cell-salt, potassium phosphate.

"This salt unites with albumen, and by the addition of oxygen creates nerve-fluid, or the gray matter of the brain.

"Of course, there is a trace of other salts and other organic matter in nerve-fluid, but potassium phosphate is the chief factor, and has the power within itself to attract, by its own law of affinity, all things needed to manufacture the elixir of life. Therefore, when nervous symptoms arise, due to the fact that the nerve-fluid has been exhausted from any cause, the phosphate of potassium is the only true remedy, because nothing else can possibly supply the deficiency.

"The ills arising from too rapidly consuming the gray matter of the brain cannot be overestimated.

"Phosphate of Potash is, to my mind, the most wonderful curative agent ever discovered by man, and the blessings it has already conferred on the race are many. But 'what shall the harvest be' when physicians everywhere fully understand the part this wonderful salt plays in the processes of life? It will do as much as can be done through physiology to make a heaven on earth.

"Let the overworked business man take it and go home good-tempered. Let the weary wife, nerves unstrung from attending to sick children or entertaining company, take it and note how quickly the equilibrium will be restored and calm and reason assert her throne. No 'provings' are required here. We find this potassium salt largely predominates in nerve-fluid, and that a deficiency produces well-defined symptoms. The beginning and end of the matter is to supply the lacking principle, and in molecular form, exactly as nature furnishes it in vegetables, fruits and grain. To supply deficiencies—this is the only law of cure."

BRAIN POWER

Increased by Proper Feeding.

A lady writer who not only has done good literary work, but reared a family, found in Grape-Nuts the ideal food for brain work and to develop healthy children. She writes:

"I am an enthusiastic proclaimer of Grape-Nuts as a regular diet. I formerly had no appetite in the morning and for 8 years while nursing my four children, had insufficient nourishment for them.

"Unable to eat breakfast I felt faint later, and would go to the pantry and eat cold chops, sausage, cookies, doughnuts or anything I happened to find. Being a writer, at times my head felt heavy and my brain asleep.

"When I read of Grape-Nuts I began eating it every morning, also gave it to the children, including my 10 months old baby, who soon grew as fat as a little pig, good natured and contented.

"I wrote evenings and feeling the need of sustained brain power, began eating a small saucer of Grape-Nuts with milk, instead of my usual indigestible hot pudding, pie, or cake for dessert at night.

"I grew plump, nerves strong, and when I wrote my brain was active and clear; indeed, the dull head pain never returned."

Please observe that Phosphate of Potash is not properly of the drug-shop variety but is best prepared by "Old Mother Nature" and stored in the grains ready for use by mankind. Those who have been helped to better health by the use of Grape-Nuts are legion.

WISE CLERK

Quits Sandwiches and Coffee for Lunch.

The noon-day lunch for the Department clerks at Washington, is often a most serious question.

"For fifteen years," writes one of these clerks, "I have been working in one of the Gov't Departments. About two years ago I found myself every afternoon, with a very tired feeling in my head, trying to get the day's work off my desk.

"I had heard of Grape-Nuts as a food for brain and nerve centers, so I began to eat it instead of my usual heavy breakfast, then for my lunch instead of sandwiches and coffee.

"In a very short time the tired feeling in the head left me, and ever since then the afternoon's work has been done with as much ease and pleasure as the morning's work.

"Grape-Nuts for two meals a day has worked, in my case, just as advertised, producing that reserve force and supply of energy that does not permit one to tire easily—so essential to the successful prosecution of one's life work." "There's a reason."

THE HUB OF THE EMPIRE STATE.

The work in the various churches of Central New York moves along nicely. This is the season of special meetings and already several very good ones have been held. Arthur Braden, assisted by J. E. Sturgis, of Auburn, Ind., has had an excellent meeting in Auburn with more than forty additions. This is the third meeting he has held since he assumed the pastorate twenty-seven months ago. In all over 200 have joined the church since his work began in Auburn.

The Second Church, Rochester, J. F. Green minister, is also in a fine meeting. J. S. Raum, of Upper Troy, is the evangelist. At last reports there were 30 additions.

The Rowland Street Church, Syracuse, began a meeting last Sunday and in the first three days there were nine additions. The pastor, C. R. Stauffer, is doing the preaching, assisted by Mr. Thos. Kenan, of Central Church, as leader of singing. The Sunday School has grown until it taxes to the limit the building.

The Brewerton Church hopes to begin a meeting in a couple of weeks, borrowing Thos. Wood, the minister at Trolly, for the evangelist.

South Butler, F. H. Reed minister, hopes to hold a series of meetings in February.

Central Syracuse brings Miss Eva Lemert, of St. Louis, for a Sunday School rally February 9, which if successful, will be followed by a series of meetings led by the pastor.

The annual Foreign Missionary rally was held in Central Church, Syracuse, Tuesday, January 28. Bros. Corey, Simpson and Hagin from abroad, and Bros. Chamberlain, Wood, DuBois, Burgan, Braden, Stauffer and Smith from this vicinity brought messages of cheer and inspiration. About one hundred and fifty attended the sessions. Luncheon was served in the church at noon These annual gatherings are looked forward to with a great deal of interest on the part of our local members.

In connection with the rally a meeting of the Central New York Ministerial Association was held. As the guest of honor, Dr. W. W. Dawley, pastor of the Central Baptist Church of this city was present. He and the writer have been thrown much together on various lines of union work, and as a result an invitation was accorded both ministers of this city to attend the last meeting of the Central New York Baptist Ministerial Association. This we did, and our cordial treatment made us feel much at home. Dr. Dawley is now attempting to have the constitution so changed as to admit our brethren on equal terms. If successful our two associations will be fused into one. We believe that when the ministers become better acquainted that a long step toward local union shall have been consumated.

Dr. Dawley favors an interchange of pastorates, believing that when Disciples call Baptists and Baptists Disciples' ministers that a long step forward will be made.

And thus are the workers in the heart of this great State laboring to bring the kingdom into the hearts of men.

Jos. A. Serena, Minister.

TO THE FRIENDS OF EUREKA COLLEGE.

I would like a personal word with every friend of Eureka College everywhere. February 1, 1908, I became the Field Secretary of Eureka College. I expect and am confident that I will receive the hearty co-operation of Eureka's host of friends. The Board of Trustees of the college selected a campaign committee to have charge of the entire movement. This committee is entirely satisfactory to the Field Secretary, and will give the brethren confidence in the affair. The members of the committee are Ashley J. Elliott of Peoria, one of the leading railroad men of the Mississippi Valley; W. B. Stroud of Eureka, a leading business man of Central Illinois, and F. W. Burnham, pastor of the First Christian Church of Springfield. The details of our campaign have not been outlined, but we are getting ready for the vigorous campaign which we promised the brethren a few months ago. Everything looks encouraging. The readers of this paper have already been made familiar with the preparatory work which has been done in this movement. A few months ago we started in to get eighty people who would pledge $25 each, for five years, to support the field agent of Eureka College. We have run beyond the eighty mark. We now have ninety-two names on our list, and are continuing this part of the work with the expectation that we will increase our list to one hundred in a very short time. This will give us some extra money for expenses. We are making no great promises, but we can give the brethren the assurances that something will be done. We are going to take the people into our confidence and give them information on every phase of the work as rapidly as we can. It requires a little time to get a movement of this kind on the go. We have a great field in Illinois. We have a college whose record is clean. There is great need in Illinois of enlargement. With this introductory word we hereby pledge ourselves to work and never falter until the campaign aims are realized.

H. H. Peters,
Field Secretary.

Not what we give, but what we share.

Ashland, O., Feb. 3.—Just begun meeting C. A. Pierce. Big storm to-day. Fine audience with thirteen additions. 17 to date.

Bruce Brown.

Elmira, N. Y., Feb. 2.—Seven confessions last service at Wellsville. Sixty in all. Begin with C. C. Crawford here to-night.

John T. Brown.

Buffalo, Kas., Feb. 3.—Buffalo's greatest revival. Over one hundred additions. Membership doubled and many more. Church crowded nightly. Richard Martin able Bible evangelist.

R. M. Ainsworth.

Alliance, O., Feb. 3.—Wednesday will close meeting with Fred Nichols. 113 to date. Crowds uniformly great. Overflow meetings held often. Sunday school gleaned one year ago. 95 adults, 25 from sectarianism.

J. E. Dinger,
Minister at Chickasha, Okla., assisted by the Kendalls of Columbus, Ind.

ARKANSAS.

Dardanelle—Closed a four weeks' campaign. New field, but we instituted a church. They will have regular preaching. Dardanelle is one of the oldest towns in the state, and our people have made several failures in the past. They are hopeful now. I am open for engagement.

O. D. Maple,
Evangelist.

FLORIDA.

Tampa.—Three added during the month of January. Money in hand to pay first Church Extension note. Teacher training class organized this week. We begin with ten. S. S. attendance about 50 per cent larger than two months ago.

W. H. Coleman.

ILLINOIS.

Cuba.—Have just closed a very successful meeting at Cuba, Ill., with 63 added and 41 by confession. Fifty of the 63 were adults and many of them were men. Bro. Zellers, the pastor, may continue for a few days. The meeting was hurt some in my having to leave twice to go to Springfield to attend the legislature. A lady evangelist of the United Brethren church came with us during the meeting. She has held splendid meetings and should be employed by some of our churches. My next meeting is with F. E. Smith at Cedar Rapids, Ia.

J. R. Golden.

Heyworth.—The church has just enjoyed a splendid revival meeting in which there were 60 additions. The meeting lasted for three weeks and intense interest was manifested from the beginning. C. J. Robertson, the minister, began the meeting, but during the second week took ill, so his brother, Norman H., of Colfax, came and finished for him. The Sunday school is in a flourishing condition and all are rejoicing over the good work for the Master. N. H. R.

Pittsfield.—Yesterday was a great day with us. We re-dedicated our church building. It was sadly wrecked the 25th of last July. For one month we alternated between the tabernacle and the Congregational church. When our meeting was over the Congregational people invited me to occupy their pulpit, their minister having resigned. The two churches worshiped and communed together, their Bible schools worked side by side, as did the C. E. and prayer meetings. This has been a delightful experience and we trust is prophetic of real union of Pittsfield Christians in the sweet bye and bye.

Our new building is a plain, substantial and exceedingly elastic and serviceable structure. Of seventeen rooms, we can open thirteen into one vast audience room, which you may be sure was done yesterday. Not a penny was asked yesterday. The finance committee has managed that without a public appeal. The people dedicated it, Brother Joseph Ruble, one of the elders, leading in the prayer, and the pastor preaching the sermon. There were three confessions and two by letter.

Nothing approaching this work has ever been attempted before. In a series of splendid pictures the great and impressive scenes in the Bible story are depicted, true in color, costume, landscape, and all details to the life, the country and the time. ¶ To make the men and women of the Bible actual, living characters to their pupils is one of the first duties of the Sunday-School teachers, and no better help can they find for this than in the Tissot pictures. ¶ The whole world acknowledges that J. James Tissot was the greatest artist that ever lived, so far as Biblical subjects are concerned.

Only the unparalled success in the higher-priced editions makes possible this phenomenally low offer now. ¶ These pictures have received the unqualified endorsement of the leading clergymen and Sunday-School teachers throughout the United States. ¶ Nothing could be more helpful, and interesting, and delightful, when one is reading the Bible, than such a graphic interpretation of sacred stories. ¶ In no other way can the Bible stories be made so real and actual to children. Should be in every home.

A union Endeavor meeting and a union church service was the joy of the evening service. Rev. Treftz, Luth.; Rev. Martin, Bap.; Rev. Chapman, M. E., and Rev. Hanscom, Cong., and also Bro. C. A. Kindred assisted in the program. Bro. K. was home on the sad duty that took Joseph to Machpelah. One of the best things of the day was a history of the church by Sister Emma Crow. A week of good things is to follow. We will hear stirring addresses from Brethren Thrapp, Rogers, Kindred, Cannon, Campbell and Veach. * * *

I recently assisted Bro. J. D. Williams in a short meeting at El Dara. Brother Williams is a strong preacher. His arguments are kindly and conclusive. Among the good things of the meeting was the raising of the money for a new parsonage which was so much needed. Both New Hartford and El Dara co-operating, have requested Bro. Williams to remain with them.

Brother H. L. Veach has closed a splendid meeting at Independence and is now in a promising one at Time.

Brother J. R. Campbell has organized a new congregation at Atlas of 57 members and will minister half time to them.

Dr. Hardin, who was formerly president of Eureka when I graduated, was a welcome visitor to us last week. He conducted a fine missionary rally, assisted by Miss Josepha Franklin and Dr. Dye. Their messages thrill us with enthusiasm. These rallies are a blessing to the churches. Our brethren in the surrounding churches were in attendance.

KANSAS.

Dighton.—Two confessions here this week.

Wm. M. Mayfield.

MICHIGAN.

Kalamazoo.—W. H. Hedges just closed an eighteen days' meeting here with 21 accessions. Charles E. McVay of Benkelman, Nebr., had charge of the music. This was a very successful meeting for this field. There were several other revival meetings in progress in the city at the same time. Nearly all of the accessions were grown people. The music was a great attraction in the meeting. Bro. McVay sings next at Rantoul, Ill.

Paw Paw.—Mitchell and Bilby will close here on Sunday after a meeting of three weeks' duration. This is a very hard field here because of the people's prejudice against evangelists and their methods. We have eight churches here in this town and Mead Brothers, Baptists, held union meeting here last year with about fifty additions in all, counting cards that were signed.

We have had 48 additions in our meeting so far of the conservative and moral class, which are very hard for us to reach here. Bro. and Sister Bilby are good social mixers and capable. Their solo work is superb. Bro. Mitchell's sermons are original, thoughtful and convincing, and delivered in a sane way.

E. H. Lindsley.

MISSOURI.

Platte City.—We had six young men make confession yesterday. This makes ten in four weeks at regular services.

Harry E. Tucker, Minister.

NEBRASKA.

Table Rock.—Bro. C. V. Allison, of Mound City, Mo., has just closed a 25-days' meeting with us. This was one of the most successful meetings in the history of this church. Table Rock has always been considered one of the hardest fields in Nebraska. Our greatest need was a spiritual membership and Bro. Allison was the right man to give us this quality. No church will make a mistake in calling this godly man for a meeting. There were 23 accessions.

B. F. Lively.

NEW YORK.

Wellsville.—Evangelist Jno. T. Brown of Louisville, Ky., has been with us in a series of evangelistic meetings, commencing Jan. 5th. He has done us much good. Immediate visible results, about fifty additions, mostly confessions and baptisms and a liberal percentage of adults.

He preaches the gospel plainly, forcibly and in love. He may be numbered in the class that is not large, those who do good and not harm. Bro. Brown leaves to-morrow morning for Elmira, N. Y., where Bro. C. C. Crawford is pastor, and we bespeak for him a splendid meeting there.

A. J. Applebee, Elder.

Upper Troy.—One confession and baptism at prayer meeting last night Fifty-six additions in our meeting with Columbia Avenue Church of Christ, Rochester, N. Y. Bro. Green a splendid minister and untiring worker. J. S. Raum.

UTAH.

Salt Lake City.—Five persons were received into fellowship Sunday, Feb. 2.

Albert Buxton, Pastor.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Charles E. Smith of Altoona, Pa., has just closed a meeting at 34th Street Church. Ten confessions and four by letter or statement. This was the third meeting in successive years held by Bro. Smith with this congregation. His popularity was proved by increasingly large audiences. Bro. S. is fearless, plain-spoken, and a thorough gospel preacher. His work is substantial and I think I have never known one more skillful in personal work.

Claude C. Jones, Pastor.

Reds and Blues Contest Buttons

REDS AND BLUES Contest plans have proved wonderfully successful in Y. M. C. A. work and are proving more so in Sunday school work. By making use of our Reds and Blues plans you can easily double your school membership in a month or six weeks. You can break up irregular attendance in a very short time. You can raise large sums of money for your needs. You can secure church attendance, bringing of lesson helps, bringing of collection, coming on time.

The Reds and Blues plans please because they set everybody at work heartily and enthusiastically and because each leaves the school in a healthy condition when the contest is ended.

Each Reds and Blues plan requires dividing the school into two sections—Reds and Blues and appointing captains, one or more, for each side, a social or other treat to be given at the close of the contest, when those on the winning side receive ice-cream and cake, and the losers crackers and cheese, or some other attraction to celebrate the close of the contest and the victory. Treat is to be paid for by the school. Complete instructions sent with each order.

Price, in lots of 10 or more (sent assorted, one-half each color), 1½c each, postpaid; 60 or more, 1c each, postpaid.

Book Buying Made Easy

THE CAUSE

IN answer to the many inquiries we receive as to how we can afford to sell certain theological books at less than half their regular publishers' prices, we have taken this page to explain our methods of buying and selling at such low prices.

Although we supply the demand for any good book published we make a specialty of distributing religious and theological books and Bibles. We sell chiefly to ministers, Sunday school teachers and superintendents. This comprises a large field of book buyers and enables us to use big quantities of books on which we are able to get the best prices.

We are continually on the look-out for remainders of editions, bankrupt sales, and the overstock of dealers who do not have the outlet for selling that we now have. Many of the best books are those published years ago, yet the enormous yearly output of the many publishers crowds them to the background, and their sales become quite limited. Quite frequently we are able to buy several hundred of one title at about the cost of printing and binding. We call attention to a few of the many bargains we are now offering and invite comparison of prices.

During the year we issue "BULLETINS" of book bargains which we gladly send free to any address.

To those who are interested in buying good books at the lowest prices we ask only for your trial order. We know you will tell others and this is our best advertisement.

We have an exchange plan which enables ministers to send the books they no longer need in exchange for new and up-to-date books.

We invite correspondence and will gladly send an estimate on any list of books submitted.

We make it easy for ministers to buy books from us. We sell at lowest prices for cash and charge only 10 per cent more for the privilege of paying on installments. All we ask is that you meet the payments when due.

Half of this page is used to illustrate what we mean by selling books far below the regular prices. The books in this list are new, not soiled or damaged stock.

A CORRECTION.

In the issue of the Christian Century of January 16, was published a letter from Dr. J. M. Campbell, author of "The Heart of the Gospel," in reply to a review of his book. By a typographical error Dr. Campbell was made to say that in his treatment of the Atonement, "Logical certainty has often been sacrificed for directness of appeal." What he said was that "logical continuity has often been sacrificed for directness of appeal."

"You know all about the Ohio man who went to New York for the first time and having taken a room at a good hotel, went to the desk to inquire about the meals. 'What is the eatin' hours in this yere hotel?' he said to the clerk. 'Breakfast,' the clerk answered, 'seven to eleven; lunch, eleven to three; dinner, three to eight; supper, eight to twelve.' 'Jerusalem!' exclaimed the astonished farmer, 'when am I goin' to git time to see the town?'"—From "Thomas Alva Edison" (Hodder and Stoughton).

HOW TO SECURE A REPRESENTATIVE CONVENTION.

The Christian Century continues to receive assurances that the plan to organize our annual conventions on the representative basis meets with the approval of those who give it consideration. Its need and practicability are both apparent.

The need of some more definite method of organizing our convention interests becomes increasingly evident when one considers the new activities which are springing into life among us every year. The Disciples of Christ are not only growing in numbers but in devotion to the supreme tasks of the church in forwarding the kingdom of God in the world. It is apparent that new interests are going to claim the attention of our conventions in increasing number. This is true whether we wish it or not, and we ought to wish it if we desire to speak as a brotherhood upon matters of the utmost moment.

For example, a representative committee is now considering the question as to whether there should be a publication society established by the Disciples. There are many reasons why such a society or board would be an effective helper in a broad, intelligent and constructive literary propaganda. Whatever might be the scope and purpose of such an organization as determined by the men to whom has been intrusted the consideration of the question, it is evident that the Disciples have reached the point at which such an instrument is required.

But to whom would a publication society or board make its report, and from whom would it receive instructions as to its policy and plans? It is quite clear that no one of our missionary societies has any authority either to create or to direct the activities of such an institution. It would be manifestly inexpedient for the time of any one of our missionary sessions in convention to be taken up with reports of a publication society whose function lay in a very different field.

Again we are just organizing a new board known as the American Temperance Board of the Church of Christ. This is quite unrelated to any of our mission work, and yet there is no member of any of our churches who is not interested in the progress of the fight against the saloon. But where in our convention as at present organized would there be an appropriate place for the presentation of this theme and the report of this board? Manifestly nowhere.

It is clear therefore, that our greatest need is a convention, not simply of one or another of our societies or boards, but a convention of the Disciples as a brotherhood. This convention should be made up of delegates chosen by the churches upon a fair basis of representation, such as one delegate for each hundred members, or for each two hundred. The details of the plan could be easily worked out to the satisfaction of all. Those persons who have become annual or life members, or life directors of one of the societies, would naturally have the rights of delegates without action of their congregations. The machinery of such a convention would be comparatively simple. It would be in session continuously during the days of meeting, taking recess from session to session, and to it the different societies and boards would make reports and present their causes.

As a step in this direction we should urge the churches to appoint regular delegates to the New Orleans convention. This would have the double advantage of procuring a larger attendance at that gathering and of making that attendance in some true sense representative of the churches. Moreover, there would appear to be some obligation on the part of a church to defray the expenses of its delegate or delegates to the annual convention. In most of the other religious bodies this obligation is accepted as a matter of course. It should be so among the Disciples. No minister should be expected to pay his traveling and hotel bills while in attendance upon a gathering whose inspiration he will bring back in so large a measure to his people. One hardly needs to add that churches would hardly think of charging up a man's time against him while he is doing his duty at the annual gathering. And yet we have known of churches who grudgingly granted their ministers permission to go, and declined alike to defray their expenses or to provide pulpit supplies. In most other religious bodies such conduct would be regarded as niggardly and undignified.

If the churches take this step of sending their delegates to the New Orleans convention it will be a very natural and logical step for these delegates in convention assembled to take measures toward the organization of a regular and representative convention of the Disciples of Christ. By all means the gathering at Pittsburg in 1909 should be of this kind. A hundred years of history suffices for the imperfect and partial plans with which we are now proceeding. It is not too much to hope that we may begin our second century with a more adequate and representative annual convention.

DEPARTING LEADERS.

The passing of so venerable and beloved a leader as J. S. Lamar calls for more than a momentary reflection upon the strong men who are entering into the larger life. Within a month two such have left the scene of their active ministries to enter into the rest that remains for the people of God. Robert Moffett and J. S. Lamar were men of almost precisely opposite types. The one was an organizer, a leader of activities, a widely travelled and experienced planner of ways and means for the advancement of the kingdom of God. The other was a quiet, almost secluded spirit who was never a leading figure in the church's activities and yet was an almost household word in the homes of Disciples. Robert Moffett was known to the brotherhood by his presence in the gatherings of Disciples and in the strong messages which he brought out of the Holy Scripture and his own rich experience. J. S. Lamar was the saint and mystic who reached an even wider circle through his gifts as a writer. For many years he contributed regularly to our journals, charming all by the gracefulness and dignity of his words. To him was intrusted the honorable task of compiling the life of Isaac Errett, and the work was admirably performed. His later volumes "First Principles" and "Going on to Perfection" were well adapted to the instruction of young Disciples and old. He came of an honored family in the south and was himself an honor to his clan.

In the passing of such men into the larger life those of us who remain behind perceive that our possessions in heaven grow more valuable and our ties with earth are loosening. That God has even greater services for such souls in the ampler experience upon which they are entering cannot be doubted by those who understand even the value of the present partial and preparatory life.

UNION EVANGELISM IN WINNIPEG.

An evangelistic campaign lasting some weeks has recently closed in the city of Winnipeg. The leaders were Dr. J. Wilber Chapman, of the Presbyterian Board of Evangelism, and Dr. J. W. Dawson, of the Congregational National Evangelistic Committee.

Dr. Chas. Gordon (Ralph Conner), of that city, has written an interesting account of the meeting for the general religious press. From it we clip the following paragraphs:

> Dr. Chapman is a man endowed with truly remarkable gifts, a master organizer and manager of men. He is at once conciliatory and firm, quick to receive a suggestion, definite and prompt in his conclusions, and through all there breathes the warm, kindly, human spirit of the man. As a preacher he is quite unique in style and method, he is no elaborator of arguments, he leads no frontal attack upon the enemy, he has no sermons directed against outstanding vices, but he preaches a positive Gospel with a poignant heart-searching power, with a deep, manly tenderness and love that enables him to grip hard and hold firm men's hearts. Then, too, he possesses a marvelous power of anecdotal illustration. His stories are never dragged in for their own sake, they strike quick and deep into the heart and carry the truth with them. The power that is specially characteristic of Dr. Chapman is heart power. Before he is speaking three minutes he is gripping at your heart, and from that time to the end of his meeting, his words keep tugging at you. But it is as an evangelist in securing entrance for his Gospel message and immediate decision for the Christian life that Dr. Chapman is at his greatest. When he comes to his after meeting he becomes possessed of an intense and concentrated determination to win men that is almost irresistible.
> Dr. Dawson is great, but in another way. His preaching power is known to the world. His sermons are masterpieces of illuminating and illuminated logic. In illustration he freely calls upon his rich stores of history and literature, while his poetic imagination lights up some of his greatest passages as lightning a storm-beaten night, or sunlight a summer landscape. He is somewhat new to the evangelistic work, and has not the skill of Chapman in throwing the net, but even in his three weeks' campaign in Winnipeg, he developed a method of his own that became singularly effective. On the whole, the Chapman-Dawson combination for evangelistic work it would be difficult to excel.

Now what about results? There are people so constituted that they demand insistently tabulated statistics, forgetting that we have not yet learned the counter of spiritual arithmetic.

First, in old-fashioned words, souls were saved. Men lost, confessedly lost, were saved, and are today carrying about with them in their hearts an ineffable joy. Others who in this country had wandered far from their religious moorings were recalled.

Second, a social conscience has been developed. The Church and the Christian are awakening to concern not simply for the soul of the individual, but for the soul of the community.

Third, Christian men and women whose religious ambition had hitherto been to escape sin and to finally reach heaven, have had the nobler vision revealed to them. The joy of service and of sacrifice has touched their lives.

Fourth, and perhaps most important, the Church has been revived. Congregations formerly living for themselves have been made to see that the religion of Jesus Christ in its essence is forgetfulness of self. Ministers content with growing attendance of respectable people upon public worship, content with popularity and influence in their communities, have been penetrated by a Divine discontent. They have suddenly become aware that they have been living in the elder brother's country, rejoicing in the Gospel of a good time, unaware of the Father's agony, and forgetful of the younger brother who was far away and lost and dead. They will never be as content again, but they will be happier.

IN BRIEF.

Prof. W. D. MacClintock, of the University of Chicago, who has for years been an active worker in the educational field and an especially valued leader in the High Park Church of this city has been appointed a member of the special educational commission to visit the Philippine Islands for the purpose of making addresses and holding conferences in the educational centers of those islands. Prof. Frederick Starr, of the University, is another member of this commission. About six months will be spent in the Islands. The commission will leave the last of February.

The interest in the union of Baptists and Disciples, or at least in closer co-operation, has taken form in Chicago in an effort to hold joint sessions of the ministerial associations of the two churches once or twice in the month. The proposition grew out of addresses on this theme recently made at the Baptist congress in Baltimore. The Baptist ministers of Chicago have acted upon the matter with promptness and cordiality, and the present prospects indicate an early arrangement which it is hoped may issue in permanent and definite co-operation.

The Kind of Ministers Needed

W. F. Richardson

The man who presumes to speak in the name of the Lord Jesus must expect to be subjected to the severest tests. What are some of the essential things to be looked for in him? What kind of a man must he be? For the minister must first of all be a man, or he will amount to but little as a minister.

1. First of all, he must have Character. Paul addresses Timothy as "man of God;" God's man, speaking for him, representing him before the court of the human conscience. He is to "flee" all hurtful lusts, and to "follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness." He is to be the thing he teaches others to become. Emerson says, "What you are speaks so loud that I cannot hear what you say;" and many a loud-mouthed Boanerges is ignorant of the fact, patent to everybody else, that the thunder of his voice is drowned by the still louder thunder of his unworthy life. Goethe says, "He who would create something must first be something;" and no man can effect the "new creation" that is wrought by the gospel unless he is himself a new creature. At least, his labors must be far less effective if he fails to embody in himself the truth he preaches. Jesus could say, "I am the truth;" therefore the truth he spake was eternal.

2. The minister must be a man of Capacity. Narrow men may accomplish good, even in the great cause of human redemption, but breadth of vision and largeness of sympathy will vastly augment their power. One must be able to assume many positions from which to view truth, in its relations to human life and destiny, if he is to be an effective teacher. Paul became "all things to all men, that he might by all means save some." This does not mean that he was a time-server, but that he was a time-observer, whose vision was restricted to no one angle of human life, but swept over a horizon as wide as that of his Master. A strong, alert mind; warm, sympathetic heart; generous, fraternal disposition, will help mightily to equip one for this holiest of ministries. Such a man will avoid bigotry and sectarianism on the one hand, and on the other hand a false liberality that would, for a seemingly temporary advantage, surrender the very heart of the truth to which he stood committed.

3. The minister must be a man of Culture. With universal education of the people must go the higher education of the ministry. The preacher must be a leader of the thought of men, as well as a pleader for their moral betterment. It has been said that if God has little use for man's knowledge, he has none at all for his ignorance. But it is not true that he has little use for man's knowledge and wisdom. He has every need of it, to accomplish his purposes for man. No human capacity or acquirement is useless in his service. The highest gifts can be effective for the highest ends. The day has passed when illiteracy and rudeness will be tolerated in the pulpit. To be ungrammatical, inaccurate, boorish in one's speech is as offensive as to appear in the pulpit in one's shirt sleeves. With the opportunities for intellectual culture now available to young men, no one should think of entering the ministry without taking at least a college course. If possible, he ought to supplement this with work in a good university. And, while there are many men of God whose labors God is blessing, who have lacked these advantages; they would be the first to acknowledge the weakness of their ministry, compared with what it might have been, had they enjoyed these means of larger culture.

4. The minister must be a man of Consecration. "For their sakes I consecrate myself, that they also might be consecrated through the truth," says our Lord, in his intercessory prayer for his disciples. Capacity is incapable of great usefulness; culture is ineffective for real service; and even character itself will work but slight blessing to men, if there is not true consecration to one's life work. "This one thing I do," was the key-note of Paul's marvellous ministry. The Master at twelve years of age felt that he must be about the Father's business. What an intense life he lived; one that, lasting only, in its public phases, but a little more than three years, transformed the face of the world and the life of the race. Well might he say, as he hung on the cross, "It is finished." And his servant, Paul, imitating his consecration and zeal, could echo his words, from the prison in Rome, "I have finished my course."

Character, capacity, culture and consecration will render one an acceptable minister of Jesus Christ, and will ensure to him both a fruitful ministry and a rich reward. Let us pray the Lord of the harvest that he will send forth many such laborers into the harvest.

PROVIDENCE.

By J. F. Williams.

(Written for the Christian Century.)

With God, all things together work for good;
Nor less through tears,
Than through life's purest, sweetest joys we learn
To love the Way we had misunderstood.
For through the years
He finds at length, who for the Truth doth yearn,
And knows that Heaven answers in return.

I tread the path of mortals here below;
But here and now
The thorns which hedge me in, are made to bloom
And flowers of hope on desert places grow,
I know not how.
A light, moreover, lifts the distant gloom
And what is now my strength, I thought my doom.

A power not my own doth shape my end:
I seem to be
Within the loving grasp of Wisdom's will;
The good and ill, the lights and shadows blend
In harmony,
And where I least had hoped, I find that still
The Unseen, somehow, doth the present fill.

And when thro shifting tides and low'ring clouds
And hidden shoal,
I launch upon the vast and darksome deep;
When that, at last, which solemnly enshrouds
The helpless soul,
Shall o'er my drifting fragile life-bark sweep,
Ah! then I'll trust Him still His child to keep.

The child sees what we are, behind what we wish to be.

All seed-sowing is a mysterious thing, whether the seed fall into the earth or into souls.

Effective Church Advertising

H. F. Burns

The proper kind of advertising of the services of the church is hardly in danger of being overestimated by pastors and churches. The evangelists know its value. Improper advertising may be repulsive, worse than a waste of money; but the proper kind and amount of advertising is a problem of little less importance to the church, than to the merchant. This is especially true of the city church.

In the Peoria Church there is an advertising committee, appointed by the Official Board. To this committee all advertising work is referred, and they are invited to bring special plans for advertising before the Board and to receive appropriations for carrying out the plans adopted. Some of the means we find helpful are:

1. The daily papers. This is one of the best means of reaching the community. We see to it that carefully prepared announcements of all church meetings are given to the papers; also that meetings and happenings of special interest are correctly and adequately reported. The papers are generous with their space; but many times the editor does not feel that he has the time to "call up" for facts about church events, or to write them up if they are "phoned" him, but will cheerfully take a well written copy, giving generous space to the event. As pastor I endeavor to show my appreciation of the courtesy of the papers by giving them news items, when I can.

2. Post cards. Upon the pastor's desk there is a pile of post cards, with a cut of the church and space for address on one side; on the other a small map of the part of the city where the church is located, showing the location of all principal buildings, hotels, R. R. stations, and the Christian Church, also announcements of services. These cards I mail with announcement of special meetings, or word of personal greeting, wherever I think they will do good—as to strangers in the city, whom I have met, or who have been at the church services.

The same cards are frequently placed on Saturday evening, with the church calendar for the coming Sunday, or with printed invitations, in the mail boxes of the guests at the principal hotels. The hotel clerks are the more ready to assist with this because their house is named and located on the card. This work can be done easily by young men in the church.

3. At present we are planning for a systematic canvass of the boarding and rooming houses within walking distance of the church, with the purpose of discovering young men and young women who have recently come into the city, and have not affiliated themselves with any church. We shall not only leave literature with them, and give them the personal invitation to the church, but shall so divide the work that each case can be "followed up," with other invitations. And an effort will be made to cultivate the personal acquaintance of these young people who are in our midst and without home associations. The difficulty we meet here is in getting some one to do the work well.

Suggestions in this direction from other ministers, I shall read with greatest interest. I hope that many of them will give the readers of the "Century" the benefit of their experience.

Among the New Books

Old Indian Days, by Charles A. Eastman, New York. The McClure Company. pp. 275. $1.25.

The stories contained in this volume are such as an old hunter and Indian scout might tell to his children or grandchildren back in the east, where one never sees the fierce and heroic figures which come and go in these pages. "The Love of Antelope" is the story of an Indian lover who won the affection of a maiden of the tribe of his fiercest enemies, and the romance of their solitary life in the great ravine. "The Singing Spirit" relates how a party of famished Sioux came upon the cabin of an old trapper, lured by the strange and unknown music of his fiddle, and of what happened thereafter. The stories number nearly a score, and are handsomely illustrated with whole page color sketches.

The Continent of Opportunity, by Francis E. Clark, D. D. New York. Fleming H. Revell Company. pp. 337. $1.50 net.

The continent of South America seemed but yesterday so far away that it was not to be thought of as part of our western world. But with astonishing rapidity its affairs are becoming known to us and the currents of southward travel that formerly stopped with Mexico, or at the furthest at the Isthmus now reach the great continent whose history becomes increasingly interesting as it assumes larger place in our knowledge. Dr. Clark is an ideal recorder of travel experience, for in his journeys about the world he is animated by a serious purpose, that of introducing and interpreting Christian Endeavor to the peoples of all lands. This is not, however, a volume of Christian Endeavor narratives, but a chatty, informed and most readable account of the region and peoples of South America. The author says, "The object of this volume is to give so far as its brief compass and the author's ability allow a comprehensive view of the country and peoples of South America, their history, their possibilities, their chief resources, their intellectual and religious life, together with a traveller's impressions of present-day conditions." Dr. Clark believes that South America is neither the wonderland which over-enthusiastic travellers have described, nor the dismal region which others have depicted. He insists that it is not even the "neglected continent" longer, but rather one of amazing opportunity.

The Lord of Glory, by Benjamin B. Warfield. New York. American Tract Society. pp. 304. $1.50 net.

Prof. Warfield occupies the chair of Systematic Theology in Princeton Seminary. The book is an argument for the divine character of our Lord, based upon the terms applied to him in the New Testament. The author has gone laboriously through the documents of the Christian Scriptures noting every reference to the Master and making the material thus gathered the ground of insistence that Christ's character must be understood from the names applied to him by his earliest biographers, since these titles were apparently the outgrowth of his own teaching concerning himself. The body of the argument is familiar to students of the older type of apologetics. By far the best part of the work is found in the foot-notes which discuss a good deal of the recent literature upon the life of Christ.

The Samaritans, by James Alen Montgomery, Ph. D. The John C. Winston Company. pp. 321. $2.00 net.

This is the most thorough and interesting attempt in the English language to deal with the earliest Jewish sect. It constitutes the Bohlen Lectures for 1906. The author is professor in Old Testament Literature and Language in the Philadelphia Divinity School. He appears to have completely mastered his theme, which has been treated fragmentarily by a multitude of writers in many languages, as his abundant bibliography at the close of the volume proves. After a description of the small remnant of the Samaritans at Nablus, the ancient Shechem, he gives a summary of their origin and history to the present time. Especially interesting is the survey of Jewish literature regarding this despised sect. A section is devoted to the theology of the Samaritans in which their close resemblance to the Sadducees is noted. The final chapter is given to Samaritan inscriptions, Scriptures and literature, including their famous codex of the five books of Moses, certainly the oldest fragment of the Bible in existence.

Delays Are Dangerous

W. T. Moore

So far as I have been able to learn there is but one voice with respect to the Centennial offering for a Bethany College endowment fund. Perhaps nothing has ever been proposed in all our history which has received such a universal chorus of commendation. Still it is true that comparatively few have promptly responded to the appeal which has been made. Most of our brethren say they intend to contribute, but are waiting for a favorable opportunity, and as there is time enough yet, they are putting the matter off for a convenient season. They do not talk this way when dealing with lost souls. They say "Now is the accepted time, now is the day of salvation." This is equally true of the appeal which has been made for Bethany College. A dollar given now may be worth several given at this "convenient season." In any case, delay with respect to this matter may prove fatal to the whole enterprise. Some are waiting with the hope that they may give more liberally after a while than they could if they gave now. This is certainly a worthy motive for delay, but it is dangerous. Give now what you can, and then if you can give more after a while, add to your first contribution. As we are asking for reasonable sums, there is scarcely a single person in the whole brotherhood who cannot give something now. I have received reports from the "St. Louis Union Trust Company," and the "Mercantile Trust Company" of Pittsburg up to February the 1st, and while these banks have received an encouraging number of subscriptions, I feel that the pace must be largely accelerated if the amount proposed to be raised shall be realized. In a short time I wish to publish in our paper a list of the contributors and amounts subscribed up to date, but before doing this, I wish to give all our brethren another opportunity to be registered in this first installment. Please send in your subscriptions at once to either of the banks indicated, or if you prefer you may send directly to me, and you will receive promptly a receipt for the same, while at the same time you will encourage others to do likewise. Will the preachers everywhere take this matter up in their churches without any further delay, and begin at once an active campaign for the Centennial Endowment Fund? It seems to me our Centennial would be largely a farce if we failed to realize a handsome endowment fund for Bethany College.

CORRESPONDENCE COURSE IN APPLIED CHRISTIANITY

It is the business of the church to apply the principles of Jesus Christ to present day social conditions. To do this successfully one must know men and the problems which are perplexing them. It is the purpose of this course to help ministers—particularly those in industrial centers—to study scientifically and sympathetically conditions in their own fields.

It goes farther than this. It indicates to the student the best methods whereby these conditions may be met. It deals with the modern situation in a modern way. The theoretical aspects of the problems to be considered are reduced to the minimum. The work is so arranged that a man may immediately put his study into effect in his own local field.

Each student puts the emphasis upon the work of study that applies most largely to his own church work. Reporting the results of his efforts, the student receives recommendations from time to time as to the most effective methods of work to be introduced.

A man's own field is the best field for him to study. He has close at hand the laboratory in which he may work out the ideas which will be presented to him. Helpful as the courses in Christian sociology in our theological seminaries may be, it is not possible in the seminary to give the student the experience which may be his after he has become a settled pastor. Many ministers whose pastorates are in what are known as city mission fields feel the inadequacy of the training which they have received in order to meet the problems which now confront them. It is the object of this correspondence course to supplement the fundamental and very valuable training received in the theological seminary.

Many of our difficulties are due to unformed or half-formed opinions and propositions. The course demands the formation of very definite questions and answers. This, of itself, will be an exercise of great value.

OUTLINE OF THE COURSE.

I. Study of Local Field.

A close analysis of conditions in the local church; the equipment of the church for practical work; the social, economic and physical conditions in the community; the organizations at work in the church; a study of the success and failure of methods employed; a study of problem questions in the community; suggestions for a complete study of the moral and religious aspects of the city's life.

II. Methods of Social and Economic Reform.

The philosophy of the labor movement, including socialism, trade unionism, anarchism, etc.; methods of industrial peace, in which suggestions will be given as to how ministers may assist in bringing it about; social centers for the people—the study of lodges, social clubs, the saloon, municipal centers and social settlements.

III. Institutional Church.

The necessity for institutional church work; the principles upon which such work should be done; how to conduct an institutional church with limited finances; general methods of institutional church work.

IV. Evangelism for Workingmen.

Methods of conducting shop meetings; out-of-door preaching; tent meetings; men's meetings.

V. Use of Literature.

The value of literature in church work; how to get results with leaflets; how to write for the press.

VI. How to Advertise the Church.

The psychology of advertising; the principles of advertising; the construction of advertising; the methods of advertising; advertising mediums; the use of type.

In connection with most of these studies it is expected that the student will submit for criticism the result of the work suggested.

This enterprise is not conducted upon a commercial basis. Its sole purpose is to help ministers in their work. But in order to cover the expense of correspondence, special literature, postage, etc., a charge of $5 for the course will be made.

We invite ministers of any denomination to enroll with us as the study is in no sense sectarian.

Address Charles Stelzle, 155 Fifth avenue, New York City.

Lesson Text John 6:1-18	The Sunday School Lesson	International Series 1908 Feb. 23

The Pool of Bethesda*

H. L. Willett

The arrangement of material in the Gospel of John does not appear to be orderly. With the opening of chapter 6 Jesus is represented as being in Galilee, but in the preceding chapter his ministry falls in Judea. It has been suggested by several students of the text that a better arrangement would place chapter 6 after chapter 4, and then follow it with chapter 5; then: 15-24, 1-13, 25-36, 45-52, 37-44. This plan seems to bring the events into more orderly relation with each other, and avoids several difficulties which the present arrangement of the text involves. This would bring the present lesson immediately after the discourse of Jesus upon the True Bread, delivered at Capernaum, which resulted in much popular disapproval and many desertions from his company of disciples. About this time it is probable that Jesus left Galilee for his visit to Jerusalem.

Where Was the Pool?

Many efforts had been made by biblical scholars to locate the pool of Bethesda which had five porches. From the description one would infer that it was a large rectangular pool surrounded by open colonnades and crossed at its central point by a bridge-like added colonnade which formed the fifth porch. It is known that Jerusalem had several pools, of which the one now most familiar is the so-called "Pool of Hezekiah" on the western hill not far from the Church of the Holy Sepulchre. But this is not an intermittent spring, being fed from another pool outside of the walls with which it is connected by a conduit. In the court of the Church of St. Anne near St. Stephen's Gate in the eastern wall there is a ruined Crusader church, in the crypt of which there is a spring which is usually pointed out by the guides as the Pool of Bethesda. But there is no indication that this pool was ever subject to that strange variation which is pointed out as the characteristic of the pool in the lesson. The only water source near the city which has this feature of intermittent flow is the so-called Fountain of the Virgin outside of the eastern wall on the western slope of the valley of Kidron. This spring connects with the Pool of Siloam a quarter of a mile below, through the long conduit dug under the city walls in the reign of King Hezekiah (2 Kings 20:20). That this Pool of Siloam was in the city from the times of Hezekiah onward is clear. It was the pool to which Jesus sent the blind man that he might wash and regain his sight. It is quite probable that this was the scene of the incident here recounted.

The Legend of the Angel.

It will be noticed by the student that the Revised Versions omit the fourth and a portion of the third verse which contain the tradition accounting for the moving of the water, by the legend that an angel periodically stirred it and that the first to plunge in after this agitation was sure of being healed. The cause of the troubling of the water is apparent to anyone who studies the relation of the Virgin's Fountain and the pool below it to its water source in the rocks above, where a pocket fills with water until it overflows, when the syphon action sets in and drains it until it is again refilled. This accounts for the periodical flowing of the water through the conduit and into the Pool of Siloam. It is not strange that peculiar virtues should be attached to waters having this mysterious movement, and that the belief should grow up that only the first to enter after the agitation could receive the healing power.

The Afflicted Man.

Jesus was probably accustomed to visit the places where the sick and the distressed gathered. He was one who went about doing good and his heart was always tender when he beheld the sufferings which sin had brought upon men. He was not well known in Jerusalem as yet, and had opportunity therefore to observe the sufferers gathered about the Pool of the Five Porches without being importuned for help. The man on whom he looked particularly was one long afflicted and well-nigh hopeless of cure because of his inability to reach the healing waters. To him Jesus brought a blessing greater than that of first approach to the troubled pool. He bade him take up his mat and go out. The faith which Jesus inspired was enough to accomplish the cure. The man took the Lord at his word and went forth healed.

The Holy Sabbath.

But in the healing of this cripple Jesus crossed one of the traditions of the Jewish leaders. There was no law against acts of mercy or of necessity upon the Sabbath, but the scribes had drawn fine distinctions, and Jesus' healing of the lame man was construed as a fracture of the Sabbath law. When the man now restored, was questioned by the Jews as to who had wrought his cure, he could not tell them, though they must have known that Jesus only was likely to perform healings of this sort. When Jesus and his new friend met later on in the temple the Lord gave him one of those characteristic counsels which reveal the heart of Jesus' message to men, "Sin no more, lest a worse thing befall thee." This was the Master's favorite admonition to those he met. He knew that sin was the cause of suffering. It lay at the heart of physical disease as in this case, and it was the cause of moral overthrow as in that of the woman taken in sin. To both these and to others Jesus gave the one word of admonition, "Go and sin no more."

The Father's Constant Work.

The lesson closes with one of Jesus' greatest sayings. The Jews had accused him of breaking the Sabbath. Jesus responded that his Father had always been at work. Sabbaths were no exception to the rule of the Father's continuous activity. From the time of creation's first beginning God had never ceased to be active in the great tasks of the Universe. He was always creating new life and lifting it to higher levels. Such ceaseless concern for the development and improvement of the world counted the Sabbath as joint partner with the weak and sought no rest or tarrying. Jesus does not advocate the neglect of a day of rest, but shows that their interpretation of the Sabbath law was shallow and useless. God's work never ceases, for it is of the highest order, nor does the work of the kingdom of God ever reach pause or cessation in its progress. That which Jesus did for the man at the Pool of Bethesda by a single word of power he is doing for all the needy and sinful by the slow but certain processes of redemption, which, through obedience to the laws of righteousness and welfare bring wholeness and health to the bodies and souls of men.

THE DES MOINES MISSIONARY RALLY.

High water mark in missionary rallies was reached in Des Moines, Tuesday, January 21. Charles S. Medbury demonstrated again that it is easier to do a big thing than a little one. From 1,000 to 1,500 people were present at the several sessions and gave breathless attention to every word. All classes in the Bible College of Drake University were adjourned and students in other departments had liberty to attend the rally instead of their classes.

From two to four o'clock the business houses of University Place closed and the men came to church. After the public schools were out five hundred children swarmed into the house of God and were given the seats of honor. The impressions which they received from the exhibits and from the words of A. McLean, C. S. Weaver and Dr. Royal J. Dye will never be effaced. After the children the Drake students, who had been present all day, had a special word from Dr. Dye. Even after adjournment groups of student volunteers gathered about the missionaries and kept them talking until train time.

The ministers of Des Moines and the regions round about were present in force and many of them spoke burning words on the world's evangelization. The presence of Mrs. Laura De Laney Garst was a benediction. A further reach and a wider purpose were given to the rally by the messages of a Centennial secretary, W. R. Warren. If Des Moines is an index we shall be giving more than twenty three cents each for Foreign Mission in 1909.

The man who says nothing is never misquoted.

Scripture Rom. 1:14-16	The Prayer Meeting	Topic for Feb. 26

Debt of the Strong to the Weak

The conversion of Paul to Christianity was his call to the mission field. The need which Christ met in him Paul felt was universal. He would have been driven to deny the power of Christ in his own life if he had tried to keep his faith to himself. The attempt to prove a to a man calling himself a disciple of Christ that he is debtor to the non-Christian peoples is a disheartening business. An experience of spiritual realities carries with it the sense of obligation. Information is needed by every disciple. Some are so poorly equipped with information about the world that they have a very imperfect conception of their duties. But where the faith is rightly grounded, presentation of opportunities for the extension of the kingdom of the Lord will be hailed with joy.

The Strong.

The strong are those who enjoy the blessings of the gospel. Let there be no misapprehension here. Circumstances determine the form of service a Christian is bound to render to others; they do not free him from responsibility. The amount of money one gives necessarily depends upon the amount he has. The gift of teaching is possessed in varying degrees. In one respect all who follow

Silas Jones

Christ are equal—every man must do his best. A diseased body may keep you from the mission field or from making money for the Lord's work, but it need not close your lips. You can help according to your ability. You can pray and you can tell your friends the vision that is in your hearts. We think too meanly of ourselves. We do not rejoice enough in the conquering power of our faith. The disciple is strong in the strength of his Master. He undertakes great things because he has a great Leader.

The Weak.

The weak are those who have not Christ. Some of these are reckoned as mighty among the nations. They have armies and navies that command respect. Others are the playthings of the great powers. They are exploited by the commercial nations. They are ignorant. But all have spiritual needs which only Christ can satisfy. The African in bondage to witchcraft, the Chinaman with his ethics of Confucius, and the Hindu, skilled in the dialectic of philosophy, are at one in that they cannot reach their full spiritual stature without Christ. The development of the material resources of heathen lands awaits the coming of Christian ideas. Superstition blocks the way of progress.

"I Am Ready."

Paul knew himself and his message. He was therefore ready for service. To preach in Rome was to face the scorn of the proud and the scoffs of the moral and religious skeptics. Paul knew the future was his; he therefore was unmoved by reproaches and mockings. Is the church ready? Is she secure in the faith that to her Lord belongs by right the judgment of the nations and that he will win them through her? It is one thing to have a vague notion that the world is sometime and in some way to be won to Christ. It is quite another to accept the concrete situation and go to work for the realization of the vision of world-conquest. Paul had visions, but he kept his feet on the earth. He did not dare to pray unless he worked. The church has the opportunity of the ages. The doors are open for the entrance of the gospel into every country of the earth. The results of a century of missions are seen in the changing customs and ideas of non-Christian peoples. It is possible to evangelize the world.

Our Foreign Missions

This is a very important meeting. It is the best chance of the year for setting before the Endeavorers the foreign mission work of our church. Use it to the best advantage.

The leader's opening remarks may speak of the foreign mission work of the Disciples in general, its scope and importance, the range of countries covered, the number of people for whom the church is responsible, the success of the work—just a few opening words tending to make the Endeavorers realize that the meeting has a big theme and that they are a part of a large work.

A FEW FACTS OF THE LAST YEAR.

Gains in Money—The receipts amount to $305,534, a gain of $36,807, or 13 per cent.

Churches—Number contributing 3,415, a gain of 237. They gave $123,468, a gain of $14,450, or 13 per cent, the largest gain from the churches as churches in the history of the society. The churches averaged $36.13, and 1,060 reached their apportionment. We hope to enlist 5,000 contributing churches this year.

Sunday Schools—Last year 3,785 schools observed Children's Day, a gain of 147, and their offerings aggregated $77,158, a gain of $10,349, or 15 per cent. This is the largest gain from the schools in the whole history of the society. The schools averaged $20.38 each and 1,628 reached their apportionment.

Endeavor Societies—Note that 997 made offerings, a gain of only 28. Their gifts reached $12,789, a gain of $781. They averaged $12.84 and 439 reached their apportionment. During the current year we ask them for $15,000.

Personal—Personal offerings number 953. They aggregate $32,145. They averaged $33.73.

Annuities—Thirty-three gifts were received on the Annuity Plan, amounting to $36,250, a gain of $14,237, or 60 per cent.

New Missionaries—Nine new missionaries were sent out. We hope to send out fifty by Sept. 30, 1908.

Missionary Force—The whole missionary force now numbers 564, including 410 native evangelists and helpers, a gain of 76.

Medical—The Foreign Society supports nineteen hospitals, and last year 99,087 patients were treated. This is a Christly work.

Educational — Forty colleges and schools are supported, and the attendance last year was 3,388, a gain of 883.

Orphans—The Foreign Society feeds and clothes and houses and educates about 40 orphans. This is a great work indeed. Help it! Please support one yourself.

Literature—A great amount of literature is written and translated and printed in the different tongues where work is being done. This branch of the service is very important.

Membership—The membership in all fields is 9,879. The number in the Sunday schools is 7,220. During the past year there were 1,912.

No work is more blessed than this work. Last November, the Rev. Griffith John, D. D., one of the oldest missionaries of the London Missionary society, went back to China. He had spent fifty years there, and then, breaking down, came to America to live with his son. After a year or more the doctors told him that he could go back. A little deputation of friends of missions waited on him before he left and presented an address. Among his statements in reply, Dr. John said:

"I would not exchange places with King Edward or with your President. The work of the missionary is a blessed work. I have given fifty years to China. I do not want to live always, but I would like to live some more for China. I would be glad to give China fifty years more!"

WISE CLERK

Quits Sandwiches and Coffee for Lunch.

The noon-day lunch for the Department clerks at Washington, is often a most serious question.

"For fifteen years," writes one of these clerks, "I have been working in one of the Gov't Departments. About two years ago I found myself every afternoon, with a very tired feeling in my head, trying to get the day's work off my desk.

"I had heard of Grape-Nuts as a food for brain and nerve centres, so I began to eat it instead of my usual heavy breakfast, then for my lunch instead of sandwiches and coffee.

"In a very short time the tired feeling in the head left me, and ever since then the afternoon's work has been done with as much ease and pleasure as the morning's work.

"Grape-Nuts for two meals a day has worked, in my case, just as advertised, producing that reserve force and supply of energy that does not permit one to tire easily—so essential to the successful prosecution of one's life work." "There's a reason."

ciation oftener than any other minister in the city. He preached at the Y. M. C. A. on last Sunday afternoon.

A. B. Moore has entered upon his fourth year's work with the congregation at Burlington, Kan.

C. H. Hilton has just begun a series of night sermons at Milton, Ore., on the subject of "Adventism."

Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Kendall are to assist P. H. Welshimer in a revival at Canton, O., next October.

Three baptisms are reported from the girls' orphanage of the C. W. B. M. at Bayamon, Porto Rico.

W. J. Lhamon, of Columbia, Mo., preached at Carrollton, Sunday, January 26, morning and evening.

Hugh Wayt delivered an address before the Masonic Lodge in their temple in Barnesville, Ohio, Feb. 7.

Andrew P. Johnson has accepted a call with the church at Bethany, Mo., beginning the first Sunday in February.

W. W. Burks, minister at Nevada, Mo., has been preaching in a very interesting meeting at the First Church, Joplin, Mo.

L. L. Carpenter of Wabash, Ind., will dedicate the new house of worship at Anadarko, Okla., on Lord's Day, Feb. 23.

G. W. Kitchen, of Chanute, Kan., is taking a month's vacation and helping the church at Maryville, Mo., in a meeting.

H. O. Breeden will begin a meeting with the First Church at St. Joseph, Mo., March 1, to continue probably two weeks.

Sparta, O., was to begin a meeting last Lord's day. The minister, F. M. Myrick, is to be assisted by H. E. Aldacker.

The last year was a good one with the church at Traverse City, Mich., one hundred new members having been added to the list.

C. F. Rose, of Virginia, has been extended a call to supply the place vacant at Belvidere, Neb., by the resignation of L. D. Cox.

A good interest is being taken in the meeting at Harrison, O., where Justin N. Green has been preaching for M. G. Long and his church.

Waller Monroe, who has been in the banking business at Lincoln, Neb., has decided to enter the ministry. He is a graduate of Cotner University.

J. T. Vance, father of Evangelist S. J. Vance, passed away February 8, at Webb City, Mo., at the age of 80 years. He was a Christian over sixty years.

H. E. Tucker, who has been in charge of the church at Platte City, Mo., for two years, has been engaged indefinitely and receives an increase in his salary of $250.

Charles M. Fillmore heartily commends E. C. Mannan, 1013 E. Morris street, Indianapolis, Ind., as a singer for churches in or near that city, who want some one to help in a meeting. He clerks in one of the large stores and could only sing in towns where he could get back home every night after meeting.

C. M. Hughes is singing for the church at Paulding, O., in a meeting which the pastor, T. W. Trumbull, has begun. We have a well equipped building there Bro. Hughes has some open dates.

James N. Crutcher led the local option forces to victory in Higginsville, Mo., Feb. 7, by a majority of 188. Bro. Crutcher has been selected to conduct the county campaign for Lafayette county.

J. M. Monroe of Oklahoma City, Okla., dedicated the church at Fletcher, January 19. The following Lord's day he dedicated the church at Binger. At each place the amount raised exceeded the indebtedness.

N. S. Haynes of Decatur, Ill. supplied his pulpit for J. Will Walters at Niantic during his absence of three weeks, conducting a meeting at Ludlow. The brethren at Niantic speak enthusiastically of Bro. Haynes' sermons while there.

Homer W. Carpenter began his work with the Wayne street Church, Lima, O., January 5, was greeted with a filled house and tendered a reception. There has been a forward movement in all departments and they began a revival February 2.

F. B. Hobson, who took the church at Kearney, Neb., when it was a mission, has handed in his resignation, to take effect within three months. He has done an excellent work there, and since the spring of 1906 the cause has been self-supporting. He has been preaching on Sunday afternoons at Gibbon, where he organized a congregation.

GOT MAD

When Told That Coffee Hurt Him.

One of the evidences that coffee is injurious to the nervous system, is the fact that many persons who are addicted to its use, grow wrathy when the suggestion is made that coffee causes them to "flare up" so easily.

A doctor writes:

"Coffee three times a day—I thought I could not get along without it. I was never well, prone to get excited and often troubled, but any suggestion that coffee was not good for me made me furious.

"I noticed the tendency to become excited was growing on me. My hands and feet were cold, fingers looked shriveled, liver inactive, constipated, coated tongue, bad breath and general lower vitality. (A perfect picture of caffeine poisoning.)

"A friend strongly advised me to give up coffee and use Postum, so I tried the change a few weeks and found a marked improvement in temper, nerves and general condition. I felt so firm that I thought I could go back to coffee. Three times I tried it but always had to quit coffee and return to Postum.

"Being a physician with a large practice and plenty of experience, it was hard for me to believe that coffee could have such a profound effect on my system. Perhaps my fondness for the beverage made me loath to admit its ill effects.

"For several years now I have ordered hundreds of patients to quit coffee and have prescribed Postum instead with good results to the patients and more prompt response to my medicines." "There's a Reason." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

A DENVER MEETING.

Our meeting at the Berkeley Christian Church, in Denver, closed Thursday, January 30, after seventeen days' preaching. There were 109 additions to the membership during the progress of the revival. It was a blessing to be able to help such an active, earnest, honest band of workers as the congregation at Berkeley; eager were they and willing to do whatever lay within their power to further the success of the meeting, and I feel that although there is a great work for them to do, still they will meet the questions bravely and win the great victory that awaits them.

To the extensive and careful preparations on the part of the pastor, Willard McCarthy and the church board is due, in a large measure, the success attending the effort.

Of the hospitality extended me in Bro. McCarthy's home, and in the homes of the various members, I can not say too much. Sister McCarthy is a consecrated woman, a power for good in that community and an earnest worker in the service of the Lord. It was my pleasure to meet many old friends and to make new ones in Berkeley, and I trust and confidently expect to hear great things of that congregation in the future.

The work in Carrolton moves grandly forward and we are planning many new things in our library and gymnasium association. Mr. Frank A. Wellman of Denver, is to be associated with me as assistant pastor.

The pleasant memories of the Denver meeting will long abide with us.

THE FIRST GREAT EVENT OF 1908.

The program of our Lord calls for nothing less than the evangelization of the whole world. "Go ye therefore and preach the gospel to every creature," is the least that a loyal Disciple of our crucified and risen Lord can consider as his duty.

To be partners with the Lord in such a world-wide enterprise ought to make us feel that we are highly exalted and to thrill with joy as we seek to carry out his purposes concerning the children of men. While we have been urging the brotherhood to evangelize the states, it was not simply for the sake of the states themselves. As much as we desire to see every state of our Union enjoying the blessings of a full New Testament gospel, we plan and plead and pray for this, that we may become factors in giving the message of life to the uttermost parts of the earth.

We build congregations and houses in Kentucky, that they in turn may not only help in the solution of Kentucky's problems, but that they may have the broader vision of the "islands of the seas." As the offering for foreign missions is the first of the year and the first in its magnitude, it is the first great event of 1908. How great it shall be depends on what we make it.

We ought to advance by leaps and bounds. We ought to wipe out the disgraceful black squares that have stood so long against us. Instead of 5,000 churches giving this year to preach the gospel in the regions beyond, there ought to be 10,000 churches keeping step to the music of God's truth.

The 5,000 giving would mark an advance; but the 10,000 would create a mighty tidal wave of enthusiasm that would make new records for every missionary effort among us.

There can be no just reason why every church should not be in line for doing God's will. There is every reason why every Disciple should have fellowship with the work of the brotherhood in sending the light to those who sit in darkness and in the shadow of death. The writer wants to add his humble word to help, if possible, swell the rising tide of interest in the offering for foreign missions the first Lord's day in March, 1908.

SOUTHERN INDIANA MINISTERIAL INSTITUTE.

The Southern Indiana Ministerial Institute will be held at Bedford on February 25, 26 and 27. It is earnestly desired that every preacher in southern Indiana be present. The church at Bedford will entertain all that will attend. An excellent program has been arranged for the occasion. The following is the program:

Tuesday Evening, February 25, 7:30, devotional service; address of welcome, J. W. Newland of Bedford; response by president of the Institute, William Oeschger; 8:00, address, "The Attitude of the Church Toward the Modern Spirit of Democracy," by E. R. Edwards of Kokomo.

Wednesday Morning—9:00, devotional service; 9:20, appointment of committees; 9:30, paper, "The Basis of Brotherhood in Christ," by H. L. Stine of Tipton. The paper is to be followed by a full discussion.

Afternoon—1:30, devotional service; 1:45, paper; "Evangelistic Preaching," by T. H. Adams, followed by a discussion; 3:00, paper, "The Place of the Holy Spirit in Our Preaching," by T. J. Clark, of Bloomington, followed by discussion.

Evening—7:30, devotional service; 8:00, address, "The Pulpit and Modern Thought," by George A. Campbell of Chicago, Ill.

Thursday Morning—9:00, devotional service, 9:20; business session, report of committees and election of officers; 9:45, paper, "The Preacher's Relation to Social Reform," by E. E. Davidson of Washington, followed by discussion.

Thursday Afternoon—1:30, devotional service; 1:45, paper, "How to Reach and Hold Men for the Church," by Harry G. Hill of Indianapolis, followed by a free discussion, closing announcements and adjournment.

All those who expect to attend the Institute should write to Melvin Putman, the pastor of the Bedford church. Every preacher who can possibly go should attend the Institute.

LAWRENCEBURG (IND.) LETTER

I have accepted a call to the Christian Church at Greensburg, Ind., and will close my work here the latter part of March. I succeed James Mailley, who goes to Colorado Springs.

The Protestant churches here had not been in the habit of co-operating—the last effort in that direction having resulted unfavorably. But the present pastors began to speak one with another, about the unhealthy moral and spiritual conditions prevailing in the community, and it was seen that something would have to be done. A series of union temperance meetings was held, the pastors doing the preaching. An anti-saloon league was the result. The saloons having had their own sweet way for years, began to take notice. A little effort was made to observe the Sunday closing statute. But several were indicted for a failure to comply with this law. The agitation continued. So far the league has not failed to win every point at issue—an important case having just been decided in its favor.

At the first of the year a series of union meetings began, the pastors doing the preaching. Each one preached what he thought was needed. The first week we itinerated among the churches, then we went to the Methodist church, as it was the largest. No jar or discord of any kind marred the beautiful spirit that prevailed from first to last. Each preacher laid on as much and as hard as it pleased him, and the others said "Amen." At first there was an incipient tendency toward a mourner's bench. No one criticised. We just prayed and worked. This tendency was soon a thing of the past. Penitents stood and confessed Christ, very much as they would have done in one of our own meetings. The Methodist preacher declared that any method suited him; that perhaps they had been too ironclad in their methods anyway. The Baptist preacher spoke on the text, "And now why tarriest thou? Arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on His name." If he had been a candidate for a Christian pulpit of the most conservative type, that sermon would have secured him the call. The Presbyterian preacher does not believe in denominaticnalism. He put the reasons for unity as strongly as any of our preachers would have done. I closed the series with a sermon based on the 17th of John. The response was hearty. At the beginning, it would not have been so well received, but having experienced four weeks of blessed fellowship, they wanted more.

There were not many conversions outside of the churches, but the effect in toning up the life of the members, smoothing out wrinkles and elevating the moral tone of the community was excellent, and, best of all, was the revelation that Christians, whose life is in Christ, can work together for the betterment of the town—for to many it seemed to come as a revelation, even to some of our own people.

My own experience is to the effect that I have never been in a meeting of any kind that did me more good, and that is the sentiment of many others, including, possibly, all the preachers.

I cannot resist the temptation to record a conviction that has been mine for a long time, namely, that we need to emphasize the prayer method in getting people together in Christ. We have tried argument, and I believe in that when nothing else will tak[illegible]. But we have been over zealou[illegible] spirit of argument stirs up [illegible] the devil more frequently t[illegible] it of unity. When Christ w[illegible] his disciples one, He prayed. [illegible] ould have more prayer meeting[illegible] one object in view, its realization [illegible]d be much nearer. There is a [illegible] ctarian spirit in many Disciples, t[illegible] only prayer will exercise; then there is the spirit of denominational loyalty that only prayer will remove and bring the larger view.

I wish that there might be some way to inaugurate a general movement in this direction. But little trouble will be found in uniting people in whom dwelleth the Spirit of God.

MARCH OFFERING NOTES.

In every church special efforts should be made to enlist every member in the March offering. If any are sick or absent they should be urged to do their part.

In one church one of the members makes it his business to see that the missionary offerings are taken. He goes to the minister in charge and reminds him that the time for the offering is approaching, and that ample preparation should be made.

If a preacher should overlook the March offering, or fail to prepare for it, the elders and deacons should go to him and suggest that he begin at once to prepare for it. They should also assure him of their abiding and abounding interest in the cause and their readiness to assist.

Our Lord said, "It is more blessed to give than it is to receive." This is the only beatitude in the New Testament that is in the comparative degree. Our Lord meant what he said. If we all believe his statement, the offering in March will be far more liberal than any that has been taken in other years.

It is unthinkable that any student of the Scriptures should doubt that the evangelization of the world is the great work of the church. This was the one work the apostolic church had on hand. Their activity was shaped by the great commission.

The question is not, "Do you believe in missions?" But "Do you believe in Jesus, the Christ?" No one can believe in him and understand his program and be opposed or indifferent to missions. To oppose missions is to oppose the Author of the missionary enterprise. To oppose missions is to fight against God.

Doors are open on all sides. The nations are ready as never before to hear the word of truth, the gospel of salvation. The church is rich and strong. God has put it into her power to give the gospel to the whole world in this generation. If this is not done, it will be because the church has not been loyal to the Lord she professes to serve and honor.

GIRARD, OHIO MEETING.

Three years ago the state board was called in council to help try and save the church at Girard, Ohio. After looking over the conditions that existed at that time, the field was pronounced hopeless. The few that were then worshiping at the place secured student preaching for a time, but finally secured Bro. S. C. Cliffe for half his time, the church at Mineral Ridge taking the other half. Bro. Cliffe is a safe and consecrated man of God; the work prospered, at last, with some opposition, he decided to try and get an evangelist to conduct a meeting. He wrote me of their trials. I had made up my mind to conduct meetings in three small churches this year—why not take this one. I had never tried to conduct a meeting where the church had preaching only half time, but I concluded to try it any way. You know I carry a singer, and the expense is great.

We arrived on the field, found a small band ready to work at anything suggested. I suggested, and kept on suggesting. The Methodist church was the strong church, and began a meeting at the same time; our meeting was announced weeks before.

Our house soon proved to be too small, the people commenced to accept the Christ until sixty-six persons had been added to the list of the saved, in all this number there was not a half-dozen children; almost a score of young men from 18 to 20 years, and the others were heads of families, the very best people in the city. Out of the young men, I am expecting one, possibly two, young preachers.

As is my custom, I never left the field until all had been assigned work, and until all had made a pledge for the support of the work, both old and new members. Organized Christian Endeavorers with fifty members; Sunday school doubled in attendance; almost every society in the church doubled its membership; a pastor was called for all his time. The weekly pledges will reach at least $35 per week. The meeting was paid for in full. They are happy; so am I. I say again, any church that will hustle can have a great meeting, pay for the same and double membership. The church had been divided for years, it is now united, and all are back in service. Get a vision, brethren, get a vision; plan for great things and God will give them. Do not be afraid to plan to get the best evangelist in the land; it will pay you to do so. I go next to Dunham Avenue, Cleveland. Have May open.

SOME KENTUCKY HAPPENINGS

D. G. Combs, wife and daughter, were sick much of January and hence he was at work only 16 days. There were 14 additions.

Harlan C. Runyon tells us that six were added and the work doing well in every way. He begins his seventh year with February.

Bardstown had the services of J. B. Briney half time. Some new officers elected and the outlook good.

Four added at Campbellsville during the last quarter and Wm. Stanley says the indications are full of promise for future success.

J. P. Bicknell has begun work in the vicinity of Hazel Green as the "living link" of "A Friend." There were five added during the 11 days he has worked. Wish we had a dozen Bicknells and "Friends."

Bromley is progressing well and J. P. Bornwasser had good audiences on days of bad weather.

The sickness of J. W. Master's mother and personal interests kept him out of the field. A letter from one of his recent converts would make good reading for folks who are interested in mountain work. This man was one of the men whom there seemed to be no hope, who is now a jubilant Christian.

There were eleven added in Jackson county by Z. Ball. Bad roads and smallpox interfered much with the work. Speaking of bad roads note the extract from a letter to me that follows:

"We are expecting you. The roads are bad; but we can pilot you safely through them. The pike is buried about two and one-half feet below the earth; but the mud is so soft we can find it almost every step of the way. The only trouble is in some places the pike is deeper than this and we have to bury the body of the buggy in the mud before we reach it. However there will be no difficulty in reaching H ———. Many care worn travelers have accomplished this remarkable feat this winter." Say, would you like to travel that road, my friendly reader?

J. B. Flinchum tells of his first month's work with us in Breathitt county. One added. At work on a building. He is the "living link" evangelist for Harrodsburg.

Thirty-three additions in Morgan county by W. L. Lacy. In spite of bad roads the truth triumphs.

One baptized at Jackson and a number of things encourage the minister, C. M. Summers. The members are manifesting the "grace" of giving in a way that is highly gratifying.

A. Sanders has begun work in the Sandy Valley. He is located at Paintsville and preached there half time—the other half being given to the work in the regions round about.

South Louisville work has some encouragement by the return of some of their best members who have moved away. Bro. Richey hopes for greater growth in the near future.

Two added at Morehead, W. F. Smith, the minister says: "Our work here is neither an artesian well nor a flowing spring. We pump and blast for what we get. People here seem to be of the opinion that something is doing."

Nothing approaching this work has ever been attempted before. In a series of splendid pictures the great and impressive scenes in the Bible story are depicted, true in color, costume, landscape, and all details to the life, the country and the time. ¶ To make the men and women of the Bible actual, living characters to their pupils is one of the first duties of the Sunday-School teachers, and no better help can they find for this than in the Tissot pictures. ¶ The whole world acknowledges that J. James Tissot was the greatest artist that ever lived, so far as Biblical subjects are concerned.

Only the unparalled success in the higher-priced editions makes possible this phenomenally low offer now. ¶ These pictures have received the unqualified endorsement of the leading clergymen and Sunday-School teachers throughout the United States. ¶ Nothing could be more helpful, and interesting, and delightful, when one is reading the Bible, than such a graphic interpretation of sacred stories. ¶ In no other way can the Bible stories be made so real and actual to children. Should be in every home.

TELEGRAMS

Ashland, O., Feb. 9—26 added here. Nearly all adults. Fine audience and outlook for good meeting very hopeful. Pearce is a splendid preacher and is doing a really great work in a very difficult field. Bruce Brown.

Grabell, Ind., Feb. 10—Having a great meeting at Harlan, Ind., with Mitchell and Bilby. Seventeen to date. Whole country stirred. Leon Couch, Minister.

Beatrice, Neb., Feb. 10—Evangelist and Mrs. Scoville, Mr. and Mrs. Ullom, Van Camp and Knowles are leading us in the greatest meeting ever held in Beatrice, and in the greatest meeting ever held in any individual church west of the Missouri river. We are rejoicing over results. 172 the first week, 170 the second week, 170 the third week, 52 yesterday, 564 to date. This old town that resisted the efforts of Ostrum and Sunday in union work, is yielding to the power of the gospel. Brother Scoville preached the Bible doctrine in the Scripture lesson, the baptismal service and every other part of the service, and is still the power of God unto salvation. Praise God. J. E. Davis, Pastor.

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 10—Closed at Kenton with 112, over 100 baptisms. Started at Jackson Boulevard last Sunday. Preparation by Pastor Stockdale unsurpassed. 36 to date. 24 confessions yesterday. All the difficulties typical of a Chicago church. Herbert Yeuell.

COLORADO.

Grand Junction—Seven additions in regular service. J. H. McCartney.

Denver—One of the most successful meetings ever held by our people in Denver closed Thursday, January 30th, at the Berkeley church. R. H. Sawyer of Carrollton, Mo., did the preaching and did it more than well. As a result there were ninety-three baptisms and sixteen otherwise received. At the beginning the most hopeful of our members thought that fifty would mean a great meeting. B. B. Tyler says that this is the greatest meeting ever held by any of our churches in Denver, so far as he knows. It certainly has been a great incentive to us all to do greater things. Our vision is much enlarged. We cannot speak too highly of Bro. Sawyer and his work. He is sweet-spirited, consecrated and earnest. A strictly Bible preacher and his hearers are made to feel the power of the message he brings. The immediate results of the work are 109 members and an incentive to greater things. We feel now that we can easily add over 100 new members during 1908.

Willard McCarthy.

ILLINOIS.

Rantoul—We are having good audiences and fine interest in our meeting, which began here Sunday. Louis O. Lehman, the minister, is preaching some splendid sermons. I have a junior and senior chorus. The church has a membership of about 250. Will be here through February. Sing at Springfield, Ill., in March.

Charles E. McVay,
Song Evangelist.

Rock Island—The Memorial Christian church closed a three weeks' meeting, January 27, conducted by S. T. Martin, recently city evangelist of Chicago, and J. H. Davis of Oskaloosa.

The work of the brethren was very acceptable to the church and resulted in lasting good; 54 actual additions to our membership were made, 43 by baptism and confession, and 11 by relation.

This church is made rich by some of the best Christian workers we ever knew. We believe the year to come will be a fruitful and blessed one. The ministers who have served this church in the past have left their mark for lasting good. W. B. Clemmer, Pastor.

Reds and Blues Contest Buttons

REDS AND BLUES Contest plans have proved wonderfully successful in Y. M. C. A. work and are proving more so in Sunday school work. By making use of our Reds and Blues plans you can easily double your school membership in a month or six weeks. You can break up irregular attendance in a very short time. You can raise large sums of money for your needs. You can secure church attendance, bringing of lesson helps, bringing of collection, coming on time.

The Reds and Blues plans please because they set everybody at work heartily and enthusiastically and because each leaves the school in a healthy condition when the contest is ended.

Each Reds and Blues plan requires dividing the school into two sections—Reds and Blues and appointing captains, one or more, for each side, a social or other treat to be given at the close of the contest, when those on the winning side receive ice-cream and cake, and the losers crackers and cheese, or some other attraction to celebrate the close of the contest and the victory. Treat is to be paid for by the school. Complete instructions sent with each order.

Price, in lots of 10 or more (sent assorted, one-half each color), 1½c each, postpaid; 50 or more, 1c each, postpaid.

Worth a Place in Your Library

The Messiah: A Study in the Gospel of the Kingdom. David McConaughy, Jr. 12mo., cloth, net $1.00.

In two parts. I. Aiming to trace the outlines of the peerless portrait of the Messiah as depicted by Matthew. II. A series of devotional meditations adapted for the "quiet hour."

Things That Are Supreme. James G. K. McClure, D. D. College Sermons. 16mo, cloth, net 75c.

Eight sermons by the popular president of McCormick Theological Seminary. These sermons were recently preached to the students at Harvard, Yale, Cornell, Princeton, Illinois, Wisconsin and Chicago.

Christianity's Storm Centre. Charles Stelzle. A Study of the Modern City. 16 mo, cloth, net $1.00. Mt. Stelzle believes that if the Church can be aroused to face the problem, investigate the conditions and alter its own methods it will win the fight for uniting the church and the laboring masses. He is hopeful with the well founded optimism of the man who knows from experience both sides of his question.

The Eternal in Man. James I. Vance, D. D. Cloth, net $1.00. Dr. Vance has the rare gift of stimulating and arousing both head and heart. These chapters dust off the commonplace of human life and its experiences and show the eternal part of us that lies underneath.

The Supreme Conquest. W. Watkinson, D. D. Net $1.00. To the list of great preachers who have made the British pulpit famous, the name of William L. Watkins has long since been added. His books are eagerly sought by up-to-date ministers everywhere, and are bought with equal appreciation by the general public.

God's Message to the Human Soul. John Watson, D. D., (Ian Maclaren). The Cole Lectures for 1907. Cloth, net $1.25. A peculiar and sad interest attaches The Cole Lectures for 1907. They were delivered, the author having suddenly passed away during his visit to this country, and within a few days of the date of the appointment that brought him to America. Fortunately Dr. Watson had put these lectures into manuscript form; they are therefore preserved for the wider circle of appreciative readers.

The Modern Sunday School in Principle and Practice. Henry F. Cope. Cloth, net $1.00. This volume by the General Secretary of the Religious Education Association constitutes an invaluable guide for the management of the Sunday School under modern conditions. He presents the results of all the newest experiments both with primary, adolescent and adult grades.

China and America Today. Arthur H. Smith, D. D. Cloth, net $1.25. Dr. Smith has been for 35 years a missionary to China. In this capacity he has learned much of China, which in another relation might be denied him. Being a statesman by instinct and genius, he has taken a broad survey of conditions and opportunities, and here forcibly presents his criticisms of America's strength and weakness abroad, especially in China.

Palestine Through the Eyes of a Native. Gamahliel Wad-El-Ward. Illustrated, cloth, net $1.00. The author, a native of Palestine, has been heard and appreciated in many parts of this country in his popular lectures upon the land in which so large a part of his life was spent. His interpretations of many obscure scriptural passages by means of native manners and customs and traditions is particularly helpful and informing.

The Continent of Opportunity: South America. Francis E. Clark, D. D. Profusely illustrated, net $1.50. Dr. Clark writes a thorough-going tour of examination, covering practically every centre of importance in South American continent. Panama, Chile, Ecuador, Peru, Argentine, Brazil, Paraguay and Uruguay. Dr. Clark's prime object has been to collect information of every sort that will help to understand the problems facing Christian Civilization in our sister Continent.

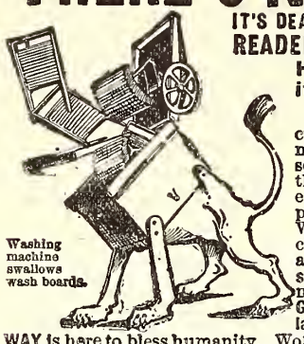
THERE'S NO MORE WASH DAY—A NEW INVENTION

IT'S DEAD! LAID AWAY! WIPED OUT FOREVER! READERS LISTEN SHARP—DON'T MISS—BEST THING EVER HAPPENED!

Hundred years coming, here at last, full grown—so startling will say it's impossible—but wait, don't worry—Ladies, Your Prayer Answered.



Washing machine swallows wash boards.

The world's watched for the man to cut wash day in two. He lives—taken more than half—left only minutes—cut so much wash day's all over, changed—there's new way cleaning clothes—different from anything known—new principles, ideas, methods, NEW EVERYTHING. Wonderful, but true, family washing cleaned with no more work than getting a simple meal, less time—no rubbing, squeezing, pounding, packing, pressing, no injury—no drudgery—that's past. Good-bye wash boards, washing machines, laundries—throw them away—the EASY WAY is here to bless humanity. Women have prayed for death of wash day—for clean clothes without rubbing—ruining health, looks—when they could wash, get dinner, see friends, indulge in recreation without fatigue—when women thought no more of washing clothes than to get a simple meal. That glorious day has come. The world's full wash boards, so-called washing machines, yet wash day same as ever—still long, dreary day—no easier, no shorter, no better. Use wash board or washing machine, its drudgery, long hours, hard work—backache—a day no woman forgets. Invention that killed wash day, named EASY WAY—name tells whole story—easy on clothes—easy used—kept clean—handled—easy on women—makes washing easy—easy to buy and sell. Not called a machine—powers inside concealed—caution the way it gets dirt—has awful appetite for dirt—increases more it gets—goes after all the dirt in all the clothes at same time—little, but mighty—silent, but powerful—uses no spirits, yet works in darkness. OPERATED ON STOVE—move knob occasionally—that's all—scarcely anything to do but wait between batches—child can do it. All iron and steel—always ready—sets away on shelf. Entirely unlike old methods. Verily, wash day is dead—EASY WAY settled that—woman's joy and satisfaction. Less than an hour cleans washing which before took all day—cleans all clothes, finest laces, curtains, etc., in about one-tenth time without rubbing, squeezing, packing, pressing—without chemicals to injure goods. Saves 52 days drudgery yearly—makes woman's hardest work easiest household duty—saves clothes, labor, fuel, health, looks. Surprises all—sounds strange, is strange, but listen, it's no experiment, going on daily. You can do it.

Throw Them Away.

Blessing the Inventor.

J. McGEE, Tenn., writes:—"One young lady cleaned day's washing by old method in one hour with EASY WAY. Another in 45 minutes. Everything as clean as could be." E. CRAMER, Tex., writes:—"Received Easy Way. Gave it a thorough trial. After ten minutes clothes nice and clean. Satisfactory in every respect." ANNA MORGAN, Ill., writes:—"I washed a woolen bed blanket in Easy Way in just three minutes perfectly clean." J. H. BARRETT, ARK., after ordering 38 Easy Ways, says:—"I don't understand why it does the work, but it does. You have the grandest invention I ever heard of. People are skeptical; have to be shown." J. W. MYERS, Ga., says:—"Find cheek to cover one dozen 'Easy Ways.' Easy Way greatest invention for womanhood, forever abolishing miserable wash day. Saves me turning old washer for hours. I am ready to have old washer accompany all others to the Dump. Sells itself." I. BECK, Ga., writes:—"Enclose order. Find 'Easy Way' as represented. Worked 4 days and have 15 orders." J. T. PEAY, N. C., says:—"Been out 2 days—sold 1 dozen, for which enclose order. Everybody is carried away that sees it work." Guaranteed, everything proven, old house, responsible, capital $100,000.00. Price, only $6.00 complete, ready to use—sent to any address. Not sold in stores.

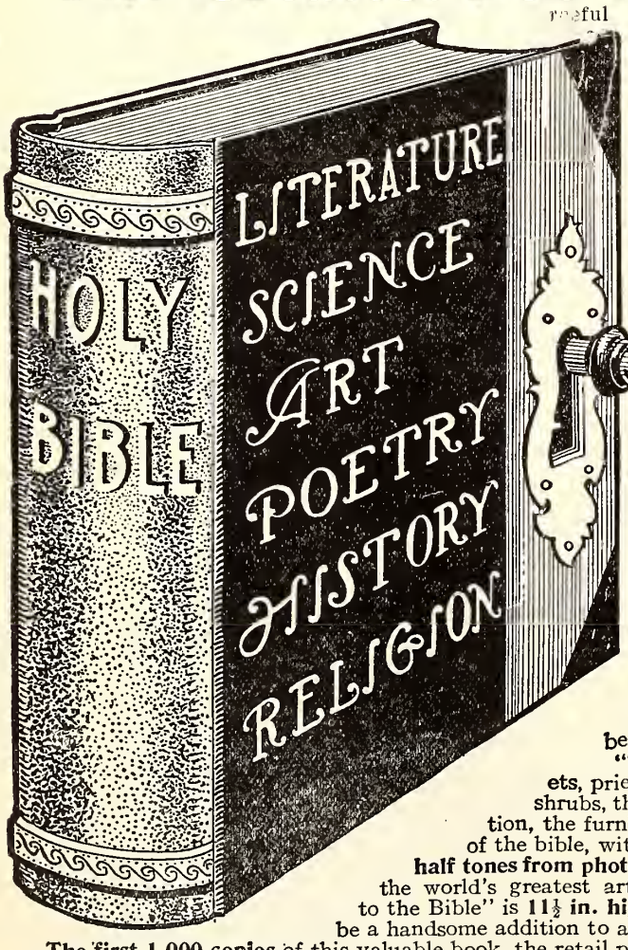
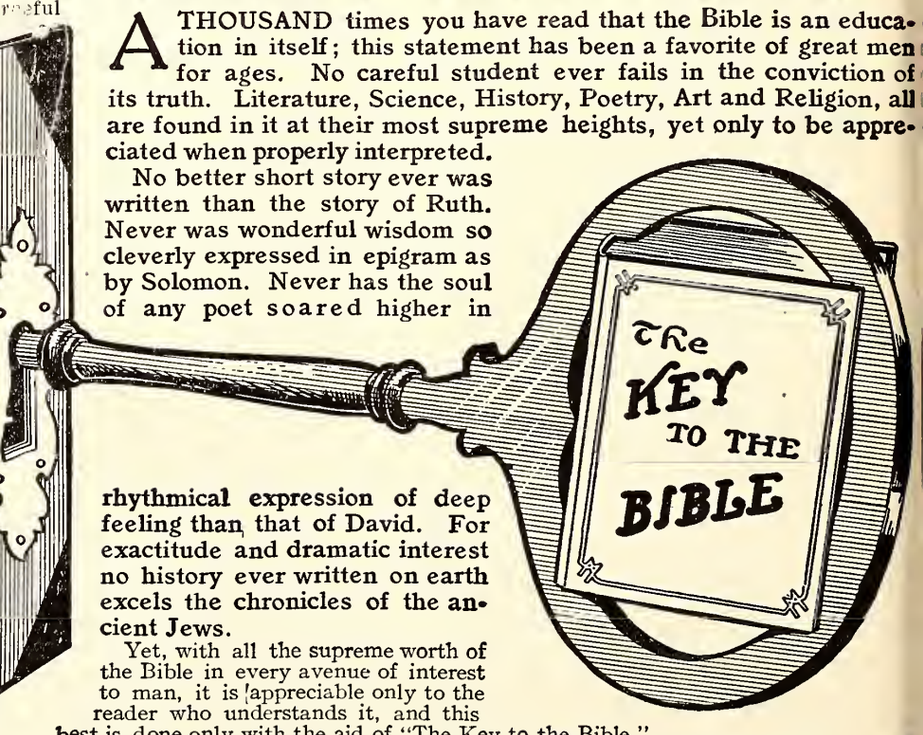
The Greatest Book About the Greatest Book.



A THOUSAND times you have read that the Bible is an education in itself; this statement has been a favorite of great men for ages. No careful student ever fails in the conviction of its truth. Literature, Science, History, Poetry, Art and Religion, all are found in it at their most supreme heights, yet only to be appreciated when properly interpreted.

No better short story ever was written than the story of Ruth. Never was wonderful wisdom so cleverly expressed in epigram as by Solomon. Never has the soul of any poet soared higher in rhythmical expression of deep feeling than that of David. For exactitude and dramatic interest no history ever written on earth excels the chronicles of the ancient Jews.



Yet, with all the supreme worth of the Bible in every avenue of interest to man, it is appreciable only to the reader who understands it, and this best is done only with the aid of "The Key to the Bible."

"The Key to the Bible" is an encyclopedia of the lessons, places, prophets, priests, apostles, disciples, birds, beasts and reptiles, the trees, plants and shrubs, the dress and customs, etc., peoples, houses and other places of habitation, the furniture, ornaments, statuary, the towns, rivers, mountains and lands of the bible, with 16 full page colored pictures from photographs, 100 full page half tones from photographs and reproductions of the greatest biblical paintings by the world's greatest artists and over 400 well drawn text illustrations. "The Key to the Bible" is 11½ in. high, 8 in. wide and 2½ in. thick, weighing 5 pounds. It will be a handsome addition to any library.

The first 1,000 copies of this valuable book, the retail price of which is $5.00, has been set aside for a preliminary sale. We have made arrangements with the publisher for a limited number of copies, and can offer them at the Preliminary sale price of $3, prepaid to any ad. After 1,000 copies are disposed of by the publishers the price will be $5.

I enclose $3.00 for one copy of "The Key to the Bible" to be sent prepaid.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

THE time has come to grapple with this great work on a broad scale. Conditions now in the foreign field favor such enlargement of our operations. The conditions at home favor it. We must have nothing less than a great army of properly qualified missionaries, before the generation closes, to accomplish the task. There must be a marvelous enlargement of the financial co-operation of Christians. We must not be satisfied with the present rate of increase in the gifts of Christians. I firmly believe that the time has come when thousands of individual Christians and families should support their own missionaries.—John R. Mott.

CHURCH EXTENSION NOTES.

The annuity plan of the Board of Church Extension continues to be in favor with the friends of that work. The board has just received three more gifts on the annuity plan since the last report—$500 from a brother in Iowa, $300 from a brother in Indiana, and $100 from a brother in Kansas. This last is the 214th gift to the Church Extension Board on the annuity plan. We trust others will pay heed to this plan and send gifts to the church extension fund, because all the annuity money is used in building churches. For information concerning this work write G. W. Muckley, Cor. Sec., 600 Water Works Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

The annuity fund of the Board of Church Extension now amounts to $214,000 and 125 churches have been built. The board could use $100,000 of annuity money this year for work in cities alone where we ought to be establishing great churches. Remember the fourth centennial aim is "to increase our annuity fund to at least $300,00 by October, 1909." Write G. W. Muckley, Cor. Sec., 600 Water Works Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., for information in regard to this work.

The Union of all Christians upon the Apostolic Faith, Spirit and Service.

THE VICTORY OF THE SECOND MILE.

When David, the son of Jesse, huuted like a partridge through the mountains of Judah by King Saul, looked out from his rocky hiding place and saw his pursuers set their camp, he determined if possible to prove to the king the sincerity of his devotion and the cleanness of his hands. With but a single follower he approached the circle in whose center was the king. When darkness and sleep had fallen, he stole in among the dying camp fires till he reached the slumbering and unguarded Saul. There he lay, without a single sentinel to warn him of his peril. The fierce Abishai at David's side, his hand trembling on his dagger, in his tense eagerness, whispered, "Let me smite him, I pray thee, and I will not strike a second time." But David curbed his fiery captain and whispered, "God forbid. Destroy him not. He is the Lord's anointed." In that moment David gained the greatest victory of his life. The king's spear and the water cruse which he took away and held up to the view of the awaking camp the next morning, as he shouted safely from the heights above, were greater proofs of his fearlessness than would have been the head of Saul. And his refusal to take the life of his enemy when he was in his power exhibited a generosity which won him thousands of hearts in Israel, and brought Saul himself to tearful acknowledgment of David's goodness and his own perversity.

No element in Jesus' teaching more astonished men than his refusal to accept the world's principle of retaliation, and his insistence upon the right and duty not only of returning good for evil, but of rendering to others more than was required. He taught that men must be unsatisfied to give scant or even exact measure. It was the "overplus" upon which he dwelt as the true test of the children of the kingdom. The text of the Sermont on the Mount states the basis of his contention, "Except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of God." It was not sufficient that one should not kill, as Moses had commanded. He must not even hate, for in hatred lies the seed of murder. Adultery lay for him not only in forbidden acts, but in unholy thoughts. The law of equivalence, which had demanded an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth, was to be forgotten in the effort to love one's enemies. If a suppliant asked for one's coat, one must be prepared to give the mantle also if need be. "If a man ask thee to go with him a mile, go with him two." It is this generous spirit of the "overplus" that best reveals the heart of Christ and points the way to the new sense of brotherhood and helpfulness which is coming upon the world. It is the conquest of men by an unexpected good. It is the triumph over the selfish nature within by learning the delight of doing more than is required. It is the victory of the second mile.

Perhaps the personal satisfaction comes first. When a generous and brotherly deed is performed, in spite of all calculation, it is the benefactor who benefits most. When Saladin conquered Jerusalem from the Crusaders, who a few years before in their taking of the place had barbarously massacred the entire Saracen population, he was unwilling to repeat this atrocity. When there seemed no other wa yto exact justice, he granted permission that the captives might buy their ransoms at so much each. When all who could clear themselves by this means had gone forth, and there still remained hundreds who had no money, he pondered long and at last paid their ransoms from his own purse. Such generosity astonished and humbled the Christians, who had seen no such conduct among their own chiefs. And yet Saladin's was the greater blessing. Unconsciously he had given example of Jesus' principle of the "overplus."

That his is the most effective way to deal with a hostile spirit has been proved in every age. David by his act of generosity made Saul's further pursuit of himself impossible. Ahab took to Samaria the captive hosts of Ben-hadad, whom he had defeated in battle, and fed and clothed them there, with the result that "the bands of Syria came no more into the coasts of Israel." What more humbling, more overwhelming, than to receive kindness from one who has been hated and wronged? What a glorious revenge is this of the "overplus" of kindness. There is no greater triumph than that of meeting hate with love. It is the victory of the second mile. "Therefore," says Paul, "if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink; for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head. Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good."

THE CONGRESS.

It should be borne in mind both by ministers and other church workers that the Congress which meets in Bloomington, Ill., the last two days of March and the first of April will offer a program of unusual richness and variety to those who attend. The purpose of the Congress is not merely to discuss academic and theoretical questions, but as well some of the most practical issues of church work in our generation. The attendance promises to be much the largest in the history of the Congresses. The churches at Bloomington are accomplished in the offices of hospitality. The fellowship of the gathering will be delightful. Important interests affecting the welfare of the brotherhood outside the formal program of the Congress will come up for consideration. The refreshment and inspiration of such a gathering make it worth while for every church to send its minister, and for every layman to consider whether he may not himself attend. The meeting place is within easy reach of all the churches in the great middle section of the brotherhood. We look for a splendid Congress at Bloomington.

THE MARCH OFFERING.

The first Sunday in March is the time for the offering for foreign missions. But if the weather should be unpropitious or circumstances should prevent the observance of the day, the entire month of March is consecrated to this cause and the first favorable day should be chosen for the offering. Nothing should be allowed to stand in the way of a generous and worthy contribution on the part of the entire membership, if this can be secured. There is uo greater cause on our calendar than that of foreign missions. Let it have the right of way in March.

A WORD TO OUR READERS.

Thanks to our new business management which is taking hold of Christian Century matters with firmness and energy, the delays which have been experienced in issuing recent numbers will no longer occur. Circumstances have made it impossible to secure promptness in the output during the past two months. The transition from our old quarters to the new, and other changes incident to the progress of reorganization and enlargement, still leave us unable to realize fully our plans just yet, but it will be a matter of weeks only until this is possible.

THE CARPENTER SHOP

By Amos R. Wells.

I am a tool in the Carpenter's hand,
And obedience only is mine.
Never a whit may I understand
The Carpenter's vast design.

Mine to stay if he bids me stay,
And go if he bids me go;
Mine to plod in the same dull way
Steadily to and fro.

Mine to present a handle firm,
And an edge that is sharp and true;
Mine to achieve, in my destined term,
Just what he would have me do.

The Nazareth shop in the centuries dead
Has sunk from the sight of men.
O joy, if my life, by the Carpenter led,
May restore that shop again!

—C. E. World.

I noticed in the vale of Chamouni that the mountains ruled the valley, not the valley the mountains. The valley could only wind and go as the mountains let it. The valley could not thrust away the mountains; it must submit to them. So does the effulgent fact of the resurrection of Jesus rule history.—Wayland Hoyt.

Enlisting the Men in Church Work

A. L. Chapman

It is more difficult to enlist the men in Christian work than the women, at least the church has not succeeded so well in doing so. The fault may be with the men, or it may be with the methods employed to reach them. We are very sure the fault is not with the gospel. I think we may safely place the responsibility upon the management of the churches. Much more attention is given to the organization of the women and their encouragement in church work than is given to the men. But in this day we are awakening to the fact that the men are quite as willing to do church work as the women, and that all that is necessary is to give them something to do, trust them and encourage them to do it in a manly way. Man is made for action and likes to do things. The gospel appeal is adapted to the constitution of man, when rightly understood, and calls him to active service. The modern business man will not be satisfied in a church that asks nothing of him but to attend the services and give a pittance of his income for its support. Men who are used to doing things upon a large scale in the business world during the week are not attracted to an institution that is doing things upon a small scale and then in a manner that does not appeal to their business instincts and judgment. Big things in the business world and little things in the religious world. That is not putting things right; that is not fairly representing the gospel of Christ. The church is making a mistake in not making strong appeals to the men, not asking great things of them and not giving them a chance to perform a man's part in the activities of the church. The Savior appealed to the heroic element in men; and that is the winning element and such appeals are never made in vain. The men of the churches should be made to feel that if they want something big, something that will enlist the greatest powers of intellect and all the energy and courage of their beings, that the place to find it is in the church of Christ in efforts to save the world. It should be impressed upon them that if they have any iron in their blood or any granite in their nature and are willing to undertake hard tasks and to do difficult things, they should enlist in the service of Christ. The appeal of the gospel is to the highest and the noblest in the nature of man. And this is the appeal which the modern church must make to the men who stand ready to be enlisted in the great enterprises of the kingdom of God.

Our Business Men's Association.

We have awakened to the importance of the work among the men and are trying to make this appeal and are determined to push the interests of the Business Men's Association away to the front in the coming year. We have raised the cry, Every man in the church a member of the Business Men's Association. This is the best method we have yet discovered for reaching the men and enlisting them in the work of the church. We have meetings monthly at which banquets are served followed by the discussion of some theme of interest to Christian men. We generally have a chief speaker and after the address throw the subject open for discussion by the members. Among our speakers we have had the mayor of the city, professors from the University, lawyers and business men. A very interesting meeting recently was addressed by a banker of the city who discussed the subject, The Present Financial Situation. Some of the meetings are conducted entirely by our own men. Once a year the Association entertains the wives and sweethearts of the members. This is made a great occasion. Such was our December meeting. The theme for the evening was Our Church; Its Outlook and Opportunities; several stirring addresses were made, all breathing a spirit of good will, hopefulness for the future and a determination to build up a great church in the city. At the breaking up of the meeting some were heard to say that it was the very best meeting of any kind ever held in connection with the church.

One of the most happy and successful enterprises yet taken up by our men was a course of Bible lectures delivered by Dr. H. L. Willett more than a year ago. The Association assumed the financial responsibility for the lectures and arranged for the coming of the lecturer. It was altogether an experiment and some feared the men would have to put up the money themselves, which they were prepared to do if necessary. But each evening the congregation was given an opportunity to make a free will offering, and these offerings were sufficient to meet all obligations assumed by the association.

The Early Brotherhood

H. H. Peters

I find in Jesus Christ one who is beyond the circumstances of sex, the characteristics of race, the limitations of time and the restraints of social rank.

Humanity is divided into two sexes, each having peculiar characteristics. We are impressed by the strength of manhood and the tenderness of womanhood. Lincoln is noted for strength. Mary, the mother of our Lord, is characterized by tenderness. No man can call Christ sexless and yet in character he stands midway between the sexes. He is as feminine as woman and as masculine as man. He has kingly qualities and queenly virtues. He is just but he is merciful; he is courageous but he is submissive; he is mighty but he is gentle.

A Modern Error.

The Midle Ages subordinated the womanly aspects of Christ's nature to his justice. The result was a religion of legalism and formalism. The mother of Jesus was robed with a more gracious divine majesty. Mary became the Mother of God. She took the place Jesus ought to have had. Then a reaction began, and the church presented an effeminate Christ of pietistic sentimentalism. Strong men arose and abandoned a religion whose central person was not masculine. This too is a modern error. The portrait of Jesus is defective. To solve the "social problem" we must preach a Christ who has the strength of manhood and the gentleness of womanhood. The masculine and feminine qualities unite in Jesus of Nazareth as in no other historic character.

Men are also differentiated by the races to which they belong. The race defines the temper. Jesus came from a race clearly marked off from other men. Their religion kept them a separate people. To this day though they wander landless among all nations, they are distinct from all and absorbed in none. Jesus came from the Jews but he was not Jewish. Brought up in Nazareth he stood at the confluence of three ancient civilizations—the Hebrew, the Greek and the Roman. But he was merged in none. He stood above and apart and was the fulfilment of all. In him there was neither Jew nor Greek, bond nor free, male nor female, barbarian nor Scythian. He was as he loved to call himself, the Son of Man. One has said of him, "the world was in his heart." Humanity becomes conscious of itself only in him. As to race Jesus is the universal man.

The Universal Christ.

Jesus also escaped from the influence of his surroundings. They can neither explain nor confine him. You cannot date the mind of Jesus. "He was not simply in advance of his time, he was detached from the special, aloof from the trammels of every age." He has been called the only modern and the first modern. But he is neither. The modern world can no more claim him than the ancient. His colossal intellect spans the centuries, and his heart is the heart of the universe.

Christianity is taking root in every nation. It is unfolding to each generation's life because the mind of the Founder was untrammelled by provincialisms and his thoughts are eternal. He will come to China as the answer to her best longings. He will be the fulfillment of India's prophetic desire. In fact, Jesus is the desire of all nations, but the special champion of none.

Jesus Place in Society.

Jesus cannot be located among the social ranks. He was the son of a peasant, but of the house of David. He associated with the common people and with outcasts; but he awed kings and great rulers by the majesty of his bearing. He washed the feet of his disciples, but he did it as their Master. There was no rank of society which he did not understand; there was none that could control or use him. He compelled the haughty Pharisee to be ashamed in the presence of a fallen woman. A royal court was panic-stricken when he was born—born the child of a wayfarer in the stable of a country inn. When he died, poor women and rich men joined in ministering at his burial. He was the mediator of rank, too universal to become the special champion of any. Jesus alone is beyond any scheme of social classification. He has obliterated all man-made differences by the directness of his appeal. He lived above our human distinctions.

As E. L. Powell says, "As Hamlet is the highest expression of literature, as the Ninth Symphony is the highest expression in music, as the Parthenon is the highest expression in architecture, so the life of Jesus Christ is the highest expression of righteousness, and because he is the incarnation and supreme expression of righteousness, he dominates man."

His Ideal.

The Brotherhood of Man was his ideal and when this ideal becomes reincarnated in humanity brotherhood will be realized. The world must become one in him, for he is the one universal, catholic and typical man, who stands for all and always.

The universe is the material expression of God; the Bible is the literary expression of God; Jesus Christ is the human expression of God; and a redeemed humanity will be the social expression of God.

As the creation of a thousand forests is in one acorn, so the creation of a new world wherein dwelleth righteousness was in the heart of our Lord. If the whole of history was in one man the future of humanity was in Jesus. If every revolution was first a thought in one man's mind, then the revolutionizing of human society upon a basis of spirituality began in earnest with the complete surrender of the Son of God to the will of his Father.

Is It a Dream?

But men say human brotherhood is only a dream; that men of different opinions cannot be united; that even Christian unity is only a visionary ideal; and that different temperaments cannot be united in one movement.

We hear much in these days about mystics and materialists, artists and philosophers, legalists and ceremonialists; and men talk as if these various temperaments made a variety of brotherhoods necessary.

Let us look into the circle of Jesus' friends, both during his personal ministry and in the days of his apostles. We find all types. There is John the mystic and James the legalist; Peter the revolutionist, and Thomas the materialist; Matthew the business man, and Judas the covetous; Stephen the martyr and Philip the evangelist; Apollos the orator and Aquila and Priscilla, the tent makers; Cornelius, the warrior and the Ethiopian statesman; the Roman jailor and Paul, the missionary; Luke the artist, and Lydia, the seller of purples; Onesimus, the slave, and Timothy, the young preacher; members of the household of Cæsar and outcast women. There were priests and Levites, publicans and sinners, beggars by the wayside and fishermen at their nets. These were united in one fellowship. Temperaments were modified and opinions were swallowed up in faith. What formed this fellowship? What was the basis of this fraternity? There is but one answer—Jesus Christ.

It was the attractive personality of Jesus that produced the early brotherhood. Brotherhood is possible to-day only in one way. Jesus said: "If I be lifted up I will draw all men unto myself." This, then, is our business—the exaltation of Jesus. One of my learned professors once said: "He who knows one man thoroughly understands human society." I am sure he was right if that one man is Jesus of Nazareth.

Two Philosophies.

There are two main divisions of human philosophy—individualism and socialism. There are many combinations and manifestations of these, but in the main these two divisions cover the ground. Individualism magnifies selfishness; socialism deifies social machinery. Neither will solve the pending problem, but it is much safer for the preacher to incline toward individualism than to proclaim a message that looks toward social betterment.

The Preacher and Society.

The average preacher is an individualist. He spends his time offering salvation to individuals. The leading brethren enjoy this sort of preaching. And in its place it is all right. But it is only one half of preaching. A preacher recently said to me, in substance: "I am too busy trying to save a few charred embers from the burning structure to spend any time trying to put out the fire. I believe the building is doomed and my business is to save the wreckage." This is theological individualism, and it is a fair sample of much preaching, even in this social century. It is one extreme, while the man who would save the world by social or ecclesiastical machinery simply goes to the other extreme.

The ideal for humanity is a pure individual as a member of a perfect society. Herbert Spencer says: "We must consider the ideal man as existing in an ideal social state." Jesus taught repentance (individual), for the kingdom of heaven is at hand (social). Thus, the purest religion and the loftiest philosophy meet at the same point. But philosophy would reach this goal by intellectualism, while Christianity presents love as the saving force. Love God and save yourself from sin and selfishness; love your neighbor and save him from poverty and despair. Upon these two commandments hinge the law, the prophets and the gospel. Our message must be social as well as individual. "Repentance" is a good theme, but the next message ought to be on "The Kingdom of Heaven is at hand." He who neglects one at the expense of the other will fail in the Christian ministry. Independence and interdependence go hand in hand in every realm. This is especially true in Christianity. Christianity is individualistic socialism, whose foundation is spirituality; or, to put it in another way, Christianity aims to socialize the individual.

The work of the preacher is twofold—save the individual and work for the redemption of society. Carry on both lines at the same time. Remember love drives out sin and overcomes selfishness. Chalmers writes of the "expulsive power of a great affection." This is God's method. He triumphs by supplanting. God is love, and when I love I am like him.

For the Modern Preacher.

In conclusion, may I suggest three lines of study, which will greatly assist the minister of the gospel to-day:

First. Psychology. To preach acceptably, one must know the power and workings of the human mind. Our message must be doctrinal. But it must fit. A doctrine to do good must meet the consciousness of man. A sane psychology is one of the roads to a reconstructed theology.

Second. Pedagogy. To do effective work one must know the avenue of approach to the human mind and how to instruct it. Our message must be educational. It must be a matter of training. The good workers are the trained workers. The great preachers are those who know how to preach as well as what to preach.

Third. Sociology. To carry on the work of the kingdom one must have a thorough knowledge of the laws and the principles upon which human society rests. Our message must be social. Men must express their religion in service. The Master went about doing good. We must do the same. But to do the greatest good to the greatest number, we must know how. A knowledge of social law is of the greatest value.

And so the message for to-day must be doctrinal to form the basis of life; it must be educational to provide the means of training in righteousness; it must be social that we may express our righteousness in the advancement of the kingdom of God. Dixon, Ill.

A Great Event for the Disciples

The offering for foreign missions the first Sunday in March is really a great event.

1. It is important first to the churches themselves. God is testing our churches in a very solemn manner by the present unparalleled opportunities. He is testing not only our willingness to preach the gospel, but our belief in the gospel itself as well. Do we believe in a universal gospel? Do we believe Jesus Christ died for man as man? For all men everywhere? Are we skeptical as to the fundamental character of our faith? Is the working principle of our churches based on a universal kingdom, or upon the mere locality idea? The attitude of the churches towards foreign missions the first Sunday in March will answer these serious questions in tones louder than any speeches. What do we believe, and what are we willing to do? These are final tests; and by these tests we stand or fall.

2. It will also be a great event for our preachers. This offering will test his faith in the Old Book; it will help to reveal his faith in the universal reign of the all-conquering Christ. His attitude towards large and better things will be reflected by his conduct that day. No mistake about it. It will show whether he is making progress as a spiritual force and as a leader of churches and men, or whether he is gradually declining and passing off the stage of action. No mistake here either. The rising men are the men of faith in the eternal things and who have the missionary vision. Some men believe, but have no vision. Paul was not such a man. His faith centered in Jesus Christ and he had a vision of the world redeemed through the gospel, for which he gave his life. No preacher can take his church where he is not willing to lead them. The preacher must lead. He must be the spiritual shepherd of the flock and not its ewe lamb.

3. March 1st will be a great event in the lives of the missionaries far out on the battle line. They will be in prayer for the churches in America. From Asia, Africa and Europe the eyes of our representatives and the mission churches will be turned toward us. These missionaries have in their loyal hearts plans for larger things. Can these plans be consummated? All hinges upon what we do in the offering. Plans have already been made to besiege old heathen cities where the gospel has never been preached. These plans depend upon the returns from the March offering. Schools and colleges cannot be enlarged if the churches do not do their duty on that day. We may arrest the ongoing of the kingdom by our indifference and selfishness. If we enlarge our gifts the missionaries will be cheered to move forward and enlarge all their work. Buildings now stand uncompleted, lots have been bought and await the funds for the erection of buildings, missionaries are living in unsanitary houses, some of them are overcrowded, all for the lack of funds to untie their hands. If the churches enter into cordial and loving fellowship with their brethren on the mission fields it will be a great day for the whole missionary staff. Their hearts will leap with joy over a distinct advance. They are praying that our churches may move as one man.

4. It is a great day in the history of our people. If we do not prove to be a really great missionary people, we are the world's greatest impertinence. We say and teach that the gospel is the power of God unto salvation. Are we really in earnest when we state these great truths? We must move forward year by year in building a great missionary structure, reaching to every quarter of the globe. We cannot stand still; we dare not go back. There is but one way open to us, and that is forward, always forward, onward and upward! We can challenge the admiration of the world if we will. We can convince the world that we mean what we say when we talk about restoring the apostolic church. We must show not only the pattern, but the power of the first church. March 1st will be a good day to show our faith by what we do. We have made great growth in the lands beyond the seas in the past ten years. No other people have so increased their work in the same time. And yet we have by no means come up to the full measure of our powers. We can make this offering a memorable event if we will. We ought to enlist 5,000 contributing churches.

God and angels look on as we make our record. Christ still stands over against the treasury as we cast in our gifts. May we be worthy of his gracious approval. MAKE MARCH 1ST A GREAT EVENT!

And Now Abideth Faith, Hope and Love

Anna D. Bradley

"And now abideth faith, hope and love." So often have I read the beautiful words, yet ever with the pained conviction that I could not dare appropriate them. I have tried to picture this wonderful possession as my own, and then have fancied my transformed life holding that "abiding" love that suffers long and still is kind; that envies not; that never vaunts itself, nor in any way becomes aggressively self-conscious. How changed I would be if in my heart there glowed steadily the love that never behaves itself unseemly; that refuses to seek my own advancement over the just claims of another; that could not be easily provoked, and, spite of appearances, would think no evil. What a triumph over self it would be if I could always "rejoice in the truth," no matter where that truth might lead. How divine my life would be if I held always the faith that never doubts, the hope that is never darkened, the love that never falters.

But alas! I do not stand on this high ground. When my sky is bright and my faith is clear and my friends are true, it is easy to sing of faith and hope and love; but when the shadows gather I grow affrighted.

And still we read that "Now abideth faith and hope and love."

I wonder if there is even one who will claim that within his own heart self has been so subdued that there, at least, this promise is fulfilled?

Rather do we not all confess, and grieve at the confessing, that our hearts are divided and that many unworthy attributes find lodgment there?

I read to-day: "In the heart of God is an abiding faith in you, an abiding hope in you, an abiding love for you."

I had never thought of that. Yet, surely it must be true. How it stirs the sluggish spirit to feel that God, who sees with perfect vision, can still have faith in faulty lives like yours and mine. He looks at you and me and sees potentialities that have never been developed. He is looking not at the present, but the possible you, the possible me. It is this possibility which, if we will, we can become, in which our Father has faith.

A master looks down upon what to you or me is a very ordinary child and cries: "There is a musician!" The child looks up in wonder and replies: "I am no musician. My fingers have not strength to run a simple scale." Yet, still the master, looking deeper than the child or you or I can do, says: "I have an abiding faith in this child as a musician." Wrapped in that common clay, his keener eye beholds the wonderful possibilities.

The artist sees "the angel in the marble." It is not the marble's faith in itself, but the faith of the artist that reaches in and down for the hidden angel and makes it clear to duller eyes.

Brother, however fallen, God has faith in you. Sister, however discouraged, or even polluted, God believes in you.

The very fact Divinity believes in you or me will give us strength to struggle on until we bring forth all that the Omnipotent Eye sees wrapped within our secret soul.

God never pays more for a thing than it is worth. Yet God robbed heaven of its choicest jewel to ransom you and me. That means we are of priceless worth; that God and Christ believe in us. As we commence to realize this, we commence to have more faith in ourselves. We whisper: "God can never be mistaken. If he has faith in me, there must be latent possibilities within me of which I have not dreamed. I will arise and climb to my highest."

I never like to hear humanity belittled. When we are extra pious we call ourselves "a groveling worm of the dust," and advertise ourselves as "a shadow that must soon pass away."

Just so long as I believe myself to be nothing, just so long will I remain nothing Just so long as I feel I am groveling in the dust, just that long will I continue to grovel. Just so long as I feel myself nothing but a "passing shadow," just that long will I be of no service to humanity and utterly worthless to myself. The moment I am awake to the fact that I am something—a something for which the Son of God could die—that moment I will begin to develop.

Christ would never have died for "a shadow." The agony of the cross would never have been endured for "a groveling worm of the dust." But looking down upon our marred life, he still saw traces of his Father's image and he gave his life to restore it.

Not only has God faith in the possible you and the possible me, but he has hope in us. That is why he is so patient. Often you and I lose hope in everything—even in ourselves. As hope dies, all active effort ceases. When next we grow discouraged, let us whisper to ourselves that One who sees the end from the beginning still has hope in us.

"And now abideth faith and hope and love, but the greatest of these is love."

Wonderful love! Stronger than faith that cannot die; greater than hope which endures forever, is the love of God for you and me.

God is Love. This is the wonderful news that is telegraphed from heaven. Though all else may fail, though earth and sea and sky may disappear, yet still God's love for you and me endures forever.

As I realize God's faith in me, I look out upon those who, because their paths were rougher and their ways were darker, may have fallen deeper than I. I whisper to myself: "If God's faith in them abides forever, I dare not refuse to believe in their better life, nor withhold from them my helping hand."

God's abiding faith in the possible you and me strengthens our faith in the possibilities to which our children, or those committed to our care, may attain. God has faith in them, and you and I, oh, discouraged pastor, teacher, friend or parent, may surely have the same.

And now abideth faith and hope and love. Let us repeat it again and again until it becomes to us the blessed gospel. Let us whisper it in our midnight hour when we become discouraged. Let us tell it to other hearts bowed down when they have lost their way.

"And the greatest of these is love." Dare I withhold love or sympathy or any kindly thought from those whom God will love forever?

415 La Salle Ave., Chicago.

The child who can rouse in us anger, or impatience or excitement, feels himself stronger than we, and a child only respects strength.

We are so anxious to save physical life that, if we knew a child was in peril out in the street, the doors would not be large enough to let the audience out to its rescue; but the spiritual death of missions fails to stir their hearts.

This missionary rally is like yeast in the midst of our church life.

The True Bread*

H. L. Willett

It is one of the characteristics of the Fourth Gospel that it uses the miracles of Jesus only as the preludes to his teachings. In every instance the work of power is followed by some illuminating utterance which takes its motive from the miracle. It is as if the evangelist were saying that the works of healing which Jesus performed were not ends in themselves, indeed were of little significance apart from the teachings which made known their meaning. It is even so in the present instance. The feeding of the multitude was followed almost at once by the discourse which interpreted the work of love.

In Ancient Venice.

The doges of Venice in ancient days were accustomed to perform each year a ceremonial which was called the wedding of the city and the sea. They went forth in a barge of state upon the wide waters of the Adriatic, and amid solemn services they dropped a ring into the sea. It was a symbol of that hidden unity between the metropolis and its wide-lying, sparkling, murmuring, obedient servant. The city sent forth its commerce along those laughing waves and the sea brought back its offerings of gold and precious stones. Without the sea the city was helpless; without the city the sea was useless. But there were probably few who saw the deep significance of the annual wedding service. To them it was a mere spectacle. It is always hard to look behind symbols to their true significance. Even the Lord's supper meets the danger of being regarded as a mere form, essential to a right observance of the Lord's day, but without deeper meaning. Blessed is he who receives the secret behind the substance.

The Alarm of Jesus.

The multitude had partaken of the food and were not only satisfied with their feast, but delighted that one had arisen who could provide for them at what seemed a moment's notice. Such a man was worthy to be king, and the most useful king he would be, saving them from the toil upon which food must always wait. To them the feeding by the sea had been the end and object of that day in the life of the Lord. They saw no deeper meaning in the miracle. It was this dullness that disheartened Jesus, and their seizure upon the least significant side of his work with a passion to make him king which terrified him, both as a danger to himself and the disciples. He had urged them to depart from among the people, and had himself hurried into the mountain for privacy and prayer.

The Return of the Lord.

The next morning the people who had remained in the open fields and on the hillsides all the night missed the Lord and knew that he had not gone with the disciples in their boat. Their only conclusion was that he had made the journey on foot along the shore, crossing the Jordan by some convenient skiff, and had arrived at his home in Capernaum. They immediately set out to follow him, both by land and water, and arriving found him quietly pursuing his duties in the town. In astonishment they asked him how he had come, but he was not interested in satisfying their curiosity. He wished to come as quickly as possible to the lesson which yet waited for utterance. The feeding of the multitude without the discourse on the True Bread would have been like a torso without a head, a story without a sequel. The miracle, and the marvel of Jesus' return to Carpernaum without their knowledge, were the means he took to secure their attention to his words.

The Three Levels.

As Jesus viewed the matter there were three levels at which men might be found. One was that of interest in the truth he spoke. Happily for him there were those who listened because they were touched by the glory of the message he revealed. Of such were the disciples and a few choice spirits whose faith gladdened the heart of the Lord. Below this there was the level of curiosity. Many people followed him because of the healings he performed. They were anxious to watch the effects of his wonder-working words and touch. Every fresh display of his power was a joy to them, not because they were especially benefited, but because it was a new sensation to discover one who seemed to impart vitality to others by his very presence. No doubt the miracles were useful in attracting the attention of such people as this, although the appeal was distinctly less valuable and permanent than in those cases where the mind could be aroused and the conscience quickened. But lower still there was a third level of mere heavy, crass and sordid appetite, where even curiosity was dulled by the desire for fleshly satisfaction. Jesus counted this the most discouraging of attitudes toward his work. He delighted in those who listened to him because they yearned for his message. He could even forgive those who followed him curious to see the signs and wonders which he performed, though these he often rebuked with such words as "Except ye behold signs and wonders ye will not believe." But for the third and lowest type of mind there could be only a kind of high scorn. Such people promised nothing of strength to the kingdom he was proclaiming. He said to them, "You have followed me not because you loved the truth, not even through curiosity to see the signs which I perform, but from the lowest motive of physical desire to eat bread and be full."

Bread and Water of Life.

Not such was the food which Jesus could give. His only purpose in bestowing a brief supply upon the multitude was to awaken if possible their thought to higher things. The people were like the woman of Samaria. He had spoken to her of the Water of Life, and she, conscious only of a possible improvement in her domestic economy, had begged him for that living water which would save her the noonday journey to the well. Jesus could not give it to her, because it was too small a blessing when the water from the Wells of God waited for her refreshment. So to the multitude he said that the food he had given them was worthless, for the True Bread from God alone was worthy of their prayer and effort. Their request was for food which left them unsatisfied. The True Food satisfied their hunger and quenched their thirst. Only those who hungered and thirsted for righteousness could really be filled. Then they said, "How can we work for God as you do, and so find satisfaction?" He said to them that to believe on God and accept his program for life was to render such service as should satisfy and fill their lives with good.

Not Moses, but God.

"What sign," they said, "do you show to prove the truth of what you say? Moses proved his truthfulness and authority by furnishing food for our fathers in the desert." "No," said Jesus, "Moses did not give you that bread at all. It was God, who now offers you the True Bread." "Give us that bread," they answered. "It is I myself who am that True Bread," said Jesus. He then showed them that only by receiving his imparted life could they attain the satisfaction they sought. "But," he added sadly, "you will not believe. If you did, you would be among those whom the Father has given me, of whom I shall lose none, but will raise them up every one at the last day." Thus Jesus drew out the deep mystery of that miracle by the seaside, and showed them that he himself was the True Bread who came down from heaven, of whom if one should eat he would never die.

Scripture John 15:1-16	The Prayer Meeting	Topic for Mar. 11
	Union with Christ

It is difficult to define union with Christ—indeed, it is impossible. It is like the attempt to define life. We can describe the conditions under which life is possible, but having done that, we are at the beginning of our task. We can tell many things about union with Christ; our relation to our Lord is unique and incapable of exact definition. It is the beginning and end of the true life. The more intimate we are with Christ, the more abundant is our life. Separation from him is death. To the man out of touch with Christ the motives of the cross are foolishness. To the soul that is in fellowship with Christ these motives are the wisdom of the ages.

Fruitfulness.

We say to the young man who is in a hurry to get at his chosen work: "Prepare. A prepared man can do more in one year than the unprepared man in ten. Aimless effort wastes energy." The first preparation for Christian work is union with Christ. The real estate dealer knows that a church is a good financial investment. The statesman is aware that good order is promoted by faith in God. The educator realizes that the child has a right to its religious inheritance. But a church built by these men would be powerless. The church builder has reasons within himself for the support he gives to organized religion. The deepest needs of his soul have been met by Christ. He knows that others can be helped and he is constrained by love to do what he can for them.

Silas Jones

Pruning.

The vine dresser uses his knife for the welfare of his vineyard. He cuts away the useless. The discipline of life performs a similar service for the believer. It is easy to understand that actual sin is to be destroyed. We die to sin when we come to Christ. It is not always clearly seen that habits harmless in themselves become sin by interfering with growth. A church member says there is no harm in certain forms of amusement. He points out that they are not necessarily connected with any sinful practice. If, however, the people who engage in these amusements are not spiritual, if they are not growing in grace, if they cannot be depended upon in a moral crisis that calls for heroism, the seemingly innocent amusements have become sin. The disciple of Christ is a positive person. He does not stand by and watch to see which way the current of opinion will run. He lends his aid in digging a channel for it. The worldly man is not the judge of Christian conduct. Every habit that does not contribute to growth is to be cut off.

The Cross.

The cross cast its shadow over the entire earthly life of Christ. But he was never in doubt as to the wisdom of bearing it. There was pain of body with anguish of soul for him to endure. These were but the surface events of experience. Beneath all was God. He was calm because he lived in God. The joy he had in his Father was greater than the sorrow the world gave him. As we come into vital relation to Christ we shall be able to attain serenity in the presence of the darker aspects of life. The mood of the pessimist steals upon us unawares. There is much that gives the heart a chill: Brute fact at times seems to destroy sentiment. We must get at the reasons that are behind the facts of the world. This we do when we are united in Christ.

Scripture Eph. 5:15-21	Christian Endeavor	Topic for Mar. 8
	The Wise Use of Time

FOR THE LEADER.

Few elements of a man's life are so important as his use of time. If you can lead this meeting into a wise and helpful discussion of this fundamental subject, you will be doing a splendid service to the members.

The leader can hardly take a better plan for his opening words than the simple telling of the ways he uses for saving time and employing it to the best advantage. If he cannot speak from his own experience as fully as he likes, let him gather up the experience of others by asking questions of the men and women of the church and community who make the wisest use of their time and pass on their advice to the society.

INCIDENTS AND ILLUSTRATIONS.

The Bible from which John Wesley used to read his text to crowds and mobs is still in existence. Upon the fly leaf, in Mr. Wesley's own writing, are the suggestive words, "Live To-day."

Napoleon said of the battle of Rivoli, which he won from 50,000 Austrians with 30,000 men, "The Austrians manoeuvered admirably and failed only because they are incapable of calculating the value of minutes." Many another battle has been lost for the same reason.

How to utilize the waste is one of the great problems of the manufacturing world. It is one of the great problems of human life as well. The ingenuity of man has made it possible to save even the particles of gold dust in the Philadelphia mint. It is vastly more important for a man to save "the raspings and parings of existence, those leavings of days and wee bits of hours," the right use of which determines the true value of a man's life work.

About two centuries ago, a great sundial was reared in All Souls' College, Oxford, England, the largest and noblest dial, it is said, in the whole kingdom. Over the long pointer were written, in letters of gold, the Latin words, referring to the hours, "Pereunt et imputantur." Literally the meaning is, "They perish, and are set down to our account"; or, as they have been rendered in terser phrase, "They are wasted and are added to our debt."—C. E. World.

A Recitation.

The day is done,
And I, alas! have wrought no good,
Performed no worthy task of thought or deed.
Albeit small my power, and great my need,
I have not done the little that I could.
With shame o'er forfeit hours I brood,—
The day is done.

One step behind,
One step through all eternity—
Thus much to lack of what I might have been,
Because the temptress of my life stole in,
And rapt a golden day away from me!
My highest height can never be,—
One step behind.

I cannot tell
What good I might have done this day
Of thought or deed that still, when I am gone,
Had long, long years gone singing on and on,
Like some sweet fountain by the dusty way,
Perhaps some word that God would say,—
I cannot tell!

O life of light,
That goest out, I know not where,
Beyond night's silent and mysterious shore,
To write thy record there for evermore,
Take on thy shining wings a hope, a prayer,—
That henceforth I unfaltering fare
Toward life and light.

WITH THE WORKERS

Doings of Preachers, Teachers, Thinkers and Givers

Granville Snell has resigned his pulpit in Abilene, Tex.

George W. Knepper will soon pay back E. A. Cole at Washington, Pa., with a meeting.

Miss Eva Lemert of St. Louis, Mo., is conducting a Sunday school revival in Rochester, N. Y.

Jas. T. Lawson, Madison, Ind., says: "We are trying to double our March offering of last year."

The students of Atlantic Christian College have begun the publication of a college magazine, "The Radiant."

Robert Graham Frank, minister in Liberty, Mo., is preaching a series of sermons on "The Deity of Jesus."

J. T. McKissick and his people of Nashville, Tenn., plan the erection of a new church building to cost $1,000.

Grant E. Pike has accepted a call to Monongahela, Pa. This leaves Calvary Church, Pittsburg, without a pastor.

The training class at Mishawaka, Ind., has reached an enrollment of sixty. The outlook for J. D. Hull's work is brightening.

The congregation at Concord, Ill., recently surprised their minister, J. R. Campbell, by an old-fashioned surprise party.

Frank W. Allen, Paris, Mo., is making a vigorous campaign for the largest March offering in the history of that church.

A. J. Bradshaw, pastor of the Dawson Street church, Dallas, Tex., has the help of A. D. Rogers in a meeting which has begun with many signs of success.

F. L. Davis has resigned as minister in Wilmington, N. C., and will leave that field March 1st. He will be succeeded by Judge J. A. Erwin, Jacksonville, Fla.

The new Bible college erected by the Foreign Society at Jubbulpore, India, will be dedicated March 13th. The exercises will be in charge of the president, G. W. Brown.

J. F. Williams, formerly of Wilkinsburg, Pa., has accepted work at Belle Vernon, Pa., with a view of spending a portion of his time in the University of Chicago.

There have been recently sixteen additions to our church in Bilaspur, India, all of them being pupils from the girls' school of the Christian Woman's Board of Missions.

Evangelist S. J. Vance will need the services of a singing evangelist in a meeting to begin March 1st. Write him at Carthage, Mo., stating terms and giving references.

Ralph V. Calloway has been called to remain another year as pastor of the church in Atlanta, Ill. The church's appreciation of his work was made manifest by a good increase in salary.

M. B. Madden sends the good word that the missionaries of the churches of Christ Mission in Japan (F. C. M. S.) report seventy baptisms in the last quarter of 1907. This is the best quarterly report ever made in the history of our Japan mission. Five baptisms are already reported on the first quarter of 1908.

Hon. Harris R. Cooley of Cleveland, Ohio, will address the Disciples of New York city at a dinner in the Marseille hotel March 10th. Mr. Harris' theme will be "The Poor and Criminal of a Great City."

A. R. Adams, Milestone, Sask., Can., says: "Every church organized by us in Western Canada will be a missionary church, for we teach this with as much earnestness as we do faith, repentance and baptism."

A meeting is in progress in our church in Hazel Green, Kentucky, where the Christian Woman's Board of Missions has one of its mountain schools. Thirty-four conversions are reported to date from among the student body.

Isaac S. Bussing recently began his labors in St. Louis, Mich. A public reception was given for him by the church February 11th, when other ministers of the city were present, and a large company enjoyed an entertaining program.

M. D. Adams reports thirty-five baptisms at Bilaspur, India, since December last. This is a great report. For a long time the Foreign Society has been doing some patient sowing in India. We have now come upon the days of great harvest.

E. T. Edwards, for many years the successful minister of our church in Fort Smith, Ark., sails on Feb. 28th from Vancouver, B. C., for New Zealand, where he goes to undertake a year's evangelistic work under the auspices of the Christian Woman's Board of Missions.

W. D. Cunningham reports that his independent mission in Tokyo, Japan, is prospering. Twenty baptisms, one new station, and three evangelists employed all the year is the record of 1907. Mr. Cunningham lacks but $500 in the amount in hand for the purchase of the mission lot.

The National Benevolent Association has recently received several new annuities. The latest addition to the ranks are Mrs. P. E. Hawkins of Missouri, who has just given $500, and Mrs. Della J. Stoner of Indiana, who has given $1,000. This appeals to those whose sympathies are larger than their present ability to do. Write Jas. H. Mohorter, 903 Aubert Ave., St. Louis, about the plan.

Under the new minister in El Paso, Tex., the church is thriving well. There were eight additions last month and the Sunday school was increased by fifty. A large teacher training class taught by the pastor and Prof. J. W. Curd of the high school was recently organized. Three of the classes are organized fully for work, one a company of young married people under the wife of the pastor, J. B. Robison.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Menzies of Rath, India, who have charge of the Gerould Memorial station of the Christian Woman's Board of Missions, leave India on their furlough Feb. 26th. They will stop in Scotland to visit Mr. Menzies' parents and then proceed to the United States for the remainder of their vacation. Mr. Menzies is the living link of the auxiliary of the Hutchinson, Kas., church, E. W. Cole, minister.

By a report of the Magnolia Avenue church, Los Angeles, Cal., from its organization to February 9th, it is shown that 232 persons united with the congregation in the last year, making a present membership of 510. The amounts given by the church were $1,500 for missions, $3,892 for the building fund, and $4,584 for current expenses. In four years $52,000 has been raised. Jesse P. McKnight is the popular pastor who leads in the notable work of this great church.

THE CHICAGO CHURCHES.

Dr. Errett Gates addressed the meeting of the ministers this week on "The Return to Christ." It was a paper worthy of a larger hearing.

There was one addition in last Sunday's services of the Sheffield Avenue church. The C. W. B. M. had charge of a missionary service at night.

Victor F. Johnson is preaching to the best audiences in the history of the work at Maywood.

F. C. Cothran, pastor of the Armour Avenue church (colored) baptized three persons this week.

A good missionary rally was held in the Elgin church last Sunday. W. D. Endres is pastor.

BRAIN POWER

Increased by Proper Feeding.

A lady writer who not only has done good literary work, but reared a family, found in Grape-Nuts the ideal food for brain work and to develop healthy children. She writes:—

"I am an enthusiastic proclaimer of Grape-Nuts as a regular diet. I formerly had no appetite in the morning and for 8 years while nursing my four children had insufficient nourishment for them.

"Unable to eat breakfast, I felt faint later, and would go to the pantry and eat cold chops, sausage, cookies, doughnuts or anything I happened to find. Being a writer, at times my head felt heavy and my brain asleep.

"When I read of Grape-Nuts I began eating it every morning, also gave it to the children, including my 10-months-old baby, who soon grew fat as a little pig, good natured and contented.

"Within a week I had plenty of breast milk, and felt stronger within two weeks. I wrote evenings, and feeling the need of sustained brain power, began eating a small saucer of Grape-Nuts with milk instead of my usual indigestible hot pudding, pie or cake for dessert at night.

"Grape-Nuts did wonders for me and I learned to like it. I did not mind my housework or mother's cares, for I felt strong and full of 'go.' I grew plump, nerves strong, and when I wrote my brain was active and clear; indeed, the dull head pain never returned."

"There's a Reason."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

O. F. Jordan of the Evanston church has a class of twenty children, whose study is similar to that of a class in catechism. The aim is to prepare them for the most intelligent beginnings of Christian service.

Evangelist John W. Marshall will return this week to Lowell, Ind., to resume a meeting postponed on account of an epidemic of diphtheria. Soon he will go to Western Canada to represent the Disciples in meetings among Baptist churches and in efforts to unite Baptist and Christian churches.

C. G. Kindred received one confession last Sunday in the Englewood church.

The Yeuell meetings last Sunday in the Jackson Boulevard church brought thirty-seven additions to the church. So far 107 persons have united with the church in the meeting.

Prof. W. D. McClintock will leave for the Philippines February 25th. The Hyde Park church will give a dinner in his honor on that date.

TO UNITE LAYMEN IN CHICAGO

At a meeting of the men of the Monroe Street church December 17th the following overture and proposal was unanimously carried:

The time is evidently come for men to accept their responsibility in the church of Jesus Christ, and organize their energies for effectively performing those tasks that men alone can do. Too long has the triumph of Christ been delayed by the apathy of the masculine element among his followers. Just now, however, we are witnessing many signs that men are becoming aware of their power as promoters of piety, righteousness and fellowship through the churches to which they belong. The organization of men's clubs in churches of all denominations is full of significance for the cause of Christ. The Disciples of Christ are well abreast of this movement, so far as the local churches are concerned, and the time seems ripe for us to follow the good example of some of our religious neighbors in organizing our local clubs into a federation which shall potently utilize our united strength in behalf of great causes lying beyond our local fields, and at the same time reflect back into the local organization the inspiration of the larger fellowship.

The suggestion of such a federation or brotherhood is especially impressive in view of the plans for a great men's meeting to be held in connection with the Illinois State Convention of Disciples next September. In the minds of many prominent laymen and pastors throughout the state, there exists the hope that the proposed mass meeting of men may issue in the establishment of an organization or brotherhood of men throughout the state. It is evident that such an organization would be an immense power for good.

The laymen of our Chicago churches will be glad, we believe, to facilitate this state-wide consummation by perfecting at once a city-wide organization of men. Such an organization would afford proper and adequate auspices for the promotion of interest in and attendance upon the mass meeting of men at the State Convention, and at the same time furnish an illustration and nucleus upon the basis of which the state-wide organization might be effected.

We, the men of the Monroe Street church, propose, therefore:

1. To organize ourselves into a club according to the plan submitted by the committee appointed for this purpose.

2. To request and urge all our churches in the city that have not organized men's clubs or classes to organize them at once.

3. To send the above message as an overture to the men of our other churches, requesting each local organization to appoint a committee of three dependable men who shall meet with like committees from the other local organizations in joint session to consider and report a plan for the federation of all the men's organizations among the Disciples in Chicago. This joint committee to meet at such time and place as may be agreed upon by the chairmen of the local committees appointed by the First church, the Evanston and the Monroe Street clubs.

BORROWING MONEY.

The Foreign Society now owes $43,500 at bank. This money it has been compelled to borrow since October 1st to meet the monthly payments to the missionaries. This amount is due in March. During the first four months of the missionary year the receipts amounted to only $11,514. This is a loss in regular receipts of $2,048.

The churches are requested to send their March offerings promptly Monday morning, March 2d. If it is not all collected, please forward what you have and send the balance later. The custom of some churches to hold money given for missions in the hands of the local church treasury for a definite time is not just to the donors nor to the work.

Send to F. M. Rains, Sec'y., Box 884, Cincinnati, Ohio, who will promptly return a proper receipt. Please be careful to give local name of church when different from postoffice, as Mt. Pleasant, Corinth, Sixth Street, etc. Friends are also requested to state definitely whether the money is from a church, a Sunday school, an Endeavor Society or an individual.

CONCERNING THE CONGRESS

Edgar D. Jones.

Bloomington, where the Congress comes this year, is a beautiful city of 35,000 population—a city of homes, of churches and of schools. Lying right beside Bloomington, separated by a single street, is Normal with its 5,000 inhabitants and great State University.

Bloomington is the county seat of McLean county, the second richest agricultural county in the United States. McLean county has a population of 7,200. To quote a sentence that has become a classic in these parts: "McLean county is the breastpin on the bosom of Illinois and Bloomington is the diamond setting in the pin."

There is a charm of old-fashioned hospitality about our folk not unlike that found in the South, which, once felt, is not soon forgotten. Our city boasts many southern families and many who settled here years ago came from Kentucky and Virginia.

The Disciples of Christ are strong in Bloomington. The First church now has a membership of over 1,500, the Second church has over 800 and the church at Normal 500. There is also the Third Christian church (colored) that is vigorous and growing fast.

James H. Gilliland, under whose ministry the present edifice of the First church was built and who organized and led in erecting the handsome Second church, of which he is still pastor, is the dean of Bloomington ministers. He has been here twenty years and wields a power and influence for good that cannot be reckoned in figures. Brother Gilliland will preside at the session on Wednesday evening, April 1st.

The First church building, where the sessions of the Congress will be held, is a comfortable and commodious brick structure, seating comfortably 1,200 people. The location is in the heart of the city, within one block of the Illinois Traction station, a block and a half of the two leading hotels and within two blocks of the courthouse square.

Bloomington's most distinguished citizen, the Hon. Adlai E. Stevenson, former Vice-President of the United States, will welcome the Congress to our city. Mr. Stevenson is a Kentuckian, having been born in Christian county, the birthplace also of Dr. Winthrop Hopson and President J. W. McGarvey. Mr. Stevenson may be depended upon to inject some rich humor into his remarks, for his fund of pat anecdotes seems inexhaustible. Mr. Stevenson and Judge Jeremiah Black were close friends.

It should be noted that the program this year gives generous place and opportunity for discussion of papers and addresses. Only one address, that on "Closer Relation Between Baptists and Disciples," is to be followed by a prepared review.

The Central Illinois Ministerial Institute holds a session on Monday, March 31st. Peter Ainslee of Baltimore will deliver the address for the evening session. Further announcement as to this will be made later.

Mr. Robert E. Williams, Box 305, Bloomington, is chairman of the Entertainment Committee, and all those who expect to be entertained, either in private homes or hotels, should write him at once. If you are coming, write him

AN OLD NURSE

Persuaded Doctor to Drink Postum.

An old, faithful nurse and an experienced doctor are a pretty strong combination in favor of Postum, instead of coffee.

The doctor said:—

"I began to drink Postum five years ago on the advice of an old nurse.

"During an unusually busy winter, between coffee, tea and overwork, I became a victim of insomnia. In a month after beginning Postum in place of coffee I could eat anything and sleep as soundly as a baby.

"In three months I had gained twenty pounds in weight. I now use Postum altogether instead of coffee, even at bedtime with a soda cracker or some other tasty biscuit.

"Having a little tendency to Diabetes, I use a small quantity of saccharine instead of sugar, to sweeten with. I may add that to-day tea or coffee are never present in our house and very many patients, on my advice, have adopted Postum as their regular beverage.

"In conclusion, I can assure anyone that as refreshing, nourishing and nerve-strengthening beverage, there is nothing equal to Postum." "There's a Reason." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

a postal card, and for fear you forget it, do so now.

Prof. Wallace Payne deserves much credit for the excellent program which he has prepared after large correspondence and no little outlay of strength and time.

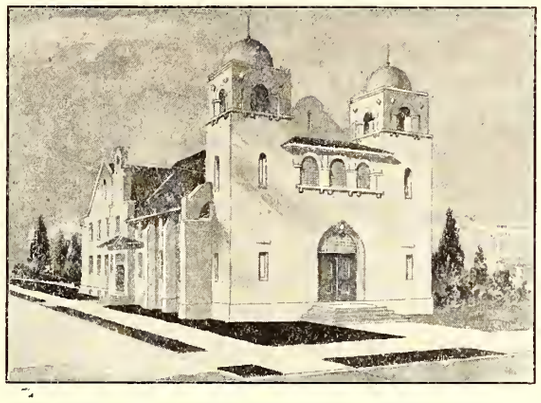
It will pay you to attend the Congress at Bloomington whether you are a minister, college professor, student, Sunday school teacher, lay worker or just a plain business man interested in the extension of the Master's kingdom.

There will be instructive and uplifting addresses, interesting discussions, sparkling repartee and a fine spirit of fellowship such as our National Conventions occasion. Come! First Church, Bloomington, Ill.

DENVER LETTER.

Colorado moves. At least one-half dozen church buildings have during two dozen moons been erected by the Disciples in population centers of the state. The last to occupy its home is the East Side church of Denver, of which the writer is pastor. The accompanying cut shows the completed structure, Spanish mission in style, and to cost $25,000, and located strategically at the corner of Thirtieth avenue and Williams street.

About eleven years ago Brother W. F. Richardson, then pastor of the Central Denver, stood before a little knot of people in a small room seven blocks from the present location and announced the hymn, "Onward, Christian Soldiers." They sang and organized a Sunday school. The venture was made by the young people of the Central church, led by S. D. Cook and others. Through varying fortunes a moderate number of workers stood by the work during the years. Leonard G. Thompson, now state corresponding secretary, was the first pastor. He was followed by Flournoy Payne, Bro. Holden, T. T. Thompson and your correspondent, who came to this field of opportunity twenty months since. Others held meetings for the mission, among them J. W. Maddox, W. L. Cline and John T. Stivers. The present work would not be possible without the financial support of James McKee and family of the McKee Live Stock Commission Company.



East Side Church, Denver, Colo.

On Sunday, Feb. 9th, the ministers of the Christian churches of the city joined with us in the afternoon in the service opening the basement for worship. Wm. B. Craig of the Central church, B. B. Tyler of South Broadway church, J. E. Pickett of Highlands and Willard McCarthy, pastor at Berkeley, spoke good words to us. Leonard G. Thompson was business manager of the day.

The Extension Society made us a loan of $1,500, making total liabilities foot up $2,000. We raised $2,274 during the day. This insures our ability to proceed with the superstructure within the coming year.

The future of Denver promises great things. We look forward with hope.

B. B. Tyler speaks during evenings of the present week. Six additions to date.

BREEDEN IN SAN DIEGO.

H. O. Breeden has just closed an evangelistic meeting with the Central Christian church of this city. He came to us Sunday, January 12th, and continued preaching every night, excepting Saturdays, and three times on Sundays, till the evening of February 9th. He returned to us for three services on yesterday, Sunday, February 16th, making thus in all twenty-six days of meeting.

There have been 111 persons who responded to the invitation, and practically all will be added to this congregation or to the University Heights Christian church, upon whose pastorate Volney Johnson of Midland, Tex., has entered.

As I write of my pleasure in this meeting, it is not the expression of one carried away on the tidal wave of feeling, for the great evangelist and organizer neither stirs the fountain of emotion nor thrusts his personality to the forefront. While he bears away with him in departure the affection of a multitude in and out of the church, there are few Breedenites with us. My judgment, therefore, is dispassionate.

I do not feel it unfair to the excellent evangelists I have known when I say that I believe Brother Breeden to be the best prepared evangelist I have ever met. I refer to his personal preparation. He has memorized the Scriptures in a most remarkable way. Moreover, he has carefully studied the scriptures. He has at his ready command the choicest quotations and illustrations from the best literature of our tongue. He knows the spirit of his own age. Moreover, he is blessed with a commanding presence and deep, musical voice, which he uses superbly.

Best of all, his sense of the dignity and power of his office saves him from all offense in manner or speech in the pulpit or parish. For no word or act is apology due. He is a man of faith, faith, too, in the gospel, to which he is ever loyal. He brings men to Christ on the high ground of conviction and his work will continue to bear fruit.

The result we count most gratifying,

Can You Use Food When You Get It?

Thousands of Stomachs Starving Where Mouths are Well Fed. Costs Nothing To Relieve This Condition

Eating is fast becoming too much a part of the daily routine, if not a mere tickling of the appetite—a thing to be gotten out of the way as quickly as possible. Little thought is given to "what kind of food," its effect upon the system, and whether it will be of use in building up the tissues of the body.

Your stomach will revolt, if it is not already doing so. It must shut up for repairs. What of the dizziness, and sometimes pain, which stops you after a hurried lunch? What of the general distress after a heavy dinner, a feeling of pressure against the heart, which calls a halt and makes the breathing difficult? Is it common for you to be oppressed with belching and sour eructations? Are you constipated and then do you laughingly toss a dime to the druggist for his most palatable relief? Beware of temporary cures that are but palliatives. Many antidotes for the common ills which our flesh is heir to seem at first to relieve, but in reality, if not injecting poison into the system, lay the foundation for a deeper-seated and more far-reaching disorder.

Three-fourths of all diseases originate with a breaking down of the digestion and nine-tenths of all digestive troubles originate with one or more of the symptoms named above.

Beware, then, of Indigestion and Dyspepsia. If you find yourself aching, listless, lacking in ambition when you should be on the alert,

Do not doctor the stomach.

It needs a rest from food and drugs.

Do not flush out the bowels.

It takes more than forcing food through the passageway to make blood and tissue and nerve.

Do not starve your stomach.

Food is a thing to be worked for all there is in it, and your stomach will do the work if you will help it in Nature's way.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain nothing but the natural elements which enter into the healthy stomach and intestines to perform the function of digestion. Governmental tests and the investigations and sworn oaths of expert chemists attest this fact. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets go to the source of the trouble and positively restore the glands and fluids of the mucous membrane to their proper condition. They promptly relieve the distress of all troubles originating in the stomach or bowels (with the one exception of cancer).

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are recommended by physicians and all reliable pharmacists. If you are a sufferer from indigestion or dyspepsia, try a fifty-cent package today. At all druggists', or if you prefer send us your name and address and we will gladly send you a trial package by mail free. F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bdg., Marshall, Mich.

in view of the serious interruption from continuous rain. Nearly half of the number were baptisms. The expenses of the meetings were about $160 a week, including some heavy local expense, yet this was easily and cheerfully contributed, and a fine balance is in the treasury. We also spent $400 on an addition to the church house, and yesterday Dr. Breeden pledged the new members and the unpledged old members to the payment of $1,500 a year to the current expenses of the church.

In every respect this has been an ideal meeting, leaving minister and church in happy and hopeful relation. I have the conviction that Brother Breeden should do for hundreds of our strong city churches what he has done for us.

THE BLESSEDNESS OF GIVING

Hugh Wayt.

Trust in the Lord, and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed (Ps. 37:3). Cast thy bread upon the waters: for thou shalt find it after many days (Eccl. 11:1). Honor the Lord with thy substance, and with the first fruits of all thine increase; so shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst out with new wine (Prov. 3:9, 10). There is that scattereth, and yet increaseth; and there is that withholdeth more than is meat, but it tendeth to poverty. The liberal soul shall be made fat; and he that watereth shall be also watered himself (Prov. 11: 24, 25). Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that they may be meat in my house; and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the window of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it (Mal. 3:10). There is progress in the revelation of the perfect plan of salvation. Moses was the mediator of a good covenant. Christ is the mediator of a better covenant (Heb. 8:6). If they received such blessings for giving one-tenth under the Mosaic code, and revelation is progressive, will we not receive greater blessing for giving under the Christian dispensation? The New Testament Scriptures so teach. Give, and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, shaken together, running over, shall they give into your bosom (Luke 6:38). I have showed you all things, how that so laboring ye ought to support the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive" (Acts 20:35). Every man as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity. For God loveth a cheerful giver. And God is able to make all grace abound toward you, that ye always having all sufficiency in all things may abound to every good work (II Cor. 9:7).

TELEGRAMS

Beatrice, Neb., Feb. 25.—Scoville meetings largest meetings Scoville ever held in an individual church in their own church building in the history of the brotherhood. Twenty-two last night at the reception, 726 professions in 25 days, almost 30 per day. Should have gone on indefinitely. City stirred and will vote the saloons out in spring. Scoville party is true blue. C. W. B. M. now approaching 225 members, the largest in the brotherhood. J. E. Davis.

Collinwood, Cleveland, Ohio, Feb. 24.—Our meeting is two weeks old. Crowded house. Many turned away. Great mass meeting for men yesterday. Noonday meetings in Lake Shore shops by request of officials and laborers. Una Dell Berry is at her best. Her work could not be surpassed. Ninety-three additions. Buckley is a great worker and has entire support of his people. We continue. T. Alfred Fleming.

ILLINOIS.

Rantoul—We have had twelve confessions so far in our meeting. Louis O. Lehman is doing the preaching and the people are well pleased with his work. He has a large "teacher training class." We continue one week longer.—Charles E. McVay, song evangelist.

Armington—I will go to Sioux Falls, S. D., April 1st, to assist Rev. R. Tibbs Marey in a meeting at that place.—C. B. Hanger, singing evangelist, Armington, Ill.

London Mills—We are in the beginning of a good meeting here. Full house, intense interest. No singer, but a splendid helper in person of Walter Zimmerman, who preaches here. There is also a small group of earnest workers in the church. Kentland, Ind., next.—Wm. A. Ward, evangelist.

Bushnell—J. Wade Seniff, singing evangelist, and myself are in an interesting meeting here; will run until Feb. 2. This is a very hard field, four churches and ten saloons in the city. The Christian church has been without a minister for several years. The district board are helping in this meeting. Twenty-eight additions, with the church much strengthened, is the visible results, with a part of the salary raised to employ a minister. The board is to co-operate in this.—Lew D. Hill, evangelist, Blandinsville, Ill.

IOWA.

Cedar Rapids—A splendid meeting is in progress here at the Second church. Two terrible snow storms hurt the meeting much in the first two weeks. Fourteen added to date, with seven confessions. It is only ten months since Bro. Scovill held his great meeting here, so a large in-gathering was hardly possible. Bro. F. E. Smith is the splendid pastor and has a fine hold on the people. His ministry will tell in a great, strong church in a few years. My next meeting is Cedar Falls, Ia.—J. R. Golden, evangelist.

Des Moines—Ministers' meeting: Central (Idleman), 9 confessions, 2 by letter; University (Medbury), 1 confession; Capitol Hill (Van Horn), 1 by letter; Grant Park (Horne), 1 confession; Highland Park (Eppard), 2 confessions; Chesterfield (Finkle), 1 confession.

KANSAS.

Kensington—The meeting here closed with 111 additions, 90 confessions, all adults except five. J. S. Beem is the minister; during the last year there have been 200 added to the church.—Edward Clutter, evangelist.

Wichita—There were eleven additions to the Central at regular services yesterday.—E. W. Allen.

NEBRASKA.

Benkelman—I have an open date for April. Address Charles E. McVay, song evangelist.

NEW YORK.

Syracuse—Meeting at Rowland Street still continues. There have been twenty-nine added to the church in the past four weeks. Will continue several evenings yet. Congregation happy over the victory.—C. R. Stauffer, pastor.

Whatever may be the surprises of the future, however different that other life to which we hasten may be from this, the ideal for that life can be no other than the ideal for this, namely—likeness in character to Jesus.

Nothing approaching this work has ever been attempted before. In a series of splendid pictures the great and impressive scenes in the Bible story are depicted, true in color, costume, landscape, and all details to the life, the country and the time. ¶ To make the men and women of the Bible actual, living characters to their pupils is one of the first duties of the Sunday-School teachers, and no better help can they find for this than in the Tissot pictures. ¶ The whole world acknowledges that J. James Tissot was the greatest artist that ever lived, so far as Biblical subjects are concerned.

Only the unparalled success in the higher-priced editions makes possible this phenomenally low offer now. ¶ These pictures have received the unqualified endorsement of the leading clergymen and Sunday-School teachers throughout the United States. ¶ Nothing could be more helpful, and interesting, and delightful, when one is reading the Bible, than such a graphic interpretation of sacred stories. ¶ In no other way can the Bible stories be made so real and actual to children. Should be in every home.

HELPING TO PREPARE FOR THE MARCH OFFERING.

The Missouri Christian Bible School Association acceded to the request of the Foreign Christian Missionary Society that I spend a month in conducting rallies in preparation for the great offering which is soon to be made for world-wide evangelization.

Beginning in Chicago, January 12th, we closed the series at Carbondale, Ill., Feb. 10th. For half the first week President McLean was in command of the forces, but at Davenport, Iowa, we parted company, he and his group of missionaries to go with their thrilling message through Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas and the Southwest, while our party turned toward Illinois. Our party consisted of Dr. Royal J. Dye of Bolenge, Africa; Miss Josepha Franklin of Damoh, India, and the writer. With no purpose to compare groups of workers, but in humble testimony of true ability and power, it will be proper for me to say that these two messengers of the cross are not excelled in personal consecration, in richness of experience in the gospel proclamation, nor in power to graphically portray before the churches the condition of the heathen world and the power of the gospel of Christ to transform sinful lives and fill the despairing with hope and joy. Their messages were received with delight everywhere we went.

Rallies were held at the following places: Chicago and Freeport, Ill.; Davenport and Burlington, Iowa; Macomb, Peoria, Eureka, Streator, Farmer City, Champaign, Danville, Decatur, Springfield, Jacksonville, Pittsfield, Litchfield, Paris, Charleston, Salem, DuQuoin and Carbondale, Ill., in the order named. We spoke in a number of churches on Sunday. We made every rally on time but two. These detentions were caused by a late train and a changed schedule; but by extending the time we made up full time for these late beginnings.

We were received graciously everywhere. If any individual at any time was slow to understand the meaning and purpose of the meetings, the day would not close without seeing such in tears of sympathy and exclamations of delight. I desire to thank the ministers and others of the churches where these rallies were held for their kindness to us and for their many timely acts in helping us forward on our way. I know I voice the sentiments of my traveling companions in these words. The Illinois brethren are a noble brotherhood. Many ministers and members of other congregations than those in which we met attended and helped on the program, and in many ways contributed to the interest. I hereby offer special thanks to all who thus helped in the work.

The crowds who came to the meetings, the rapt attention to the messages delivered, the letters and words of encouragement from every side, the number of missionary books purchased, the promises to enlist all the churches of given counties, etc., etc., give promise of the greatest uplift for Foreign Missions this year our people have ever felt. God grant that it may be so.

Our group broke up at St. Louis on the night of February 10th, with feelings of sadness, for after thirty days of such high service with those whose lives are given to the heroism of the cros one turns away from such companionship with a heavy heart.

I am back at my own job again, and with a keener zest than ever before, gird myself to serve in my place.

J. H. HARDIN.

Important Books

We are the publishers of some of the best known works pertaining to the Disciples' Plea for a united church. These important books — important in more ways than one—should be read and owned by every member of the household of faith.

The Plea of the Disciples of Christ, by W. T. Moore. Small 16mo., cloth, 140 pages, net, postpaid, thirty-five cents, won immediate success.

George Hamilton Combs, pastor of the Independence Boulevard Christian Church, Kansas City, Mo., one of the great churches of the brotherhood, writes.

"I cannot thank Dr. W. T. Moore enough for having written his little book on "Our Plea." It is more than a statement; it is a philosophy. Irenic, catholic, steel-tone, it is just the handbook I shall like to put into the hands of the thinking man on the outside. In all of his useful and honored life Mr. Moore has rendered no greater service to a great cause."

Historical Documents Advocating Christian Union, collated and edited by Charles A. Young. 12mo, cloth, 364 pages, illustrated, postpaid $1.00, is an important contribution to contemporary religious literature. It presents the living principles of the church in convenient form.

Z. T. Sweeney, Columbus, Indiana, a preacher of national reputation, writes:

"I congratulate you on the happy thought of collecting and editing these documents. They ought to be in the home of every Disciple of Christ in the Land, and I believe they should have a large and increasing sale in years to come."

Basic Truths of the Christian Faith, by Herbert L. Willett, author of The Ruling Quality, Teaching of the Books, Prophets of Israel, etc., etc. Post 8vo., cloth, 127 pages. Front cover stamped in gold, gilt top, illustrated, 75 cents, paper 25 cents.

A powerful and masterful presentation of the great truths for the attainment of the life of the spirit. Written in a charming and scholarly style. It holds the reader's fascinated attention so closely that it is a disappointment if the book has to be laid aside before it is finished.

J. E. Chase writes:

"It is the voice of a soul in touch with the Divine life, and breathes throughout its pages the high ideals and noblest conception of truer life, possible only to him who has tarried prayerfully, studiously at the feet of the world's greatest teacher."

Our Plea for Union and the Present Crisis, by Herbert L. Willett, author of the Life and Teachings of Jesus, etc., etc. 12mo., cloth, 140 pages, gold stamped, postpaid 50 cents.

Written in the belief that the Disciples of Christ are passing through an important, and in many respects, transitional period.

The author says:

"It is with the hope that * * * present forces and opportunities may be wisely estimated by us; that doors now open may be entered; that hopes only partially realized may come to fruition that these chapters are given their present form."

Early Relations and Separation of Baptists and Disciples, by Errett Gates. 8vo. cloth, gold side and back stamp, $1.00. A limited number in paper binding will be mailed postpaid for 25 cents until stock is sold out.

We owe a debt of gratitude to the writer of this book, and could only wish that it might be read not only by our people all over the land, but scattered among the Baptists. It is a most meritorious and splendid contribution to our literature.—THE CHRISTIAN WORKER, PITTSBURG, Pa.

The dominant personality of Alexander Campbell is so brought out as to give to what might be regarded as the dry details of ecclesiastical history and controversy almost the interest of a story. A valuable contribution to the history of the American churches.—THE CONGREGATIONALIST, BOSTON, Mass.

Dad—"I wish I could be a little boy again, like you, Willie." Willie—"I wish you could, dad—only littler, of course."

At the end of the nursery dinner shared by Tom and Dick there came a dish of fruit which bore but one apple. Straightway Tom began to wail.

"Now, what is the matter?" said his mother. "What are you crying for now?"

"Because," said Tom, with mournful dignity, "because there is no apple for Dick."—London Telegraph.

Wife: "Our daughter is twenty, and she ought to be married."

Hubby: "Oh, she has plenty of time. Let her wait till the right sort of man comes along."

Wife: "Not at all. I didn't wait for the right sort of man!"—Buffalo Commercial.

Reds and Blues Contest Buttons

REDS AND BLUES Contest plans have proved wonderfully successful in Y. M. C. A. work and are proving more so in Sunday school work. By making use of our Reds and Blues plans you can easily double your school membership in a month or six weeks. You can break up irregular attendance in a very short time. You can raise large sums of money for your needs. You can secure church attendance, bringing of lesson helps, bringing of collection, coming on time.

The Reds and Blues plans please because they set everybody at work heartily and enthusiastically and because each leaves the school in a healthy condition when the contest is ended.

Each Reds and Blues plan requires dividing the school into two sections—Reds and Blues and appointing captains, one or more, for each side, a social or other treat to be given at the close of the contest, when those on the winning side receive ice-cream and cake, and the losers crackers and cheese, or some other attraction to celebrate the close of the contest and the victory. Treat is to be paid for by the school. Complete instructions sent with each order.

Price, in lots of 10 or more (sent assorted, one-half each color), 1½c each, postpaid; 50 or more, 1c each, postpaid.

LIGHT ON THE OLD TESTAMENT FROM BABEL

By ALBERT T. CLAY, Ph. D.

Assistant Professor of Semitic Philology and Archeology, and Assistant Curator of the Babylonian Lecture Department of Archeology, University of Pennsylvania

"It is the best book on this subject which American scholarship has yet produced. The mechanical make-up is the best the printer's and binder's art can turn out. It is a pleasure for the eyes to look at, while its contents will richly reward the reader."
—Reformed Church Messenger, Philadelphia.

437 pages; 125 illustrations, including many hitherto unpublished; stamped in gold. $2.00 net, postpaid.

Worth a Place in Your Library

The Messiah: A Study in the Gospel of the Kingdom. David McConaughy, Jr. 12mo., cloth, net $1.00.

In two parts. I. Aiming to trace the outlines of the peerless portrait of the Messiah as depicted by Matthew. II. A series of devotional meditations adapted for the "quiet hour."

Things That Are Supreme. James G. K. McClure, D. D. College Sermons. 16mo, cloth, net 75c.

Eight sermons by the popular president of McCormick Theological Seminary. These sermons were recently preached to the students at Harvard, Yale, Cornell, Princeton, Illinois, Wisconsin and Chicago.

Christianity's Storm Centre. Charles Stelzle. A Study of the Modern City. 16 mo, cloth, net $1.00. Mt. Stelzle believes that if the Church can be aroused to face the problem, investigate the conditions and alter its own methods it will win the fight for uniting the church and the laboring masses. He is hopeful with the well founded optimism of the man who knows from experience both sides of his question.

The Eternal in Man. James I. Vance, D. D. Cloth, net $1.00. Dr. Vance has the rare gift of stimulating and arousing both head and heart. These chapters dust off the commonplace of human life and its experiences and show the eternal part of us that lies underneath.

The Supreme Conquest. W. L. Watkinson, D. D. Net $1.00. To the list of great preachers who have made the British pulpit famous, the name of William L. Watkins has long since been added. His books are eagerly sought by up-to-date ministers everywhere, and are bought with equal appreciation by the general public.

God's Message to the Human Soul. John Watson, D. D., (Ian Maclaren). The Cole Lectures for 1907. Cloth, net $1.25. A peculiar and sad interest attaches The Cole Lectures for 1907. They were delivered, the author having suddenly passed away during his visit to this country, and within a few days of the date of the appointment that brought him to America. Fortunately Dr. Watson had put these lectures into manuscript form; they are therefore preserved for the wider circle of appreciative readers.

The Modern Sunday School in Principle and Practice. Henry F. Cope. Cloth, net $1.00. This volume by the General Secretary of the Religious Education Association constitutes an invaluable guide for the management of the Sunday School under modern conditions. He presents the results of all the newest experiments both with primary, adolescent and adult grades.

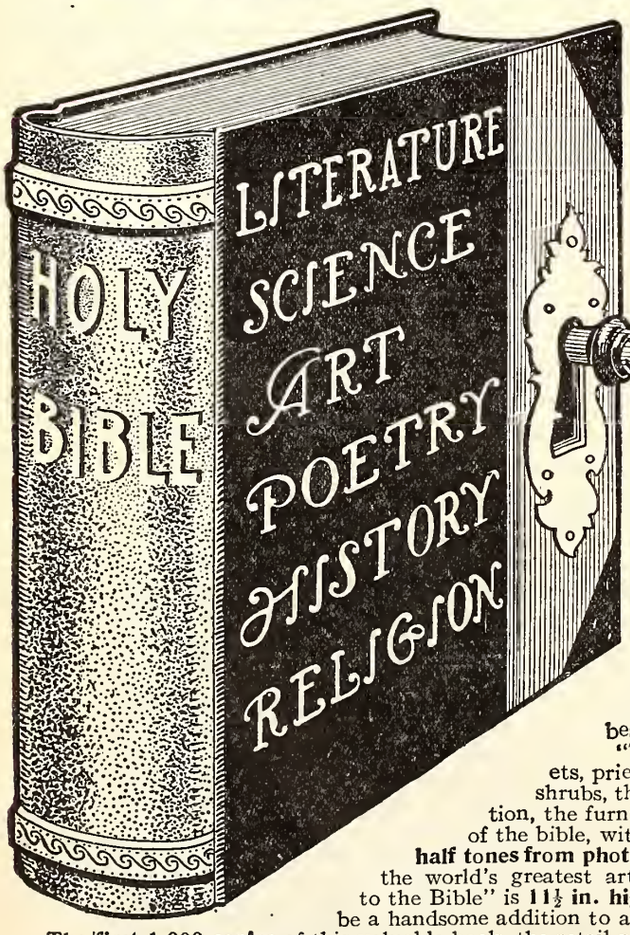
China and America Today. Arthur H. Smith, D. D. Cloth, net $1.25. Dr. Smith has been for 35 years a missionary to China. In this capacity he has learned much of China, which in another relation might be denied him. Being a statesman by instinct and genius, he has taken a broad survey of conditions and opportunities, and here forcibly presents his criticisms of America's strength and weakness abroad, especially in China.

Palestine Through the Eyes of a Native. Gamahliel Wad-El-Ward. Illustrated, cloth, net $1.00. The author, a native of Palestine, has been heard and appreciated in many parts of this country in his popular lectures upon the land in which so large a part of his life was spent. His interpretations of many obscure scriptural passages by means of native manners and customs and traditions is particularly helpful and informing.

The Continent of Opportunity: South America. Francis E. Clark, D. D. Profusely illustrated, net $1.50. Dr. Clark writes a thorough-going tour of examination, covering practically every centre of importance in South American continent. Panama, Chile, Ecuador, Peru, Argentine, Brazil, Paraguay and Uruguay. Dr. Clark's prime object has been to collect information of every sort that will help to understand the problems facing Christian Civilization in our sister Continent.

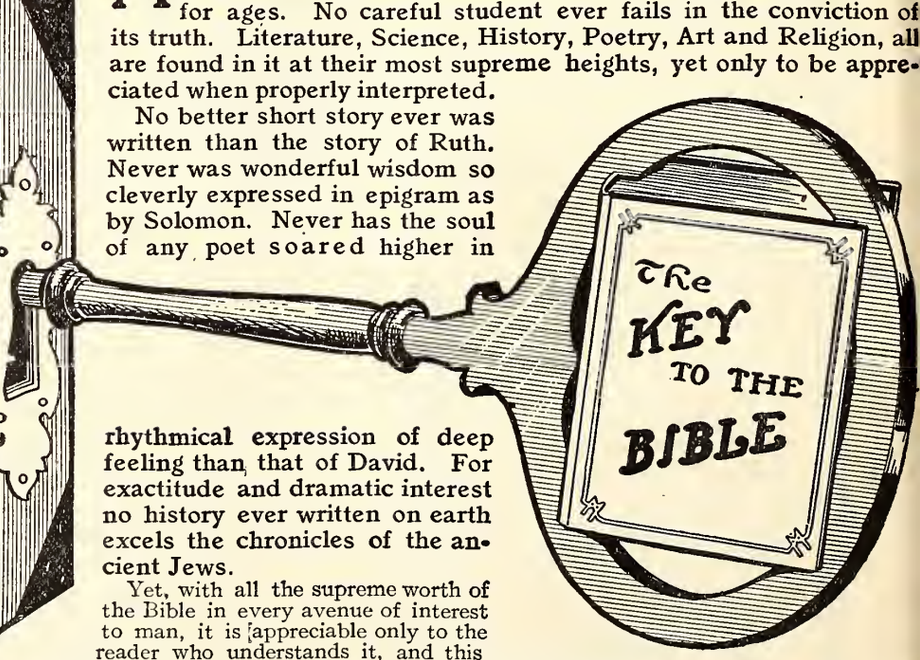
ORDER NOW OF THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

The Greatest Book About the Greatest Book.



A THOUSAND times you have read that the Bible is an education in itself; this statement has been a favorite of great men for ages. No careful student ever fails in the conviction of its truth. Literature, Science, History, Poetry, Art and Religion, all are found in it at their most supreme heights, yet only to be appreciated when properly interpreted.

No better short story ever was written than the story of Ruth. Never was wonderful wisdom so cleverly expressed in epigram as by Solomon. Never has the soul of any poet soared higher in rhythmical expression of deep feeling than that of David. For exactitude and dramatic interest no history ever written on earth excels the chronicles of the ancient Jews.



Yet, with all the supreme worth of the Bible in every avenue of interest to man, it is appreciable only to the reader who understands it, and this best is done only with the aid of "The Key to the Bible."

"The Key to the Bible" is an encyclopedia of the lessons, places, prophets, priests, apostles, disciples, birds, beasts and reptiles, the trees, plants and shrubs, the dress and customs, etc., peoples, houses and other places of habitation, the furniture, ornaments, statuary, the towns, rivers, mountains and lands of the bible, with 16 full page colored pictures from photographs, 100 full page half tones from photographs and reproductions of the greatest biblical paintings by the world's greatest artists and over 400 well drawn text illustrations. "The Key to the Bible" is 11½ in. high, 8 in. wide and 2½ in. thick, weighing 5 pounds. It will be a handsome addition to any library.

The first 1,000 copies of this valuable book, the retail price of which is $5.00, has been set aside for a preliminary sale. We have made arrangements with the publisher for a limited number of copies, and can offer them at the Preliminary sale price of $3, prepaid to any ad. After 1,000 copies are disposed of by the publishers the price will be $5.

I enclose $3.00 for one copy of "The Key to the Bible" to be sent prepaid.

God of The Open Air

Thou who has set Thy dwelling fair
With flowers beneath, above with starry lights,
And set Thy altars everywhere—
On mountain heights,
In woodland valleys dim with many a dream,
In valleys bright with springs,
And in the curving capes of every stream—
Thou who has taken to Thyself the wings
Of morning, to abide
Upon the secret places of the sea,
And on far islands, where the tide
Visits the beauty of untrodden shores,
Waiting for worshipers to come to Thee
In Thy great out-of-doors!
To Thee I turn, to Thee I make my prayer,
God of the Open Air!

HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS

Edited with introductions by CHARLES A. YOUNG
12mo. cloth; back and side title stamped in gold; gilt top. Illustrated with portraits printed from tint blocks; $1.00.

IN spite of the many books that have already been contributed on the subject of Christian Union, the present volume has found a ready welcome. It contains the statements of the great leaders in our reformation. Some of these documents have been out of print until brought together and published in this attractive and permanent form. Here within the covers of this book will be found all the epoch making statements by the great founders and leaders—Alexander and Thomas Campbell, Isaac Errett, J. H. Garrison and others. Published at a popular price to introduce it into every Christian home.

The Union of all Christians upon the Apostolic Faith, Spirit and Service.

WHENCE THIS LOSS?

The annual religious statistics prepared by Dr. H. K. Carroll present a set of very interesting figures, and especially for the thoughtful among the Disciples of Christ. Among Protestant bodies we hold fifth place, the same as for some years past, being preceded by the Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians and Lutherans. The total number of ministers for each of these denominations is, in round numbers, 42,000 for the Methodist, 38,000 for the Baptists, 12,000 for the Presbyterians, 8,000 for the Lutherans, and 5,923 for the Disciples. The number of churches in these denominations is as follows, avoiding odd numbers: Methodists 61,000, Baptists 55,000, Presbyterians 16,000, Lutherans 13,000 and Disciples 11,307. From these figures it will be seen that the ratio of ministers to churches is as follows: The Methodists have two ministers for every three churches, the Baptists eight to eleven, the Presbyterians three to four, the Lutherans eight to thirteen, while the Disciples stand at the foot of the list, with one minister to each two churches.

And when one examines the entire list of smaller denominations, the Disciples still maintain their place at the foot of the list, with the smallest number of ministers in proportion to churches.

It has been apparent to those who have thought of the problem of our work during the past two years that this is one of its weakest points. The supply of ministers of every grade, counting those who are prepared, and all others, is actually a little less than one-half as many as the churches. Allowing for all those cases in which one minister supplies two or more churches, and this in itself is a sign of weakness in any religious body, the Disciples have to face the fact that a considerable portion of their churches have no ministerial leadership of any sort. And this cannot fail to have a very marked effect upon the life and usefulness of the churches.

But a second consideration is even more disquieting. In going over the gains of the various denominations for the past year one discovers that the Methodists have added 1,900 churches, the Baptists nearly 700, the Presbyterians 550, the Disciples 107, and the Lutherans 135. As compared with this the gains in ministers have been as follows: The Methodists 381, the Baptists 259, the Lutherans 168, and for the Presbyterians, who have sounded loud and long the note of danger because the supply of ministerial students in their colleges was falling off, there have been but 18. But the record for the Disciples is beyond measure astonishing, for they have actually suffered a decrease of ministers to the number of 480.

It is not easy to set down all the reasons for this falling away of preachers among the Disciples. It is, of course, taken for granted, that there will be a certain loss from death, and that some men will leave the work of the Gospel for secular occupations. But the first of these causes will hardly increase the losses among the Disciples beyond the proportion of the entire list of religious bodies. Have then the numbers of men who have left the ministry been so much greater in our case than in the others? If so, is it possible to find a reason for this condition in the informal manner in which the ministry is chosen among us, the frequent lack of preparation with which its work is begun, and the corresponding ease with which it may be abandoned for some other work? Those denominations which set higher value on ministerial education and the careful preparation of a man for the sacred task appear to suffer least from losses of this nature. We believe that the Disciples have never taken quite seriously this matter of the preparation of their ministry, and the results cannot fail to manifest themselves.

But back of this actual loss of men who were formerly devoting themselves to the ministry of the Word, there is a further reason for the decrease noted. The Disciples give no adequate attention to the recruiting of young men for the ministry. All the denominations are aware that this is a time when young men, if left without instruction in the greatness and importance of this holy calling, will be likely to choose some of the other vocations which are so attractive and rewarding in our age. It is all very well to say that a young man should not go into the work of the ministry unless he is so drawn to it that he cannot resist its appeal. This is certainly true after once that appeal has come to him. But who of the parents and ministers of this generation of the Disciples is making that appeal to him?

It is not largely an accident if a young man takes thought for this high work? Is it not a matter of surprise, of unconcern, or even of disapproval if such an ambition springs up in the heart of a youth in an average congregation? Instead of the minister watching his young men with anxiety to find a half dozen whom he may talk with, inspire, instruct, and start off to college, the idea that one of his boys has thoughts of the ministry is too often a matter of indifference or, worse yet, of mild amusement. That this is not true of some of our ministers is proven by the fact that their works speak for them in the gates. But it is actually true of many, and too likely to be true of most.

The results of this condition are apparent even now, and the evil will increase till the remedy is applied. Where there is a lack of proper ministerial material, there must be many pastorless churches, and a consequent rivalry among the rest for the best. Desirable men are not unemployed, and a pastorless church has to rob some other church or continue leaderless. The stronger half of the churches succeed in the struggle, and the rest exist without direction, and as a result without effectiveness and influence.

Counting all duplications, where one minister preaches for two or more churches, there still remains a very large list of totally unprovided congregations. These too frequently have but a name to live, and are dead. All honor to the faithful men and women who, with sacrifices and anxious care, keep the flame burning on such altars. But their pastorless condition ought not to be necessary, and would not if the brotherhood awoke to its responsibilities. Such churches as have no ministers are rarely in the line of co-operating Disciples, alert to the call of missions, of benevolence and of education. In the last issue it will be found that our problem of enlisting the non-co-operative churches in missionary work is the problem of providing them with preachers who are worthy of the name.

The decrease of ministers in a brotherhood that prides itself on its rapid growth, is one of the most alarming tokens ever brought to our attention. Our successful evangelism will profit us nothing if the churches thus formed and swelled in membership are left without training in the essential of the Christian life, and become the willing victims of ignorant local leadership, selfish isolation, petty factional rivalries, low journalism and legalism. The supreme need of the Disciples is a trained, adequate and consecrated ministry.

HYMNS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW.

MY GUIDE.

By Horatius Bonar.

(Dr. Horatius Bonar, whose ministry at Kelso and at Edinburgh, Scotland, extended over the greater part of the last century, is to-day best remembered for his many fine hymns. The one below was published first in 1857 his book entitled "Hymns of Faith and Hope.")

Thy way, not mine, O Lord,
However dark it be!
Lead me by thine own hand;
Choose out the path for me.
I dare not choose my lot:
I would not, if I might;
Choose thou for me, my God,
So shall I walk aright.

The kingdom that I seek
Is thine; so let the way
That leads to it be thine,
Else I must surely stray.
Take thou my cup, and it
With joy or sorrow fill,
As best to thee may seem;
Choose thou my good and ill.

Choose thou for me my friends,
My sickness or my health;
Choose thou my cares for me,
My poverty or wealth.
Not mine, not mine the choice,
In things or great or small;
Be thou my guide, my strength,
My wisdom, and my all.

The Preacher's Literary Work

Edgar D. Jones

Three score years ago, the settled preacher was still called "the parson," a term very directly derived from the word person. That is to say, he was the best-known personage in the community. He was considered the most learned man for miles around. Very often he was the final arbiter for storeroom and postoffice discussions. He was thought to burn much midnight oil and "to speak Greek as naturally as pigs squeak." Sixty years have wrought a marked change in the preacher's place in the community. His office, like modern church architecture, is not so high as it once was, but is very wonderfully spread out. He is no longer "the parson," but "the pastor," which signifies not that he knows so much, but that he is expected to do a vast variety of things. However, one vestige of the halo the preacher used to wear abides as yet. He is still supposed to be literary. People now, as in the past, expect him to be familiar with the master minds of all ages and to write and speak with precision and power. Upon a moment's reflection, this is not surprising. The preacher's constant use of books as tools, the fact that he must possess a respectable library, in which he spends (or ought to spend) a considerable part of his time, fix definitely this feature of his work in the public mind.

Indeed, in the making of literature, the preacher has had a part, which though not large, is conspicuous. What English literary Hall of Fame would be complete if Jonathan Swift and John Bunyan were not numbered among its immortals. In our day, what authors are better known than "Ian McLaren (Dr. John Watson), "Ralph Connor" (Chas. W. Gordon), or Dr. Henry Van Dyke?

However, this paper's purpose is not to consider the minister as a professional man of letters. It is the chief business of the preacher to preach. In the very beginning, let this statement receive the emphasis which it deserves. Nothing should be permitted to interfere with the great commission which every minister of the gospel has received. All else is subsidiary and contributory to this supreme purpose. Few ministers will disagree with Austin Phelps who says, "A studious man in a dressing gown and slippers, sitting in the midst of a choice library which is adorned with works of art and costly relics of antiquity, yet from which not a thought goes out to the intellectual or moral improvement of mankind, is a model of refined and fascinating self-hood. Under certain conditions it may do more evil than the life of a libertine." Dr. Arnold was so sensible of the peril of literary selfishness that he held firmly to the opinion that literary pursuits should never be a profession of themselves. They should be an appendage always to some business or profession, which should keep a man's mind healthy by interesting him in the questions of real life and in his own times." Certainly, the preacher, of all men should heed such an admonition as this quotation contains. But as an adjunct to his chief business, as an aid to carrying out his great commission, it is doubtful if there is a more valuable one than the literary work which the preacher may and should do.

In the first place, it is difficult to overestimate the value of an attractive and persuasive style. Buffon even went so far as to say "the style is the man." Error seems sometimes to have wings and truth leaden feet, solely because the former is proclaimed in beautiful and striking periods, the latter in halting and slip-shod speech. Renan's fanciful "Life of Jesus" owed its popularity almost entirely to its faultless style and literary charm. Mr. Ingersoll's audiences usually taxed the seating capacity of the halls or theaters where he lectured, not because he had very much of value to say but because he had a wonderfully supple and elegant style in which to say it. It is easy to affirm that truth needs no such aid to get a hearing, but the fact remains that it frequently has. Who was it that popularized the study of geology? Hugh Miller, through his descriptive power and fresh virile English. Who gave scientific thought such a popular interest? Huxley, Tyndall and Agassiz, through their volumes written with such fascination of literary style. What made the Oxford tracts so popular and influential? Competent critics say their admirable literary quality. The late Joseph Parker in attempting to account for the power of Frederick William Robertson of Brighton, who by some is held to have been the greatest preacher since Paul, says that his lucidity of style must be taken into consideration. "He," declares Parker, "seemed to know all God's heart. When people went to him with puzzles and mysteries of a religious kind, he sat down like a little child by the roadside and said, "I will tell you how that is," as if he wondered why they did not already know and his sentences are lights, his pages luminous." How did Robertson get his style. This question is answered in a letter which he wrote to a friend the last year of his life.

"I am reading now a little book on chemistry. I have read little else for a fortnight, but then I could bear an examination on every law and principle it lays down. I read hard or not at all, never skimming, never turning aside to merely inviting books, and Plato, Aristotle, Butler, Thucydides, Sterne, Jonathan Edwards have passed like the iron atoms of the blood into my mental constitution." Plato, Aristotle, Butler, Thucydides, Sterne, Jonathan Edwards. Verily, there is no royal road to a literary style that is at once lucid, sufficiently full and forceful. A fault of these modern times, amounting almost to a curse, is superficial reading together with the habit of reading ephemeral works to the exclusion of the strong, tried and great books. Austin Phelps used to say to his class in homiletics, "Young gentlemen, stern self-discipline should adjust the proportion of your reading. It is well to read such an author as Carlyle; but by what right do you neglect for his sake such writers as Bacon and Milton? What axiom of economy leads a preacher to buy Hood's poems when he is too poor to own a copy of Shakespeare, or to purchase the works of Thomas Moore when he cannot afford to own Wordsworth?" What manner of rebuke, I wonder, would Prof. Phelps administer to us who are not infrequently given to excluding from our reading not only the great books which he names first, but even the ones which he holds to be of secondary importance. Why, for instance, spend money for George Ade's "Fables in Slang" when one does not boast a copy of "Aesop's Fables," or why "be up" on the "House of Mirth" or "The House of a Thousand Candles" and in dense ignorance of the "Prince of the House of David?"

It is not my purpose to dwell long on the vexed and much debated question as to the preacher's choice of books, but this I know both from observation and experience—the average young preacher does considerable blundering when it comes to buying books. The desire to make a showing, leads him to pile in a lot of lumber on his shelves which by and by he gladly gives away to get it out of his sight. What a boon it would be if our colleges would bring annually to each institution a capable "book sound" minister to deliver, say a half-dozen addresses on "The Preacher's Library."

NOT A SOLOIST.

The late Theodore Thomas was rehearsing the Chicago Orchestra on the stage of the Auditorium Theater. He was disturbed by the whistling of Albert Burridge, the well-known scene painter, who was at work in the loft above the stage. A few minutes later Mr. Thomas's librarian appeared on the "bridge" where Mr. Burridge, merrily whistling, was at work.

"Mr. Thomas' compliments," said the librarian, "and he requests me to state that if Mr. Burridge wishes to whistle he will be glad to discontinue his rehearsal."

To which Mr. Burridge replied, suavely: "Mr. Burridge's compliments to Mr. Thomas; and please inform Mr. Thomas that, if Mr. Burridge cannot whistle with the orchestra, he won't whistle at all."—From "Success Magazine."

Holding and Helping the Young People

Baxter Waters

How to reach and hold and help the young people; how to save or protect them from the deadly temptations and pitfalls of sin, how to develop their lives into spiritual character, how to discipline them for genuine Christian service; how to train them for brave soldierhood; this is an ever present problem of the church and of the pastor.

It is my good fortune to be associated with a live, growing, enthusiastic band of young people. They are the sunshine, the strength and hope of the church. They come into the pastor's life like a surging tide of enthusiasm. Let me suggest in the first place, that this is not a problem for the pastor alone; it is the business of the church to care for the young. The church stands sponsor for the welfare of those received into her charge. While we have no godfathers in the ecclesiastical sense, yet in reality we must have in every church men and women of strong fatherly and motherly instincts who will by personal oversight and unfailing love foster the youth and shepherd the young. It matters not what official position they may fill, whether an elder or a pastor or superintendent or teacher, or whether some father or just a plain friend, it is through his personal influence and brotherly kindness and sensible dealings that he will hold and help or turn one from the error of his way.

Then the young people themselves can do much, perhaps most. They can help one another; they can disseminate the spirit of friendliness among themselves and make the House of God a friendly home for God's children.

Keep them blessedly busy.

Young people love activity. Heroic, hard work appeals to them, and the modern church, with its various departments of work, can give all something to do. It calls for teachers, personal workers, friendly visitors, missionary leaders, talents for music, art and literature. Often outside interests such as missions, hospitals, jail meetings will enlarge and intensify service. Send them on missions to visit the sick, feed the poor, visit the wayward, the neglected and the lost. This is the work of Christ's disciples and I have never known a church to overdo this kind of work. Keep the vision of the cross clear and lift its banner high.

In trying to help young people do not overlook the intellectual life. A reading guild or study circle is of incalculable value. The Bible or Missions, or the Bethany Reading Course, or some great poet as Shakespeare or Tennyson or Browning, may be taken up with profit.

Fasten their faith to Jesus Christ.

This must be the dominant note. In social life, in study circle, in sermon, in public meetings, the one thing is to get a more thorough and larger acquaintance with the Master. He must gain dominion over and grip every life that holds out to the evil.

A young Englishman came among us and I spoke to him about becoming a Christian. He said he had left the old country determined to lead a new life, and each week he started out only to end in failure. I reminded him of the secret of the Great Apostle: "I can do all things through Christ who strengthened me." He took Christ and found faith and strength, and he is now learning of him whose yoke is easy and delighting to serve him. That is the supreme thing; fasten them to Christ.

In dealing most helpfully with young people I suggest three necessary elements. The first is Patience. There must be an infinite amount of it; it must be exercised in season and out of season.

Young people are impulsive and enthusiastic. Their work in the church, or elsewhere, is often irregular, hurried or overzealous, but give them time. A rebuke or rebuff withers. We must wait. If they fail, give them another chance; if they forget, stir their pure minds once more; if they forsake you, remember older men treated the Lord Jesus in like manner.

Then, again, young people are full of life, love of sport, fun and pleasure; they may run to excess and, deplorable as it is, be led into worldliness, frivolity and sinfulness, and they may now and then forget the church. But to deal harshly and impatiently with them only means alienation and permanent divorcement. We must go in the true Shepherd spirit and lead them back.

A fellow pastor wrote me some time ago: "I have become convinced that the one word the preacher needs to learn is Patience. So much dullness, so much blindness, so much frivolity, and we must not speak the cross, the censorious word. We must just wait, as Jesus did."

The Strength of Praise.

Praise completes patience, and "let patience have her perfect work." The teacher, the pastor, the leaders who win must be praisers. I wonder if we realize the tremendous power of praise—there is nothing equal to it. Condemn never, criticize rarely, commend always. And how many opportunities for praise does the pastor find? He must not wait for perfection, until everything is just in order, but begin a cheerful word of praise to the boy or girl who has faced a snow storm, a compliment to the young organist or soloist, encouragement to those making their first bungling talks in Endeavor, honest recognition of a good meeting, good attendance in Sunday school or the capital collection from that class, honorable mention of a faithful committee, etc., etc. Such words are life and sunshine.

I once heard a pastor read a list of good deeds he had observed in his parish during the preceding week. It went up like an offering of sweet incense. "A praising pastor finds in commendation the best mortar for the temple he is erecting."

Another and a chief element which enters into holding and helping the young people is prayer. Pray for them. Enter into the holy of holies before them. Young people are susceptible to the influence of such leadership. The prayer made in my behalf by the great man of God at my baptism is a sacred memory and has followed me like the angel of his presence. And I have cherished from childhood up the prayers of my father. Keep ever before the young people, the sweetness, the beauty, the joy and the privilege of prayer; lead them one by one, group by group, into this blessed experience that they may live in open communion with him every day. Press upon them to pray for the church, for the pastor, for the conversion of souls, for the coming of God's kingdom among men, for our missionaries at home and over the world; and when they become imbued with this spirit and practice they will pass from the stage of being helped into the full mature manhood of the Son of God who came not to be served, or ministered unto, but to minister and to give his life a ransom for many.

A Letter from Thomas Campbell

The recent death of Mrs. Julia Bakewell, for many years a member of the First Church in this city, makes timely the publication of a message once written to her by the revered Thomas Campbell. She was for some time a member of his household, and upon her departure with her husband for their new home in Illinois, Mr. Campbell wrote the following words in her journal as a permanent word of inspiration to her:

* * *

Bethany, Aug. 12, 1845.

Mrs. Julia Bakewell:

Beloved Sister in Christ—Understanding that it is your husband's intention to remove his family a considerable distance from the vicinity of Bethany, after which it is not likely I shall ever have the privilege of seeing you again in this world, I therefore avail myself of the present opportunity you have offered me of writing in your album, to record for your consideration a few leading important truths of our holy religion; the realizing belief and devout practical meditation of which are essential to the actual enjoyment of them. The first of these which I shall mention is the dreadful, helpless, ruined condition in which sin has placed the whole human family. Second, the love of God to us in this awful condition, to effect our deliverance from it. Third, the means divinely appointed for our actual enjoyment of this blissful deliverance.

Now, as to the first of these three topics, we are divinely informed, it has corrupted and destroyed the whole human family; that all flesh have corrupted their way; that there is none righteous, no, not one; that the whole world naturally lies in wickedness, under the god of this world, the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now works in the children of disobedience, among whom we all had our conversation in times past, in the lusts of our flesh, fulfilling the desires of the flesh and of the mind, and were by nature children of wrath, even as others.

For the fleshly mind is enmity against God, and is, therefore, not subject to the law of God, neither, indeed, can be; so that they who are under its influence can not please God, but are enemies in their minds by wicked works—haters of God—hateful and hating one another; so that the first born man murdered the second. Alas! alas! into what a hateful and ruinous condition has sin brought us?

Topic Second.—But, blessed be God, he so loved us in this perishing condition, that he gave his only begotten Son to suffer the punishment due to our sins; that whosoever believes in him might not perish, but have eternal life. Herein is love! most astonishing love! that when we were in this most unlovely, even hateful condition, God so loved us as to send his only begotten, infinitely beloved Son into our guilty world, thus to seek and to save us who were lost; to be the propitiation for our sins, that we might live through him. But even all this would not have sufficed, would not have reached our depraved, perishing condition, dead in sins, alienated from the life of God through our native ignorance and enmity. No! We must be regenerated, must be quickened, created anew, made alive in Christ. Now, it is the Spirit that regenerates, that quickens, that gives spiritual life, that makes the new creature; and if any one be in Christ, he must be such. Now, all this is the peculiar work of the Holy Spirit, for it is he that enlightens, convinces and converts us by the gospel. For he is the Spirit of faith, without whom no man can sincerely confess Christ as his Lord; it is indeed through his special influence, by the word of truth, that we are convinced and converted, justified and sanctified. He is the Spirit of power, and of love, and of sound mind, the Spirit of holiness; so that all Christian virtues and good works are ascribed to the Holy Spirit, as the fruits of his divine influence. Wherefore, if any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is not one of us. Now seeing that God so loved us, dead in sins, as to give his only begotten and well-beloved Son to die for our sins, that we might be justified by his blood, and his Holy Spirit to quicken, enlighten, convince, and convert us, that we might be actually justified and sanctified through faith and obedience; what, then, should prevent our blissful assurance of pardon and acceptance when we call upon God for this most desirable purpose? Will he refuse sin-pardoning mercy and sanctifying grace to the believing applicants whom he so loved dead in sins, as above described? Surely no; for if he so loved us as above noted, in our most loathsome and offensive condition, will he, or can he withhold the food he has so most graciously promised and provided for our deliverance from the wretched state, when we come as suppliants to his throne of grace to obtain it? Unbelief itself could hardly admit such a conclusion. For if he so loved us, dead in sins, as to give his only begotten Son to die for our sins, how will he not with him also freely give us all things that pertain to life and godliness? Wherefore, having such an insuperable, transporting evidence of the love of God to poor, guilty, polluted, perishing humanity, let us always approach the throne of mercy, through our great High Priest, in full assurance of faith, that we may obtain mercy to help us in every time of need.

Topic Third.—The means divinely appointed for the blissful purpose of our actual enjoyment of the great salvation which the love of God has most graciously provided for us, at the expense of the awful humiliation, sufferings, and death of his only begotten and infinitely beloved Son, are the belief and obedience of the gospel and law of Christ. Consequently, the first thing incumbent upon us, after baptism, is the daily and diligent perusal of, and meditation upon, the word of God, with prayers for this all-important purpose; for by the former we are made wise to salvation, and by the latter, that is, by the assistance of the Holy Spirit of promise, we are enabled to reduce it to practice; without whose assistance we can do nothing that is holy, just, and good; for he is the Spirit of holiness. Wherefore, it is only as many as are led by the Spirit of God that are the children of God. And if children, then heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ. Therefore our heavenly Father gives his Holy Spirit to them that ask him. Having, then, free access to the Word and Spirit of God, the former to teach us everything that we ought to believe and do, the latter to apprehend, realize and practice it, what more do we want for our present and eternal enjoyment of the great salvation, but the divinely prescribed use of the Bible, and the throne of grace?

These things being evidently so, let us exercise ourselves unto godliness night and day, in the divine use of the word of God, and prayers for the blissful purpose of understanding, practicing and enjoying its divine contents.

Wishing you and your beloved consort all happiness here and hereafter, I remain, beloved sister in Christ, your sincere friend and humble servant in the Gospel, Thomas Campbell.

Can Christians Enact Good Laws

Wm. E. Barton, D. D.

It is very easy to pass resolutions, and they sometimes count; but if one hundred men who sign a petition or vote in a meeting for a resolution would write individual letters, the result would be from ten to one hundred times as effective. Members of the legislature rarely receive letters from their constituents except when favors are desired. If a law is pending, and a member of the legislature is paying very little attention to it (and that in general is the case) and he receives a letter from a constituent saying, "I am interested in Senate Bill 586; will you kindly let me know whether it seems to you a good bill?" the member at once informs himself about the bill. Some one is interested in it, some one in his district. One such letter has weight. Ten such letters to one man have great weight. A hundred such letters have sometimes passed laws that otherwise would have failed.

The number of the bill given above as a sample was chosen with reason. There now is pending before the legislature of Illinois a bill so numbered. It has passed the Senate, and now, much amended, is before the House on third reading. It will need to go back to second reading, have the amendments killed, be passed, and referred back to the Senate. A good majority of each house will favor doing this, for the bill is a good bill. But notwithstanding the majority in favor of it, it will fail unless Christian people unite to support it.

Therefore the reason for this article is to ask that each man or woman reading this article, and residing in Illinois, at once write to each of the three representatives from his district, and say, in any words that he or she thinks wise, that the writer would be glad to know how his representative stands regarding Senate Bill 586. That is a good thing to do, even if you are not sure whether you favor the bill; for it will encourage your representatives to study the bill more carefully.

Senate Bill 586 is a bill seeking to extend the parole system so that it shall apply to misdemeanors, first offenses and cases of drunkenness, and to do it before the offenders go to jail. It is a system that has been tried in Judge Cleland's court, but has been stopped because it is declared that the present laws do not permit it. It has saved scores of tempted men from disgrace and doom; it has saved thousands of dollars to the country and state, and scores of thousands in wages of men who have been compelled to work and support their families while they were held under suspended sentence.

The liquor men are the only strong opponents of the bill. They declare that the system will of necessity compel men to promise to let liquor alone, and that that is an infringement of personal liberty. That is why the bill was amended to death, or nearly to death. It is not yet hopeless. If Christian men and women will rally, and from now till May 5 at which time the legislature re-convenes, will write to their representatives, the bill will not fail. Christians of Illinois, write to all three of your representatives and ask them how they stand on Senate Bill 586. If you cannot write to three, write to one, but write at once. Ask for a copy of the bill, if you want to make up your own mind about it.

Is it worth while for the Christians to see that right laws are enacted? They can secure good laws if they try unitedly. Try this, and report to the editor.

Character Counts in Work

John Trainor

Character is an essential to business success, and a man is certain to fail without it.

A well known statesman, discussing the part character plays in the doing of work that counts, says: "An intelligent architect would not think of erecting a handsome building without putting it on a firm foundation. A sculptor carving a block of marble often rejects it when nearly finished because he finds it contains a flaw. For the same reason the far sighted business man refuses to build his career on any but a right foundation."

Unfaithful Worker Loses Place.

Character is the only right foundation. It is the ideal which determines what we put into our work. The ideal is commonly called ambition. The kind of ambition determines the quality of a man's work.

"There are some men who hold positions here more because of their integrity than for their ability," said the manager of a big store. "I never keep a man in our employ, however great his ability, if I find loose places in his character. Some months ago a man who had been working for me more than a year

Jesus and the Blind Man*

H. L. Willett

One of the most prevalent maladies in eastern lands is blindness. The unprotected face is exposed to the hot rays of the sun and the neglect of cleanliness which is characteristic of all people from the cradle to the grave breeds disease which is most likely to attack the eyes. In Egypt this is aggravated by the numberless flies which superstition forbids the afflicted to drive away. And while in Palestine the conditions are less serious, yet blindness is so common as to attract little attention. In most cases such an affliction is easily within reach of medical science if only proper attention were given to it. But neglect, uncleanness and superstition combine to increase rather than diminish the victims of blindness from year to year. No ministry of a missionary character is more notable than the medical work which is directed at the removal of this widespread plague, and simple surgical operations combined with instruction in the proper care of the body should make the disease almost as rare in the east as in the west.

The Cause of the Affliction.

Not a few of those whom Jesus healed were sufferers from this plague. One of them, perhaps the most notable case of all, is the central figure in this story. On one of his visits to Jerusalem Jesus saw a blind man sitting at the place where offerings could be begged from passers-by. The Master and the disciples were attracted to the case by some fact which is not mentioned, but the disciples at once raised a question which was perhaps one of mere idle curiosity. But it had at least some significance in Jesus' mind. It was the current belief that all disease was the result of sin. It is so to-day in the east. Much of the indifference to the maladies which curse humanity under the Syrian sun is due to the fatalism which regards all affliction as the scourge of God, and any attempt to mitigate it is in some sense irreverent.

A Speculation.

The disciples asked Jesus therefore whose sin it was that brought upon this man his misfortune. Was it his own sin, or that of his parents? Of course it might easily have been the latter, for as both science and the Bible teach, the sins of the parents are not infrequently visited upon the children in physical defects or mental limitations. But how could a man be born blind as the result of his own sin? Were the disciples speaking thoughtlessly or had they heard some suggestion of that theory of re-incarnation which was an early speculation of the Greeks, and is to-day formally held by theosophists and some other sects? It is little likely that the question was asked with special deliberation or awareness. The disciples used many inquiries which were rather calculated to draw from Jesus observations on life than to give utterance to their own serious questionings.

The Higher Truth.

But Jesus used the occasion to teach one of his highest truths. He rejected both of their conjectures regarding the cause of the blind man's trouble. It was no part of our Lord's purpose, at least on this occasion, to discuss the origin of evil. He had no desire to throw light on a problem which has perplexed all the generations. At least he was not minded to discuss the question with the disciples in their present mood. But he carried their inquiry to a higher level, that of the present practical significance of the blind man's position. It was a chance to do good, and this was enough. The works of God, the power to uplift and bless, the divine compassion upon suffering gave him opportunity for its exhibition in this man's case. As in other instances Jesus turned from the speculative side of the question to its practical aspect. There was no time to lose in the manifestation of the works of God. The day of his opportunity was brief. He must use every hour in giving to the world a larger knowledge of the Father's good will. As the bringer of such a revelation he was the Light of the world.

The Healing.

So he turned to the man and anointed his eyes with the moistened clay which he mixed from the soil of the roadside, and told him to go and wash in the open pool below the city, perhaps the very one where the lame man, unable to enter the water, had been healed by him a few months before. The method which Jesus took to heal the blind man's eyes was natural and simple. Applications of this character are not unknown in medical practice to-day. At all events, the man obeyed the instructions of Jesus and returned rejoicing in the new found gift of sight. Jesus had made that blessing contingent upon obedience to his word. The man must himself co-operate and this required faith in the words of the Lord. In the truest sense he was saved by faith in Christ, and obedience to his commands.

The Controversy.

An event of this kind could not fail to attract attention. The man was a familiar figure on the streets of Jerusalem. The people who saw him in his new condition wondered if it could be the same man, and some division of opinion was expressed. But when he assured his friends and neighbors that it was indeed he, he made no effort to conceal the cause of his blessing, but told them that Jesus had given him directions and he had obeyed. The discovery of this fact led instantly to a fresh controversy, in which Jesus was involved. It was the Sabbath day on which the blind man was healed. The scribes and Pharisees, learning of what had happened, inquired of the man and his parents, and so intimidated the latter that they declined to answer any questions, but referred the matter to their son. He, however, boldly asserted that Jesus had healed him and that he must be a prophet, for no one could perform such works without a prophet's power. The conversation between the authorities, the parents and the blind man now restored to sight is one of the most interesting in the fourth gospel which records so many conversations.

The Convincing Answer.

The scribes and Pharisees complained that the Sabbath law had been broken, although it was manifest that a gracious deed had been performed. The parents of the man with cowardly timidity refused to implicate themselves in any sympathy with the Master. But the man himself revealed a splendor of faith and heroism that must have filled the heart of Jesus with delight. Defying the authorities who cast him out of the synagogue for his confession of Jesus, he insisted that no one who had performed such a work could be other than a holy man, and to all charges made against his friend and healer he returned the significant and convincing answer "Whether he is a false prophet I do not know, nor by what power he worked the cure, but one thing I know, whereas I was blind now I see." This is the final answer that faith makes to doubt. The proof of Christianity lies not in a theory of the Bible or the atonement or the person of Christ, but in the saving work of the Lord in the life of the believer. This is a test which meets every occasion and answers every challenge. It is the response of experience to the inquiry both of questioning faith and of hostile doubt. No other response need ever be made by the man who can truly say, "One thing I know, that whereas I was blind now I see."

The Fillmore Music House, of Cincinnati, are announcing a new Sunday school song book by Wm. J. Kirkpatrick and J. H. Fillmore. These two names are a guarantee of something good. They have named their book "Joy and Praise for the Sunday School." Among the many new songs in the book is a new "Glory Song" by Fred A. Fillmore that certainly looks good. You can get specimen pages free which contain the new glory song. See their ad in another column.

Scripture Jas. 5:1-4 I Tim. 5:18	The Prayer Meeting	Topic for Mar. 18

Prayer for the World's Workers

Lincoln's remark that the Lord must love the common people or else he would not have made so many of them furnishes a good basis for the discussion of the topic for this week. The world's workers are many. If every one of them is to be treated as a person, the interest of the church in the whole body of workers should be intense. There should be no guessing as to their condition and their needs, their opinions and the way to reach them. It is the business of the church to stand for human rights as these have been revealed in Christ. Institutions are of value when they build character and protect the rights of man. Any organization that requires for its maintenance the destruction of life and the corruption of public sentiment should meet uncompromising hostility from the followers of Christ. Useful organizations whose methods result in injustice to even a few people are objects for the reformer's attention. Any church that puts its own existence and power above human rights is misrepresenting Christ and ought not to be shielded from attack through false reverence for that which bears the name of Christ. Only those who do the will of Christ have a right to wear his name.

Silas Jones

There is still need of teaching the dignity of labor. The world discards reluctantly the heathen notion that common toil is degrading. The Greek philosopher believed that a democracy had to rest on a basis of slave labor. He thought culture was impossible for the man that toiled with his hands. This opinion is foreign to Christian feeling. Unrequited labor may degrade. The bad workman ruins his character. But no sort of work that society has a right to demand of men will degrade the workers if it is done under proper conditions and with conscientiousness. It cannot be that we have to live by sacrificing the souls of some of our brothers. Occupations that cannot be made into means of culture for those engaged in them must be unnecessary in a Christian nation. By culture we do not mean learning, ability to speak with elegance and force, but rather refinement of soul which consists in love of man and God.

The workers of the world are asking that their rights be respected. They ask for laws that will insure to them just returns for their labor. They ask for protection against accidents. In a word, they demand recognition as men and women. They have a right to the sympathy of every disciple of Jesus. They may justly censure the church when it is indifferent to their rights. But they also need Christ. Some of them may be so intent upon getting material advantages that they overlook the things of the spirit. No economic scheme can satisfy the whole man. There will always be need of patience, love, hope, faith. These cannot exist in their full strength without religion. Take away faith, and we shall soon begin to say that might makes right, that may get who can. We should therefore be false friends of the workers if we left them to fight their battles without Christ. It may be a foolish and wicked procedure to offer up our prayers for the hungry while we do nothing to feed them; it is just as foolish to expect men to live by bread alone. The highest authority on man's needs says he cannot live without God. To the warmth of food and clothing must be added the warmth of divine love.

Wise Use of Money

FOR THE LEADER.

The meeting should be given some practical bent, and none is better than a consideration of the Tenth Legion, that organization which aims to make conscientious men in regard to the use of their money. Let some member of the Tenth Legion, if you have one in your society or can obtain the presence of one, tell about the purpose of the organization and testify how much good is to be gained from the wise and right plan of giving which it inculcates. If you cannot obtain the presence of a Tenth Legionary, you can obtain from Secretary Shaw full information concerning the Legion. The best way to bring the matter to a head is to pass around the ballots, which are for sale by the United Society, perforated for different ways of giving and for different kinds of promises—to keep regular accounts of income and outgo, to give proportionately, to give a tenth and join the Tenth Legion, and so on.

INCIDENTS AND ILLUSTRATIONS.

The will of Samuel P. Harbison, head of the Harbison-Walker Co., of Pittsburg, contained this paragraph: "I have no provision in my will for any charitable bequests, as I have, during my life, administered largely on my own estate, and have from year to year given to the Lord's work and other charities as though it were my last. This course I expect to pursue so long as I may live. In leaving my estate to my family, it is my hope that they may act on the same principle, remembering that the 'King's business requires haste,' and that what we do for him ought to be done quickly, so that, should he come in my time or in your time, we be not found with his money in our hands that ought to be out doing service in his cause."

The late Dr. Arthur Mitchell used to say to business men, "Some of you drive a missionary down town every morning with your carriage and team." More than once this quaint way of putting it led the owner of an expensive turnout to set up a missionary also.

A quaint Western governor said, "People generally consider that they have made their money by their industry and economy, and if the Lord gets any of it he ought to be thankful."

WITH THE WORKERS

Doings of Preachers, Teachers, Thinkers and Givers

M. L. Anderson has closed his work at Deerfield, Mich.

D. A. Wickizer of Kirksville, Mo., has been holding a meeting with home forces.

Charles G. Stout and Jesse Walton have closed a good meeting at Burlington, Mo.

H. C. Gresham is the new minister in Seneca, Mo., where he began work last Sunday.

W. A. Shullenberger, of Grant City, Mo., has taken up his new duties at Trenton.

Richard Martin begins a meeting at Ellis, Kan., March 1, where S. B. Russell ministers.

Duncan McFarland, of Le Roy, Kan., has been extended a call by the church at La Harpe.

Prof. J. L. Garvin of Christian University, Enid, preached at Tulsa, Okla., Sunday evening, Feb. 9.

E. G. Merrill has resigned at the East Side Church, Moberly, Mo., and will soon move to Braymer.

Joseph A. Serena recently contributed a sermonette to the columns of the Daily Journal, Syracuse, N. Y.

R. Tibbs Maxey and C. B. Hanger, singing evangelist, will hold a meeting at Sioux Falls, S. D., in April.

J. M. Hoffman has been called as minister by the Carondelet church, St. Louis, Mo., and will take charge at once.

W. J. Shelburne, Nashville, Tenn., says: "I am morally certain we will make Old Vine Street a Living Link."

Two of our wide-awake business men in Texas, expect to support a missionary each through the Foreign Society next year.

The church at Bethany, W. Va., will raise $600 to support Charles P. Hedges, a late graduate of Bethany College, on the foreign field.

A unique service was held in the Clifton Church, Louisville, Ky., last Sunday in celebration of the fifth anniversary of the pastorate of T. S. Tinsley.

E. L. Frazier is working industrially to secure an offering from every member of the church in Kirklin, Ind. He is likely to succeed this year, as he did last.

The church at Pittsburg, Kansas, is planning to buy a $6,000 lot for a new building, but the church has decided to become a Living Link in the Foreign Society at once.

David H. Shields, of Salina, Kan., is holding a meeting at Plainville, Kan., where Clifton Rash is the preacher. These pastors will exchange pulpits during the meeting.

A. R. Spicer made a beginning of his labors in Dixon, Ill., last Sunday. He succeeds H. H. Peters, Centennial secretary of Eureka College, who was notably successful in that field.

J. B. Holmes, Beaumont, Texas, says: "Beaumont's March offering last year was twice that of a year before; this year it will be three times last year's. In 1909 we hope to be a Living Link."

F. L. Moffett reports that the foreign rally in the South Street Church, Springfield, Mo., was a great success, with good audiences to hear the messages of Stephen J. Cory, F. E. Hagin and Royal J. Dye.

W. O. S. Cliffe is located in Sidney, Ill., and preaches half time for the church there. A good church within reach of that point may secure his services for the rest of his time by addressing him.

The church in Bellingham, Wash., of which N. H Brooks is pastor, has a publicity department with F. E. Hays as secretary. The pastor is preaching a series of sermons dealing with Roman Catholicism and the Reformation.

Among the Disciples of Kansas who are busy in the cause of the anti-liquor forces, David H. Shields of Salina, is prominent. But frequent addresses and lectures do not cause his church work to lag, for additions are frequent and interest is high.

V. W. Blair and his congregation in Greenfield, Ind., held a meeting last month in which C. H. Winders of Irvington, was the preacher. Although the weather and much sickness were great hindrances, the special services were of great benefit to the church.

The churches in Macon county, Illinois, under the direction of O. W. Lawrence, Decatur, Ill., and J. W. Walters of Niantic, have determined to make that county a Living Link in the Foreign Society. This is a wise and helpful step, and we commend the brethren upon their larger view and plans.

Edgar D. Jones, Bloomington, Ill., writes under date of February 24: "Our meeting closed last night—432 added in all; mostly men and boys; a fine lot of new converts. After the mid-week service and next Sunday's it is likely we will increase this number to 500. Religious interest in Bloomington at this time is very much in evidence. W. A. Sunday did us lots of good. His results are exceptionally good."

As we go to press the sad news comes in a letter from J. A. Barnett of Galesburg, Ill., of the death of one of our faithful ministers of the state. Bro. Barnet says: "Bro. Nelson G. Brown, late pastor of the church here, died Friday morning, after eleven months' suffering with sarcoma (of the stomach). The funeral services were held at the church here to-day, March 2, and the body will be laid at rest in Earlsville, Ia., his old home. Bro. Brown entered the ministry in 1891. He took his Master's degree at Drake University in 1898. He has since held pastorates at Ottumwa, Ia., Burlington and Fairfield, Ia. He came to Galesburg in 1904. His work here has been quite successful. He was forced to resign from the work here last summer on account of his failing health. Memorial services were held in his honor yesterday morning, at the morning worship hour. His death was a triumph of faith. He has suffered ceaselessly for nearly a year, but has never murmured. Bro. Albert Swartz of New Boston, preaches the funeral sermon.

The men of the Central Church, Dayton, Ohio, serve free lunch for single men from ten to one o'clock every day. I. J. Cahill, the minister, says: "Last Sunday afternoon, the pastor and two elders attended a socialist's meeting, where the speaker dwelt with length and vociferation on the failure of churches and preachers to manifest sympathy for the unfortunate. The pastor spoke for five minutes at the close, offering no defense of the church or the ministry and announced that our men would serve lunches to the unemployed. The deafening applause which followed showed that this mere statement was the most forceful argument that could have been given. By their fruits ye shall know them."

HOT BISCUIT

Kind of Breakfast Passing Away.

The old-time hot biscuit played a prominent role in the breakfast bill of fare, along with fried potatoes, ham and eggs, and coffee.

The whiter and lighter the biscuit the more pleased the cook, which was usually Mother, who did the best she could, with her understanding of the matter.

But most people have learned in recent years, that white flour lacks the nourishing elements of the entire wheat berry, and many cases of imperfect nutrition follow its use.

In Grape-Nuts, all the food elements of wheat and barley are used, and this largely accounts for results similar to those given in the following letter:

"I wish to tell of the health and strength-giving properties of Grape-Nuts. I am 45 years old and had for years been afflicted with indigestion and other stomach troubles, brought on by eating hot biscuit, white bread and improperly cooked cereals.

"Noticing an advertisement stating the benefits derived from eating Grape-Nuts, I was skeptical because I had tried so many so-called 'health foods.' I thought it would be useless to try Grape-Nuts.

"But during the last six months I have been eating it, my stomach has been the best for years, my mind clear, my nerves quiet and a feeling of buoyancy prevades my whole being.

"This I attribute to Grape-Nuts as I have left off using medicines. I now firmly believe in the brain-clearing, nerve-steadying and muscle-building properties of Grape-Nuts.

"I am healthier than I have been for years, weigh 180 lbs., which is more than ever before."

meeting last Sunday afternoon in West Pullman.

W. F. Shaw received one confession in regular services of the Sheffield Avenue church this week.

F. C. Cothran baptized six new members of the Armour Avenue (colored) church last Sunday.

C. G. Kindred and Mr. Carl Bushnell spoke at a Men's Club meeting in the Monroe Street Church last Monday night.

O. F. Jordan will lead the Evanston church in a meeting to begin April 5. There was one confession in his church last Sunday.

The Metropolitan church has received several new members recently. A. T. Campbell reports that the finances of the congregation are in excellent condition.

G. A. Campbell is lecturing this week at Bethany College, Bethany, W. Va. He recently visited Valparaiso, Ind., to speak to the students of the normal college.

George B. Stewart received thirteen confessions in regular services of the Church at Morocco, Ind., February 23. He will hold a meeting soon for the church.

The meeting in the Jackson Boulevard church ended with about 120 additions to the church. Evangelist Herbert Yeuell has gone to Frankfort, Ind., for a meeting.

C. G. Kindred reports that $840 was given by his congregation toward the amount necessary for the support of the several living link missions sustained by the Englewood church.

Judge McKenzie Cleland of the Municipal court will speak at a men's dinner given next Saturday night by the First Church. His theme will be "The Correction of the Criminal."

The quarterly convention of the Chicago Union of the C. W. B. M. will be held in the Austin church Thursday of this week. At night the young people will reorganize the Christian Endeavor union of the Disciples.

THE CARE OF A WAGON.

The useful life of a wagon or dray employed in heavy hauling depends very largely on the care of its wheels and axles.

Hosts of farmers and teamsters, who ought to know better, think that "grease is just grease anyway" and so cut the boxes out of their wagon wheels by using some inferior lubricant which runs off and leaves the spindle dry, or forms a stiff, almost gritty substance in the wheel which is just as bad.

A proper axle grease for use on every type of heavy wagon should have just the right "body"—that is, it ought to be neither so thin as to run, nor so heavy as to stiffen.

It should have, too, a long-lasting quality if it is to be economical.

Perhaps no preparation for the purpose is quite as good as Mica Axle Grease. Certainly no other axle lubricant on the market possesses what we have termed "proper qualities" as truly as "Mica" does. A very little of it goes a long way and saves the teamster much loss and trouble.

One valuable quality of Mica Axle Grease is the anti-friction property which it possesses, aside from its lubricating power. It contains powdered mica, which coats the wagon axle with a smooth glass-like surface on which wheels turn easily and with the minimum of wear.

W. F. Rothenburger and the Irving Park church will begin a short meeting next Sunday with home forces. This church, having freed itself of debt, will endeavor to raise a fund of $1,000 this year, one-half of which will go for missions and half for special local enterprises.

LET THE OFFERING CONTINUE.

The annual offering for Foreign Missions was begun last Sunday, March 1. It was only begun, however. It ought to continue until the last church calling itself Christian has been enlisted. If we can report 5,000 contributing churches at the close of this missionary year, it will usher in a new era in our missionary history. We must widen the basis of supplies.

Bad weather may have prevented some churches from responding last Sunday. Then try it again next Lord's day, and protracted meetings may have interfered in some churches. Next Sunday will be a good time to enlist the new converts in the world-wide enterprise of Foreign Missions.

Keep the aims of the missionary year before the churches: 50 new missionaries, 5,000 contributing churches, $350,000 in receipts, and 3,000 converts in the mission fields. We are able to do all these things and more. The Lord of the harvest expects us to enlarge the work in every direction. It is confidentially believed that within fifty years the gospel will be spread over the whole earth. Shall we not do our part?

We are cheered with good reports from every quarter. Many churches will give that have never before responded. Many churches will give far beyond all former standards. The campaign of enlisting new churches was never before so active and determined. The interest in Living Links is beyond anything we have ever known. The Rallies have been more largely attended this year than in years past. Altogether we are encouraged to hope for a decided advance.

The salvation of the churches themselves is involved. They can not hope to grow and prosper out of line with God's eternal purposes. Let the whole column move forward as one man. Onward, and upward is the battle cry!

Please send the offering promptly. Be careful to give the local name of the church when different from the name of the postoffice.

STICKING TO THE DISAGREEABLE JOB.

It is the man who can stick to the disagreeable job, do it with energy and vim, the man who can force himself to do good work when he does not feel like doing it—in other words, the man who is master of himself, who has a great purpose, and who holds himself to his aim, whether it is agreeable or disagreeable, whether he feels like it or does not feel like it—that wins.

It is easy to do what is agreeable, to keep at the thing we like and are enthusiastic about; but it takes real grit to try to put our whole soul into that which is distasteful and against which our nature protests, but which we are compelled to do for the sake of others who would suffer if we did not do it.

To go every morning with a stout heart and an elastic step, with courage and enthusiasm, to work which we are not fitted for and were not intended to do, work against which our very natures protest, just because it is our duty, and to keep this up, year in and year out, require heroic qualities.—O. S. Marden in "Success Magazine."

HE COULD BE TRUSTED.

A train from the North pulled into the station at Charlottesville, Virginia. An elderly man thrust his head out of a window of a day coach and summoned a little colored boy. The following colloquy ensued:

"Little boy, have you a mother?"

"Yassuh."

"Are you faithful to your studies?"

"Yassuh."

"Do you go to Sunday school?"

"Yassuh."

"Do you say your prayers every night?"

"Yassuh."

"Can I trust you to do an errand for me?"

"Yassuh."

"Well, here's five cents to get me a couple of apples."—From "Success Magazine."

OLD SURGEON

Found Coffee Caused Hands to Tremble.

The surgeon's duties require clear judgment and a steady hand. A slip or an unnecessary incision may do irreparabel damage to the patient.

When he found that coffee drinking caused his hands to tremble, an Illinois surgeon conscientiously gave it up and this is his story.

"For years I was a coffee drinker until my nervous system was nearly broken down, my hands trembled so I could hardly write, and insomnia tortured me at night.

"Besides, how could I safely perform operations with unsteady hands, using knives and instruments of precision? When I saw plainly the bad effects of coffee, I decided to stop it, and three years ago I prepared some Postum, of which I had received a sample.

"The first cupful surprised me. It was mild, soothing, delicious. At this time I gave some Postum to a friend who was in a similar condition to mine, from the use of coffee.

"A few days after, I met him and he was full of praise for Postum declaring he would never return to coffee but stick to Postum. We then ordered a full supply and within a short time my nervousness and consequent trembling, as well as insomnia disappeared, blood circulation became normal, no dizziness nor heat flashes.

"My friend became a Postum enthusiast, his whole family using it exclusively.

"It would be the fault of the one who brewed the Postum, if it did not taste good when served.

"The best food may be spoiled if not properly made. Postum should be boiled according to directions on the package. Then it is all right, anyone can rely on it. It ought to become the national drink." "There's a Reason." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in packages.

Eat Charcoal

Bad Breath, Gas on Stomach, and Blood Impurities Stopped by Wonderful Action of Charcoal Lozenges

Trial Package Sent Free To Prove It

To blow a whiff of your bad breath in the face of a stranger or a friend, is a mighty disagreeable thing—to both of you. It humiliates you, and disgusts the one who is standing before you or talking with you face to face.

Onion-eaters, smokers, garlic-users, owners of bilious breath and furry tongues, victims of indigestion and those who are not teetotalers will be surprised how quickly they can get rid of their offensive breath by taking just a few of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges.

Charcoal is the greatest gas absorber known, absorbing 100 times its own volume in gas.

Gas on the stomach comes from indigestion as a rule. But no matter which it comes from, if there is any there, charcoal in the form of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will absorb every bit of it. And besides that these charcoal wonder-workers will absorb any unnatural odors which you may have in your mouth, or in your stomach, and instead of having a "powerful" breath which you are ashamed of, you will have a pure, sweet breath, free from all odor.

That foul, bilious breath you have on arising in the morning can be stopped at once by Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges.

Don't use breath perfumes. They never conceal the odor, and never absorb the gas that causes the odor. Besides, the very fact of using them reveals the reason for their use. Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges in the first place stop for good all sour brash and belching of gas, and make your breath pure, fresh and sweet, just after you have drunk or eaten. Charcoal is a purifier as well as an absorber. It leaves the stomach and intestines pure and unpolluted by fermenting food, which causes more than half the ills of mankind.

Charcoal is now by far the best, most easy and mild laxative known. A whole boxful will do no harm; in fact the more you take the better. Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are made of pure willow charcoal, and mixed with just a faint flavor of honey to make them palatable for you, but not too sweet. You just chew them like candy. They are absolutely harmless.

Get a new, pure, sweet breath, freshen your stomach for your next meal, and keep the intestines in good working order. You can get all the charcoal necessary to do these wonderful but simple things by getting Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges. We want you to test these little wonder-workers yourself before you buy them. So send us your full name and address for a free sample of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges. Then after you have tried the sample, and been convinced, go to your druggist and get a 25c box of them. You'll feel better all over, more comfortable, and "cleaner" inside.

Send us your name and address to-day and we will at once send you by mail a sample package, free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 200 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

IN MEMORIAM.

BARTON.

Walter J. Barton died at the home of his parents in Danville, Ill., Jan. 19, at the age of twenty-five. He obeyed his Savior when twelve years old and was a shining light in church and Sunday school. His Christian mother, father and sister find comfort and consolation in thinking of him in that Bright World strong in the vigor of immortal youth. He was a brother fair as the day; a son devoted, self-sacrificing, who has left a fragrant memory. To this community his was an example that will be an incentive to nobler ideals and higher life. The remains were laid to rest in beautiful Spring Hill cemetery with fervent hope in Him who shall fashion us unto His own glorious likeness.

L. F. Lascell.

SHIPLEY.

Mrs. Clarinda Shipley, aged 67 years, departed this life at Wellsville, O., Oct. 15, 1907. She was the daughter of David Campbell, who was a full cousin of Alexander Campbell, for whose daughter Clarinda, wife of Dr. Richardson, she was named. For 49 years she was a devoted member of the Christian church and full of good works. She was buried at Holiday's Cave, W. Va., where most of her life was spent.

CHARACTER COUNTS.

wished to know why his work had not been recognized by promotion. I told him he had shown ability, but his work fell short because it was only when my eyes were upon him he tried to do his best. I gave him another six months to overcome this serious defect and then having found no improvement discharged him, giving him this word of friendly advice:

"'Look here, young man. If you wish to succeed, learn to know yourself. Get acquainted with your shortcomings and put your best ability into your work. The pleasure that comes in doing honest, conscientious work ought to give you more satisfaction than any salary I can pay you. If you lacked ability I should deal less harshly with you. It is your ability which shows me you are unwilling to put your talents to their best use.'"

A man's character is more important than his work. Work as an isolated factor has little meaning and small value. It is a means to an end and becomes a vital force as it relates itself to man.

A great deal is said about the chicanery of the modern successful business man. But there are plenty who are succeeding because they respect themselves, love their work, and use only fair methods.

clares that "the small success I have won was obtained by simple methods. I commenced my career on a farm with poor soil and worse tools. It was the pride I took in doing my work well that made me a good farmer in spite of obstacles. When I came to the city and began my career as messenger and all the way up the climb I followed the same path.

"I saw boys about me who had more ability and better opportunities, but I banked myself on character. I tried to do every day's work as well as I could, irrespective of whether the boss was watching me or not. When there was a promotion I was usually the man pushed in, not because I had any special ability, but the management realized I wished to treat them square.

"Since I have become president I have plenty of opportunity to study the men and women working under me. There are men in our employ who outstrip me in ability. They are failing to produce their best fruits because they are unwilling to make their talents and opportunities count."

Character Counts in Music and Art.

When Massenet was asked recently what was the chief requisite for a great composer he answered: "Character—to know life at its best and to love it. A composer must have talent, an understanding of music and musical history, but his ideals make his works live after he is dead."

There can be no real failure where a man puts character into his work and no real success where a man lacks it.—Chicago Tribune.

TELEGRAMS

Wichita, Kan., March 1.

Editor Christian Century:—Central Church becomes a Living Link, supporting Dr. Jaggard in Bolenge, Africa.

E. W. Allen, Pastor.

ILLINOIS.

Rantoul. — Our meeting closed here with 17 accessions. Louis O. Lehman, the minister, did the preaching. Charles E. McVay of Benkelman, Neb., led the music. Bro. McVay gave a song recital at the close of the meeting.

Sydney.—This is a good church with all live folks in it, no "dead ones." Nineteen baptized recently; work moves along nicely, the band of young people are earnest; the old are firm and steadfast. The writer preached to Pythian assembly, composed of the Knights and Pythian ladies, Sunday morning, Feb. 23, 1908, on the text, "How Many Loaves Have Ye? Go and See."—W. O. S. Cliffe, Pastor and General Evangelist.

IOWA.

Des Moines.—Ministers' meeting Feb. 24, 1908. Central (Idleman) 6 confessions, by letter. University (Medbury) 2 by letter. Capital Hill (Van Horn) 3 confessions. Grant Park (Horn) 2 by letter.—Jno. McD. Horne, Secretary.

Cedar Rapids.—Bro. John R. Golden has just closed a most excellent meeting here for us. We have been greatly helped by his plain, simple gospel teaching. He is true to the faith and preaches with great power. The weather interfered with us greatly. There were 18 added and the life and faith of the church has been mightily helped. I can say with all sincerity that I fully endorse his type of evangelism. No one need hesitate to call him for a meeting. Within less than a year of our Scoville meeting we could hardly expect large numbers to be obedient.—F. E. Smith, Second Church.

KANSAS.

Kansas City.—There were four additions to the Northside Church last Sunday.—James S. Myers.

OHIO.

Uhrichsville.—Charles Darsie recently closed a meeting with 25 additions—home forces. 15 of the additions were heads of families. The church has expressed its appreciation of four years of faithful and earnest service by a substantial increase in his salary. The church has honored itself as much as its pastor in thus equipping him with a larger income to sustain a still better service in the years to come.

Warren—The three weeks meeting at the Central Christian church. J. E. Lynn, pastor and John L. Brandt, evangelist closed with a total of 86 added. Among the number was a Jew—a clothing merchant of the city, who in his youth was partially educated for a Rabbi.

Paulding—Closed a twenty days' meeting here last night with twenty-one additions, sixteen baptisms, five otherwise. C. M. Hughes sang for us the first two weeks.—Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Turmbull.

OKLAHOMA.

Shawnee—Our meeting with Fife and son came to a close last Sunday evening, there having been 85 accessions to the church. Thirty were by letter and statement, 43 by confession and 6 from other churches. This was a good meeting and could we have continued there no doubt would have been a larger ingathering. We are ready now, with our new building, for greater things. We have a great opportunity and I am sure will take advantage of it.—Frank L. Van Voorhis.

El Reno—Harold E. Monser, assisted by C. M. Bliss, recently closed a very successful effort at El Reno, Okla. This was the second meeting for Bro. Monser within two years. This is the home of Prof. Bliss, who has been the choir director for three years. Yet the chorus was always large and enthusiastic, while the attendance was uniformly encouraging. There were 59 additions; 40 of these were adults; 24 were by confession and baptism, 30 by statement and letter, 1 by restoration and 4 from other churches. The financial and intellectual ability of these additions could easily establish our plea in any place. The work at El Reno prospers and we are compelled to build.—O. L. Smith.

Nothing approaching this work has ever been attempted before. In a series of splendid pictures the great and impressive scenes in the Bible story are depicted, true in color, costume, landscape, and all details to the life, the country and the time. ¶ To make the men and women of the Bible actual, living characters to their pupils is one of the first duties of the Sunday-School teachers, and no better help can they find for this than in the Tissot pictures. ¶ The whole world acknowledges that J. James Tissot was the greatest artist that ever lived, so far as Biblical subjects are concerned.

Only the unparalled success in the higher-priced editions makes possible this phenomenally low offer now. ¶ These pictures have received the unqualified endorsement of the leading clergymen and Sunday-School teachers throughout the United States. ¶ Nothing could be more helpful, and interesting, and delightful, when one is reading the Bible, than such a graphic interpretation of sacred stories. ¶ In no other way can the Bible stories be made so real and actual to children. Should be in every home.

DR. DYE AT CARROLLTON.

Last Sunday was a great day in the Carrollton, Mo., church. Dr. Royal J. Dye thrilled the hearts of a large audience with the story of Christian Missions in Darkest Africa. It is a wonderful story, and it is related in a wonderful manner by a most wonderful man.

Dr. Dye came to us a stranger, but won the friendship and love of many earnest hearts during his brief visit. We are hoping to increase our offering for Foreign Missions, and we know that it will be much larger than it could have been without the visit of this consecrated messenger of the Cross.

WISCONSIN ITEMS.

Two of the charter members of the Grand Rapids church have fallen asleep since I came here last July: Thos. Rydings died Dec. 4th, and Mrs. M. E. Stevens, Feb. 18th. Both were good people and will be missed.

The southwest district of Wisconsin is to hold a convention at Richland Center, March 16-18, to re-organize in order that they may put an evangelist in that field. We hope to see every congregation represented by two or more delegates.

The Richland Center church reports 9 baptisms since Jan. 1st.

J. P. Wright, minister at Readstown, reports 9 baptisms at a country place called Pleasant Ridge and the reviving of the organization there.

Julius Stone is soon to locate at La-Crosse under the direction of the A. C. M. S. to take up the Scandinavian work there.

Rib Lake just closed a short meeting resulting in 2 confessions. Footville is now in a meeting, and Milwaukee begins March 1st.

SECOND CHRISTIAN CHURCH, VINCENNES, IND.

Six years ago the writer held a tent meeting in the northern part of the city of Vincennes. The meeting resulted in 78 accessions to the church. In the year that followed a chapel was built in which services were held from time to time. A Sunday School was organized and maintained for five years. A prayer meeting was also held in the church every Thursday evening. Every year a short meeting was held in the chapel. All this time, however, there was no independent church organization. Last fall it was decided to organize a separate church. Some fifty names were secured for char-

Important Books

We are the publishers of some of the best known works pertaining to the Disciples' Plea for a united church. These important books — important in more ways than one—should be read and owned by every member of the household of faith.

The Plea of the Disciples of Christ, by W. T. Moore. Small 16mo., cloth, 140 pages, net postpaid, thirty-five cents, won immediate success.

George Hamilton Combs, pastor of the Independence Boulevard Christian Church, Kansas City, Mo., one of the great churches of the brotherhood, writes.

"I cannot thank Dr. W. T. Moore enough for having written his little book on "Our Plea." It is more than a statement; it is a philosophy. Irenic, catholic, steel-tone, it is just the handbook I shall like to put into the hands of the thinking man on the outside. In all of his useful and honored life Mr. Moore has rendered no greater service to a great cause."

Historical Documents Advocating Christian Union, collated and edited by Charles A. Young. 12mo, cloth, 364 pages, illustrated, postpaid $1.00, is an important contribution to contemporary religious literature. It presents the living principles of the church in convenient form.

Z. T. Sweeney, Columbus, Indiana, a preacher of national reputation, writes:

"I congratulate you on the happy thought of collecting and editing these documents. They ought to be in the home of every Disciple of Christ in the Land, and I believe they should have a large and increasing sale in years to come."

Basic Truths of the Christian Faith, by Herbert L. Willett, author of The Ruling Quality, Teaching of the Books, Prophets of Israel, etc., etc. Post 8vo., cloth, 127 pages. Front cover stamped in gold, gilt top, illustrated, 75 cents, paper 25 cents.

A powerful and masterful presentation of the great truths for the attainment of the life of the spirit. Written in a charming and scholarly style. It holds the reader's fascinated attention so closely that it is a disappointment if the book has to be laid aside before it is finished.

J. E. Chase writes:

"It is the voice of a soul in touch with the Divine life, and breathes throughout its pages the high ideals and noblest conception of truer life, possible only to him who has tarried prayerfully, studiously at the feet of the world's greatest teacher."

Our Plea for Union and the Present Crisis, by Herbert L. Willett, author of the Life and Teachings of Jesus, etc., etc. 12mo., cloth, 140 pages, gold stamped, postpaid 50 cents.

Written in the belief that the Disciples of Christ are passing through an important, and in many respects, transitional period.

The author says:

"It is with the hope that * * * present forces and opportunities may be wisely estimated by us; that doors now open may be entered; that hopes only partially realized may come to fruition that these chapters are given their present form."

Early Relations and Separation of Baptists and Disciples, by Errett Gates. 8vo. cloth, gold side and back stamp, $1.00. A limited number in paper binding will be mailed postpaid for 25 cents until stock is sold out.

We owe a debt of gratitude to the writer of this book, and could only wish that it might be read not only by our people all over the land, but scattered among the Baptists. It is a most meritorious and splendid contribution to our literature.—THE CHRISTIAN WORKER, PITTSBURG, Pa.

The dominant personality of Alexander Campbell is so brought out as to give to what might be regarded as the dry details of ecclesiastical history and controversy almost the interest of a story. A valuable contribution to the history of the American churches.—THE CONGREGATIONALIST, BOSTON, Mass.

ter members. After our meeting was over in the First church the writer began a meeting with this Second church. The meeting ran for a little over two weeks. The preaching was done on week night evenings. The results of the meeting was most excellent. There were 17 additions. They were all adults, but two. At the conclusion of the meeting the church called Brother C. P. Cauble to the pastorate. He will give two Sundays every month to the church. The church has a neat house of worship, but it will soon have to enlarge its space to accommodate the increased audiences. The church will be known as the Second Christian church. Thus a new church comes into existence with C. P. Cauble as its first regular pastor. The church has a very bright future before it.

Large Problem.

The king of the Lilliputians was wondering what he would do with Lemuel Gulliver.

"I've never had the problem of the unemployed looming up before me in such gigantic shape as that," he said. "I don't know of anything useful he can do, and he eats like a regiment of hired men."

Seeing no other way out of the difficulty, he wisely left the solution of it to Dean Swift, the clergy being then, as now, the advisers of kings and the friends of the homeless and hungry.

The Messiah: A Study in the Gospel of the Kingdom. David McConaughy, Jr. 12mo., cloth, net $1.00.

In two parts. I. Aiming to trace the outlines of the peerless portrait of the Messiah as depicted by Matthew. II. A series of devotional meditations adapted for the "quiet hour."

Things That Are Supreme. James G. K. McClure, D. D. College Sermons. 16mo, cloth, net 75c.

Eight sermons by the popular president of McCormick Theological Seminary. These sermons were recently preached to the students at Harvard, Yale, Cornell, Princeton, Illinois, Wisconsin and Chicago.

Christianity's Storm Centre. Charles Stelzle. A Study of the Modern City. 16 mo, cloth, net $1.00. Mt. Stelzle believes that if the Church can be aroused to face the problem, investigate the conditions and alter its own methods it will win the fight for uniting the church and the laboring masses. He is hopeful with the well founded optimism of the man who knows from experience both sides of his question.

The Eternal in Man. James I. Vance, D. D. Cloth, net $1.00. Dr. Vance has the rare gift of stimulating and arousing both head and heart. These chapters dust off the commonplace of human life and its experiences and show the eternal part of us that lies underneath.

The Supreme Conquest. W. L. Watkinson, D. D. Net $1.00. To the list of great preachers who have made the British pulpit famous, the name of William L. Watkins has long since been added. His books are eagerly sought by up-to-date ministers everywhere, and are bought with equal appreciation by the general public.

God's Message to the Human Soul. John Watson, D. D., (Ian Maclaren). The Cole Lectures for 1907. Cloth, net $1.25. A peculiar and sad interest attaches The Cole Lectures for 1907. They were delivered, the author having suddenly passed away during his visit to this country, and within a few days of the date of the appointment that brought him to America. Fortunately Dr. Watson had put these lectures into manuscript form; they are therefore preserved for the wider circle of appreciative readers.

The Modern Sunday School in Principle and Practice. Henry F. Cope. Cloth, net $1.00. This volume by the General Secretary of the Religious Education Association constitutes an invaluable guide for the management of the Sunday School under modern conditions. He presents the results of all the newest experiments both with primary, adolescent and adult grades.

China and America Today. Arthur H. Smith, D. D. Cloth, net $1.25. Dr. Smith has been for 35 years a missionary to China. In this capacity he has learned much of China, which in another relation might be denied him. Being a statesman by instinct and genius, he has taken a broad survey of conditions and opportunities, and here forcibly presents his criticisms of America's strength and weakness abroad, especially in China.

Palestine Through the Eyes of a Native. Gamahliel Wad-El-Ward. Illustrated, cloth, net $1.00. The author, a native of Palestine, has been heard and appreciated in many parts of this country in his popular lectures upon the land in which so large a part of his life was spent. His interpretations of many obscure scriptural passages by means of native manners and customs and traditions is particularly helpful and informing.

The Continent of Opportunity: South America. Francis E. Clark, D. D. Profusely illustrated, net $1.50. Dr. Clark writes a thorough-going tour of examination, covering practically every centre of importance in South American continent. Panama, Chile, Ecuador, Peru, Argentine, Brazil, Paraguay and Uruguay. Dr. Clark's prime object has been to collect information of every sort that will help to understand the problems facing Christian Civilization in our sister Continent.

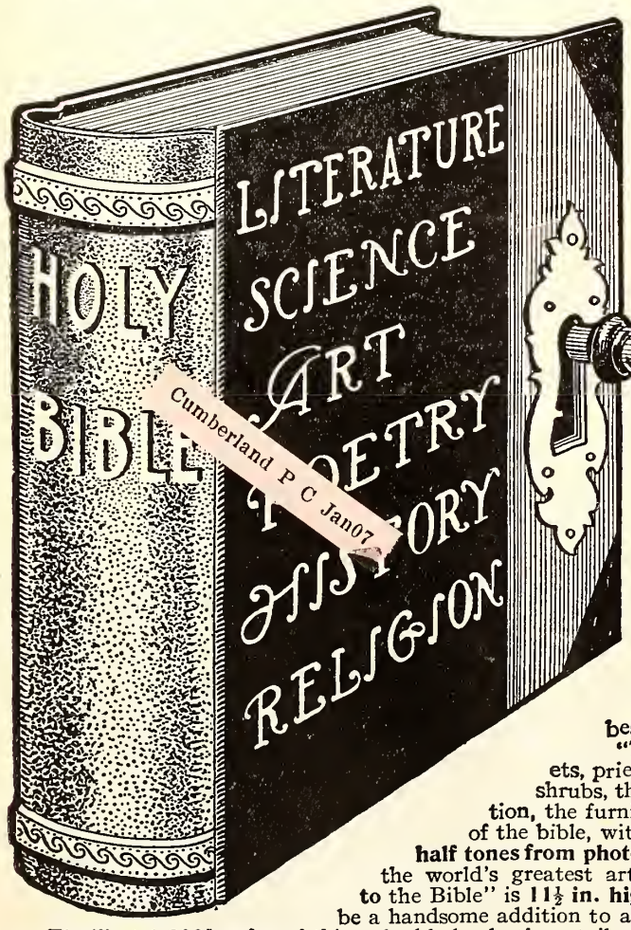
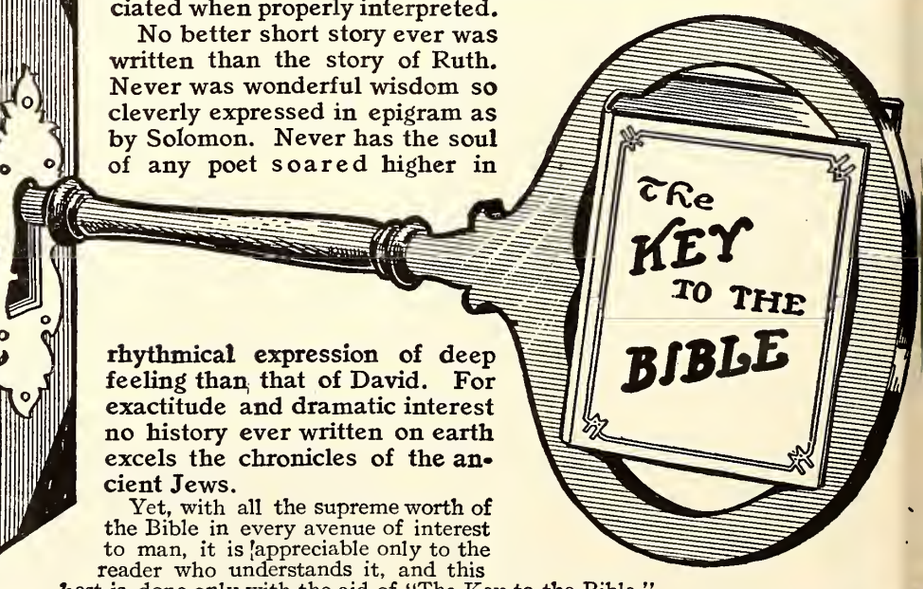
The Greatest Book About the Greatest Book.



A THOUSAND times you have read that the Bible is an education in itself; this statement has been a favorite of great men for ages. No careful student ever fails in the conviction of its truth. Literature, Science, History, Poetry, Art and Religion, all are found in it at their most supreme heights, yet only to be appreciated when properly interpreted.

No better short story ever was written than the story of Ruth. Never was wonderful wisdom so cleverly expressed in epigram as by Solomon. Never has the soul of any poet soared higher in rhythmical expression of deep feeling than that of David. For exactitude and dramatic interest no history ever written on earth excels the chronicles of the ancient Jews.



Yet, with all the supreme worth of the Bible in every avenue of interest to man, it is appreciable only to the reader who understands it, and this best is done only with the aid of "The Key to the Bible."

"The Key to the Bible" is an encyclopedia of the lessons, places, prophets, priests, apostles, disciples, birds, beasts and reptiles, the trees, plants and shrubs, the dress and customs, etc., peoples, houses and other places of habitation, the furniture, ornaments, statuary, the towns, rivers, mountains and lands of the bible, with 16 full page colored pictures from photographs, 100 full page half tones from photographs and reproductions of the greatest biblical paintings by the world's greatest artists and over 400 well drawn text illustrations. "The Key to the Bible" is 11½ in. high, 8 in. wide and 2½ in. thick, weighing 5 pounds. It will be a handsome addition to any library.

The first 1,000 copies of this valuable book, the retail price of which is $5.00, has been set aside for a preliminary sale. We have made arrangements with the publisher for a limited number of copies, and can offer them at the Preliminary sale price of $3, prepaid to any ad. After 1,000 copies are disposed of by the publishers the price will be $5.

I enclose $3.00 for one copy of "The Key to the Bible" to be sent prepaid.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

Master or Servant?

By Ellen Hamlin Butler

WHEN first I felt the heavy hand of Pain
I called him "Master" in my craven fear.
He bore me from the world of light and cheer
Into his prison-house. With scourge and chain
He made my flesh a curse, my life a bane,
Till in my wretchedness the Lord drew near,
Saying, "Why art thou lying, desperate, here?
Soul, dost thou bear my image all in vain"?
Then—suddenly endued with might—I cried,
"O Pain, I am thy master"! Since that hour
He ministers to me, increasing trust,
Confidence in things which shall abide,
And love's own patience which shall bring me power
To lift my stricken brother from the dust.

EDITORIAL

The Union of all Christians upon the Apostolic Faith, Spirit and Service.

THE PROGRESS OF UNION.

So rapid of late has been the course of events leading in the direction of a union of the Baptists and Disciples that it is difficult to keep pace with it. One incident treads upon another's heels. The news from northwestern Canada is of the most cheering character. There the forecasts made at Norfolk by Dr. Stackhouse of the Baptist Missionary Board and our own evangelists who had wrought in that field have been more than brought to fruition. The organization of a union church in which Baptists and Disciples unite because they see it is futile to maintain separate congregations, is a profoundly gratifying event. The wisdom and discretion of those intrusted with the denominational interests on both sides, Secretary W. J. Wright for the Disciples and Dr. Stackhouse for the Baptists, has been of a high order, and we believe that none but the most inveterate and incorrigible sectarians among either the Baptists or Disciples could censure the efforts or condemn their outcome. We hope to learn that this policy of union is being followed up throughout the great northwest, and that the forces of the two immersionist bodies are joining not merely to propagate that one idea but to carry forward the common work of evangelization and to bring nearer realization universal Christian union.

If the temper of the Baptist brotherhood is to be estimated by a reading of the thermometer of the recent Baptist Congress in Baltimore the signs of promise are very hopeful. For no words of our own have ever been more hearty and emphatic in favor of the union of the two bodies than those which were uttered in the Oriole City. It is of course true that a church congress is likely to express the most advanced views in any denomination. It is in such gatherings that the men who do things and have the prophetic as well as practical spirit meet and speak. This had been true of our own congresses and of those of other people, and the Baptists are no exception to the rule. We are aware that there are many Baptists who are far from advocating any union with the Disciples, just as there are not a few Disciples who would insist that the only union possible on the part of the Disciples is that of absorption of Baptists and all others. But we believe this belated and impossible view is steadily waning, and that the promise is fair that the two bodies will soon see eye to eye and unite hand in hand.

This faith is quickened by the reports which reach us from a number of localities where the Baptists and Disciples are conferring regarding union, and are inquiring as to the best means of reaching satisfactory agreements on the questions which at first glance would appear to be divisive. It is remarkable to how small a group these questions reduce themselves and how rarely they include those matters which once were favorite grounds of controversy and hostility. For the most part the desirability of union is conceded by both. Doctrinal questions seem to play almost no part in the discussion. It is usually over matters of a business character that concessions have to be made, the question of church property, a mutually satisfactory arrangement regarding the frequency of observing the Lord's Supper, and the question of names.

We have been greatly interested to see how readily even this last apparently difficult matter, the one of name, yields to the spirit of brotherly good will. This is helped on by the very admirable Baptist custom of naming their churches by biblical titles, such as Calvary, Immanuel, Bethlehem, Bethany, Carmel, etc. Where such a name has become familiar in the community as a part of the title of a Baptist church it seems an excellent idea to retain it and then add either "Union Church" or "Christian Church" or "Church of Christ" or merely the word "Church." If our Baptist friends insist that the terms "Christian" and "Church of Christ" are as truly denominational words with us as the word "Baptist" with them, then we ought to be willing at once to concede to them their elimination from the title of the united church. Indeed, as we have often pointed out, the word "church" itself is a sufficient guarantee that the organization is a Christian congregation, for none but Christians could ever unite to form a church.

A most interesting development of the spirit of unity has become manifest in this city, where after mutual conference the ministerial associations of Baptists and Disciples have arranged for united sessions once a month. It is understood on both sides that this is but a beginning of more cordial relations, and there is fair hope that within a year the two bodies may become so far united that they may cease to exist as separate groups. Such action in a city like Chicago, where the Baptists have a ministerial association of more than sixty members and the Disciples about a third of this number, cannot fail to react in a most helpful way upon the relations of the two denominations in local church work. The Baptists have some churches which because of location or for other reasons are struggling with the problem of existence. In such communities the two bodies ought to be one. Continued separation spells not only weakness but loss of resources through rivalry. It is amazing how the problem of the local church takes on wider proportions when the prospect of co-operation opens before it.

We are glad to see in the latest number of the Baptist "Watchman" of Boston an admirable article on "Baptists and Disciples" by Gilbert N. Harney in which he attempts in a judicious and fraternal spirit to interpret to the Baptists the present attitude and ideals of the Disciples of Christ. We believe such articles in other Baptist journals, and similar statements from Baptist sources in our own press, would do much to hasten the realization of union between the two bodies. We do not look for formal action of a denominational character. We shall welcome the report of the committees chosen by Baptists and Disciples to study the problem of a more intimate union, but the true solution will be found in the local fields where the waste of the present situation is apparent and the arguments for unity are many and emphatic.

The Christian Century hopes to publish in the near future some articles of the character suggested above from Baptist sources, and also to furnish news of Baptist enterprises which are of interest to the Disciples. We wish we might chronicle the frequent exchange of pulpits between the Baptists and Disciples as another step in the right direction. If our churches continue to feel the need of a prepared and adequate ministry, and facts to which we alluded last week seem to have this significance, it may be that some of our congregations will have to turn to the Baptists to supply them with pastors. If such choices were wisely made we should heartily favor the plan. We are not sure that the Baptists have any ministers to spare, but certainly the Disciples are in need of a much larger supply and could not go to a better source for the needed assistance.

We do not wish to imply that our interest in the union of the Baptists and Disciples supercedes or obscures our interest in the much larger problem of the reunion of protestantism as a step towards the reunion of Christendom. We should hail any efforts made in the direction of uniting, for example, with the Congregationalists, upon a common platform approved by churches of both bodies, and we look to see this time arrive. But meanwhile, there is an immanent and pressing duty in the direction of closer relations with immersionists such as the Baptists, from whom we differ at the higher levels of both denominations by only a hair's breadth. We would not interpret such an act as widening the breach between ourselves and any other Christian body, nor as an act intended to notify the non-immersionist denominations that the united Baptists and Disciples are preparing for a fresh warfare over the interpretation of baptism. We only insist that in our advocacy of Christian union we must be practical enough to take some decided steps toward its realization, and that on the way to that goal it is our duty to join forces with the first Christians we meet, and we believe that the Disciples generally will concede that these are the Baptists.

God educates men by casting them on their own resources.—Newell Dwight Hillis.

The Preacher's Literary Work—II

Edgar D. Jones

In a cultivation of an attractive literary style, the preacher should not neglect the poets. Poetry and religion are close akin. As Edwin Markham puts it "Theology in its origin, descended as a song and the beginning of revealed religion came as a poetic vision of the creature man." Imagination, that noble quality that transfigured Beecher and put Spurgeon on his pulpit throne, is developed by a study of the poets. The preacher has great need of vision power and the poets see sometimes, not as in a mirror, darkly, but almost face to face. The occasional use of quotable verse is to be highly commended.

The use of poetical quotation in the religious oration is very old. In the farewell speeches attributed to Moses and chronicled in Deuteronomy are perhaps early examples of such. Our Lord's use in his public utterance of the psalms and rapt passages from the prophets is worthy of note. Doubtless on the Day of Pentecost, the Apostle Peter had no thought of rhetorical aid, when he quoted from the Hebrew book of poetry, but in so doing, he received it nevertheless. In the fragment preserved for us in Acts 17 of Paul's great speech in Athens, we have a single line quoted from the poet Arotus, which not only contributes to the strength of that sermon but shows also the consummate skill of Paul as an orator.

Sometime ago, I listened to an excellent sermon on "God's Love for Man." In one part of his discourse, the preacher instanced the wonderful beauties and resources of nature as provided by God for man's sustenance and pleasure. At considerable length he dwelt on the glories of meadow, grove and stream, the earth and every common sight, which he affirmed are but an expression of God's love for mankind. I enjoyed the sermon, but as I listened to this division of it, fell to thinking the message would have been stronger and more attractive, if just here the preacher had omitted his over elaborate comment and simply quoted Pope's splendid lines:

"Ask for what end the heavenly bodies shine,
Earth for whose use? Pride answers, "'Tis for mine."
For me kind nature wakes her genial power,
Suckles each herb and spreads out every flower,
Annual for me, the grape, the rose renew,
The juice nectareous and the balmy dew,
For me the mine a thousand treasures brings,
For me, health gushes from a thousand springs,
Seas roll to waft me, suns to light me rise,
My footstool earth, my canopy the skies."

What this quotation could have done in contributing strength and beauty to the sermon referred to, similar passages of virile verse can do for other sermons. Indeed, there is not another single rhetorical aid to the sermon more potent than this one, when used with discernment and in proper proportion.

Having called attention to the value of a literary style and having noted some helps to its cultivation, I come now to the third and last division of my paper: "The Preacher as a Maker of Literature Himself." Not of course, as a professional but one who along with pulpit and pastoral duties takes time to write, "thoughts that breathe and words that burn," a preacher still but preaching now with tongue and pen alike and thus multiplying his power and influence for good. Carefully written articles for the religious press are always at a premium. The columns of the best journals of the land are open to the writer with a message and a style. People may not be exactly hungering to be fed on richly devotional articles and things helpful to faith, but there is a very obvious need that such feasts be placed before them arranged ever appetizingly; Such writing does not hinder the minister in the performance of his duties but promotes fluency and perspicuity to his pulpit style. In some respects the most conspicious and certainly the most beloved of well known American ministers is dear old Doctor Theodore L. Cuyler, so long pastor of the LaFayette Avenue Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn, N. Y. Dr. Cuyler began while yet a student in college to contributing to the public press. More than six hundred articles of his appeared in the New York "Independent." Above eighteen hundred found their way into the pages of the New York "Evangelist." In Dr. Cuyler's "Recollections of a Long Life," he devotes a chapter to "Authorship" from which I take this interesting paragraph. "I once gave to my friend, Mr. Arthur B. Cook, the eminent stenographer, some statistics of the number of my articles and the various journals in which they had appeared in this and other countries; he made an estimate of the extent of their publication and then said to me, 'It would be within bounds to say that your four thousand articles have been printed in at least two hundred million copies.' The production of these articles involved no small amount of labor, but has brought its own reward. To enter a multitude of homes week after week, to converse with the inmates about many of the most vital questions in morals and religion, to speak words of guidance to the perplexed, of comfort to the troubled, and of exhortation to the saints and to the sinful—all these involve a solemn responsibility, that this life work with the pen has not been without fruit. I gratefully acknowledge when a group of railway employes, at a station in England, gathered around me to tender their thanks for spiritual help afforded them by my articles, I felt repaid for hours of extra labor spent in preaching through the press." How much better for the preacher to spend some of his extra time in such writing than in dissipating it over a half dozen things not one of them so well worth while.

Consider if you please the good our own F. D. Powers has done with his pen, which is that of a ready writer. Think of the rich results that follow whenever A. McLean has set himself to this same task. Just now F. D. Power in the "Christian Evangelist," S. S. Lapin in the "Christian Standard" and George A. Campbell in the "Christian Century" are producing departments that are of a distinctly fine flavor and creditable in every way to the highest ideals of religious journalism.

The inquiry, "Who reads a Disciple book?" is scarcely fair. People do read books written by Disciples but the number of such books that are widely read beyond the borders of our brotherhood is pitifully small.

Our past literature is unique. Particularly noteworthy is it when the conditions under which the authors wrote is recalled. They wrote mid the noise of battle and smoke of controversy. When they took up the pen, they kept the sword of the spirit unsheathed for action. Like war correspondents, they took advantage of a lull in the firing to make notes. Yet it was this period that witnessed Mr. Campbell's monumental literary labors consisting of fifty-two published volumes besides hundreds of newspaper and magazine articles.

Our present literature is encouraging. The devotional aspect in it is looming large. There is not now a crying need for a work on "Baptism—Action, Subject and Design." Unless like Aylesworth the author goes that far and farther, that deep and deeper and thereby uplifts the spiritual meaning. What we need now is a devotional literature sufficient in bulk and virility to match the literary legacy of controversy and polemics left us by the Campbell's and their compeers. "The Christ in Modern Literature" by George H. Combs, is an earnest of what we may expect from our preachers as essayists; Harold Bell Wright's "That Printer of Udell's" as fictionists and F. D. Power's "Life of Pendleton" as biographers.

But it is to our future literature that we look with hope and anticipation for writers whose productions will rank with those of Dr. Theodore Cuyler and Charles Frederick Goss of the Presbyterians, Charles M. Sheldon, of the Congregationalists, A. C. Dixon, of the Baptists, or Bishop Vincent, of the Methodists, and scores of others whose books are eagerly read and widely known.

It is high time, however, to summarize the contents of this paper and bring it to a close. A literary style that is attractive and persuasive is an invaluable asset for every preacher to have. He should be willing to pay the price of attaining unto it.

It is acquired, however, only by faithful reading of the great and time tested books and by painstaking and frequent writing on the part of the minister. Even then, it is not always acquired, but never without such labor.

Writing for the religious press and making books is like the quality of mercy, twice blest. It blesses the writer and the one who reads that which is written.

It may not be out of place in concluding to "tell you that which you yourselves do know," viz.: the great source of nearly all that is reckoned in literature as worth while is the Bible. Peculiarly, it must always be the preacher's text book. Henry Ward Beecher in his early ministry read such virile authors as Robert South, Barrow, Butler and Edwards, but in referring once to the influences of his early career, that shaped his later one, he said:

"I owe more to Acts of the Apostles than to all other books put together. I was sent into the wilderness of Indiana to preach among the poor and ignorant, and I lived in my saddle. My library was my saddle bags. I went from camp meeting to camp meeting and from log hut to log hut. I took my New Testament and from it I got that which has been the very secret of my success that I have had in the Christian ministry."

Verily, "Every scripture is inspired of

The Madonna in Art

Peter Ainslie

Close to the very highest achievement in art are some of the paintings of Mary and the infant Jesus. These pictures first appeared in the fifth century and they came to be called the Madonna and the Child, madonna being an Italian word equivalent to madam. In the mediaeval period, it became one of the most popular subjects with painters, due to Mary becoming the object of worship and being regarded as a symbol of glorified womanhood and motherhood.

The worship of the Madonna was established by the Council of Ephesus in 431, when Nestorius was condemned for denying that Mary was the mother of God, the Council of Nicaea in 325 having decided that Christ was the same with the Father and therefore very God. Forthwith the anti-scriptural and post-apostolic doctrine of Mary worship, which later the Protestants called Mariolatry, spread rapidly and on the complete establishment of the Roman Catholic Church, it increased in its hold on that body of believers with every succeeding century until in the fourteenth century the doctrine of the Immaculate Conception was proclaimed by Duns Scotus and, on December 8, 1854, Pope Pius IX, on the advice of six hundred bishops, only four dissenting, announced it as the doctrine of the Roman Catholic Church in these words: "That the most blessed Virgin Mary, in the first moment of conception, by the special grace and privilege of Almighty God, in virtue of the merits of Christ, was preserved immaculate from all stain of original sin." Beginning in the fifth century, it took nearly fifteen hundred years to establish this doctrine in the Roman Catholic Church, it being strongly opposed by such men as Bernard of Clairvaux, Anselm, Aquinas and others of equal fame and piety.

Candles and incense were burned before the picture of the Madonna and she was the theme for sermons, while poets and artists vied with each other in giving her honor in verse and on canvas. Preachers influenced both the poets and the artists, so that theological dogmas were more prominent in art than the simple beauty of nature, which art sets itself to reproduce. It was an age of dense superstition. It was said that some of the pictures of the Madonna were painted by angels, some artists claimed that their pictures were taken from original paintings of the Madonna by Luke, the author of the third Gospel, and her name was used to conjure in the practicing of all kinds of magical charms. Organizations were formed to give her special honor and sometimes more reverence was given to Mary than to Christ, some of the best paintings of Mary, by Murillo especially, omitting the Child entirely, although the worship accorded her was not like that to Him, in that her power was dependent upon the relationship of motherhood, which she bore to Him.

The Byzantine artists were the first to make the Madonna a subject for their genius and later it passed from Constantinople to Rome. For eight hundred years, or until the thirteenth century, the favorite style was the simple portrait of half-length with the mother holding the Child and I hope that I am not assuming the role of an art critic when I say this reached its highest development under the brush of Courtois, of the seventeenth century and the Bohemian painter Gabriel Max of the nineteenth century.

Following the thirteenth century or under the influence of the Italian renaissance, artists painted the Madonna enthroned, implying exalted motherhood, beginning especially with Cimabue, who represented her as sitting in an armed chair, overlaid with gold, and holding the Child on her lap. Sometimes these pictures were surrounded by angels, cherubs and saints. It has been said that this style did not appeal to Raphael, but his picture, with this conception of the Madonna, sold in 1885 to the English Government for $360,000. One of the most famous of these pictures was painted by Bellini, when he had passed eighty years of age.

The crowning of the Madonna had its origin in the North, she being first so painted by German and Belgian artists, although the crowned Madonna in mosaics had been worked out several centuries before.

Giving to the Madonna a throne and a crown centuries before, opened the way to glorifying her by giving her a place in the sky, standing or sitting upon the clouds, enveloping the whole figure in an aureola and later only a nimbus covered the head. All the painters took up their brushes at this task. One of Fra Angelico's greatest paintings marked the first era in this style of the Madonna, whom he represented standing at full length in a rob of black with a star upon her head, while she held the Child close to her bosom, both her head and His being crowned with nimbuses and the whole background in golden light, but this style of art reached its climax under the skill of Raphael in his "Sistine Madonna," in which it appears that one is looking through an open window into the heavens and, in the distance is the Madonna on the clouds, holding the Child in her arms, with Sixtus on one side and Barbara on the other, while two cherubs at the bottom of the picture are looking up. This was painted about 1518 and it is now in the Dresden Gallery.

The influence of the Reformation changed the entire field of Christian art and the pictures of the Madonna henceforth were more true to nature. The open Bible gave the simplicity of the holy family and pastoral Madonnas became numerous. Perhaps the best known are three great paintings of Raphael: The Beautiful Gardener, in the Louvre, Paris, where the Child is looking up to His mother; the Madonna in the Meadow, in the Belvedere, Vienna, where the Child is interested in the cross which John has given Him; and the Madonna of the Goldfinch, in the Uffizi, Florence, where the Child is thoughtfully stroking the goldfinch. Leonardo da Vinci has left us a great picture entitled "The Madonna and the Rocks," showing a cavern in the background and a river in the distance, while the Madonna, crowned with waving hair, sits peacefully with the Child at her feet and John the Baptist a little to the left holding the cross.

From the pastoral scenes, the German artists led the way to the Madonna in the home, beginning the latter part of the fifteenth century and receiving great impetus from the open Bible, which was the work of the Reformation. Gorgeous backgrounds and costly clothing were abandoned and the scenes of poverty characterized the pictures, which were more true to the real conditions. Among the first of these artists was Schongauer, who painted the Madonna seated with the Child in her arms and holding in her hands a bunch of grapes, while Joseph is in the background with a bundle of hay feeding the cattle.

The whole history of Christian art, particularly that referring to the Madonna, furnishes a commentary on the morals of the Christian dispensation. It is a fact that ornamentation has always indicated degeneration. This was so in architecture, as is seen in the simplicity of the Doric column, which was produced during the highest age of Grecian morals, and which was succeeded by the more elaborate Ionic and that by the most elaborate Corinthian column, when Grecian degeneration was at its lowest. This principle was so in painting. The simplicity of the early centuries was expressed in the half-length pictures of the Madonna without ornamentation. The enthroned and glorified Madonnas came naturally with the degeneration of the mediaeval period. With the Reformation, Christian art begun to swing back to its early simplicity with all the skill that it had accumulated through the centuries of its achievements. Raphael, who painted all styles of the Madonna, surpassed even himself when his accomplished brush gave its lines and final touches to the most natural conceptions of Mary and the infant Jesus, as was so with the other great masters.

Costly pictures do not make homes, but sometimes the simplest and most inexpensive pictures, such as the bust pictures in half-tone of the Madonna, without nimbuses upon the head of either Mary or Jesus, will furnish a lesson in love and gentleness that will linger for generations.

The position of the Child in the pictures of the Madonna furnishes an interesting study. At first the Madonna was presenting Him to the beholder and His hands are in the act of benediction, as is illustrated by Bellini, Botticelli and others. Later the Madonna was pictured as giving Him adoration, as though to show that Mary was the first worshiper of Christ, as is seen in the pictures by Lippi, Francia and others. This position grew out of a disposition to aid the worshipers in prayer; but, with the influence of the Reformation, the natural was substituted for the artificial. Correggio painted the Madonna with her arms around the Child and His arms playfully around her neck. With the exception of having too elegantly dressed the Madonna, Titian's painting must be considered among the best. The Child is lying in her lap with one hand lifted and she is looking down upon Him with her left hand upon her breast. Although Bodenhausen puts the Madonna upon the clouds, and to that extent departs from the more natural position, yet his painting in popularity will rarely be excelled. The young mother, with flowing hair, holds the Child to her bosom and it bears such a touch of human love as cannot be told in words. Raphael and others illustrated this natural love of the mother and the Child and so combined the Scriptures and nature in the highest art.

All the great painters with their splendid skill have swept through most of these styles, and some of them have given a number of pictures of all the styles, until there is no end to the number of Madonnas. There was Raphael and Bartolommeo, with a friendship like that of David and Jonathan and there was Fra Angelico, Van Eyck, Leonardo da Vinci, Bellini, Correggio, Holbein, Durer, Titian, Botticelli, Perugino, Lippi, Luini, Dolci, Murillo and Rembrandt, who perhaps excelled in being more true to the Scriptures, while Michael Angelo, Luca and Andrea were working the same subject in marble—these and hosts of others with brush and chisel have left us their thoughts on canvas and in stone as clearly as Shakespeare, Milton, Dante and Tennyson have left their thoughts in verse. Baltimore, Md.

THEY ARE ONE.

The Baptists and Disciples in Portage La Prairie, Manitoba, Canada, have united, the union having been consummated, the new organization effected, officers elected and installed on Sunday, Jan. 12, 1908.

W. J. Wright and Rev. W. T. Stackhouse, Supt. of Baptist Missions, were active in the work of union, which began with evangelistic meetings for the congregations with view of uniting them.

The two congregations had come to see that they were practically one in faith and practice, and that neither had to surrender conscience or scripture in order to unite. The Baptists under the splendid leadership of their pastor, Rev. M. A. MacLean and the Baptist missionary leaders of Western Canada headed by the imperial Dr. Stackhouse, were perfectly willing to surrender the name "Baptist" as applied both to individuals and congregation.

The Disciples gave up their beautiful, new house of worship. It was worth as much as the Baptist property but not quite so large or so well located. This sacrifice on their part appeared necessary in order to a real sympathetic, loving union.

The Baptist pastor became pastor of the united congregation. No one sacrificed in order to unite on that point, for the people were of one heart, one soul, regarding him, the able, eloquent, consecrated shepherd of souls.

Without a dissenting voice it was agreed that the Baptist property should be the future home of the congregation. The name "Baptist Church" in the deed was to be changed to "Church of Christ;" the same change of name to be made on the big granite block which had upon it the words "The Baptist Church." On the church bulletin board the name for the present is to appear as "Church of Christ (Baptist and Disciples)," it being agreed that the words in parenthesis shall shortly disappear, permitting only the catholic name which is above all others for the church to remain.

Thus was constituted one of the strongest congregations in Western Canada. It has numbers, culture, ability and consecrated wealth. Both former congregations were self-supporting, and had splendid properties and gave largely to missions.

The union will save, let us say $2,000 per year. This, as well as the price of the church which is to be sold, will be put into mission work in that vast Northwest.

The union movement between Baptists and Disciples in Western Canada is but a few months old, but already congregations have united in about ten places, each being known as a Church of Christ (Baptists and Disciples). The prayers and labors of both peoples are for speedy and complete union. The understanding between them is perfect. No more rival congregations are being organized by them in the new towns, but union churches are being organized wherever both peoples are represented.

Too long has the King's treasure been wasted in sinful rivalry; too long the hosts of dark prevailed while the hosts of light contended among themselves; too long the Church pulled apart while the world, the flesh and the devil pulled together; too long has one been content to chase a thousand whereas TWO COULD PUT TO FLIGHT TEN THOUSAND; too long has the world awaited "That Light whose dawning maketh all things new," the Light intended to "Lighten every man coming into the world." A STIRRING LETTER FROM BOLENGI, AFRICA.

There were forty-eight baptized the 5th of January, 1908. It was a happy day here at Bolengi. The baptisms were in the morning at 8:30 so as to give all the privilege of partaking of the Lord's Supper at the regular service. We were on the heights all during the day. Then following the Sunday came the going out of the evangelists and teachers. This time there were forty-three but three of these went out without the pay of the church. This makes forty sent out in the employ of the church. The future is bright in spite of the hindrances in our way placed there by the State. And by the way, we here at Bolengi have never heard a word as to the outcome of, or anything concerning Dr. Dye's visit to Brussels in the interest of the new mission site at Longa. If this can not be obtained, we shall have to adopt the plan of using this as a base and reach the country by itineration. Mr. Hensey and Dr. Widdowson are starting to-morrow on a trip up the Bosira river to be gone about three weeks. They are going to points where we have never been before. All are well here, though last week I had my third fever since coming out. Too much work and too little sleep seem to be the cause.

PREACHERS' LITERARY WORK.

God and profitable for teaching, for reproof, for correction, for instruction, which is in righteousness that the man of God may be complete, furnished completely unto every good work."

Finally,—I have not as yet noted the most serious difficulty in the way of literary achievement on the part of the twentieth century preacher. I make it for special emphasis the last paragraph of this paper.

Time! Time! Time! Time! Time to think. Time to read. Time to digest what he reads. Time to write. But he who has the desire burning within his heart will like that choice spirit, either "find a way or make it."

LINCOLN CHURCHES.

Great things are being done by the Christian churches of Lincoln, Neb. Henry Louis Herod of Indianapolis has just concluded a very successful meeting with the colored church of this city. He preached a great series of sermons. The church was firmly established and a young colored man attending Cotner, is to be employed as minister. There is a fine outlook for this church.

While in the city Bro. Herod addressed the Y. M. C. A.'s Sunday afternoon meeting at the Oliver Theatre. There were 1,100 men present, and Bro. Herod's address was received with great appreciation and frequent enthusiastic applause. The subject of Bro. Herod's address was "The Gospel the Solution of the Race Problem." It was a masterful address and competent critics say it is the greatest address on that subject that Lincoln ever heard. In Bro. Herod the Christian church has one of the most brilliant colored men in America.

Chas. R. Scoville has again visited Lincoln. This time it was to dedicate the new church building of our people at Havelock, a suburb of Lincoln. We have a new $10,000 property there. Four thousand dollars was raised dedication day, this being $2,000 more than was asked for. The giving was simply phenomenal. Bro. Scoville is a master hand at dedications. In addition to the money raised Bro. Scoville gave the invitation for three evenings with a response of over fifty. The writer followed Bro. Scoville, conducting the meeting through the week and the meetings resulted in about 90 additions to the church. This gives us a church in Havelock with 250 members. The organization is only three years old. Bro. Wilkinson and his good wife are the workers in this field.

The other three churches of Lincoln are each planning a new building. The first church under the efficient leadership of H. H. Harmon has adopted plans for a $40,000 building and about half of that amount is already subscribed. Work on the building will begin at once.

The University church to which the writer ministers is working hard to build a handsome structure costing a similar amount, and several thousand dollars are already in sight.

The East Side church, of which Bro. Doward is pastor, is also launching the building project. They plan a $20,000 edifice and hope to break ground soon.

In addition to these undertakings the churches are not lagging in other things. The University church raised about $700 in cash and pledges on last Lord's Day for the support of Mrs. R. J. Dye in Africa. The First church is still a living link and more, and the offerings from the other churches are increasing beautifully.

We feel that God is with us and that we are being led by him into larger and larger things. H. O. Pritchard.

Twelve Weeks in the Fourth Gospel*

H. L. Willett

The quarter's lessons have occupied nine of the twenty-one chapters of the Gospel of John. The logical middle of the Gospel is not reached until the twelfth chapter, where Jesus turns from the unbelieving world of the Jews to the inner circle of the disciples for the purpose of strengthening and directing their faith. The entire Gospel is devoted to the story of the struggle between faith and unbelief in the people whom Jesus touched with his ministry. All other matters are subordinated to this purpose. The question of chronological succession of events is largely lost to sight in the development of this theme. Incidents are placed where they have a bearing upon this subject and not necessarily where they belong in the public life of the Lord. Other leading ideas of the Gospel, such as its interpretation of the inner life of Jesus and its revelation of his incarnate divinity, receive such consideration as each incident in its turn suggests. But essentially the Fourth Gospel is the narrative of the struggle between faith and unbelief.

The Word Made Flesh.

1. In the prologue the theme is stated in a passage of power and grandeur hardly equalled elsewhere in the Scripture. But the center of that passage is not any doctrine of the logos nor of the pre-existence of Jesus nor yet of his nature. It is the simple and majestic disclosure of the fact that the Word, the utterance of the life of God, became flesh and for a little while dwelt as in a tent among us, and now we wistfully look back to the time when he was here, full of grace and truth, manifesting himself so that we beheld his glory. But even more truly does the world possess Jesus to-day than in the days of his flesh, for the centuries have made him known to us as his diciples never knew him.

2. The first witness for Jesus in the development of faith in the world was the herald who announced his coming. John the Baptist made no claim for himself but only for the One who was to come. He sought not great things for himself but for the Lord, and pointed all his listeners to one who should not merely baptize them in water but in the Holy Spirit, which could alone make them true children of God. "He must increse, but I must decrease," was John's characteristic statement, one which points the way of that true nobility which is always humble and unselfish.

The First Friends of Jesus.

3. The development of belief in the hearts of those who met him was Jesus' first and continuous work. He needed to discover and train a company of disciples, and in their hearts the highest faith needed to become resident. Immediately upon his return from his temptation he took up this task, and its first results were found in the little company of a half-dozen disciples who went with him northward into Galilee. These men were not only attracted by Jesus' invitation, but in at least two instances they were brought to him by their companions, affording the greatest of lessons upon the power of personal influence.

4. The fourth lesson, while probably misplaced as to its order in the life of Christ, is essential to our knowledge of his manifestation of the divine purpose in the world. With a passion approaching violence Jesus drove from the temple the selfish dealers who were defiling its courts with their traffic, and thus forever condemned the use of the house of God for merely secular and unworthy purposes.

The Ruler and the Samaritan.

5. In the interview with the Jewish ruler Nicodemus, Jesus attempts to lift a faith which was sincere but too low into a genuine trust in himself. Nicodemus and his friends accepted Christ as a remarkable man, but were not prepared to go all the way in acknowledging his character and mission. Jesus pointed out the limitations of this faith, and expressed his astonishment that a teacher in Israel could not see the greater truth regarding the kingdom of God. That it was partially a successful effort is proved by the rulers' later interest in the life and work of the Lord, even though he did not become, so far as we know, a confessed disciple.

6. The story of the Samaritan woman is a similar effort on the part of Jesus to lift to a higher level a small desire. The woman requested the water of which Jesus spoke, but he could not give her the smaller blessing when the greater one waited for her acceptance. It is that greater blessing which includes all others that is his permanent and priceless gift.

Capernaum and Jerusalem.

7. In the seventh lesson a Jewish nobleman is blessed by the healing of his son, and though Jesus disliked to perform miracles to gratify curiosity, he gladly helped this father whose rank and wealth availed nothing in that hour of peril. Even such faith as was evoked by this act of kindness was a satisfaction to Jesus.

8. The lame man at the Pool of Bethesda furnished an opportunity to Jesus to show again his compassion which overran all bounds of time or place. Even the Sabbath day was not too holy for an act of mercy. The angry clamors of the Jews at this breach of Sabbatic law showed how they placed rules above character and made of the day of rest a master to be dreaded.

The Bread of Life.

9. The ninth study dealing with the five thousand at the Sea of Galilee has as its greatest lesson the proof that Jesus was training his disciples to understand the need of human sympathy and the fruitlessness of a ministry which did not involve help to one's fellowmen. In later years they must have looked back and understood better what he meant when he said, "Give ye them to eat."

10. The miracle of feeding the people was followed appropriately by the discourse in Capernaum upon the Bread of Life, in which Jesus reproved the unbelief of the Jews and showed that he was himself the True Bread, the object of the highest faith.

Faith, Unfaith and Cowardice.

11. The last lesson of the quarter is perhaps the finest of all the disclosures made in the Fourth Gospel regarding the different effects produced upon human life by the work of Jesus. The man to whom the Lord restored sight became his disciple without questioning and beyond all possibility of moving from this loyalty to Christ. His parents were only moved to cowardice by the danger of taking sides in the controversy; while the Jews were stiffened in their opposition to the Lord by the very act which had made the blind man whole. Faith, unfaith and cowardice have here their full expression.

It only remained for the evangelist to point out conclusively the outward effects of Jesus' ministry in the division between those who believed and those who rejected him. When that had been accomplished he turned to the story of the inner circle, and the closing chapters of the book are unmatched in their lofty revelation of the heart of Jesus as revealed by his intimacy with the man he loved and was sending forth to be his witnesses.

A PRAYER.

By George Dawson.

Almighty God, the darkness and the light are both alike to Thee. Not so to us; we stumble in the dark, we tremble and are afraid. We pray Thee to be with us in the dark; not in the dark of the night only, but in the darkness of the day. Clouds of doubt pass over our souls; clouds of sin hide Thee from our eyes. We gaze upon life's wonders till we can see no more; we watch Thy glories till we are blinded with excess of light. Sorrow's tears dim our weak eyes, till at last we are but as children crying in the dark. Even then would we stretch out the hand of feeble faith; touch us with Thy right hand, and where we cannot see, we will gladly go. Blind we can sit by the wayside and cry, dark we will turn to the East whence must come the light. In the night, in the dark, in doubt, in sin, in storm, guide us by Thy right hand. And when we pass through the valley of the shadow of death let Thy rod and Thy staff comfort us. Be Thou, O God, our Light! Make us to know Thee, the Light of the world! Always and everywhere lead us by Thy right hand, and afterward receive us to glory. Amen.

Hurts Too Deep to Heal

Silas Jones

"And Jehovah of hosts revealed himself in mine ears, surely this iniquity shall not be forgiven you till ye die, saith the Lord, Jehovah of hosts." The Jerusalem of Isaiah's day had forgotten her ideals. In the hour of defeat and shame, she turned from her God and engaged in unseemly carousals. For a people so obtuse morally and spiritually there was only one fate and that was death. They were not willing to hold some things dearer than life itself and therefore life was forfeited.

The injuries men inflict one upon another tell of faith obscured or unawakened. Faith in the universe as moral, in God as perfect in holiness and love, in man as capable of being made worthy to stand in the presence of God, discards the baser motives and places humanity above all the wealth and pleasures the world can offer. The men of faith will choose obscurity, poverty, reproaches in preference to reputation, riches, and the praise of men if these latter must be secured at the cost of another's character. This is easy enough in theory. In practice it is extremely difficult. Selfishness assumes many forms. It parades as the champion of liberty, as a lover of truth rather than a blind follower of tradition, as a defender of the faith against the encroachments of infidelity, as anything but what it really is. And thus we sin against love and light. We work to the hurt of others whom we ought to help. The defenders of the saloon raise the cry of personal liberty. Back of that cry are appetite and greed. There is no anxiety for the welfare of the soul.

Every community has its destroyers of youth. They have an agreeableness of manner that makes room for them. They are often tolerated in respectable society on account of their wit or their wealth. It is their business to poison faith and love. Very little of moral heroism has ever come to their notice, but their stories of moral turpitude are many and varied. These, however, are not the most dangerous enemies of moral health. They can be understood by any man of good sense and sound sentiment and they can be met in the open. Worse than these is the pessimist who comes in the name of Christ. He talks of what men ought to be but he finds no one walking in the straightened way. He speaks not like a Jeremiah who sees a better day, but as one who stands amid the spiritual wreck of the universe. There is poison in the teaching of this man. It arouses no enthusiasm for virtue. The pessimistic preacher may show that sin abounds, he cannot create a conviction that grace doth more abundantly abound.

The remedy for the hurts of the soul is incarnate goodness. One acquainted with the heroism and faith of John G. Paton will hear with contempt the insinuations of the doubter. Precepts are good if we have seen them operative in some life. Otherwise, their significance is but dimly perceived. The lives of the saints illustrate and confirm the Christian faith. They point to the Master himself. From him we get wisdom and courage to resist the counsel of despair. That we may receive from Him, it may be necessary that our whole plan of life be changed, that we begin anew. The refusal to humble ourselves and become as children in the presence of the Master would be to hurt our souls beyond recovery.

Scripture Eccl. 4:9,10 Prov. 27:6,9	Christian Endeavor	Topic for Mar. 22

The Wise Use of Influence

For the Leader.

This is the last of three very practical topics—the wise use of time, money, and influence. Let the leader try to make it the most helpful of the series.

Begin with some hymn expressing the power of influence, like "Scorn Not the Slightest Word or Deed." Call on the Endeavorers to name others, and sing two verses of two more at the opening.

Speak a few words about the power of influence. If you can give a few examples from your own life, it will be most effective. Tell of some sentence you have heard spoken that has influenced you profoundly. Tell of some act you have seen done which also has influenced you. Tell of some person who has influenced you, and why. Ask the members, as they speak, to give similar instances.

Offer a brief prayer, asking for God's blessing upon the meeting, and especially that every Endeavorer may seek throughout the hour to do everything he can to make his influence count for good.

Incidents and Illustrations.

Mr. Bostock, the animal tamer, tells us that the most remarkable man he ever knew in his dealings with animals was the keeper of his tiger cage, who seemed to have hypnotic power over these wild animals. One day Mr. Bostock was passing the cage and saw this man lying in a drunken sleep in the midst of the tigers, who were lying around as if protecting him. Mr. Bostock had never seen the man under the influence of liquor before. No one dared to attempt to drag the man out, and so they were obliged to leave him there until he became sober. But from that day he never had any more influence over the tigers. They even showed fight when he came around, and others among the workmen had more influence over them than he.

When Minot's Ledge lighthouse was to be built, every block was fitted in a pasture on the shore. In the process a large amount of the material was cut from the blocks, and fine walls and good roads were made from it, so the wild pasture has been transformed into valuable building lots. So let your influence bless home, school, and church, young people, while you are building character for eternity.

When Dr. Temple of London was enthroned as archbishop of Canterbury—the primate in the Church of England—he laid out for himself a programme. He said that it would be his aim, God helping him, so to live that the Christians whom he met might become better Christians and those whom he met who were not Christians might become Christians. He dedicated himself to the witness of character, to the perfecting of mind and body and spirit, so that his very life itself should constantly witness for his Master.

Dr. Henry Clay Trumbull said that, looking back upon his work in all the years, he could see more direct results of good through his individual efforts with individuals than through all his spoken words to thousands upon thousands of persons in religious assemblies, or all his written words on the pages of periodicals or books.

A Recitation.

Let the following poem from the Advance be committed to memory and recited in the meeting:

A living coal! And with its glow
It touched another coal, when lo!
The dark form into radiance grew,
And light and cheer beamed forth anew.

A loving heart! And with its love
It touched another heart, which strove
With adverse waves on troubled sea,
When ores were plying heavily,
And lo! through rifted clouds Hope smiled,
And Love the weariness beguiled.

That living coal be mine to glow,
That loving heart be mine to show,
While earth has sorrowing hearts that wait
The opening of Redemption's gate.

WITH THE WORKERS

Doings of Preachers, Teachers, Thinkers and Givers

M. C. Frick has resigned as minister in Scottdale, Pa.

J. W. Carpenter addressed the students of Bethany College recently.

Frank J. Stinson is leading the brethren in Eldorado, Kan., in a vigorous work.

W. H. Patterson is the new minister in Blanchard, Pa. He is holding a meeting which has begun well.

F. M. Biddle has left the Central church, New Castle, Pa., to preach for the brethren in Wellsburg, W. Va.

Evangelist S. J. Vance, Carthage, Mo., has time for a meeting in May. Where the church prefers he can raise his salary.

Carey E. Morgan will help P. J. Rice and the Portland avenue church, Minneapolis, Minn., in a meeting to begin April 21.

E. T. Edmonds has gone to New Zealand for special work in that field. His address will be Kensington, Dunedin, New Zealand.

Mr. and Mrs. Finis Idleman, Des Moines, Iowa, are receiving the congratulations of friends because of the arrival of a daughter.

C. M. Chilton, St. Joseph, Mo., will be a speaker at the Illinois Ministerial Institute meeting preceding the congress in Bloomington, Ill.

The church in Lawrence, Kan., is seeking the help of the brethren in the erection of a modern and adequate church house to cost $30,000.

L. H. Stine read a paper before the ministers of Indianapolis March 2 on "Modern Revelations." Many commended the address very highly.

J. H. Stuckey, 1909 Storch avenue, Kansas City, Kan., has time for meetings. He will come for expenses and free will offerings and will help by lecturing.

Alva W. Taylor, pastor in Eureka, Ill., and his wife are happy because of the arrival recently of a wee new son. The Christian Century joins in congratulations.

The congregation in Irvington, Ind., is doing well. C. H. Winders is the successful pastor. Especially in the Sunday school there is a very satisfactory growth.

H. A. Denton spoke last Sunday to a mass meeting for men in the Central church of Indianapolis. A federation of the men's clubs among Disciples of the city was formed.

Three Sunday evening services of the church in Table Grove, Ill., where Fred S. Nichols is pastor, were conducted by laymen in the interest of the missionary enterprise of the church.

A great revival meeting in Perry, Iowa, has ended with more than sixty-five additions to the church. R. H. Ingraham, the pastor, had the help of State Bible School Evangelist C. L. Organ. A fine chorus of 100 voices and crowded houses were special features of the services.

Clay Trusty is pastor of the Seventh church, Indianapolis, Ind. His church has a men's organization, military in character, known as the "King's Guards." This club numbers nearly 100 men.

Jesse P. McKnight, the pastor, writes us: "Magnolia avenue church, Los Angeles, Cal., becomes Living Link in foreign missions by a great offering to-day. This church has just celebrated its fourth anniversary and has been greatly blessed in its work."

The Central Indiana Christian Ministerial Institute is in session this week in the Third church, Indianapolis. An extraordinarily good program is being enjoyed by men in attendance. T. W. Grafton, L. E. Brown and V. W. Blair are the officers of the institute.

O. C. Bolman has given up his labors in Mason City, Ill., to accept a call to Havana, Ill. He leaves a good record in Mason City. There were 115 additions under his preaching, work in many results was doubled, and the missionary offerings increased nearly 50 per cent. Bro. Bolman succeeds L. O. Lehman in the Havana church.

H. O. Pritchard of the University church, Lincoln, Neb., recently read a paper before the ministers of the city on "The Social Problems of the Modern Pulpit." Some things said in the paper and published in the daily press attracted the attention of labor organizations and Mr. Pritchard has been invited to speak to laboring men in a meeting of the Central Labor Union.

The trustees of the National Christian Hospital and Sanitarium Association held a special called meeting at Freeport, Ill., Tuesday, March 3. F. W. Emerson was elected corresponding secretary of the organization and editor of the new journal that the association will issue soon. The Training School for Nurses will have its commencement in May. There will be five graduates.

Under the ministry of O. E. Tomes the work of the Englewood church, Indianapolis, Ind., is prosperous to an unusual degree. During last year there were sixty additions to the church, and $2,613 was raised for all purposes, $264.35 of which was for missionary causes. Appreciation of the labors of the minister caused the congregation to grant him a substantial increase in his salary for this year.

The church in Eureka, Ill., will furnish the funds for opening a new mission station in Africa, which will be a memorial of Miss Ella Ewing. Dr. Royal J. Dye of Bolenge, Africa, was with the church March 1. Great audiences heard his masterly telling of the story of the Bolenge church and joined with enthusiasm in giving for the new station. A. W. Taylor reports that $1,108 was raised on Sunday and this amount will be increased. Does this make a record of missionary giving among Disciples in proportion to the membership of the church?

Self-government — with tenderness— here you have the condition of all authority over children.

THE CHICAGO CHURCHES.

Excellent audiences attend the meetings of the South Chicago church, conducted by A. J. Saunders. The missionary offering March 1 was about $15.

The Sheffield avenue church has raised its apportionment for foreign missions.

O. F. Jordan has been given an indefinite call as pastor of the Evanston church.

Prof. Coulter of the University of Chicago addressed the ministers' meeting on Monday on "Organic Evolution." It was an illuminating presentation of the subject. Last week the members of the association listened with much interest to a paper by H. H. Peters of Dixon, Ill., on "Social Democracy."

Dr. Greene, pastor of the Evanston Baptist church, visited the meeting of the ministers this week as a representative of the Baptist ministers' conference, bearing greetings and the personal invitation to join in the gatherings of the conference. The first union meeting of this character will be held April 5.

Special services of the Logan Square mission, under the direction of Simon Rohrer and Miss Sundell, drew a large audience March 1. An offering was taken for foreign missions. The amount now in hand for this offering is $20.

W. S. Lockhart writes us that the amount given by the Chicago Heights church for foreign missions has been increased to $100. This from one of the "babies" of the Englewood church.

C. W. B. M. Convention.

The quarterly convention of the Chicago union of the C. W. B. M. was entertained last Thursday by the Austin church. Although the weather was exceedingly unfavorable, over one hundred attended the sessions morning and afternoon. Mrs. Mary Agnew presided in the

THE DOCTOR'S GIFT.

Food Worth its Weight in Gold.

We usually expect the doctor to put us on some kind of pennance and give us bitter medicines.

A Penn. doctor brought a patient something entirely different and the results are truly interesting.

"Two years ago," writes this patient, "I was a frequent victim of acute indigestion and biliousness, being allowed to eat very few things. One day our family doctor brought me a small package, saying he had found something for me to eat, at last.

"He said it was a food called Grape-Nuts and even as its golden color might suggest, it was worth its weight in gold. I was sick and tired, trying one thing after another to no avail, but at last consented to try this new food.

"Well! it surpassed my doctor's fondest anticipation and every day since then I have blessed the good doctor and the inventor of Grape-Nuts.

"I noticed improvement at once and in a month's time my former spells of indigestion had disappeared. In two months I felt like a new man. My brain was much clearer and keener, my body took on the vitality of youth, and this condition has continued."

morning, but on account of illness she was compelled to leave the afternoon meeting and Mrs. H. H. Hudson was the presiding officer. Mrs. Richardson and Mrs. R. W. Delaney and Mrs. Russell conducted devotional exercises. Mrs. G. W. Hall and Mrs. J. P. Robinson sang. Addresses were made by Mrs. F. S. McElherne, Miss Emma Mavis, Mrs. L. R. Priest, Mrs. Grace E. Ellmore and Rev. C. G. Kindred. The hospitality of the ladies of the Austin church added much to the success and pleasure of the occasion.

Following the day sessions of the C. W. B. M. a rally of Christian Endeavor societies was held in the evening. W. F. Shaw of the Sheffield avenue church was the principal speaker.

CLEVELAND LETTER.

At the last meeting of the Cleveland ministers most inspiring reports were given regarding the growth of the Cleveland churches during the past few months. This fact was clearly developed that large results can be obtained in large cities without the employment of the large meeting process. The writer has no word of criticism for the big evangelist and the big central meeting but it has seemed to us that for our city we have accomplished the desired results in the more desirable way.

The churches report additions as follows, since January 1st, 1908: Euclid Avenue, 25; Birch Street, 3; Highland Avenue, 16; Dunham Avenue, 58; Aetna Street, 77; Crawford Road, 21; Miles Avenue, 98; Collinwood, 141; West Madison, 6; Franklin Circle, 30; Lakewood, 61; Glenville, 13. Several of these churches report very substantial additions just preceding Jan. 1st. Euclid Avenue, 20; Glenville, 34; Birch Street, 28; Lakewood, 9. The totals are as follows: Since Jan. 1st, 1908—549. Since the fall 640 with some unreported.

If we had held some union revival service with this final result we would have occupied several columns of religious publications with half-tones and reports of the big meeting. As it is we have results and we believe they will be permanent. About half of our churches here had series of meetings held by pastor evangelists, in only one instance by an all-the-time evangelist.

Bro. Royal J. Dye, of Bolengi, Africa, is bringing great inspiration to his hearers at the Euclid Avenue church. His missionary story is apostolic. We are anticipating the visit of Dr. H. L. Willett to Cleveland in May. He will deliver a series of addresses in the Euclid Avenue church.

Crawford Road will dedicate its new building Sunday, April 6th. The address will be given by Bro. Z. T. Sweeney.

Euclid Avenue will not be ready to dedicate for some weeks yet.

PEORIA MEETING.

To do its evangelistic work so as (1) to do no violence to the spiritual nature of the persons joining the church; and (2) to gain results that are permanent and truly spiritual, rather than simply numerical, has been the aim of the Peoria Church. The church held a meeting of this kind last year, and another this year, and every one has been greatly pleased with the results. In both meetings Rev. J. R. Ewers, pastor of the First Church, Youngstown, Ohio, did the preaching. Each meeting lasted but twelve days. Mr. Ewers is a close personal friend of Mr. Burns, who is pastor at Peoria. The two men worked together quietly seeking to realize the ideal of the church is this work. The church employed as a soloist in each meeting, Miss Ida Mae Hanna, of Cincinnati, Ohio. Miss Hanna possesses a rich well trained voice, and sings with rare simplicity and sweetness. Her selections are peculiarly adapted to this sort of work. It is the Gospel in song; and she never uses a weakly sentimental selection. The people were all highly pleased with her work. The meeting last year followed immediately a union meeting led by "Gypsy" Smith, and brought a larger number of people into the church than the one this year, but this year's meeting was no less successful. Mr. Ewers possesses remarkable power as a preacher. His audiences grew daily. Night after night the same people came anxious not to miss a single sermon. The sermons were strong Gospel appeals and left a feeling of deep earnestness in the church. A high standard of Christian life was raised and people were made to feel their need of a truer consecration, and deeper spirituality. Should this spirit continue in the church and there must be accessions to the church at every service. It was a great meeting, and of the right sort.

THE MEETING AT ROWLAND STREET, SYRACUSE.

When C. R. Stauffer resigned his work at Rock Falls, Ill., to come east many of his ministerial friends tried to dissuade him, pointing out the difficulties of labor in the conservative east. But he came in his strength and faith determined to do his best. Came, not to a large well equipped church but to a struggling city mission, with its discouragements and drawbacks. The last missionary year showed a decrease in membership and everything at low tide. But he threw himself into the work with heart and soul, determined to make it go. As one expressed it, he was a fit. Adjustment was followed by growth, new members were added and the Sunday School built up, until to-day the chapel wont hold the pupils, and classes are taken to residences nearby.

Four weeks ago a meeting was begun, Bro. Stauffer preaching and Bro. Kenan of Central leading the singing, a real "home force" meeting. Every night except Saturday for four weeks it continued, and when it closed last Sunday thirty-six had been added to the church. There were 15 males and 21 females reached, twenty-four of the thirty-six being adults. Four entire families came into the church among this number.

When the fact is known that the church will only seat 110 persons, the real significance of the victory is manifest. By judicious use of printing many homes were reached which will tell in results in the future. Bro. Stauffer has a hold upon the entire neighborhood, and when a more adequate building is supplied the results will far exceed these.

The Empire state wants men of strong faith, large vision and a willingness to sacrifice, and the efforts of Bro. Stauffer here could be duplicated in a score of great cities of this state.

"Johnny, do you believe in Santa Claus?" "No, I did before the one we had at our house slipped and fell downstairs. I couldn't believe in anybody that talked the way he did."

SOUTHERN INDIANA MINISTERIAL INSTITUTE.

The First Annual Ministerial Institute of Southern Indiana held at Bedford on Feb. 25, 26 and 27, proved to be a most helpful and interesting meeting. The hospitality of the Bedford Church was all that it could be. Brother Putnam, the pastor, greatly ingratiated himself into the hearts of the visitors. The papers and addresses were of a very high order. Every man that was given a place on the program was on hand to do his part. There was not a single exception. The Institute manifested a diversity of thought. At times this diversity of thought led to some very warm and interesting discussions. But when the discussions were over it was felt by nearly all that the papers and discussions were greatly needed to enable us to see things more clearly. The fellowship was most delightful. It is in this fellowship that we are drawn together. Through it the cords of love bind us together more closely.

The paper by L. H. Stine on "The Basis of Brotherhood in Christ," was followed by very much discussion. The second paper, "Evangelistic Preaching" by Brother T. H. Adams, was along lines that met the approval of nearly all present. The paper by Brother T. J. Clark, on "The Place of the Holy Spirit In Our Preaching," was a very thoughtfully prepared paper. The paper on "The Preachers' Relation to Social Reform,"

LIGHT BREAKS IN.

Thoughtful Farmer Learns About Coffee.

Many people exist in a more or less hazy condition and it often takes years before they realize that coffee is the cause of the cloudiness, and that there is a simple way to let the light break in.

A worthy farmer had such an experience and tells about it, in a letter. He says:

"For about forty years, I have had indigestion and stomach trouble in various forms. During the last 25 years I would not more than get over one spell of bilious colic until another would be on me.

"The best doctors I could get and all the medicines I could buy, only gave me temporary relief.

"Change of climate was tried without results. I could not sleep nights, had rheumatism and my heart would palpitate at times so that it seemed it would jump out of my body.

"I came to the conclusion that there was no relief for me that I was about wound up, when I saw a Postum advertisement. I had always been a coffee drinker, and got an idea from the ad. that maybe coffee was the cause of my trouble.

"I began to drink Postum instead of coffee and in less than three weeks I felt like a new man. The rheumatism left me, and I have never had a spell of bilious colic since.

"My appetite is good, my digestion never was better and I can do more work than before for 40 years.

"I haven't tasted coffee since I began with Postum. My wife makes it according to directions and I relish it as well as I ever did coffee, and I was certainly a slave to coffee."

by Bro. E. E. Davidson, reflected the fact that the author of the paper had experiences that enabled him to speak with sound wisdom.

The last paper was by Harry G. Hill, of Indianapolis, on "How to Reach and Hold Men for the Church?" The paper was greatly appreciated. The two evening addresses were made by E. R. Edwards, of Kokomo, and Geo. A. Campbell, of Chicago. Both speakers were greeted by large and appreciative audiences. Brother Edwards spoke on "The Attitude of the Church To-day Towards the Spirit of Democracy." He first pointed out how this spirit was making itself manifest at the present time. He declared that this spirit must be one that the church must meet. He urged a tolerant and enquiring mind towards this spirit of Democracy. The church, must, however, always, said the speaker, boldly declare the message she received from Christ to the present age. Brother Campbell spoke on "The Pulpit and Modern Thought." His was a great address. It was inspirational. He presented the great tendencies of our time. He gave us in perspective the great forces that are either violently opposed to the minister and his message, and the great masses that are totally indifferent to the call of the minister of the Gospel. The preacher must be, said the speaker, in order to meet the conditions produced by modern thought, first very religious, and secondly, he must be positive, and lastly he must have a message of authority. This message of authority for the preacher must be found that he must be a redeemed man. One who knows the significance of the redeeming love of Christ in his own soul is the only person that preach a crucified Christ as Redeemer. To the writer of these notes Brother Campbell's address was a great spiritual uplift.

The Institute goes to New Albany for next year. The officers elected for this coming year are: Pres. Melvin Putnam, Vice Pres., H. A. Turney, and Secretary, E. E. Davidson. We look for a good Institute next year.

KENTUCKY MISSION NOTES.

W. J. Cocke was in the field twenty-five days of February. He reports nineteen added. His work was at Farmers and Taylorsville and was at latter place when last heard from. In some respects both fields were difficult and needed his services very much.

At Jackson, Breathitt county, C. M. Summers has had a quiet month. Offering for foreign missions taken.

Livingstone has had a great meeting, with fifty-seven added. The preacher does not indicate who helped so far as the preaching is concerned.

A. Sanders is getting the work in the Big Sandy Valley started very well. Four confessions and baptisms. Complimentary notices of him and his work appear in the local papers. Paintsville work is doing well.

J. K. Reid is serving Lebanon Junction and Munfordville. At the latter place the audiences are good and interest is growing.

Latonia still goes forward. The Sunday school is the strong feature of the work just now and bids fair to be

PIMPLES, BLACKHEADS—

Get Rid of All Your Face Troubles in a Few Days' Time With the Wonderful Stuart Calcium Wafers.

You cannot have an attractive face or a beautiful complexion when your blood is in bad order and full of impurities. Impure blood means an impure face, always.

The most wonderful as well as the most rapid blood cleanser is Stuart's Calcium Wafers. You use them for a few days, and the difference tells in your face right away.

Most blood purifiers and skin treatments are full of poison. Stuart's Calcium Wafers are guaranteed free from any poison, mercury, drug, or opiate. They are as harmless as water, but the results are astonishing.

The worst cases of skin diseases have been cured in a week by this quick-acting remedy. It contains the most effective working powder of any purifier ever discovered,—calcium sulphide. Most blood and skin treatments are terribly slow. Stuart's Calcium Wafers have cured boils in 3 days. Every particle of impurity is driven out of your system completely, never to return, and it is done without deranging your system in the slightest.

No matter what your trouble is, whether pimples, blotches, blackheads, rash, tetter, eczema, or scabby crusts, you can solemnly depend upon Stuart's Calcium Wafers as never-failing.

Don't be any longer humiliated by having a splotchy face. Don't have strangers stare at you, or allow your friends to be ashamed of you because of your face.

Your blood makes you what you are. The men and women who forge ahead are those with pure blood and pure faces. Did you ever stop to think of that?

Stuart's Calcium Wafers are absolutely harmless, but the results,—mighty satisfying to you even at the end of a week. They will make you happy because your face will be a welcome sight not only to yourself when you look in the glass, but to everybody else who knows you and talks with you.

We want to prove to you that Stuart's Calcium Wafers are beyond doubt the best and quickest blood and skin purifier in the world,—so we will send you a free sample as soon as we get your name and address. Send for it to-day, and then when you have tried the sample you will not rest contented until you have bought a 50c box at your druggist's.

Send us your name and address to-day and we will at once send you by mail a sample package, free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 175 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

stronger. H. C. Runyon says there was one added last month.

J. W. Masters is feeling good. Arrangements are made that insure the completion of the Harlan house at an early date. He spent seventeen days there in February and there were seven added.

Edward B. Richey reports six added. Although the financial difficulties are great on account of so many railroad people being out of work, the attendance and interest keep up well.

There were four added by the labors of H. L. Morgan in the mountains of southeast Kentucky.

One added at Jellico and the work doing very well. R. G. Sherrer may be had for some short meetings by the churches in southeast Kentucky. Address him at Jellico, Tenn.

Z. Ball has been sick all month and not able to work, but he is now ready to go to work again.

Four additions in Breathitt county by J. B. Flinchum. He expects to be able to do much in the better weather for the advancement of the cause.

There were thirty-five confessions at Hazel Green in the meeting held by D. G. Combs. The secretary was there during the meeting and enjoyed seeing and hearing the students. Great things are being planned for Hazel Green work by President Derthick.

Interest growing in the work of J. P. Bornwasser at Bromley.

Robert Kirby is trying to get the people in his field to give something for Kentucky missions. He sends from N. S. Hume 50 cents; J. F. McCoy, 25 cents; D. W. Cloyd, 20 cents; John Heard, $1; Henry Richardson, $1, and Robert Kirby, 50 cents. Suppose every disciple in the mission field would average with these—a little over 60 cents each. You could see us grow. We would get bigger and bigger.

H. W. Elliott was at work all the month and collected $513.23. This is a slight loss as compared with last February. Let us make a gain in March that will cover this. We plead with every one who has any funds for Kentucky missions to send them in now. We need your help. H. W. Elliott, Secretary.

FROM THE HUB OF THE EMPIRE STATE.

The Ministerial Association of Disciples of Syracuse and vicinity, was held in the Central Church, Syracuse, Monday, February 17. Report of the Baptist Ministerial Association of Central New York plan of union was discussed and laid on the table until next meeting. The paper of the day, "The Virgin Birth of Jesus," was read by Bro. Arthur Braden of Auburn. It was thought-provoking and well written. The discussion of it was animated and led into the heart of the problem and its effect upon the message of our people. All were agreed that belief in or denial of the virgin birth have no place in the test of fellowship among the Disciples.

The following evening the Men's League of the Auburn Church entertained the men of the two churches of Syracuse, and the one at Throopsville. Twenty men journeyed by trolley twenty-six miles of snow-clad hills, from Syracuse to enjoy the hospitality of the evening. A bounteous repast was served by the League of Auburn, after which Bro. R. H. Miller of Buffalo, delivered a masterful address on "Life." Seventy-seven men in all partook of the feast, and when the hour of parting had arrived, felt the evening had been profitably spent in considering the most weighty questions that have ever come before man. The Auburn League is the largest in the state, and is doing excellent work.

Bro. S. B. Broden has resigned at Cato, and is already engaged in the work at Butler, Ind. Another of our good country churches, Brewerton, is about to lose its minister, as Bro. Burgan is casting longing eyes upon a field in his native Southland.

One of the most eloquent testimonials of the power of our plea to find a place in the east, is that of the Rowland Street Church, Syracuse. It was organized less than four years ago, with twenty-six members, fourteen of whom went out of Central Church for that purpose. A mission chapel was purchased in a growing residential section, a Sunday school established and work begun. To-day, after three years and nine months of service, its membership has grown from 26 to 112; the Bible school from 40 to 130; a live C. W. B. M., Ladies' Aid and Men's League besides. The debt on the property was held by a mortgage and this has been gradually reduced until to-day, with cash on hand, it is no more. Thus a property valued at $1,200 of $1,400 is theirs entirely free from debt. This summer will doubtless witness a new building. And, best of all, Old Central, out of which this church was formed, is stronger to-day in every department than before the division. Jos. A. Serena.

A FLOWER FOR THE GRAVE OF N. G. BROWN.

Have just read the announcement of the death of my friend, brother and classmate, Brother Nelson G. Brown. Though I knew of his long and seemingly hopeless illness, the notice of his death surprises and saddens me. I have known him well for fourteen years, sat by him in the class room strolled with him on the campus, talked with him about many things. He is the first of class to break the circle, the class of '97 at Drake. Those days come back to me golden with the leaves of October and glad with the smiles of June. In classroom, in Chapel his face was one of sunshine. As a student, as a friend, as a preacher, what a man he was. What a superb specimen of physical manhood he was. What a fine face, what a mind what a soul he had. He was one of the truest, sincerest men I ever knew. He was a colossus of moral character and a dynamo of spiritual power, always in the right and tremendously in earnest. A friend of men, the champion of those whose cause there was none to plead, a preacher of power, a loyal disciple of the Lord has stepped within the shadow which we call death. The note of his going away will strike a minor chord in the hearts of many who loved him because they knew him.

Fellow classmen of '97, of '96 and '98 also and of '99, and the host of others who knew him in school and out of it come, in thought from near and far and standing around his honored grave let us plant this white rose of an unsullied life where watered by the tears of loving friends it shall bloom forever.

Brother Brown, faithful in trial and humble in triumph, for a little while farewell. J. M. Lowe.

From Our Growing Churches

TELEGRAMS

Frankfort, Ind., Mar. 9.—Thirty-nine to-day. One hundred additions in the first four days. Rejoice with us.—Herbert Yeuell.

COLORADO.

Ault—I began a meeting here Saturday night in the Christian church with one confession, a young lady. Sunday we had a conference of all the churches and unanimously agreed to turn the meeting into a union effort, with myself as preacher. To-night we go to the Congregational church, where we will continue until we move to the opera house or armory hall sometime this week. The people of all the churches were both ready and anxious for such a meeting, hence we are hopeful of great results. Brother Stringham, the new pastor of the Christian church, will have charge of the chorus work during these meetings. Ault, Colo., is a clean little city of 800 population, without a saloon or joint, but with three splendid little churches, Congregational, Baptist and Christian, each with settled pastor. Sixty miles north of Denver with an intelligent people and in the midst of a rich sugar beet, potato and alfalfa country, it is an ideal place for a union meeting with a Christian minister at the helm.—S. J. Vance, Evangelist.

Grand Junction—Five additions yesterday, three by letter and two confessions.—J. H. McCartney.

Pueblo—Nine additions this month—six by baptism.—D. W. Moore.

ILLINOIS.

London Mills—The church has just closed a good meeting conducted by Evangelist Wm. A. Ward of St. Louis, and has been greatly strengthened by the plain, earnest preaching of the Word. The evangelist was unfortunately taken down with a complication of grippe and neuralgia at the opening of the third week, throwing the work to the pastor. The total number standing for Christ in this meeting was nineteen; one of these goes to the M. E.'s. Bro. Ward's work was given favorable comment by the church and those outside, although he labored under the oppression of coming illness all through the meeting. We expect to have him return to us again in the near future. His next meeting is at Kentland, Ind.—Walter B. Zimmerman, Eureka, Ill.

Denver—Six added since last report; four by letter, two otherwise. C. W. B. M. Day and C. E. Day observed with good offerings.—B. H. Cleaver.

Springfield—At the first two services of our revival at the Stuart Street Christian church we had ten accessions. The minister, C. C. Sinclair, preached. F. W. Burnham of the First church will preach during the week except on Sunday. I have an adult chorus of thirty voices and a children's chorus of fifty voices. The church has purchased 200 new song books.—Charles E. McVay, Song Evangelist.

Niantic—One hundred and eleven added here (mostly by primary obedience) and $1,221.01 for missions and benevolences the past two years. $751.01 for missions last year. Third year began last Lord's day. One man made the good confession. I received a call from Abingdon, Moweaqua and Assumption recently at increased salary, but decided to remain here for the present. Abingdon and Assumption are still without preachers. Abingdon is a good church of 600 members and will pay $1,200 and parsonage to right man. Assumption will pay $1,200. They should have pastors soon.—J. Will. Walters.

Lexington—We received 30 new members into the church last week as the result of one week's union meeting. Have had forty-five additions since December 1st, twelve of these were previously reported. I have an adult Bible class in Old Testament History with fifty enrolled. Meeting on Monday evenings.—B. H. Sealock.

Stanford—Three baptisms here not reported, also six added in a meeting at Saunemin, Ill., four confessions and two from Baptists.—S. S. Lappin.

IOWA.

Des Moines—Ministers' meeting, Mar. 3. Central (Idleman), 5 confessions, 1 by statement; Valley Junction (Boggess, W. S. Johnson, evangelist), 1 confession, 1 by letter, 1 by statement; University Place (Medbury), 1 confession; Capitol Hill (Van Horn), 1 confession, 2 by statement.—Jno. McD. Horne, Sec.

KANSAS.

Salina—Foreign mission offering $53; expect to make it $75. One confession at morning service. Bible school and church in fine condition, happy and prosperous.—J. C. McArthur.

MISSOURI.

Canton—The Canton church is engaged in a revival, the minister, G. W. Buckner, preaching, assisted by V. E. Ridenour and daughter. Fourteen added first week, eight by primary obedience and six by statement and otherwise.—B. H. Cleaver.

NEW JERSEY.

East Orange—Ten accessions at regular services in February. We are seriously cramped for room. The financial crisis has delayed our entrance to our new building. It will not be ready for occupancy before mid-summer. This is New Jersey's first permanent church building. Don't you want at least a few brick in it?—L. N. D. Wells, East Orange, N. J.

NEW YORK.

Buffalo—Fifteen added, the strength and joy of all multiplied, and the arithmetic ascendant in all respects. It was Bro. A. Martin's second meeting with us at the Fourth Avenue church. His lecture on "How To Be Happy" is a high ethic and classic set in laconics.—B. H. Hoyden.

OHIO.

Weston—I preached a few evenings at Antioch, a small church near here, with twenty confessions and baptisms, and some restored to the fellowship of the church.—S. M. Cook.

NEBRASKA SECRETARY'S LETTER.

L. C. Swan, our missionary at North Platte, held a short meeting at Hershey, just west of that city. There were two by statement. There is no congregation of disciples there.

R. M. Dungan will be in a meeting at Chadron when this is in print, probably. H. L. Denton has been getting the church together in readiness for the meeting. It should result in completely harmonizing that little band.

J. B. White will visit Beaver Crossing on the 4th inst. and may locate with that church. Bro. White is the pastor at Elmwood.

C. F. Rose is now in a meeting with the Virginia church. There had been four baptisms and one other confession

Nothing approaching this work has ever been attempted before. In a series of splendid pictures the great and impressive scenes in the Bible story are depicted, true in color, costume, landscape, and all details to the life, the country and the time. ¶ To make the men and women of the Bible actual, living characters to their pupils is one of the first duties of the Sunday-School teachers, and no better help can they find for this than in the Tissot pictures. ¶ The whole world acknowledges that J. James Tissot was the greatest artist that ever lived, so far as Biblical subjects are concerned.

Only the unparalled success in the higher-priced editions makes possible this phenomenally low offer now. ¶ These pictures have received the unqualified endorsement of the leading clergymen and Sunday-School teachers throughout the United States. ¶ Nothing could be more helpful, and interesting, and delightful, when one is reading the Bible, than such a graphic interpretation of sacred stories. ¶ In no other way can the Bible stories be made so real and actual to children. Should be in every home.

on the 1st. The outlook is hopeful. The church is seeking to retain Bro. Rose.

The meeting at Havelock under the preaching of H. O. Pritchard, closed March 1st. The total results have not been reported, but there were a good many added to the Lord.

R. M. Hunt was back from his sad journey to Kansas to bury his wife and baby, in time to meet his regular appointment at Trumbull.

J. E. Chase of North Bend, has been shut out of his pulpit for some four weeks on account of an epidemic of smallpox in the town. He supplied for the Aurora church on the 1st.

The state secretary was called to Ord on the 26th to be present at a banquet given by the ladies of the Baptist and Christian churches to the members of the two bodies, at which time the question of a closer union of the two churches was taken up. They have been meeting together for some time, having services alternately in the two houses. Communion part of the time in one and part in the other. A committee had made a report to a joint board meeting and this report was amended and read to the members present at the banquet. It was agreed to continue the relationship, but the effort to unite upon a name for the united body, failed. They will elect a board of officers including elders and deacons from the membership. J. M. Huston will preach for them, and members will be received by confession, repentance and baptism. Communion will be spread every Lord's day morning in the Baptist church. Evening services are evangelistic. There was the utmost good feeling. Bro. Huston asks to be treated as one of our busy pastors and he certainly deserves it. A request to return and speak for a week or so to the united churches is under advisement.

On the way from Ord to Holdrege a short stop was made at Central City, where John Alber, of Cotner Univ., preaches half time. He is doing a fine work and the church is well pleased with what they get of him. The only complaint is that they get just half enough. This church will surely be ready for a full time preacher in the fall.

At Holdrege a fine group of brethren gathered morning and evening in the Swedish Baptist church. They voted to have regular services for a while and thus test the sentiment and get out others. There seems to be upwards of 35 disciples there. A trip out to Wilcox on Monday was fruitless, as no one was there as expected and the work that had been reported turns out to be in the country toward Bloomington.

Chester made an offering for foreign missions of $42.00. Chas. E. Cobbey is the student pastor.

It is reported that the University church at Bethany raised over $600.00 to continue the support of Mrs. Dye in Africa.

Eugene Palmer has moved to Hendley where he has been called to the pastorate of that church.

Samuel Gregg is still gathering the harvest at Maywood. Total results will be given at the close, which will probably be on the 8th. He will go from

Important Books

We are the publishers of some of the best known works pertaining to the Disciples' Plea for a united church. These important books — important in more ways than one—should be read and owned by every member of the household of faith.

The Plea of the Disciples of Christ, by W. T. Moore. Small 16mo., cloth, 140 pages, net postpaid, thirty-five cents, won immediate success.

George Hamilton Combs, paster of the Independence Boulevard Christian Church, Kansas City, Mo.. one of the great churches of the brotherhood, writes.

"I cannot thank Dr. W. T. Moore enough for having written his little book on "Our Plea." It is more than a statement; it is a philosophy. Irenic, catholic, steel-tone, it is just the handbook I shall like to put into the hands of the thinking man on the outside. In all of his useful and honored life Mr. Moore has rendered no greater service to a great cause."

Historical Documents Advocating Christian Union, collated and edited by Charles A. Young. 12mo, cloth, 364 pages, illustrated, postpaid $1.00, is an important contribution to contemporary religious literature. It presents the living principles of the church in convenient form.

Z. T. Sweeney, Columbus, Indiana, a preacher of national reputation, writes:

"I congratulate you on the happy thought of collecting and editing these documents. They ought to be in the home of every Disciple of Christ in the Land, and I believe they should have a large and increasing sale in years to come."

Basic Truths of the Christian Faith, by Herbert L. Willett, author of The Ruling Quality, Teaching of the Books, Prophets of Israel, etc., etc. Post 8vo., cloth, 127 pages. Front cover stamped in gold, gilt top, illustrated, 75 cents, paper 25 cents.

A powerful and masterful presentation of the great truths for the attainment of the life of the spirit. Written in a charming and scholarly style. It holds the reader's fascinated attention so closely that it is a disappointment if the book has to be laid aside before it is finished.

J. E. Chase writes:

"It is the voice of a soul in touch with the Divine life, and breathes throughout its pages the high ideals and noblest conception of truer life, possible only to him who has tarried prayerfully, studiously at the feet of the world's greatest teacher."

Our Plea for Union and the Present Crisis, by Herbert L. Willett, author of the Life and Teachings of Jesus, etc., etc. 12mo., cloth, 140 pages, gold stamped, postpaid 50 cents.

Written in the belief that the Disciples of Christ are passing through an important, and in many respects, transitional period.

The author says:

"It is with the hope that * * * present forces and opportunities may be wisely estimated by us; that doors now open may be entered; that hopes only partially realized may come to fruition that these chapters are given their present form."

Early Relations and Separation of Baptists and Disciples, by Errett Gates. 8vo. cloth, gold side and back stamp, $1.00. A limited number in paper binding will be mailed postpaid for 25 cents until stock is sold out.

We owe a debt of gratitude to the writer of this book, and could only wish that it might be read not only by our people all over the land, but scattered among the Baptists. It is a most meritorious and splendid contribution to our literature.—THE CHRISTIAN WORKER, PITTSBURG, Pa.

The dominant personality of Alexander Campbell is so brought out as to give to what might be regarded as the dry details of ecclesiastical history and controversy almost the interest of a story. A valuable contribution to the history of the American churches.—THE CONGREGATIONALIST, BOSTON, Mass.

The Christian Century Company

there to Sargent, a new point where we expect to organize a congregation.

Edward Clutter is at Indianola for the Board. L. B. Cox reports that they were getting ready for it, and expects a good meeting.

C. H. Mattox and John Olmstead will probably close at Minden on the 8th. A good many have been received into the church through this meeting. The final figures later.

Whiston is still at work at David City at this writing.

W. A. Baldwin.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE BELLEVUE-DAYTON CHURCH FEB. 1907, FEB. 1908.

The first Sunday of Feb. closed my initial year with this congregation. During that time there have been seventy-five additions to the church. There was one death in the membership and four letters granted, leaving us a membership of about 275. The church in all departments has raised and expended nearly $2,500.00. There is harmony and prosperity in the various auxiliaries: C. W. B. M., Pastor's Aid and Ready Workers are doing good work for the cause. We have no need to be ashamed of our C. E. societies and the S. S. supports a splendid men's class of twenty-five, a large mixed Bible Class, besides several other adult classes, and a large Girl's Choir. We are planning for a meeting with Small and St. John to be held in December. Work will begin at once on our new addition which, when completed, will give us one of the largest and most usable plants in the city.

The Messiah: A Study in the Gospel of the Kingdom. David McConaughy, Jr. 12mo., cloth, net $1.00.

In two parts. I. Aiming to trace the outlines of the peerless portrait of the Messiah as depicted by Matthew. II. A series of devotional meditations adapted for the "quiet hour."

Things That Are Supreme. James G. K. McClure, D. D. College Sermons. 16mo, cloth, net 75c.

Eight sermons by the popular president of McCormick Theological Seminary. These sermons were recently preached to the students at Harvard, Yale, Cornell, Princeton, Illinois, Wisconsin and Chicago.

Christianity's Storm Centre. Charles Stelzle. A Study of the Modern City. 16 mo, cloth, net $1.00. Mt. Stelzle believes that if the Church can be aroused to face the problem, investigate the conditions and alter its own methods it will win the fight for uniting the church and the laboring masses. He is hopeful with the well founded optimism of the man who knows from experience both sides of his question.

The Eternal in Man. James I. Vance, D. D. Cloth, net $1.00. Dr. Vance has the rare gift of stimulating and arousing both head and heart. These chapters dust off the commonplace of human life and its experiences and show the eternal part of us that lies underneath.

The Supreme Conquest. W. L. Watkinson, D. D. Net $1.00. To the list of great preachers who have made the British pulpit famous, the name of William L. Watkins has long since been added. His books are eagerly sought by up-to-date ministers everywhere, and are bought with equal appreciation by the general public.

God's Message to the Human Soul. John Watson, D. D., (Ian Maclaren). The Cole Lectures for 1907. Cloth, net $1.25. A peculiar and sad interest attaches The Cole Lectures for 1907. They were delivered, the author having suddenly passed away during his visit to this country, and within a few days of the date of the appointment that brought him to America. Fortunately Dr. Watson had put these lectures into manuscript form; they are therefore preserved for the wider circle of appreciative readers.

The Modern Sunday School in Principle and Practice. Henry F. Cope. Cloth, net $1.00. This volume by the General Secretary of the Religious Education Association constitutes an invaluable guide for the management of the Sunday School under modern conditions. He presents the results of all the newest experiments both with primary, adolescent and adult grades.

China and America Today. Arthur H. Smith, D. D. Cloth, net $1.25. Dr. Smith has been for 35 years a missionary to China. In this capacity he has learned much of China, which in another relation might be denied him. Being a statesman by instinct and genius, he has taken a broad survey of conditions and opportunities, and here forcibly presents his criticisms of America's strength and weakness abroad, especially in China.

Palestine Through the Eyes of a Native. Gamahliel Wad-El-Ward. Illustrated, cloth, net $1.00. The author, a native of Palestine, has been heard and appreciated in many parts of this country in his popular lectures upon the land in which so large a part of his life was spent. His interpretations of many obscure scriptural passages by means of native manners and customs and traditions is particularly helpful and informing.

The Continent of Opportunity: South America. Francis E. Clark, D. D. Profusely illustrated, net $1.50. Dr. Clark writes a thorough-going tour of examination, covering practically every centre of importance in South American continent, Panama, Chile, Ecuador, Peru, Argentine, Brazil, Paraguay and Uruguay. Dr. Clark's prime object has been to collect information of every sort that will help to understand the problems facing Christian Civilization in our sister Continent.

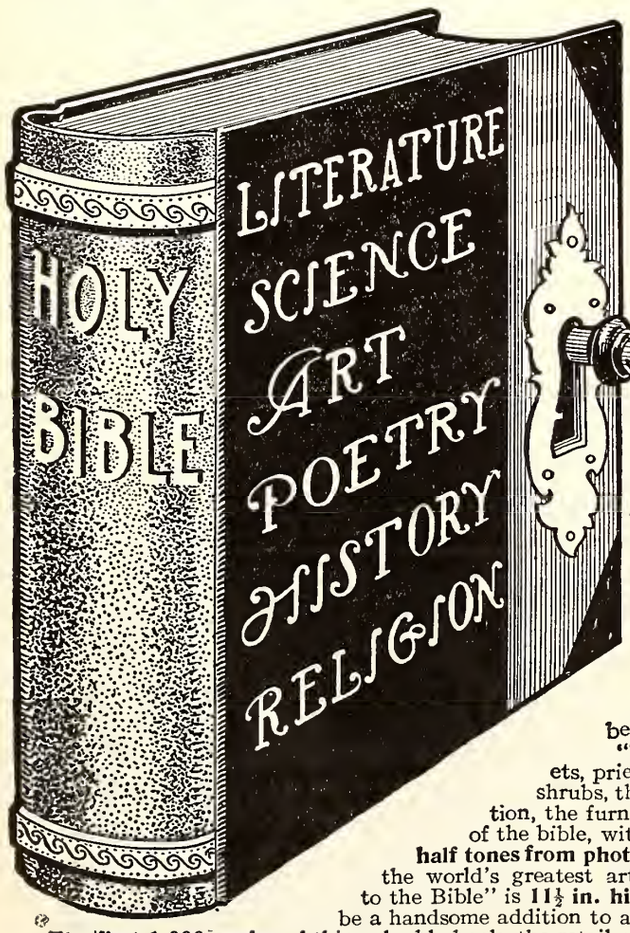
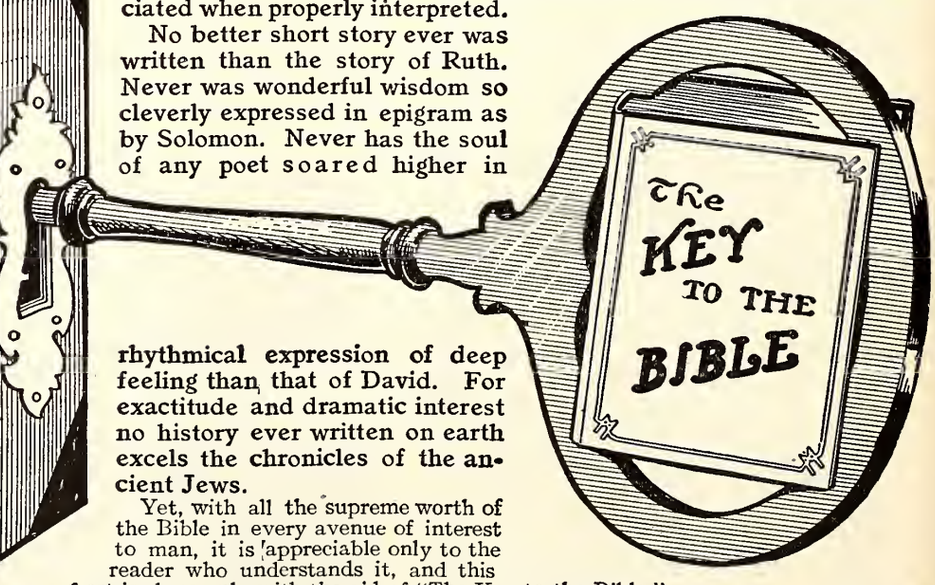
The Greatest Book About the Greatest Book.



A THOUSAND times you have read that the Bible is an education in itself; this statement has been a favorite of great men for ages. No careful student ever fails in the conviction of its truth. Literature, Science, History, Poetry, Art and Religion, all are found in it at their most supreme heights, yet only to be appreciated when properly interpreted.

No better short story ever was written than the story of Ruth. Never was wonderful wisdom so cleverly expressed in epigram as by Solomon. Never has the soul of any poet soared higher in rhythmical expression of deep feeling than that of David. For exactitude and dramatic interest no history ever written on earth excels the chronicles of the ancient Jews.



Yet, with all the supreme worth of the Bible in every avenue of interest to man, it is appreciable only to the reader who understands it, and this best is done only with the aid of "The Key to the Bible."

"The Key to the Bible" is an encyclopedia of the lessons, places, prophets, priests, apostles, disciples, birds, beasts and reptiles, the trees, plants and shrubs, the dress and customs, etc., peoples, houses and other places of habitation, the furniture, ornaments, statuary, the towns, rivers, mountains and lands of the bible, with 16 full page colored pictures from photographs, 100 full page half tones from photographs and reproductions of the greatest biblical paintings by the world's greatest artists and over 400 well drawn text illustrations. "The Key to the Bible" is 11½ in. high, 8 in. wide and 2½ in. thick, weighing 5 pounds. It will be a handsome addition to any library.

The first 1,000 copies of this valuable book, the retail price of which is $5.00, has been set aside for a preliminary sale. We have made arrangements with the publisher for a limited number of copies, and can offer them at the Preliminary sale price of $3, prepaid to any ad. After 1,000 copies are disposed of by the publishers the price will be $5.

I enclose $3.00 for one copy of "The Key to the Bible" to be sent prepaid.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

A Prayer

By Henry Ward Beecher.

Accept our thanks, Almighty God, for all the mercies in Thy revelation, and for the augmentation of that life which makes the revelation of divine truth in Thy Word clearer and clearer by the experience of outward life. Cleanse us from mistake, from superstition, and from ignorance. Give us believing, trusting hearts, not for fear, but for love's sake. May that ladder which Jacob saw with his head upon the stone be given also to those who have been taught to lie upon the ground with but a stone for their pillow. May the angels of God be seen ascending and descending; and though the bottom of the ladder be upon the ground, may the top be in heaven. So bless us, we beseech Thee, because Thou lovest us; and teach us to love Thee, and to live a life of love for Christ's sake. Amen.

KANSAS PREACHERS, ATTENTION.

The annual meeting of the Kansas Christian Ministerial Institute will be held at Emporia, Kans., April 28-30.

Alva W. Taylor, of Eureka, Ill., will deliver a series of four lectures under the general title, "The Social Mission of the Church." A. McLain will deliver one lecture. Some of our best Kansas talent is also to appear on the program, which will be published in full in the April issue of The Kansas Messenger.

Willis A. Parker and the Emporia Church extend a hearty welcome.

Every church in the state having a preacher should see that he is relieved of the local work and worry and sent to the institute. W. S. Lowe, Secretary.

Willing to Go Higher.

"Yes," said the old man, addressing his visitor, "I am proud of my girls, and should like to see them all comfortably married; and as I've made a little money they won't go to their husbands penniless. There's Margaret, twenty-five years old, and a real good girl. I shall give her five thousand dollars when she marries. Then comes Bet, who won't see thirty-five again, and she'll have ten thousand dollars; and the man who takes Dora, who is forty, will have fifteen thousand dollars with her."

The young man reflected a moment or so, and then nervously inquired, "You haven't one about fifty, have you?"—Home Herald.

THE MINISTRY AND THE CHURCHES.

We called attention two weeks ago to the interesting figures furnished by Dr. Carroll, the statistician, who has in charge the compilation of facts regarding the various religious bodies. These facts are secured through the regular media of census reports, denominational statistics and all other available means. They are not accurate, of course, for those denominations which have only the chance methods of gathering facts which the unregulated and fragmentary church reports furnish. But they are the nearest approach to the facts which can be obtained until some more adequate method of securing church statistics can be found.

We do not expect to be satisfied with these reports in all regards. No city is ever satisfied with the government report regarding its population. It is always certain that much of its size has been overlooked, and that the manner of taking the census is at fault and should be corrected at once. Denominations are like cities in this regard. There is a natural desire that the pride of numbers should be gratified. No body of people is wholly indifferent to its growth, and any failure to find the facts responding to its ambitions is naturally ascribed to the inadequacy or bias of the sources of information. We have not been surprised to see that some of our newspapers have denounced the report of Dr. Carroll as erroneous and misleading, affirming that the whole work of gathering religious statistics is so untrustworthy as to be practically worthless. Such commentators usually prefer to regard the reports which appear in the religious press as more trustworthy than the conclusions of trained statisticians.

But putting aside these amiable tokens of denominational zeal, we are confronted by the facts that our growth during the past year has been much less than in some former years, and that the loss of preachers from our ranks has reached nearly five hundred. Our ratio of preachers to churches has been low for some years, the lowest among related Protestant bodies. But we have not been prepared to face an actual loss, and especially of such proportions.

What are the reasons for this decline in our ministerial forces? It is not that death has depleted our ranks in unusual measure during the past year. Nor is it true that many of our ministers have gone from us to other bodies. There is always some loss from this source, but it is about made up by additions from the same bodies. The Disciples probably gain from fifty to one hundred ministers from the denominations around us, and our losses to them will not vary much from the same figure.

The fact most patent in this matter is the actual departure from the ministry of a considerable body of men every year. They find the inducements of a business career more inviting, or they become disabled and unable to continue in the work to which their lives were devoted. For this second group we have only reverence and affection. No men are more worthy of love and honor among us than those who have served without measure in the arduous task of leading men to the Lord.

But we have a word to speak regarding the others, who have left the ministry for other work, or are considering such a step. Do these brethren regard this labor as one to be lightly assumed and as lightly laid down? With a man who would actually leave the ministry because a business career offered him a better chance to get on in the world it would probably be useless to speak. Such a man's estimate of the work of the cross is on a different level from our own, and he would be little likely to give heed to anything that might be said. But there are those who feel that they have other and sufficient reasons for accepting other lines of activity.

We have received a letter from a minister of some years' experience who has been the pastor of several important churches and is now serving one second to but two or three in the state in which he resides. He informs us that he is resigning his work and is about to leave the ministry. His reasons are not those of old age, or ill health, or special opportunities for money making in other directions. Nor are they connected with doctrinal differences which have been made the cause of opposition to his work. His trouble is the lack of appreciation shown him by his people and the criticisms to which he has been subjected. Because of these facts this excellent man proposes to abandon the work to which he has devoted his life thus far and to accept some other vocation, even though it may be far less congenial.

We believe that the evil mentioned by this brother is a very real one. Many churches have the reputation of being difficult to please. Their members acquire the fine art of carving up the minister and his sermons along with the Sunday dinner roast. Nothing quite suits them. His sermons are too long or too short, or too dry or too humorous, or too doctrinal or too much devoted to current events. He does not call enough, or he calls too much. He does not study sufficiently or he spends more than the proper amount of time with his books. It is marvelous how many weaknesses and short comings can be discovered in a preacher when a congregation, or even a few people in it, really make the effort to discover them.

This is not a trouble which is likely to arise in a congregation whose members have some true and worthy experience of Christian life. It is usually the outgrowth of immaturity and lack of training in Christian work. To be sure there are ministers who have serious and fatal faults of method or disposition, but for the most part we believe a congregation can find sufficient good in the character and work of every consecrated preacher to warrant their standing by him as long as he abides with them. We shall have trouble in keeping ministers with their churches just so long as we depend in large measure upon the spasmodic revival efforts which recruit the membership without the training in the things of the word of God and the duties of the Christian life which alone makes church members of the consecrated and trustworthy sort.

But at the same time we do not believe that any minister is justified in giving up his work, much less in leaving the ministry, because of the hardships that work involves. The minister and the religious teacher alike face at the very beginning of their careers the probability, amounting almost to certainty, that they must sacrifice many financial advantages and must expect many difficult tasks. This is a part of the price they pay for the privilege of being good and efficient soldiers of Jesus Christ. There is no place for cowardice or retreat in that service; there is no discharge in that war. There is something lacking in the training which permits a minister to feel that his work may be lightly laid aside or exchanged for another sort. The churches must face with a new sense of awareness their obligations of helpfullness, support and sympathy to the ministry, and the ministers must likewise realize the solemn obligations to strong, resolute and continuous activity in this holiest of vocations. Success as men judge it may come or may tarry. The minister is not the servant of success, but the servant of Jesus Christ.

IN BRIEF.

Rev. F. B. Meyer of London expects to begin in April a tour of some four months preaching and organizing among the Free Churches of South Africa. He has been asked to conduct the South African convention—the annual gathering of the South African Christians for study, spiritual uplift and consultation.

The Lyman Beecher lectureship on preaching at Yale next year will be given by Canon H. Hensley Henson, rector of St. Margaret's Church, Westminster. He is one of the most liberal thinkers and most popular preachers of the Anglican Church.

"O matchless honor of unsought,
High privilege, surpassing thought,
That Thou shouldst call us, Lord, to be Linked in work-fellowship with Thee!
To carry out Thy wondrous plan,
To bear Thy messages to man;
'In trust' with Christ's own word of grace
To every soul of all the race."

The rest of religion is for the weary, not the lazy.

The Disciples in View of Their Centennial

Perry J. Rice

Foreword.

Dating the beginning of their movement from the time of the issuing of "The Declaration and Address" by Thomas Campbell in 1809, the Disciples are approaching the first centennial of their history. A definite program looking toward the proper celebration of the event has been arranged and is being executed with a degree of interest and enthusiasm most gratifying. Under these circumstances it is but natural that we should review and restate in a constantly increasing variety of forms the outstanding features of our position and plea. This series of essays is an attempt to do so in a simple, direct manner. In their preparation it has been the purpose of the writer to eliminate argument, and to present only such defense of the various positions taken as seems necessary to make them clear. It has been the feeling of the Disciples all along that the various features of their position are so catholic, so essentially true that they do not need defense, but statement merely. Not infrequently, however, have we been betrayed into the arena of debate, probably not without some advantage at times, but often with distinct loss of prestige and authority to the plea itself. Present conditions seem to call for a simple setting forth of the positions assumed by the Disciples in the conviction that such a presentation will serve as their best defense. The themes of the several essays to be presented are: "The Name," "The Creed," "The Ordinances," "The Plea," and "A Backward and a Forward Look." Of course the writer does not claim for his statement any sense of exhaustiveness or right to finality. Such a claim on the part of any one would in itself be a direct violation of one of the most essential features of the movement. The purpose is not to say the last word, but to present such an exposition of the Disciples' position as will serve as an apology for it to the man without, and help some who are already "of us" to a better grasp of its fundamental significance and its splendid adaptability to the temper of our times.

I. The Name.

The history of denominational names would form an interesting and informing study. They are usually significant of some fact or feature of the denomination which they designate, and stand for hard fought battles in the interest of freedom and truth. The names Presbyterian and Congregational each signifies a form of church polity. The term Methodist has an interesting history. It was applied to the Wesleys and others, half in derision on account of their methodical program of devotions. As students they had read Thomas á Kempis' "Imitation of Christ," Law's "Serious Call" and Taylor's "Holy Living and Dying," all of which are deeply devotional in character. They therefore set themselves to pray Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday noons. They meditated on Thomas á Kempis on Sunday from 3 to 4 o'clock, and on Wednesdays and Fridays from 12 to 1 o'clock they mused on the Passion. Living thus by rule their fellow-students were induced to call them Methodists as a nickname. Baptists were called such because of the exclusive practice of immersion. The United Brethren name is derived from a very thrilling incident in their history. Mr. Otterbein, a missionary of the German Reformed Church, was the founder of this denomination. When preaching in Pennsylvania, a Mennonite preacher by the name of Martin Boehm attended the services, and being invited, delivered a very impressive address, at the close of which Mr. Otterbein grasped his hand in token of approval and fellowship, exclaiming as he did so, "We are brethren." The Lutheran denomination, contrary to the expressed wish of the great reformer, persists in wearing his name, and in some other instances the names of men have been fastened to the movements within the church with which they were prominently identified. It is only by the most persistent opposition to it that the Disciples have been able to prevent the designation of themselves as Campbellites, after the Campbells, who were foremost in their early history. It is quite common also for churches to wear the name of one of the Apostles as a subordinate title, and different phases of the ministry of Christ sometimes occupy the same position. We have, therefore, such names as St. Peter's or St. Paul's or St. James' church and "The Church of the Immaculate Conception," "Church of the Redeemer" and "Calvary Church." A somewhat amusing instance of the use of the latter title came under the writer's notice some years ago. A church which had adopted the name "Calvary" was about to be dedicated, and on the invitations issued for that service the title of the church appeared, and under it the Scripture quotation, "When they came to a place called Calvary they crucified Him."

During the life time of Jesus his followers were quite universally styled disciples. Jesus so spoke of them, and they so regarded themselves, usually addressing him as "Master" or "Teacher." They were simply a band of students going from place to place with him, witnessing his works and receiving his instruction. In the course of a little time there was selected from the number of disciples a smaller group of "twelve whom he named apostles," the latter being a peculiar designation not worn by all of his followers. In the later apostolic history the individual followers of Christ were sometimes called "Saints," "Heirs of God" and "Christians," the latter name being evidently applied to them by those not identified with them and possibly very much in the same spirit as the term Methodist was applied to the Wesley's and their contemporaries. It is, however, the name by which the followers of Christ have quite generally been known in all subsequent history. Whatever other titles have been added, the name Christian has served as a sort of common denominator for all the followers of our Lord.

In the beginning the church wore no particular designating titles. It was simply styled "The Church." There are more than fifty references in the New Testament where no other terms are used, but in each instance it is understood that the reference is to that company of people who are followers of Christ and therefore the term Christian may be said to be implied. In other instances there are particular designations, as for instance when Christ said, "Upon this rock I will build my church." Paul salutes the "Church of God" at Corinth, and the churches in Judea are referred to collectively as "Churches of God." The Apostle sends salutation from all the "Churches of Christ" to the church which is at Rome. The church is known also figuratively as "The body of Christ" and as "The household of God."

As a people we have insisted upon the use of some of these New Testament names, and are therefore variously styled "Christians," "Disciples of Christ," "Disciples" when referring to individuals, and "Churches of Christ," "Christian Churches" and "Churches of the Disciples," when referring to congregations. Some of the more important reasons for this practice may be named. In the first place we have desired to be a New Testament people, and therefore have sought loyally to follow the precepts and precedents therein set down. The use of these New Testament designations tend toward union whereas all others serve to divide and to perpetuate division. The use of party names is strongly condemned, especially by Paul. Writing to the Corinthians he said: "For when one saith, I am of Paul; and another, I am of Apollas, are ye not men? What then is Apollas, and what is Paul? Ministers through whom ye believed and each as the Lord gave to him." Moreover it is perfectly apparent that party names build barriers which are hard to raze. If by some magic it were possible to obliterate these particular designations which have grown sacred with the years, we should take the longest possible stride toward a reunited Christendom. As Disciples we are determined that so far as we are concerned no such barrier to the complete reunion of the followers of Christ shall be suffered to exist.

But let no one suppose for a moment that we are wearing these names because we wish to monopolize them, or because we regard ourselves as alone worthy to wear them. We wear them because we prize the honor and delight, as we are able, to honor him to whom we owe first allegiance. The church is Christ's church, not Luther's or Calvin's or Wesley's, and it is our desire that all the followers of Christ shall, in the wearing of his name, exalt him above all others. Manifestly we cannot all be Christians of any one of the several types indicated by denominational names, but we may all be simply Christians or Disciples if we choose. Indeed this is the name we all own.

Those who choose to wear this honorable designation, however, should be mindful of the responsibility that it lays upon them. The mere fact that we choose to call ourselves Christians and to call our churches "Christian churches" or "Churches of Christ" may be of little consequence. We may indeed dishonor the very name we seek to honor, and we do so when we manifest a spirit other than his own and live and act contrary to his teaching and purpose. After all, that church is most completely Christ's which most completely does his will and thus fulfills its mission in the world. The church of Christ cannot be a worldly church; it cannot be a selfish church; it cannot be a narrow church; it cannot be a partisan church. If it is his church it will be glorious, wearing the garments of righteousness and having on the armour of aggressive peaceful conquest. It will be as broad in its sympathies as Christ himself, as unselfish as he was, as ready to sacrifice itself as he was to sacrifice himself, and as determined that the Kingdom of God should come in all of its fulness. It will be a church informed, purified, inspired and quickened in its every member. It will manifest his spirit and do the work which he has committed unto it. As Christ manifested the Father, so the church will manifest Christ unto the world, reproducing his life in its spirit and aims. If it is important, and it certainly is, that we should designate ourselves according to New Testament precept and precedent, it is tenfold more important that we should honor the designation. It is no light thing that we should be called after him who is the world's model of ethical and spiritual perfection. We are more honored in wearing his name than he is in having us wear it, and yet if as individuals and as churches we are truly his, he will be able to get for himself and for the Father glory and honor through our lives and service. For his sake as well as our own and for the world's, let us seek to wear the name worthily.

The Labor Problem and the Golden Rule

Arthur Holmes

Some good people believe that while difficulties exist in the way of industrial peace, these lie not in external conditions like hours of labor, wages, sanitary surroundings and safety appliances, but wholly in the will of the contracting parties. "If the Golden Rule were applied," they say, "all troubles between capital and labor would disappear." That is the panacea. It is ready made; it is at hand; it requires merely the disposition of the parties concerned to make the application. To study, discuss, write about, worry about or agitate only raises a cloud of obscuring dust which makes confusion worse confounded.

The solution looks plausible. No words can be plainer. "Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so unto them." That sounds to the point. It is personal, concrete, sufficient. Put yourself in the other man's place; then ask what you would like done.

There are common likes and dislikes well-nigh universal. Without them society could not hold together. Desire for happiness and aversion to pain are world-wide impulses. Nobody would like to have his healthy finger thrust into the fire and burned off.

Still, even such general rules fail sometimes. When the martyr rapturously rushed into the consuming flames, he could well judge another to the same soul-saving tortures and still sincerely quote the Golden Rule. Queen Mary could order executions all her life and leave behind a prayer book stained with tears of spiritual longings and marked with the signs of holy consolation. Equally sincerely could one sect burn new-born converts from paganism lest they backslide and so lose their eternal weight of glory. In our own days devout thousands interpreted this same rule both in support and in condemnation of slavery.

Under the circumstances of those days such actions were logical deductions from this principle. They were right; they were just; they were good—if only certain premises were allowed.

Since the days of burnings new methods of evangelism have been discovered. The end is the same, but the slow-growing experience of the dull-witted world has found new means of arriving at it. So the Golden Rule is always valid, but specific methods are learned but slowly, with infinite pains, with false starts along wrong paths, with all the pain and travail of this lumbering mass struggling up to clearer and more far-seeing viewpoints.

So the Golden Rule applies to labor problems. It is quite true that applications of this principle of love have lagged far behind public opinion, and in many clear instances obedience to its spirit would bring great results for good.

But try to apply it to other instances. How much wages should a workman receive? According to the rule, as much as his employer would like were the employer the workman. But he might "like" three times as much. Should he have it? No, only what is "just" or "right." What is just? That depends upon the supply of labor, the need, ability, cost of living—and so on through all the complexities of this intertwined world of ours. The workingman ought to have the most wages possible, the best education possible, the most comfortable dwellings possible under the circumstances. But there's the rub. The innocent "circumstances" turn out to be all the modifying effects of modern intricate social and economic conditions, plus all the results of all the effects of all the ages upon both employer and employe. To perfectly comprehend them would be "to trace their causes from primeval chaos and their sequences to the crack of doom."

In grasping this conception our mind involuntarily runs off to all the institutions of our land; even into their uttermost cracks and crannies does it peer, and then recoils upon itself almost ready to accept the radical resolve that the whole stone must be overturned, let the purblind creatures underneath dance and wriggle and run as much as they please.

Such a resolution, however, wastes itself by its own energy. Whatever comes will come slowly. Centuries-long neglect of the problem cannot be repaired in a day. The church may have the solution in her hand, not so ready made, perhaps, as to fit any customer in a moment, but still in the making.

Her ministers, with their analytic powers sharpened to an edge with years of hair-splitting, can grapple with this problem of labor as possibly no other man can; certainly better than the poor gropers after the light among uneducated toilers or the prejudiced capitalists. They ought to study economic problems as urgently as theology. They ought to think themselves through on some applications of the Golden Rule to every day things like: "How much should a day's wages be?" "How does the fundamental principle of labor unions agree with the fundamental principle of ethics?" Such questions should demand a solution from every minister. Then let him temper his conclusion with the charity of empiricism, remembering that his "conscience" in the matter is one-third personal judgment and two-thirds common sense, or it ought to be, and that the man who is growing is changing.

Our Place in the Universe

Sir Oliver Lodge

On this planet we are the highest of the forms of life that we see. You are apt to think that you are the highest that exists, whereas there is no reason for thinking so at all. We are sometimes asked whether other planets are inhabited. I think we may say we know that the moon is not; any life there may once have been on it appears now to be extinct its whole surface looks dead and inert. We sometimes think that the planet Mars is inhabited. Perhaps it is; but I venture to think that on the whole it is most probable that we are at the present time the only intelligently inhabited planet in the solar system.

Men have not been here long. I do not pretend to say how long. I may take it that the earth has gone through a long labor of preparation for the existence of the human race. We know less about the history of the human race than we know about the history of the planet.

Thus, then, the chances are that if we visit a planet, chosen at random, we shall find it either in the labor of preparation or in the state of rest after activity. The duration of the existence of a race akin to the human race may be but an episode in the life of a planet; and if the earth has been inhabited for only 1,000,000 out of 200,000,000 years, it may be conjectured that there is a chance of only 1 in 200 in favor of any other planet chosen at random being similarly inhabited. There is a great deal more to be said; this is only the first word, as it were, of an argument; but it is not to be wholly overlooked.

In our solar system, however, there are planets of all sizes—one a thousand times bigger than the earth—namely: Jupiter; others smaller than the earth; and there are still smaller lumps of matter careering around the sun, of which one occasionally falls on the earth and can be dug up. There are also large quantities of minute particles down even to separate atoms. The sun is so large that it has not had time to cool even on the surface. It is a blazing mass of gas, and is not likely to be inhabited; nor is Jupiter. Others are cool enough to be inhabited, but it is not clear whether they have reached the period of the human race. One or two may have reached a period at which something recognizably higher than the human race is existing upon it.

The solar system is but a fragment of the universe. Every star is a sun with a solar system. It is possible that there may be millions of planets inhabited by beings higher or lower than ourselves. What we see going on is what we call the process of evolution—from broken fragments to coherent masses, and to inhabited worlds—from chaos to cosmos; a struggle upward of the universe; from something lower and disorganized to something higher and organized.

As to how life originates on these planets, science is ignorant at present. It is an entire mystery. I would not have you build too much on that. I do not think it will always remain a mystery, nor would I have a theologian shaken in his views if science should discover something about the nature and origin of life. I want you to realize that this process of evolution is not a process which negatives or excludes the idea of divine activity. It is, I venture to say, a revelation to us of the manner of divine activity. It is the way the Deity works.

The attempt to show that evolution is unguided—that it is the result of absolute chance—fails. What is pointed to is not unguided random change, but guided change. The other could not be done in time.

What we have to realize in regard to our place in the universe is that we are intelligent, helpful and active parts of the cosmic scheme. We are among the agents of the Creator. One of the most helpful ideas of co-operation—helping one another. Co-operation—this in a new and stimulating sense—co-operation with the divinity himself.—Exchange.

THE CONGRESS BIBLIOGRAPHY

It is the custom of the Congress Secretaries to issue a list of books a short time previous to the Congress in the hope that as many as possible of those who attend will avail themselves of the privilege of reading upon the themes included in the program. We are publishing below a bibliography of the different topics which will be considered at Bloomington, Ill., at the Congress which meets March 31 and April 1 and 2. The interest in this gathering seems to be growing constantly. There are assurances that the attendance is to be large. Its central location and the well known hospitality of the Bloomington churches make this assurance doubly sure.

TWICE BLESSED.

In India, where most of the Christian Woman's Board of Mission's orphanages are located, there is another famine. It brings a chance not only to save the lives of hundreds of innocents, but to give them such Christian training as will make them effective agents in evangelizing and uplifting their country. In America, where all the benevolent association's orphanages are situated, the financial and industrial depression has made hundreds who were half orphans wholly dependent. This brings both an obligation and an opportunity. For every child that is adopted by the National Benevolent Association is guaranteed a thoroughly Christian up-bringing, generally in a private home to which he is transplanted from the orphanage.

"Easter Sunshine" is the title of the free cantata by Mrs. Jessie Brown Pounds that is being sent out by the Christian Woman's Board of Missions and National Benevolent Association. Order from either St. Louis or Indianapolis. It is time now to sow.

And you will find this observance of the resurrection festival twice blessed in the joy and uplift it brings to your own people, old and young, while they are helping to supply both temporal and eternal bread for the most needy and most worthy, the orphans of all lands.

A NEW CONGREGATION IN CUBA

Something over two years ago Bro. Menges opened up work in the town of Union, which is about twenty miles from Matanzas. At first he went every two weeks and later every week. The preaching of the Gospel was very well received and some of the people signified an intention of accepting Christ. But as there were no facilities for baptizing only one person was baptized and she came to Matanzas.

The first of last year I began to go to Union, as this became a part of my work. We were then meeting in a private schoolroom, with no place for a baptistry. Later we had to leave this place, and for six months had to meet in a private house. During this time I was looking for a building to rent and finally secured one, which has been arranged for services and with a baptistry. Not having a place for baptizing during the year I did not extend formal invitations, although a number indicated to me privately their desire to be with us.

With the building arranged for a chapel I took our student, Jacobo Gonzalez, and went to Union to spend the week from February 24th to 29th. After preaching and giving careful explanation of our work and ideas a chance was given to those who wished to make a public confession and give their pledge to follow the Master. So on Monday night we reaped the harvest that came from the two years of sowing for twenty-one made the confession. During the other nights enough came forward to make thirty-six in all.

On Wednesday we were prepared to baptize and baptized three, these being the first true baptisms ever seen in Union. Thursday was the big day. In the afternoon I baptized eight women and young ladies and in the evening six young men, a total of fourteen for that day. Friday six more obeyed their Lord and Master. Thus in this week we were enabled to reap for Christ the harvest that came after much delay from the sowing of His word. Now we have a new congregation with twenty-three babes in Christ to begin with. They have a desire to know and to learn, and by their acts have shown their willingness to obey. Now they must be cared for and nurtured that they may blossom forth into beautiful Christian lives.

Of those that have made the confession the most of them will be baptized at a very early date we pray. We ask the prayers and interest of all for this new body of believers. They need a house of worship and a man to lead them to greater usefulness.

Nearing the End.—Joe Lincoln, whose Cape Cod folks are well-known characters, recently attended a lecture. When asked how he liked it, he related this little story.

"A stranger entered a church in the middle of the sermon and seated himself in the back pew. After awhile he began to fidget. Leaning over to the white-haired man at his side, evidently an old member of the congregation, he whispered:

"'How long has he been preaching?'

"'Thirty or forty years, I think,' the old man answered. 'I don't know exactly.'

"'I'll stay then,' decided the stranger. 'He must be nearly done.'"—Everybody's Magazine.

The Law of Self Control*

H. L. Willett

There are four temperance lessons this year, chosen two from Isaiah, one from Ephesians and one from Proverbs. Two of them begin with the word "woe," one opens with the question, "Who hath woe?" and the fourth warns in its opening sentence against deception by vain words. There may have been times in the past when the temperance lessons seemed superfluous or tiresome, just as the teachings drawn from the Bible regarding human liberty must have seemed to an earlier generation only the partisan statements of people who were opposed to the "divine institution of slavery." But in our time the struggle against the drink traffic has become so important a part of Christian activity that no effort is counted too much and no insistence is too frequent. A future generation will look back on the struggle for the overthrow of the liquor power precisely as we now recall the efforts for the overthrow of slavery, for the saloon is as certainly doomed as was the slave block.

The Analogy of Slavery.

It has often been said that the Bible has many illustrations of the uses of wine and that such a practice is nowhere condemned. It is often said that the example of Jesus in turning the water into wine and the admonition of Paul and Timothy to drink no longer only water, but to take a little wine for the stomach's sake, are the proof that it is the abuse and not the use of strong drink which the Bible condemns. This is perfectly true. But it must be remembered that the Bible nowhere reveals the presence of an organized liquor traffic in the society which it describes. The argument in favor of the use of wine as drawn from the Bible is precisely parallel to that used in behalf of slavery. Many people argued earnestly for slavery as a divine institution because the patriarchs possessed slaves. Yet a better reading of Bible truth has shown that the suppression of the slave traffic is due to the Christian spirit in the world, and that no isolated instances of slave holding on the part of excellent but uninstructed men in Biblical history can become an argument for a system against which the enlightened conscience of Christendom protests with horror.

The Proverbs.

The Book of Proverbs, from which this first temperance lesson for the year is taken, is a collection of wise comments upon life. It is the treasury of practical wisdom among the Hebrews. Proverbs are the small packages into which the fruit of experience is packed away. They are the outgrowth of a nation's life. They are composed by all sorts of people and are gradually polished in the give and take of conversation until they become smooth and brilliant enough to pass as valuable possessions from hand to hand and mind to mind. In nearly every nation there is some famous wise man who stands as a sort of representative of proverb-making. Among the Chinese it was Confucius; among the Persians, Zoroaster. With the English it was King Alfred, and with the Americans, Benjamin Franklin.

The Sins That Kill.

The Hebrews regarded King Solomon as the wisest of the ancients, and when the process of collecting proverbs began his name was associated with their origin and he was known as the great proverb maker. The Book of Proverbs is, however, an anthology of wise sayings from the days of Solomon down to the Greek period of Old Testament history. Among the subjects with which the proverb makers dealt in Israel was that of temperance. No sins were more severely censured than those of the drunkard and the glutton. The consequences of falling into these vile habits were pointed out in telling words. The wise men affirmed that temperance in all things was essential to success. One must not sleep too much lest he should come to poverty (20:13); one must not be a glutton or a companion of such, lest he shame his father (28:7); one must not be intemperate in the use of words, for there is more hope of a fool than of him (29:20); one must hold a careful restraint upon his temper, for the discretion of a man maketh him slow to anger (19:11), and the proverb makers liked to repeat the couplet,

"He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty,
And he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city." (16:32).

Special care was also taken to emphasize the danger of sensual indulgence. The invitations of the strange woman were but openings of the door to Sheol (5:1-14). In fact the whole of chapters 5-7 is devoted to the perils of indulgence in passion and the neglect of that restraint over the lower nature which is the obligation and glory of chastity.

But as indulgence in strong drink with its consequent train of woes was the sin which most commonly brought men to poverty and unhappiness, so the proverb makers reserved for it their most impressive warnings. The present study is an example of their solicitude to save their people from the sin and the folly of this vile indulgence. It was in their sight the cause of wounds, fighting and estrangements. It closed men's eyes to beauty and truth. Its fascination was as deadly as that of the serpent; its illusions were sometimes delightful at first, but more frequently full of deep horror and repulsion; its utterances were the babblings of idiocy or the curses of inflamed hatred; its indulgence was the cause of foul and disgusting malady. Like a man tossed upon the deck of a boat the drinker was sick and nauseated. He was like one thrown hither and thither at the top of the mast of a swaying ship. Dull-eyed and sodden, he was an object of disgust and abhorence to all who looked upon him. When beaten and bruised in his maudlin fights he hardly knew it. And yet the bitterness of death in this dreadful descent to the Avernus of drunkenness was reached when awakening from the stupor of such a debauch the victim is conscious not so much of his shameful condition as of his desire for more of the same enemy he has taken into his lips to steal away his brains. He is not yet clear of mind, but he is already half resolved to seek for further oblivion in strong drink. "When shall I awake? I will seek it yet again."

This loathsome picture of drunkenness was probably drawn by the wise man from the scenes he had witnessed now and then among the people of his time. How much greater would have been his horror of drunkenness if he could have lived in our own day, when it has become a skillfully planned art to catch the young and convert them by means of the solicitations of the saloon into just such bestial and ruined specimens of the traffic. If there were as few victims of this wrecking business now even as ancient Palestine used to see it would still be worth while to cry aloud and spare not. But when the number of drunkards is computed and the vile influences which gather about the saloon are considered it is seen to be the duty of every one in whose soul burns a sense of dignity, of honor, of sobriety and of self-respect, to say nothing of the fear of God, to use every influence within reach, to throttle this serpent that biteth, this adder that stingeth.

Little children cannot be taught too early that the only safe temperance is abstinence. Young men cannot be too urgently warned that the beginning is easy and the end is death. Communities cannot be too impressively convinced that the saloon can only live by the sufferance and indifference of Christian people, and that the only safe procedure is to destroy it without delay.

Dr. Alexander McKenzie in an address to a gathering of college girls advised them to put to themselves the following questions: "'How does it affect people to meet me?' I don't mean what you are doing, that is easily noted, but somebody passes you on the stairs every day for a whole term, somebody sees you now and then; what is the impression? Is the one that meets you braver, more patient, more cheerful? Does she love God more How does it affect people to meet me? And then follows this truth: It is possible for me so to live that as many as touch me shall be made braver and better and diviner."

Certainties in Religion

Silas Jones

Luke wrote his gospel to confirm the faith of Theophilus. The latter had been taught concerning the fundamental matters of the faith, but it was desirable that he should have further instruction. In writing for him, Luke has written for us. He gives us the facts upon which our faith can stand. Christ lived, taught, wrought mighty signs, was put to death, and rose again and showed Himself to His chosen ones. These are the facts that have made Christianity a conquering religion. If we are certain about them we can look forward to future conquests. If we grow doubtful about them the power of our faith is gone. We may talk learnedly about Christianity being independent of historic fact, but the Christianity that knows nothing of Jesus risen is not what the world has been accepting. Luke is still a better guide than the modern philosopher who evolves his Christianity out of his inner life.

The Building from God.

Of all the institutions of society the church is the one that stands unequivocally committed to the doctrine of the future life. It goes to men and says to them, "You must live for eternity. The present is good, you ought to use it well. But remember that the account is not complete when death overtakes you." The church has at times forgotten the significance of the present life in order to impress upon men the importance of the life to come. But a greater mistake would be made if there were no teaching concerning the future. The deceptions which are practiced upon people of intelligence by occultists of all sorts testify to the longing of the heart to know what is beyond the grave. The church has its own certainty in the resurrection of Christ. Let it continue to rely upon it.

The Trusted Guide.

"I know whom I have believed." Here is a fact of Christian experience. Those who have most fully committed their lives to Christ find that he can solve for them the perplexing problems of confronting every intelligent man. Are you misunderstood? Christ himself was misunderstood and his greatest disciples have been mocked and persecuted because the world did not know their aims. But are the pessimists found among the disciples of Jesus? Are the missionaries to heathenism sending back wails of despair? No, we must look for the pessimist in other quarters. Men who endure for the sake of Christ are hopeful. The very hardships they meet bring them into closer fellowship with the Master, and that fellowship is so full of meaning that the pain of the service is forgotten. Any disciple who goes about the work of his Master with whole-hearted determination will know from his own experience and not from the reports of others that Christ may be trusted.

Deliverance From Sin.

Can I know that I have been delivered from sin? Is there not danger of self-deception? We may answer both questions on the affirmative. It is human to assume a perfection which we do not have. There is a Pharisee in every one of us. We have to be on our guard lest we boast of our righteousness. But difficult though it is for men to avoid deceiving themselves, the task is not impossible. The Lord has endowed a majority of people with common sense and he expects them to use it in their religion. They can bring their conduct to the test of Christ. They can know whether he gives them power to overcome their besetting sins. They can have the joy of deliverance. "We know that we are of God." "We know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an understanding that we know Him that is true, and we are in Him that is true."

Missions in the Philippines

Incidents and Illustrations.

I saw a sign the other day in the crowded part of Chicago's worst ward, "Wanted: Concrete Laborers." That is just what the Lord wants in our home-missionary work to-day—not just people to sing about it, or talk about it in the abstract way, but "concrete laborers," who are willing either to do the work first-hand themselves, in the hard places, or else who will put their hands down deep in their pockets and give till it hurts,—for my country.—Mrs. B. W. Firman.

An interesting and insignificant ceremony took place recently in the town of Saravia, in the Philippines. Converts of the American Baptist mission resolved to burn the images they had formerly worshipped, and held a service in the chapel, at which Exod. 20:4, 5 was carefully read and explained by the pastor, who writes: "Immediately after the meeting the brethren took the images, which had been put under the table in the chapel during the service, and carried them out into the market-place, where I burnt them. There were about 300 people in the market-place, and they were very much astonished. Some of them were angry, and some were afraid."

A missionary tells of a big Spanish Bible in the house of a native in Santa Cruz which men who will not go to a mission will go there from other towns to read. As a result, several new homes in towns twenty or thirty miles from Santa Cruz are open to the missionaries.

Martin Abysmo, a native Philippine preacher, says that he had preached and taught faithfully, but that his people never did more than idly listen till he stripped, and shouldered his hoe, and led them into the rice-fields, and stayed with them and helped them till the work was done.—C. E. World.

A Message on the Topic.

By Robert E. Speer.

Probably not one reader of The Christian Endeavor World is one cent richer because of the American ownership of the Philippines. Probably the majority of the readers of The Christian Endeavor World have given many cents which have gone out to the Philippine Islands. Nothing could be further from the truth than the contention of some that our acquisition of the Philippines was, and our retention of the Philippines is, a piece of selfishness. The American people will do far more for the Philippines than the Philippines ever can do for the American people, save as they furnish another opportunity for us, by obedience to the law of unselfishness, to enrich ourselves at no man's expense, but from God's grace.

Those alone who have known the Philippine Islands for years are able to measure the tremendous advance which the Islands are making politically and intellectually under the guidance of the American government and intellectually and spiritually with the help of American Christians. The addition of thousands each year to the Protestant churches is no adequate measure of the work that is being done. New ideals of religion and character, new conceptions of pleasure and duty, and a new spirit are growing up in no small part as a result of the work of the teachers and preachers who are the gift of the American people to the people of the Philippines.—C. E. World.

WITH THE WORKERS

Doings of Preachers, Teachers, Thinkers and Givers

J. T. Connor, of Colby, Kan., is better, after a serious illness.

J. A. Jayne, of Belmar, Pa., is on a lecture tour in the east.

W. G. Alcorn has removed from Bethany, W. Va., to Cauton, Mo.

J. V. Coombs began a good meeting at Chickasha, Okla., February 20.

Julius Stone takes charge of our mission church at La Crosse, Wis.

L. H. Barnum has been conducting a good meeting at Kingman, Kan.

Geo. E. Jones has entered upon his work as minister at Marshall, Mo.

S. M. Martin is in his fourth meeting with the First Church, Jacksonville, Fla.

The wedding is announced of R. T. Maxey, evangelist of Des Moines, Iowa.

T. J. Golightly has accepted the pastorate of the church at Shenandoah, Ia.

Boen and Ridenour, evangelists, began a meeting at Eldorado, Kan., February 14.

The church at Grant City, Mo., gets A. N. Cooper, late of Laurens, Iowa, as minister.

After a meeting at Moravia, Iowa, B. W. Hastings will give half-time to that work.

Lee B. Myers, minister at Turon, Kan., dedicated the new church house there, February 16.

E. M. Johnson, of Geneva, Neb., has accepted a call to Kearney and will move there May 1.

W. A. Parker, minister at Emporia, Kan., will hold a meeting with home forces some time in March.

Miss Una Dell Berry is helping Joseph A. Serena and the Central Church, Syracuse, N. Y., in a revival meeting.

E. A. Child recently opened up his ministry at the Highland Park Church, Los Angeles, Cal., with a meeting.

A. R. Spicer is looking forward to pleasant experiences with his people in Dixon, Ill. His pastorate begins well.

The Oklahoma city auxiliary to the C. W. B. M. has chosen for its living link Miss Mary Kingsbury, of Bilaspur, India.

W. H. Scrivner has been asked to hold a series of meetings in the First Church, Topeka, Kan., where Chas. A. Finch ministers.

H. J. Hostetler began his fourth year's labor with the First Church, Virden, Ill., February 2, with an increase of $150 in salary.

Ralph V. Calloway and his people of Atlanta, Ill., have almost doubled their previous March offerings by raising $75 this year.

The Canton (Mo.) Church enters on the fourth week of its meeting conducted by Pastor Buckner and singers E. V. Ridenour and daughter with much encouragement, the total additions already numbering forty-two.

H. C. Littleton and the congregation at Clarion, Iowa, are happy in seeing the last of their debt, amounting to $11,000, wiped out.

J. H. Beard closed a week's meeting at Grand Chain, Ill., March 1. He will take up the work at Grand Chain, April 1, for full time.

Nelson Gardner, of Prescott, Ia., has accepted a call from the church at Kensington, Kan. This church is the strongest in Smith County.

S. S. Offutt has resigned at the Central Christian Church, Columbus, Ind., and will either locate elsewhere or enter the evangelistic field.

J. M. Crutcher, of Higginsville, Mo., lectured on temperance and local option, in the church at Lexington, Mo., Thursday evening, recently.

Mt. Zion Church, in Marion county, Missouri, recently made an offering for education that amounted to $167. Chas. A. Lockhart is minister.

Elmer Ward Cole, of Hutchinson, Kan., delivered a lecture at Macksville, Kan., Friday evening, February 28, when a crowded house greeted him.

H. G. Hedden began work last month in Concordia, Kan. The outlook is cheering. The church made an offering of eleven dollars for foreign missions.

The five auxiliaries to the C. W. B. M. in the Pomona, Cal., district contributed over one thousand dollars in cash and pledges at their recent district convention.

W. T. Clarkson, of New York City, has been asked by the C. W. B. M. to take the work at Rome, Ga., as a missionary pastor. He will enter upon his duties there April 1.

Denver, Ill., has reached and forwarded its Foreign Missions apportionment of $55. B. H. Cleaver is in the midst of his fourth year's work with this delightful congregation.

The church at Conyers, Ga., E. Everett Hollingworth, minister, will have E. E. Violett, Mrs. Violett and Frank M. Charlton in a meeting beginning the last week in May.

Excellent reports come from the work of Clyde Darsie at Quincy, Ill. A new building is being quietly talked and the project seems to be more favorably received than ever before.

Chas. E. McVay will sing in a four weeks' meeting at Fremont, Neb., in October, where I. H. Fuller ministers. This is the third revival in which Bro. McVay has assisted Bro. Fuller.

W. M. Cunningham and Joseph A. Kay have ended a helpful meeting with the East Side Church, Sumner, Ill. There were forty-six additions to the congregation. These brethren are now in a meeting at Bridgeport.

Baxter Waters, Duluth, Minn., is interesting young people in a series of sermons, of which the following are some of the themes: 1. "Doers and Dodgers." A study in shaking and shirking. 2. "Man was not Born to Read." An inquiry into uses and abuses of books. 3. "Top or Bottom?" A search for the keys of success. 4. "Sermon on Chastity." The problem of personal purity.

F. L. Davis has been called to his old home at Heyworth, Ill., by the illness of his father, which resulted fatally March 7. Before returning to the Atlantic coast Bro. Davis can be secured for one or two meetings in this state.

Chas. C. S. Rush, of Imperial, Cal., will enter Christian University the first of April, having resigned his work at Imperial, where he has strengthened the work. J. C. Stivers, of La Junta, Colo., recently held the church a good meeting.

Felipe Jimenez, evangelist, and E. T. Westrup, pastor, are in the midst of a successful revival in the C. W. B. M. mission church at Monterey, Mexico. Fifty-seven confessions are reported in the first eight days and the meeting continues with growing interest.

J. E. Lynn has been granted a six months' leave of absence from his labors in Warren, O. The church will bear the expenses of himself and family on a visit to western states. His labors in Warren have been most successful. During the four years of his ministry 577 persons have been received by him into the church, a total of $41,566 has been raised by the church and its societies, $8,580 of which was for missions.

MUSIC STUDENTS

Should Have Steady Nerves.

The nervous system of the musician is often very sensitive and any habit like coffee drinking may so upset the nerves as to make regular and necessary daily practise, next to impossible.

"I practise from seven to eight hours a day and study Harmony two hours," writes a Mich. music student. "Last September I was so nervous I could only practise a few minutes at a time and mother said I would have to drop my music for a year.

"This was terribly discouraging, as I couldn't bear the thought of losing a whole year of study. Becoming convinced that my nervousness was caused largely by coffee, and seeing Postum so highly spoken of, I decided I would test it for a while.

"Mother followed the directions carefully and I thought I had never tasted such a delicious drink. We drank Postum every morning instead of coffee; and by November I felt more like myself than for years, and was ready to resume my music.

"I now practise us usual, do my studying and when my day's work is finished I am not any more nervous than when I began.

"I cannot too highly recommend Postum to musicians who practise half a day. My father is a physician and recommends Postum to his patients. Words cannot express my appreciation for this most valuable health beverage, and experience has proven its superiority over all others." "There's a Reason."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

THE CHICAGO CHURCHES.

Victor F. Johnson has been engaged for another year as pastor of the Maywood Church.

Meetings of the new Oak Park Church will begin there next Sunday. There are fifty members in the organization.

In a meeting with home forces in the Irving Park Church, W. F. Rothenburger, pastor, there have been 18 additions, nearly all adults. Some of these are strong men.

W. D. Endres and his people of Elgin, Ill., will give $25.00 in their March offering.

NEW LIVING-LINKS.

The March offering has brought to the office of the Foreign Society much cheer in many ways. The old living-link churches, that is, those enrolled before October 1st, 1907, are standing by their missionaries loyally. Not one is expected to fail.

We rejoice also to enroll a large number of new Living-links, as follows:

Bonham, Texas, Chas. M. Schoonover, minister; Gainesville, Tex., G. L. Bush, minister; Greenville, Tex., W. T. Hilton, minister; Midland, A. C. Parker, minister; Norwood, O., W. J. Shelburne, minister; Evanston, O., Roy E. Deadman, minister; Mansfield, O., M. G. Buckner, minister; Findlay, O., John Mullen, minister; Pittsburg, Kans., Ernest E. Denny, minister; Wichita, E. W. Allen, minister; Emporia, W. A. Parker, minister; Moberly, Mo., W. B. Taylor, minister; Carrollton, Mo., R. H. Sawyer, minister; Beatrice, Neb., J. E. Davis, minister; Fayetteville, Ark., Frank Thompson, minister; Los Angeles, Cal. (Magnolia Ave.), J. P. McKnight, minister; Nashville, Tenn. (Vine St.), W. J. Shelburne, minister.

A number more of Living-links are expected after Children's Day. We would all rejoice to report a total of 100 Living-link churches at the National Convention, New Orleans, October next.

BURIAL OF MRS. THOMPSON, DAUGHTER OF ALEXANEER CAMPBELL.

Mrs. Virginia Campbell Thompson, third child of the second wife of Alexander Campbell, was buried at the Campbell Cemetery, Bethany, March 8. She died at her home, in Washington, D. C., March 6. The funeral service was conducted in the "upper parlor" of the old Campbell homestead, now the home of J. J. Barclay. It was in this same room just forty-two years ago to the day that the funeral service of her father was held. The service conducted by Prof. Phillip Johnson was simple and pleasing. A male quartette from the college sang. President Cramblet and Prof. Taylor had part in the service.

Of the fourteen children of Alexander Campbell only two are now living, viz., William Campbell, of Wellsburg, and Mrs. Decima Campbell Barclay. Both were present at the funeral, besides members of their families and other near relatives. The professors of Bethany College acted as pallbearers.

Mrs. Thompson was born January 24, 1834. She was married to Wm. R. Thompson, in October, 1863. After her marriage she moved to Mr. Thompson's home, in Louisville. After his death, in 1877, she became postmistress of Louisville, Ky., which position she held for thirteen years. In recent years she has held a position in the Congressional Library. She leaves two sons and a daughter. Mrs. Thompson was a woman of ability and energy and great kindliness.

A GOOD START.

The churches are making a good start in the March offering. Comparing the receipts from the churches for the first eleven days of March with the corresponding time last year, gives $11,786 for this year, against $8,642 last year, a gain of $3,144. The number of contributing churches reported for eleven days of this year is 554, against 446 last year, a gain of 108. The gains are not as large as we had hoped, but large enough to encourage us to expect even better things in the weeks to come.

It is but due the churches to state that the first and second Sundays in March this year were stormy in almost every part of the country. This fact has no doubt hindered the offerings somewhat, especially with that splendid body of missionary churches in the country districts. However, they can be relied upon to rally to the work as the weather opens up.

Let it be remembered that the offering has only started. It will continue all through March and April and until every missionary church is enrolled.

Another encouraging feature is, that seventeen new Living-link churches have reported, the greatest number for the corresponding time in our history, and a number more are expected to join the ranks as the campaign continues.

We ask the churches to keep the offering in mind until every congregation interested in world-wide missions has responded. The weather has been bad, there has been much complaint about money stringency, but these hindrances should only nerve us to even greater effort and larger victories. The reports from the mission fields are all we have any right to expect. Indeed, many of them are simply thrilling.

ILLINOIS SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS.

The Inter-Denominational State Sunday School convention meets at Dixon, May 19-21, '08. This is the celebration of the 50th year of organized Sunday School work. For that reason the jubilee session will be a great gathering. In as much as the Sunday School has grown to be the greatest agency of the church for the study of the Word of God, and in as much as we have no great separate special gathering for the advancement of our Sunday School interests, other than a sort of a side issue at our state conventions, it behooves us as a people to show our moral consistence by sending at least one delegate from each of our schools to this great gathering where the entire three days are devoted to nothing else but the best and latest methods of Bible study, teaching and school management. Will not all of our superintendents and teachers take this in hand and see that your schools have at least one or more delegates present? Our people are making a great record in "Teacher Training Classes" why not push to the front along all lines of aggressive up-to-date Bible school work. Some of the greatest leaders in the world along special lines of Sunday Schcol work will be here. Dixon invites you. The importance of the work urges you. Our position as a religious body demands that we take advance ground in this great work. Select your delegates at once. There ought to be 500 members of the Christian Church at the Jubilee State Sunday School convention at Dixon May 19-21. I appeal to all our state, district, county and township officers—COME.

THE CENTRAL INDIANA MINISTERIAL INSTITUTE.

Third Christian Church, Indianapolis, March 9 and 10.

The first institute of the Christian ministers of central Indiana convened at the Third Christian Church, Indianapolis, Monday, March 9, at 1:45 p. m., and was opened with a devotional service by J. P. Myers.

The first address was given by O. E. Tomes, State President of Christian Endeavor, on the subject, "What Shall We Do With Christian Endeavor." He is of the opinion that the problem is not so much what to do with Christian Endeavor as what to do with the young APPENDICITIS.

Grape-Nuts as a Reconstructing Food.

The number of cases of appendicitis which get well by proper feeding and nursing is not less remarkable than the number of cases which were formerly operated on only to find that the operation was unnecessary.

While looking for the cause of this disease it is well to remember that excessive starch fermentation may be considered a frequent cause, and that suggests more care in the use of starchy foods.

Grape-Nuts can be retained on the most sensitive stomach, and is extremely nourishing—just the ideal food for appendicitis cases.

"Last spring I was taken ill with appendicitis," writes an Ind. man. "The doctor told me not to be alarmed, for he would do the best he could to save me from the operating table.

"He advised me to eat nothing for two weeks, during which time I became so weak I could hardly move. The trouble began to leave me and I began to eat fruits and milk, but I did not regain the strength I had before I was sick.

"A friend of mine recommended Grape-Nuts. I tried it and it worked wonders with me. I soon began to gain in strength, and in a month was as strong as ever.

"I don't think I ever used a food that did me so much good. I now weigh 160 lbs., as against 130 before I was sick, all due to Grape-Nuts and regular exercise.

"My muscles are like iron and I can do the hardest work. Being employed in a printing office, I have to think a lot, and my mind is clear, thanks to Grape-Nuts." "There's a Reason." Name given by the Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

people. Christian Endeavor arose from the evangelistic spirit among the young people and should be held to the first principle. W. H. Allen, of Muncie, who probably has the strongest society in the state, led the discussion.

The address at 3 p. m. was by C. H. Winders, on the "Psychology of Conversion." Mr. Winders claimed that salvation came through sonship, that conversion was not merely a new impulse to lead a new kind of life, that is was not information, not conformation but transformation. L. H. Stine led the discussion by declaring that no man can presume to ignore our modern way of thinking in the study of gospel phenomena any more than he can ignore the Copernican theory in the study of God's stars.

The evening sermon was by R. W. Abberley on "The Secret of the Preacher's Power." The speaker claimed that the preacher should be a man of character, training, tact and power. He should be spiritually minded, clean of thought and action, that he must study people as well as sermons, and that he must always have a message.

The Tuesday morning session began with a devotional hour led by Elvet E. Moorman. In the absence of L. C. Howe, who was to have given an address on "How to Have a Successful Prayer Meeting," W. D. Bartle, who was expected to lead in the discussion, took up the main address and made an excellent speech.

The 10:30 address was by Allan B. Philputt, on the "Modern Viewpoint." The speaker defined the modern viewpoint as "open mindedness to the truth." The modern spirit is not destructive but constructive. It is not negative but investigative. The dogmatic attitude develops more heat than light. We all want the truth and the only safeguard against delusion is open mindedness toward the truth.

L. E. Brown, in leading the discussion, contended that the definition of the modern view point was not complete in that it did not include the many extreme positions of the radical critics.

At the Tuesday afternoon session E. L. Day led the devotions.

In the absence of Frank E. Janes, who was to have delivered the address on "What Constitutes Our Pastoral Obligation," T. J. Clark, who had planned to lead the discussion, took up the main theme and gave a fine talk, calling attention to the fact the pastor has a great obligation growing out of his relation to the people and the growth of the times.

E. L. Day opened the discussion and added that the pastor should systematize his work and use every possible effort to win souls. T. W. Grafton announced that he had made 700 calls the previous week, by proxy, and proved that such calling, done in the name of the church by its stronger members, was the best kind of pastoral visitation.

The 3 o'clock address was made by B. F. Dailey on "Preaching the Kingdom." True religion is a patriarchal dispensation. The expression, "Kingdom of God," is figurative. In only one place does Jesus liken the kingdom of God to the kingdoms of this world. He tells what it is "like unto" and that in mixed parables. Let no one attempt to arrange the metaphors into a systematic whole. Christ can't be both "door" and "shepherd."

The institute reached its climax in the masterly address by Herbert L. Willett on "The Preacher, the Man and the Message." He called attention to the greatness and the sterling worth of the minister's work with its ceaseless activity, its many sorrows and troubles, its meager salary and its great demand upon the strength and energy of the man.

The Silver Lining

A Rift in the Clouds of Darkness and Despair.

Others Will Help You If You Will Only Help Yourself.

The clouds are dark and lowering. You are hourly expecting the blinding flash of lightning and the crash of thunder. Troubles crowd thick around you. If you have health and strength you can meet them like a man. Be ready when the storm breaks. How can you stand up and be strong when you lose sleep and memory, your digestion is impaired, your vitality weakened, your stomach overloaded and overworked. Here lies the secret of strength, mental and bodily vigor. Buy a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at the cost of only 50 cents. They will perform all the functions of your tired-out stomach, allow it to rest and restore it to its normal phase of activity.

Use them once, you will use them twice, finally you will find you cannot do without them.

We want you to be convinced of the truth of our assertion that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are infallible in their cure and by writing to-day to F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich., you will receive by return a free sample package.

This is not a secret prescription or patent remedy; the formula has been given free to the world, and physicians are universally in accord as to their excellent and recuperative properties.

Space will not permit us to give you any idea of the testimonials to the efficacy of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets which arrive by every mail. One extract will suffice: "Medical authorities prescribed for me for three years for catarrh of the stomach without cure, but to-day I am the happiest of men after using only one box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. I cannot find appropriate words to express my good feeling. I have found flesh, appetite, and sound rest from their use."

With strength to put up a good fight, hope will rise again, you will gradually overcome your obstacles, the clouds will show their silver lining and you will bless the Stuart Tablets which showed you the way to health, strength, contentment and prosperity.

Each evening session was begun with a song and praise service by the Third Church Chorus Choir under the efficient leadership of Mr. Riddale. The ladies of this prosperous congregation served elegant meals in the building and the different rest hours were happily spent in a helpful fellowship. The enrollment committee consisting of O. E. Tomes and E. L. Day, reported a registered attendance of 88 ministers. There were many others in attendance at every session. A brief constitution was adopted, which arranges for another institute in Indianapolis next March. Officers were elected as follows: President, T. W. Grafton; Vice-President, L. E. Brown; Secretary-Treasurer, V. W. Blair; Program Committee, C. H. Winders, O. E. Tomes, R. E. Moss. The first institute was a success excepting a few blunders by the secretary.

THE WIFE IN THE SHADOW.

One of the most pathetic spectacles in American life is that of the faded, outgrown wife standing helpless in the shadow of her husband's prosperity and power, having sacrificed her youth, beauty, and ambition—nearly everything that the feminine mind holds dear—to enable an indifferent, selfish, brutish husband to get a start in the world.

It does not matter that she burned up much of her attractiveness over the cooking stove; that she lost more of it at the washtub, and in scrubbing and cleaning, and in rearing and caring for their children during the slavery of her early married life, in her unselfish effort to help him get on in the world. It does not matter how much she suffered during those terrible years of poverty and privation; just as soon as the selfish husband begins to get prosperous, finds that he is getting on in the world, feels his power, he often begins to be ashamed of the woman who has sacrificed everything to make his success possible.

It does not matter that the wife sacrified her own opportunity for a career, that she gave up her most cherished ambitions in order to make a ladder for her husband to ascend by. When he has once gotten to the top, like a wily, diplomatic politician, he often kicks the ladder down. He wants to make a show in the world; he thinks only of himself. His poor, faded, worn-out wife, standing in his shadow, is not attractive enough for him now that he has gotten up in the world.

Many American wives look with horror upon the increasing fortunes of their husbands, which their sacrifices have helped to accumulate, simply because they fear that their stooped forms, gray hairs, calloused hands, and the loss of the comeliness which slipped from them while they were helping their husbands to get a start, are likely to deprive them of the very paradise of home and comforts which they have dreamed of from their wedding day. They know that their hard work and sacrifices and long hours and sufferings in bringing up a family are likely to ruin their prospects and that they may even drive them out of the Eden of their dreams.

Nothing approaching this work has ever been attempted before. In a series of splendid pictures the great and impressive scenes in the Bible story are depicted, true in color, costume, landscape, and all details to the life, the country and the time. ¶ To make the men and women of the Bible actual, living characters to their pupils is one of the first duties of the Sunday-School teachers, and no better help can they find for this than in the Tissot pictures. ¶ The whole world acknowledges that J. James Tissot was the greatest artist that ever lived, so far as Biblical subjects are concerned.

Only the unparalled success in the higher-priced editions makes possible this phenomenally low offer now. ¶ These pictures have received the unqualified endorsement of the leading clergymen and Sunday-School teachers throughout the United States. ¶ Nothing could be more helpful, and interesting, and delightful, when one is reading the Bible, than such a graphic interpretation of sacred stories. ¶ In no other way can the Bible stories be made so real and actual to children. Should be in every home.

UTAH.

Salt Lake City—Two baptisms at prayer meeting, March 4, 3 additions Sunday, March 8. Albert Buxton.

WASHINGTON.

Spangle—The pastor at Oakesdale, Washington, A. A. Doak, had very recently returned from the victory granted in the meeting in Latah. He knew the Spangle brethren wanted him to hold them a meeting, but had no thought of being able to so do. He had conducted services in his home pulpit one Lord's Day, February 2d, and in a few days after smallpox appeared in the town. The form was light and the town not quarantined, but the churches were closed and vaccination was the order of the day. Immediately he went to Spangle and preached Feb. 9th. At once he began the meeting there. The town of Spangle with its 500 people has two saloons. Its two churches, Baptist and Christian, own a house each, but are small in numbers, and neither has a pastor. Absolute indifference to the cause of Christ has the place in its grip. Our church house seats 250. Within the first week that was half filled each evening, and about 30 children had been enlisted to sing on the platform. Preaching each evening and each day doing such pastoral work as his physical condition, driven by a consecrated determination, would permit, he toiled. Continuing over Lord's Day, February 23d, he delivered one of his helpful lectures that week. There were 14 accessions, 3 confessions, and 11 took membership who were not members in either church in the town. Arrangements were made for a midweek prayer service; and for Brother Doak to preach for them every Lord's Day afternoon for a time. This much can be reported. The shining pen of the recording angel alone can note the influence for the honor of our God and His Christ from that example of consecrated "grit" in preaching the gospel. L. W. M.

The man who does not see in all this a great day for the Christian religion in the world is blind. The tide is rising much more rapidly than most people suspect. It will not cease to rise till our congregations, as such, our elders and deacons, in their official capacity, and our missionary secretaries and boards, come to conceive of the teaching function as a foundation stone of the church; as a chief feature which they must foster and promote. Forward!

NOTES FROM THE FOREIGN SOCIETY.

A number of baptisms are reported at Lu Cheo Fu, China.

There were 220 baptisms in Japan during 1907. This is an increase of almost fifty per cent over 1906.

Two more Living-link churches have reported as follows: Emporia, Kans., W. A. Parker, minister, and Findlay, O., Jno. Mullen, minister. A number more are expected to report soon.

James Ware, Shanghai, China, has written a Centennial Hymn, with music. The hymn is one of real merit. The Foreign Society has a few copies that it will furnish friends at five cents each.

The number of additions to the church at Bilaspur, India, last February, is sixty-five. In this number are some for whom the missionaries have been working for years.

The Foreign Society has recently received three gifts on the annuity plan; one from a friend in Arkansas, one from a friend in Kansas and one from a friend in Ohio. These gifts are of the greatest value in helping to provide necessary buildings on heathen soil.

A. F. Hensey, Bolenge, Africa, writes of a great Christmas offering by the church there. It was a most wonderful event. Tubs and baskets overflowed with gifts. Some stripped their homes of valued possessions and some sold an extra coat that they might have aught to give. It was a mountain-top experience. In all, over 7,000 rods were given, equal in relative values to us of very near $700. This from a church only recently removed from a wild, cannibal, licentious life, indescribable in its cruelty and gross immorality. The missionaries praise God for the miracle of His wonderful grace.

TRUSTEES ACT.

The attention of the trustees of Eureka College having been called to the work of the Bible Department by the recent article of Prof. B. J. Radford on "Why I Resigned," a special session of the board was held in the Central Christian Church, Peoria, Wednesday, March 11th. At this session Prof. Radford, by request, presented a statement and expressions were heard from President R. E. Hieronymous, Professors Jones, Boyer and Brother A. W. Taylor, pastor of the Eureka Church. The entire afternoon was spent in earnest conference.

The trustees feeling that false impressions had gone abroad regarding the college and the teaching therein, and considering the matter of sufficient importance to merit thorough investigation in order that a statement might be presented to the Brotherhood, adopted the following resolution, viz:

That a committee composed of F. W. Burnham, J. Fred Jones, R. F. Thrapp, J. G. Waggoner, A. J. Elliott, Dr. N. D. Crawford and W. H. Cannon investigate the biblical teaching of the college and report their findings to a called meeting of the board. If the report of this committee shall show that the teaching of the college is inimical to the cause so dear to all our hearts, we as trustees of Eureka College hereby pledge ourselves to eliminate such teaching by asking for the resignation of such teachers; the committee to report not later than May 1, 1908.

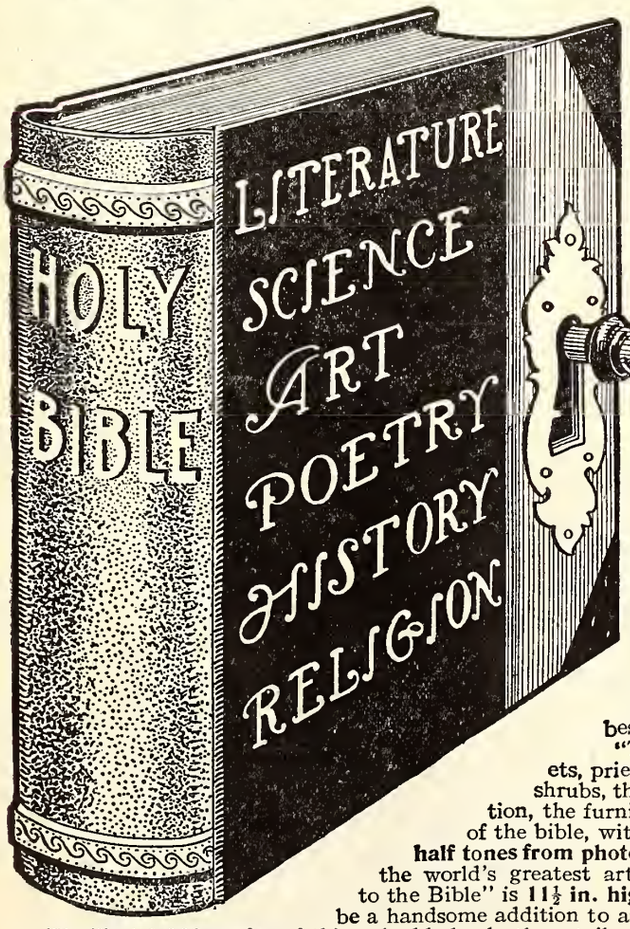
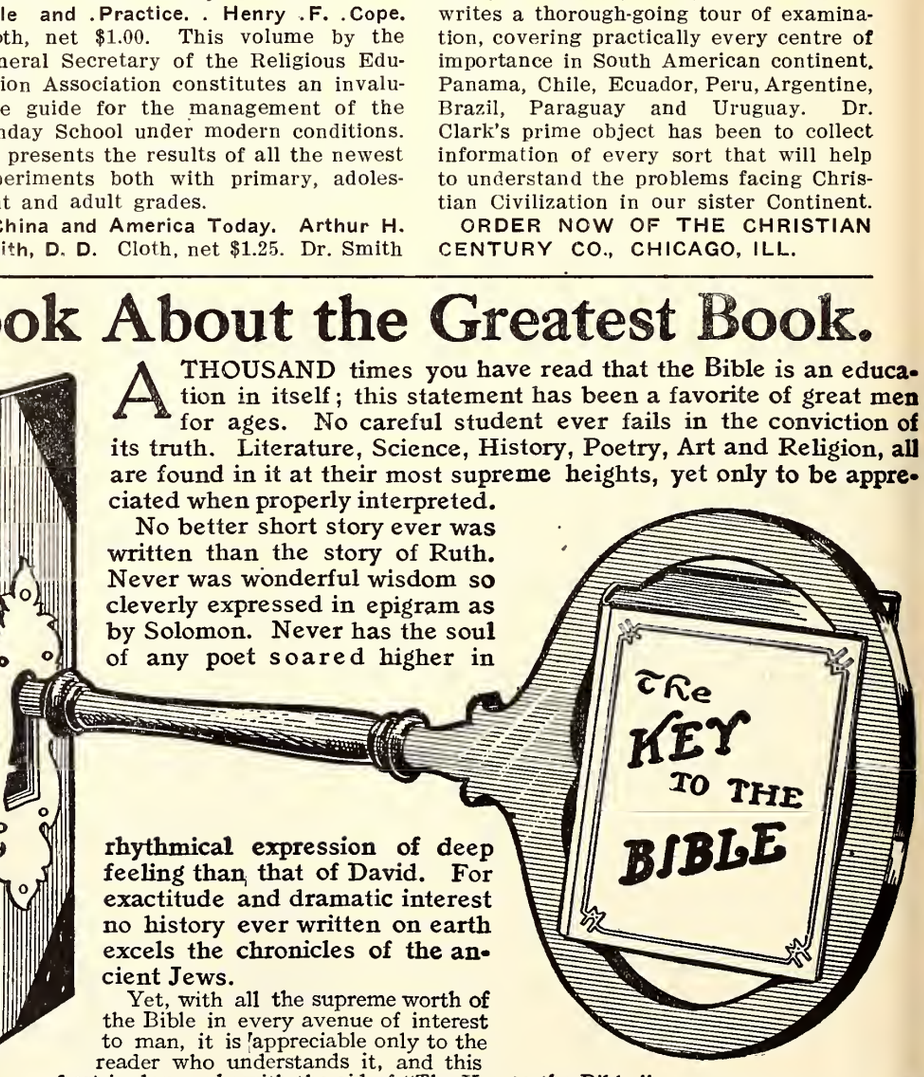
The Greatest Book About the Greatest Book.



A THOUSAND times you have read that the Bible is an education in itself; this statement has been a favorite of great men for ages. No careful student ever fails in the conviction of its truth. Literature, Science, History, Poetry, Art and Religion, all are found in it at their most supreme heights, yet only to be appreciated when properly interpreted.

No better short story ever was written than the story of Ruth. Never was wonderful wisdom so cleverly expressed in epigram as by Solomon. Never has the soul of any poet soared higher in rhythmical expression of deep feeling than that of David. For exactitude and dramatic interest no history ever written on earth excels the chronicles of the ancient Jews.



Yet, with all the supreme worth of the Bible in every avenue of interest to man, it is appreciable only to the reader who understands it, and this best is done only with the aid of "The Key to the Bible."

"The Key to the Bible" is an encyclopedia of the lessons, places, prophets, priests, apostles, disciples, birds, beasts and reptiles, the trees, plants and shrubs, the dress and customs, etc., peoples, houses and other places of habitation, the furniture, ornaments, statuary, the towns, rivers, mountains and lands of the bible, with 16 full page colored pictures from photographs, 100 full page half tones from photographs and reproductions of the greatest biblical paintings by the world's greatest artists and over 400 well drawn text illustrations. "The Key to the Bible" is 11½ in. high, 8 in. wide and 2½ in. thick, weighing 5 pounds. It will be a handsome addition to any library.

The first 1,000 copies of this valuable book, the retail price of which is $5.00, has been set aside for a preliminary sale. We have made arrangements with the publisher for a limited number of copies, and can offer them at the Preliminary sale price of $3, prepaid to any ad. After 1,000 copies are disposed of by the publishers the price will be $5.

EDITORIAL

In Essentials, UNITY; In Non-Essentials, LIBERTY; In all Things, CHARITY

THE MINISTER AND THE HERESY HUNTER.

There is no more convincing sign of progress toward better conditions in the churches and a truer appreciation of the really essential elements of the faith than the agitation which has been taking place in some of the congregations of the Disciples. In at least a half dozen places where the ministers are men of education, high character and ability, there has been evidence of a definite if not concerted effort to so embarrass the labors of the preachers that their only recourse would be resignation.

This opposition has not been the result of any immoral conduct on the part of the minister. It is not that he fails in his pastoral work. No claim is made that the churches are not growing, or that the plea for the unity of God's people has not been strongly interpreted. The difficulty has been invariably that the utterances of the preacher did not have the ring of what these critics call "the truth." Having come to identify the gospel with some few propositions and to regard any departure from these familiar landmarks as "heresy" or "perversions of the gospel," these brethren have used their efforts to expel the man who attempted to widen the circle of his message and service, and to limit the pulpit to the landmarks of an earlier generation.

The zeal and high purpose of such heretic detectors need not be questioned. No one believes that the persecutors of any age have been actuated by any but excellent motives. What they lack is not earnestness but knowledge. They have forgotten that the gospel is not static but dynamic. It is not stereotyped but living in the appeal it makes to the world. As such it cannot be limited to the definitions of a single generation, but opens to its interpreters ever new visions of the truth in Holy Scripture and of greater richness and freedom in the Christian life. The gospel is the same good news to every age, but its message has changed with each generation, and things that were once deemed of moment have ceased to receive emphasis.

The preacher who perceives this power in the Word of God is the man who has an effective message for his day. It may not be just the same manner of word as that proclaimed by his father or his grandfather, but it is the gospel for the time in which he lives. It is what Peter calls "the present truth." It will not be a devitalized or emasculated message, but one that reaches the men to whom the preacher appeals. It will probably put small emphasis upon some things which once received much attention in preaching, and may in another generation come back into significance, as bearing directly on the life of that period. It will probably put stress upon some other features of the message which have hardly appeared before. For in this manner new light breaks out from the divine Word.

It is of interest to observe the slight effect which these attempts to interfere with the work of the ministers have had. The charges have been various. In some cases the minister did not put enough emphasis on baptism. This has always been a sensitive point with the Disciples. They will forgive a man much and endure much of mediocre and unfeeding preaching from him if he is "sound" on baptism. In other cases the charge was that the minister did not put enough force into his preaching of eternal punishment. There are those to whom there is meat and drink in what the early Calvinists called "the comfortable doctrine of eternal damnation." To such any failure to accent the theme would seem a departure from the faith. One of the preachers did not make enough of the belief in a personal devil to please his critics. It is easy to see how the loss of an old friend from the theology of a preacher would seem like a sore and fatal omission of essential truth.

But the most frequent charge heard in these strictures upon the young men who have been under fire is that they incline to "Unitarianism." It is often amusing to observe what a convenient word is that to use in describing any departure from the views which a particular censor of the minister happens to hold. If one is not certain as to what a preacher's opinions may be, but is aware that they differ from his own, the term "Unitarian" lies ready to hand as a label to be attached, and it saves both thought and attempt at definition. It is sufficiently alarming to produce the feeling that the minister must be very wrong indeed. It may turn out, as in the cases referred to, that the offense consisted merely in making the earthly life and work of our Lord real and intelligible to the hearers. It might mean no more than a sincere attempt to remove the sense of distance which the older theology interposed between the human soul and the life of Jesus; to insist less upon the Christ of dogma and more upon the Christ of history and experience. It matters not. The charge can be made just the same, and the burden of disproof then rests on the accused.

It is a noteworthy fact that these attempts at heresy hunting and persecution have been in every instance abortive and futile. In one case the minister and a majority of the membership removed to a more available location, leaving the property, which they might have retained, to the use of the conservative minority. In another instance the dissatisfied ones withdrew, and promise the establishment of a new congregation. These are unfortunate incidents if they can be avoided. But we believe that in both these instances the cause will be strengthened by the establishment of the new churches. Each will have the freedom to bear its own testimony and the cause of friction will be removed. Only we wish to point out to the conservative brethren in both these instances the fact that the leaven of the gospel cannot be stayed in the lump of church life. The precedent of division over the proclamation of new truth is a dangerous one, for it is difficult to terminate the process. On the same basis a new division may be demanded in a year or a month. The spirit of Christ within his people cannot be limited to any set of definitions merely because they were once satisfactory. A growing organism changes its form, and when it ceases to grow and to change it dies.

The men who have been thus attacked with the purpose of driving them from their churches have not been dislodged but have remained with increasing power for good in the community. Had they been weaker men, unprepared by education and experience for their work, they could have been dislodged with half the effort expended. But in that case no such effort would have been made. The kind of men who are acting as watchmen on the walls of Zion and attempting to impose their own limited views of truth upon the churches are never troubled by an uneducated, dogmatic and narrow-minded ministry. It is the other sort whom they cannot abide. We always regret the contest which these men create in churches, but if they are inevitable they cannot come too soon. The Disciples must face the fact that their strength lies not in small dogmatism over the incidents and accidents of the gospel, but in the great essentials of the faith, in the widening vision which discovers the depth and richness of Christianity and attempts its interpretation to a generation more eager for a reasonable gospel than any which preceded it.

One of the amusing features of this campaign, which has been inspired apparently by the growing consciousness on the part of reactionary men that the Disciples are entering a new and more vital period of their history, has been the effort to impose upon the churches or the ministers some form of creed. The protesting and departing officers of one of these churches submitted to the public their "confession of faith" with the apparent purpose of intimating that their minister did not accept the views set forth. The humor of the situation lay in the fact that the declaration was of such general nature that not only the minister himself but any Christian this side of the most radical heretic could have affirmed the same. So far as the issue involved was concerned these good men might as well have affirmed their belief in the law of gravitation, the Declaration of Independence and the rule of three.

In another instance the protestants submitted a creed to which they wished the subscription of the accused minister, unconscious of the fact that such procedure violated every precedent in the history of the Disciples, who beyond all others have contended for that liberty in Christ for which the fathers paid so heavy a price.

There is not one of the ministers thus accused on the ground of their eager search after the great first principles of the gospel of Christ who would not gladly, even eagerly, assert his firm convictions upon all the vital questions of the Christian faith. To a man they believe in the divine character and inspiration of the Scriptures, in the divine nature and redemptive work of our Lord, in the sacred and historic mission of the Church of Christ as founded by the Savior and the apostles, in the new life of faith and obedience, in baptism as the outward sign of the inward grace of a regenerate nature, in the career of holiness and good works and in the life everlasting. Against earnest, consecrated and open minded men holding these essential facts of our Christian religion it will be very difficult for any heresy hunters or reactionaries to achieve notable or lasting success.

Disciples in View of Their Centennial—II. The Creed

Perry J. Rice

In its usual significance "A creed is an authorized statement or definition of religious belief." Very early in the Christian era the disposition to formulate such statements became manifest. Candidates for baptism were required to confess their faith and it is suggested that the formula "into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit", may indicate the character of those early confessions. In the First Epistle to Timothy there is what is usually considered a liturgical fragment, defining at least for devotional purposes the contents of the "mystery of godliness." It is a sort of brief of the ministry of Christ and reads as follows:

"He who was manifested in the flesh,
Justified in the Spirit,
Seen of angels,
Preached among the nations,
Believed on in the world,
Received up in glory."

The incarnation, the resurrection, and the ascension on the one hand, and the nature of man and the conditions of salvation on the other are the centers around which these creedal statements have been gathered, and they all go back to these beginnings. "The tendency to produce them," says Denny, "is plainly as old as the work of preaching and teaching, and their ligitimate use is to exhibit and guard the truth as it has been revealed in and by Jesus."

There have been three great formulations subsequent to the apostolic age. They are "The Apostles'," "The Nicene" and "The Athanasian." All others, and there have been many, are to a very large extent but modifications and elaborations of these.

In each instance these formulations of Christian doctrine became the authoritative definitions of religious belief. In the minds of many people they easily superseded the Word itself, being the standards by which individuals were admitted to church membership. This statement accurately describes the conditions prevalent in the early part of the last century when the Campbells began their work of restoration. Seeing the evils resulting from such standards, they resolved to eschew all written creeds as "tests of faith and standards of orthodoxy" and to be governed in all things by the Word of inspiration. This was a most significant resolution and has played a very conspicuous part in the movement which the Campbells inaugurated. Some of the phrases which have been used to voice it to the world are as follows: "Where the Bible speaks we will speak, and where the Bible is silent, we will be silent;" "Where the Word of God does not bind us, we will be free;" "Whatever is enjoined either by express precept or approved precedent, that we will do;" "In faith unity, in opinion liberty, in all things charity." These have all been slogans with which the Disciples have defended their liberty, steadfastly refusing to subscribe to doctrines formulated into creeds by fallible men.

Because of this position it has sometimes been said that the Disciples have no creed. This manifestly cannot be true. No Christian is without belief, and the substance of that belief is his creed written or unwritten. Likewise no body of Christians can be without belief though they refuse to formulate their convictions into a creed making it authoritative. In the sense therefore of possessing a written authoritive statement of their religious beliefs the Disciples have no creed and never will have one. But it would be foolish to deny that there is a body of truth which we hold in common. Indeed, as has often been affirmed, on the great fundamentals of the faith, we are in practical agreement with all the protestant world. The point of difference between the Disciples and protestant bodies generally is in the fact that the Disciples are wary of all attempts to formulate even these quite universally accepted evangelical doctrines. When Isaac Errett published the tract entitled, "Our Position," which was the most formal attempt ever made to state the doctrinal position of the Disciples, a protest was uttered by many people because it looked like doing the very thing we had decided not to do. At the present time nothing arouses greater indignation among us than for anyone to attempt to state the faith categorically and seek to make such a statement binding upon others.

There is, however, one item of belief which the Disciples have ever voiced with the utmost urgency. From the beginning we have insisted upon faith in Jesus Christ. We have proclaimed this as the essential faith without which no one can enter into fellowship with Christ and his people. It is the confession voiced repeatedly in the New Testament. Nathanael said, "Rabbi thou art the Son of God, thou art the King of Israel." Peter said, "Thou art the Christ the Son of the living God," and Thomas cried out, "My Lord and my God." In answer to the question of the Phillipian jailor Paul declared: "Believe on the Lord Jesus, and thou shalt be saved." Writing to the Romans the same apostle said, "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth that Jesus is Lord and believe in thy heart that God raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved." Jesus was ever inviting men to believe on him and during his earthly ministry such faith, however weak at first, was the one condition of following him. It may be said therefore, that Jesus himself is the creed of the church since faith in him is the one condition of receiving the rich blessings he proffers. The Disciples have ever urged this as the essential creed and to those seeking salvation through Christ this question has been quite universally addressed, "Do you believe in Jesus Christ as God's Son and your Savior." For the most part we have been willing to leave to the theological arena all questions involving the exact nature of Christ. We have insisted simply upon such a faith in Jesus as leads one through him to God. No confession is adequate that does not in some way bring the soul of man into communion and fellowship with the Father. Our souls cry out for God, for the living God, and Jesus answers that cry, saying, "He that hath seen me, hath seen the Father." Faith in Christ, therefore, involves something more than confidence in a good man. In its ultimate significance at least it involves trust in the God who is the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. This does not affirm or deny either the trinitarian or the unitarian doctrine but emphasizes the essential religious value of Christ and is based upon specific statements in the New Testament.

There are certain evident and distinct advantages in this position. It permits a degree of liberty in matters of opinion which would be quite impossible under other circumstances. It allows each generation to state the truth for itself with a freedom which is not possible where creedal statements have become fixed and binding. As we have already seen it is in striking accord with the New Testament precedent and teaching. Moreover it is the universal creed. It is the confession which everyone must make in order to become a Christian. However much he may add to it, he must at least be a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ. It is both elastic and yet definite. The merest child may make it as well as the man or woman of the highest culture. To each it will have its own significance and to each also it will bring its meed of satisfaction and peace. It may contain a thousand different judgments, it has one end. For all, it voices the heart's response to the Father's call. It makes religion a vital thing, knitting the soul of man to the soul of God. Christianity is something more than a body of doctrines. Essentially it is the life of God made regnant in the lives of men. Jesus is the fullest expression of that divine life the world has ever seen, and a loving trust in him inspires the soul to reproduce his life in its own. This is the unique thing in Christianity. It is the impartation of life by means of the infusion of one life into other lives. It is the union of the human and the divine.

This creed furnishes the only feasible basis for Christian union. It is utterly foolish to propose doctrinal statements as the basis upon which to unite the church. So long as men think, they will reach independent conclusions and so will differ from one another. If there can be no liberty there can be no union. The Disciples would be the last to sacrifice their liberty in matters of opinion and interpretation. We would sooner see our own body rent asunder than to submit to any man's dictum in our religious opinions and we do not ask of others what we do not propose to grant to them. Faith in Christ as he is presented in the New Testament and unfolded in matchless power and grace before the world is the basis of a perfectly feasible union which only awaits the time when we shall all be willing to allow the liberty which such faith permits to individuals and to churches. That time is rapidly approaching. It is our privilege to guard jealously the liberty we now enjoy and to pass it on as the most precious heritage which the Disciples may bequeath to the religious world. The best testimony we can give to the world of the sufficiency of such a creed is to cause it to blossom into deed. When the rich fruitage of a really Christian life appears we will cease to make our doctrines, changeable as they are, tests of fellowship, and shall rejoice to know that we are one with all who love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity and truth.

Among the New Books

Semiramis. By Edward Peple. New York, Moffat, Yard & Co. Pp. 375. $1.50

No one knows enough about the real Semiramis to question closely the historical probabilities of this story. In invention it is bold and engaging. The characters of the heroine and Menon, her warrior lover, are admirably drawn. The author's chief faults are a stilted style, the result of strained effort, after "purple effects," and a lack of experience in the use of good English, especially in the attempt to use the archaic style, as "he whom thou loveth," or "thou who loveth gems." If this writer can learn to practice greater restraint and command a more simple and ordered diction it will be a pleasure to welcome other volumes of romance from the same source.

The True Church. By Allan Macy Dulles. Fleming H. Revell Company. 1907. Pp. 307. Price $1.25.

Professor Dulles has given to the public in this volume a most valuable treatise on the important question suggested in the title. The two concepts of the church, the Catholic and the evangelic, are set forth and examined as to their relative merits. The style is didactic, and the argument convincing. The representations of Gore and Moberly are carefully examined. The chapters on "The Self Organization of the Churches" and "The Evolution of the Episcopacy and Papacy," are especially valuable. The Catholic and Anglican concept of the church, with its priestly succession and authority are utterly repudiated. The chapters on "The Marks of the Church," " The Mission of the Church" and "The Ministry of the Church" are worthy of a careful reading. The author presents very little new material but has compiled and compressed facts and arguments in a very serviceable manner. The book is fundamentally a work on Christian Union, and points out the way by which the visible breaks in Christ's body may be healed.

Islam: A Challenge to Faith. By Samuel M. Zwemer., F. R. G. S. Student Volunteer Movement for Foreign Mission, New York. Pp. 269. Price $1.00.

By wide acquaintance with the literature of his subject in several European and Asiatic languages, and by many years' missionary labor in Arabia, supplemented by travel in other Moslem lands, Dr. Zwemer is pre-eminently qualified to be the interpreter of Islam to twentieth century Christendom. He writes with rare combination of critical insight and missionary zeal. His book, while presenting the ripest results of scholarship, glows with the ardent convictions of faith. But it is a terrible book, shattering to atoms any further excuse for Christians' ignorance of the Moslem world and its problems, and calling the church to judgment by the cries of past neglect and present obligation.

In these vivid pages Mohammed emerges from the mystic shadows, if not a mere "scheming imposter, tormented by the devil," yet stripped of his Carlylean halo. He is made to live before us a man of wondrous personality, licentious but apotheosized; limited and explained by the country and age that produced him, with his slave-whip, his blood-stained hand, his harem, his visions and his Koran holding in leash 233,000,000 souls to-day, looking the Christian world fair in the face, and asking us what we are going to do about it. Leading up to this life-portrait, the chapter on "The Origin and Sources of Islam" is particularly fresh. Its treatment of pre-Islamic Arabia emphasizes the prophet's indebtedness for his monotheistic doctrine to the Jews, the Sabeans, and the Christians of Yemen. It is disillusioning to those who name Christ and Mohammed in one breath, to discover that what was good and true in his religion Mohammed derived from others, and that the false and corrupt was his personal contribution.

The historical and statistical features of the book are valuable throughout. There are sketches of the Moslem propoganda in all lands where it is operated, of present social conditions, reform movements and the inbreaking of Western thought. The story of Christian pioneer work among Moslems from the days of Raymund Lull to the present is a meager recital in the light of what ought to be done now. Pan-Islamism is both a menace and a challenge to Christianity. It must be met with pan-evangelism. Dr. Zwemer is a modern Peter, the Hermit, calling the church to a New Crusade.

The Temperance Board of the Disciples

Dr. Homer J. Hall

Origin.

During the World's Exposition at Jamestown, when the Disciples of Christ held their National Missionary Convention at Norfolk, a petition came from Indiana requesting the convention to appoint a permanent temperance committee or board, to represent and assist the church in temperance action. The timely petition received the unanimous approval of the convention and the American Temperance Board of the Church of Christ was then appointed, consisting of six well known ministers and the same number of laymen.

Aim.

To help every church, Sunday School, Young People's Society and individual Christian to be more intelligent and enthusiastic in the temperance reform. To make clear the duty and ability of the church, to overthrow this curse whenever she so wills. To improve the splendid opportunity which the church has supplied in placing this reform on an official equality with missions and other activities of the church, thus making it an organic part of her work.

Plans.

To help our churches and their Bible Schools and Young People's Societies make the Quarterly Temperance Day and temperance lessons more instructive and interesting than ever before. To supply therefore to the full extent of our ability ministers, Sunday schools, teachers and endeavor leaders with facts, statistics and bright, fresh literature on the growing temperance reform. To have skilled speakers present the cause to Chautauquas, to our State and District Conventions, and to all temperance meetings wherever needed. To arrange a course of lectures in our colleges by teachers of eminent qualifications. To maintain one of the most reliable and up-to-date bureaus of information to be found anywhere in the United States. To place a skilled speaker and worker in each state who will be an honor to any pulpit or platform, as soon as funds shall warrant. To secure and maintain a temperance column or page in each of our church papers.

The Church's Need.

Other departments of the church, as missions, church extension, etc., are appointed by the church report to the church, receive its support of the church, and does a work that the church wants done. So it seems perfectly clear that the success of the temperance reform is of sufficient value to the church that makes it desirable to have a strong temperance department.

This department should be appointed by the church, report annually its work to the church, be supported by the church and do the work in the spirit of Christ.

Our Needs.

Co-operation of our church papers, ministers, Sunday Schools, officers, teachers and leaders of our Young People's Societies. We need a temperance committee in each of our churches to open the way for this new department and to correspond with us. We also need financial support, which we believe will cheerfully be given when our cause is properly presented and an opportunity given Christian men and women to contribute. We therefore request that each church, Sunday School and young people's society, on Temperance Day each year, be given an opportunity to contribute to this work and the same be sent to the Secretary of the Board.

Opportunity.

There is urgent need at present for some of the stronger religious bodies to lead in an aggressive fight against the saloon. The Christian Church, by reason of its principles for union and reform and by reason of the temperauce record and freedom of its ministry, is well fitted to take this lead. A hearty co-operation with this board upon the plans here presented will give encouraging assurance of meeting this opportunity.

Our Board.

It is important to any enterprise to have it managed by successful men. This is eminently true of the men that compose the American Temperance Board of the Church of Christ.

Judge Samuel R. Artman, president of the board, presided over the Indiana House of Representatives a few years ago. He is the judge who early in 1907 rendered the noted decision on the unconstitutionality of saloon license.

Harry G. Hill, the vice-president, is pastor of one of our leading churches of Indianapolis.

A. L. Orcutt, our treasurer, is president and manager of our Ministerial Relief Association.

Dr. Homer J. Hall, secretary of the board, has been a very successful physician, and has for the past ten years lead the temperance forces in Indiana. He has prepared much temperance literature and has proved efficient as an organizer and in dating speakers.

Each state will be asked to appoint an associate member of this board. The majority of the members were appointed in and near Indianapolis for convenience of business meetings. As the board has chosen the secretary as its managing officer let all inquiries for literature, speakers, etc., and all remittances be sent to

THE PRACTICE OF CHRISTIAN UNION.

"Behold how good and how pleasant a thing it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." While we are striving to bring about the union of Christians who are now separated by denominational barriers, and especially while we are celebrating the centennial of this movement's inauguration, every evidence of union and harmony among ourselves is a ground for rejoicing. Such is the continued joint observance of Easter by the Christian Woman's Board of Missions and the National Benevolent Association. All lovers of peace and good will should show their appreciation of this by assisting in the services of this day.

The union of these two great organizations on this occasion is another striking demonstration that what ought to be can be. Every person that makes an offering, large or small, will be voting for the perpetual reign of the Prince of Peace. Every child who takes part in the exercises will become a partner not only in multiplying the mercy of Christ but in strengthening the hands of the organizations through whom Christ's mercy will be perpetually extended.

The most important exhibit that will be shown at Pittsburg in 1909 will be the people themselves who have been enlisted in this Christian union movement, and every participation in such an event as the devotion of Easter to the orphan will fit us just a little better to be Christ's heralds of union to his divided church.

Every one can do something. Every one ought to do what he can. What would be the effect upon the world if for once we should absolutely all have fellowship in repeating Christ's reception of the little children! Would not this in itself make a glorious centennial?

W. R. Warren,
Centennial Secretary.

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST.*

By James M. Campbell, D. D.

One of the present day tests of thorough-going orthodoxy is the avowal of belief in the "deity" of Christ, as against the avowal of belief in his "divinity." It is assumed that the term divinity may be watered down so as to mean little more than the possession of divine-like qualities; whereas the term deity defies dilution, and must be taken at full strength or not at all. But definitions are illusive things, and it is marvelous what different contents people will put into the same words. In the present connection it is well to remember that neither deity nor divinity are Bible words, and one may be a devout believer in Christ as "God manifest in the flesh," and may accept all the Scripture representations of his person in all the fulness of their unstrained meaning, while declining to be tied down to any philosophical or theological term which has been erected into a test of orthodoxy.

These reflections are suggested by the sub-title of Dr. Warfield's book, which reads thus: "A study of the designations of our Lord in the New Testament, with especial reference to his deity." It is easy to see where Dr. Warfield stands in the use of the term referred to. The word "divinity" is too weak and uncertain to answer his purpose, so he employs the stronger and more unequivocal word, so as to leave no doubt of his orthodoxy.

And orthodox after the most rigid fashion he undoubtedly is. One will search in vain for the slightest tinge of heresy. For while Dr. Warfield gives evidence of an intimate knowledge of the results of modern scholarship, he is apparently unaffected by them. His book so far as atmosphere is concerned might just as well have been written fifty years ago. All that reminds one that it was written in the year of our Lord 1908 is the imprint upon the title page and references to recent literature.

But in spite of all that has been said the book is an honest piece of work, sound and solid, clear and concise, and as befits the high theme with which it deals, dignified and reverent. It hews to the line and keeps within its clearly defined limits. The object of the book is "to learn so far as the designations applied to our Lord in the New Testament are fitted to reveal to us, how the writers of the New Testament were accustomed to think of Jesus," and it proceeds to show that the thought of him above anything else is a divine person. Thus, according to the scheme laid down, the book is a word study; that is, a study of all the New Testament titles employed in reference to our Lord. And while the book is guiltless of originality, it is eminently useful as a devout and painstaking treatment of a subject, which although it has been often gone over, needs to be gone over again and again.

A FINE PROMISE.

The program of the tenth annual Congress of the Disciples of Christ promises a rare treat indeed. Such topics as "The Redemption of the Child," by Dr. Hastings; "Sanity in Evangelism," by Earl M. Todd; "Relations Between Baptists and Disciples," by Dr. C. H. Dodd; "A Human View of the Labor Struggle," "The Race Problem," by J. M. Rudy; "Centennial Ideals," by C. S. Medbury; "Sunday School Pedagogy," by H. F. Cope; and "Devotional Material of the Old Testament," by Dr. H. L. Willet—such topics, I say, in the hands of such men, promise a very fine congress. These are living practical themes. Their discussion will, no doubt, do great good. All our preachers who can possibly arrange to attend should go, without fail. May we not express the hope that the next congress may come a little farther toward the east—we should be happy in the privilege of attending it.

GROWING STRONGER.

Apparently, with Advancing Age.

"In 1896, at the age of 50 years, I collapsed from excessive coffee drinking," writes a man in Mo. "For four years I shambled about with the aid of crutches or cane, most of the time unable to dress myself without help.

"My feet were greatly swollen, my right arm was shrunken and twisted inward, the fingers of my right hand were clenched and could not be extended except with great effort and pain. Nothing seemed to give me more than temporary relief.

"Now, during all this time and for about 30 years previously I drank daily an average of 6 cups of strong coffee—rarely missing a meal.

"My wife at last took my case into her own hands and bought some Postum. She made it according to directions and I liked it fully as well as the best high grade coffee.

"Improvement set in at once. In about 6 months I began to work a little, and in less than a year I was very much better, improving rapidly from day to day. I am now in far better health than most men of my age and apparently growing stronger with advancing age.

"I am busy every day at some kind of work and am able to keep up with the procession without a cane. The arm and hand that were once almost useless now keep far ahead in rapidity of movement and beauty of penmanship."

Lesson Text John 10:1-11	The Sunday School Lesson	International Series 1908 Apr. 5

The Shepherd and the Sheep*

H. L. Willett

The lesson which is embodied in this narrative was probably taught by Jesus some time during the ministry in Perea after his final departure from Galilee. It followed the mission of the Seventy whom Jesus sent forth to announce his coming to the cities and towns to which he expected to make visits.

The significance of this teaching on the theme of the good shepherd, and his insistence that he was this expected and promised leader grows out of the contrast between the true and the false conception of the work of the Messiah. Israel had always cherished the hope that it might have in the end of the day a king who could win for it a place among the nations and deliver it from the scourge of Roman oppression. In harmony with this belief and hope the nation had turned expectantly to its kings in the past, and was in Jesus' own days turning to one and another of those many pretenders to Messianic honors who filled the minds of the Jewish people with unfulfilled expectation.

Over against these Jesus puts himself as the true shepherd. The figure of a shepherd had often been used by the prophets as representing the office of king (Jer. 23:1-4. Ezek. 34:1-15, Micah 5:5). Such a conception of the shepherding and pastoral office of the king was rarely realized in the history of the nation. The men who had ruled Israel were for the most part indifferent to that leadership which meant spiritual uplift. To be sure a few, such as Josiah and Hezekiah, had conceived something of the dignity and responsibility of their office, but these were rare exceptions to the general rule.

As for the Messianic pretenders of the Roman age, not one of them had any purpose beyond the political ambitions of a time singularly disturbed by current events and ready to seize upon any pretext plausible or otherwise for revolt against the hated Roman power. The story of Judaism in the century from 165 B. C. to 100 A. D. is replete with the adventures of leaders who assumed Messianic titles and misled their countrymen into fanatical and ruinous revolt. The most ambitious of these, the revolt of Bar Cochba, came near completing the work of destruction so terribly begun in the Roman war.

In the familiar language of the Fourth Gospel Jesus begins the parable of the Good Shepherd. The reader will remember that the method of the Fourth Gospel, in its account of Jesus' parables, is different from that of the synoptics. In the three earlier narratives the parables begin with the familiar words, "the kingdom of heaven is like unto," but in the Fourth Gospel the images are more direct and no introductory words are employed. One recalls such uses of the illustrative principles as "I am the Light of the world," "I am the vine," "I am the way, the truth and the light." Similarly here "I am the Good Shepherd." Not less is the parabolic method employed, but the form is slightly altered. Indeed, in the present instance two parables have been woven together apparently. The first, verses 1-6, 10f, give the parable of the good shepherd, while verses 7-9 contain the parable of the door to the sheepfold. It is possible that both of these parables were spoken by Jesus at the same time, but it is more likely that they were separate teachings combined later by the evangelist, otherwise there would be the difficulty of our Savior's representation of himself in two very different capacities in the very same connection, and this would be unusual if not impossible.

In the first Jesus speaks of himself as the true Shepherd entering into the sheepfold, not by illegitimate ways, but through the open portal where the shepherd and the sheep would both go in and out. The sheepfolds in the orient are usually stone enclosures, sometimes with a cave at the rear in which the sheep can find additional shelter from the cold and storm. In such a cave David was given the opportunity to murder King Saul, which he generously refused. In the front of the enclosure there was a door in the stone wall which could be locked. Through this both shepherd and sheep enter. Of course, a stranger who came as a thief to steal could not enter by the door but must climb over the wall. Jesus likened the selfish leaders of the people to such thieves and robbers, indifferent to the national welfare and seeking only their own advantage. He does not of course refer to the prophets who had gone before him. Such harsh language would have been utterly inappropriate in describing the great men who from the time of Moses had directed the thought of the people toward God and the national duty. It is clear that the reference is to false teachers who had only selfish views and ends in view.

By the porter it is not likely that Jesus meant any special person. The porter was the man who had charge of the sheepfold in the case of large estates where several flocks were kept in different enclosures. The shepherd was admitted in the morning when he came to lead out his sheep. In a certain sense it might be thought that John the Baptist would stand appropriately as the one described by this phrase, but the words must not be pressed.

Every one who has watched the shepherds in the east knows the wonderful sympathy between the shepherd and his sheep. He goes before them and they watch his figure and follow after. Occasionally, when one strays aside or falls behind the shepherd will hurl after him a pebble which falling near will arouse his attention from his feeding and cause him to rejoin the flock. The sheep know the voice of their shepherd so well that they can never be deceived by a stranger. If another attempts to perform the duties of shepherd they are terrified and scattered. "They know not the voice of strangers." In many instances, especially where the flock is of only moderate size, each sheep is known and named by the shepherd and can be called to his side. But in the larger flocks this is not the case.

In time of danger the shepherd must defend the flock against wild beasts or robbers. David told Saul that in his shepherd life whenever there came out against the flock a lion or a bear he drove it away or killed it. For such dangers the shepherd must be prepared always, even at times the more deadly danger of attacks by wandering clans of Bedouin may necessitate the risking of his life. The application to Jesus' own ministry was obvious. As the Good Shepherd he laid down his life for the sheep. The great sacrificial act in which he both as priest and victim offered up the evening sacrifice of the world by the surrender of his life and will to God in behalf of his brethren could not find more eloquent emphasis than this. Nor must one forget the verses that follow in which Jesus claims the shepherd rights to all flocks which he proposes to unite at the last that there may be one fold and one shepherd.

EFFORT FOR ITS OWN SAKE.

Effort is worth more than the result of effort. Effort is within our own control; the result of our effort may not be. Therefore it is important that we should not relax effort in any direction to which duty points, no matter how small the prospect of the desired result, nor how many times we have already tried and failed of that result. For effort is its own reward, and it brings sure results of its own, no matter what other desired results fail to appear. Not all are keen enough to recognize this; a young writer was, however, who said, in submitting a manuscript for publication and in recognition of the uncertainty of its acceptance: "Anyway, I have had the discipline of writing it, which can't be taken away." That particular manuscript was accepted; which only goes to show that the man who is willing to labor hard for the discipline's sake alone is likely to win something more than the discipline. —S. S. Scripture	The Prayer Meeting	Topic for
John 1:35-51 Acts 8:4	Personal Evangelism	Apr. 8

The example of our Lord enforces the duty of personal evangelism. He spoke to the multitudes, but he did more. He went to individuals and presented his message. He thought it was worth while to talk with a hostile Samaritan woman about her soul. He called Peter, Andrew, James, and John from their nets to become fishers of men. He saw Matthew at the place of toil and called him. He explained to the learned Nicodemus the mysteries of the kingdom. He answered the cry of distress whenever it came to his ears. He was interested in persons. He loved to tell them of God and of redemption.

The apostles have left us an example of personal evangelism. Andrew sought out his brother Simon aud brought him to the Master. Philip found Nathaniel and told him that he had found the Messiah. Paul went from house to house, "testifying both to Jews and Greeks repentance toward God and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ." In his letters he sends his greetings to individuals. Timothy was his "true child in the faith," a fact that gave the apostle profound satisfaction.

From the very nature of the case the early preaching of the gospel was largely preaching to the small group or to one soul. On Pentecost Peter had a great company to hear him. Paul had frequent opportunities to address the Jews in their synagogue aud the Gentiles in large assemblages. But the majority of Christian teachers had but few hearers. Christianity was a detestable superstition to the educated Greek and Roman. Only here and there were receptive hearts to be found. With these the disciples dealt eagerly. Men used the associations of the same craft as opportunities to tell the good news. Christian slaves taught their masters. Wives led their husbands to Christ. Every relation of life was used for the purpose of reaching men with the gospel.

Would it not be better if we had more of this sort of evangelism to-day? How many members of the average congregation are doing personal work? Let it be granted that all are not adapted for every kind of service. One can do what another cannot. There are many ways of lodging the gospel in the heart. The attack on an obstinate sinner may be direct or indirect. The method will depend on the man to be reached and the one that seeks him. But, however disciples differ in ability and adaptability, there is something for every one to do. The disciple must be about his Master's business. If he is not he has no right to be counted with the followers of the Lord. It is impossible for us to realize the power of a church in which every member would have influence for the growth of the body of Christ and use that influence daily. No church of this kind is likely to be found. If it does exist it is a small one. As soon as it becomes great in numbers its usefulness will relatively decrease. There is power is united effort. Mr. Sunday will not attempt to conduct an evangelistic campaign where he does not have the support of preachers and churches. He knows he must have such support if his efforts are to succeed. Is not the problem of evangelism that of getting the Lord's disciples to go and bring the people in? Would not the churches be stronger if the people were able to have a revival without the assistance of men outside the congregation?

Scripture	Christian Endeavor	Topic for
Psalm 24	The Men Whom God Accepts	Apr. 5

"Everybody's Magazine" recently published a symposium on the subject, "What is a Good Man?"

Archbishop Ireland said:

"The good man will be a devout worshiper of the Almighty; he will be a religious man. He will kneel often in adoration and prayer; he will seek out in earnest study the law of the Supreme Master, and will loyally conform to it in his private and social life.

"The good man has his duties to himself. Chief among these is the utter cleanliness of heart, the righteousness of the inner soul. Mere exterior morality is a sham and a pretense. It does not last; it withstands no severe trial. At best, it is a hypocrisy, a lie acted out by the man himself, an effort to deceive his fellow-men.

"Clean of heart, the good man will be clean of mouth. Vulgar and obscene language, oaths and blasphemies will never pollute his speech. He will be clean of act, respecting his body as the very handiwork of God. He will be clean of hand, never reaching out to the things that are not his by strictest rules of social justice. The good man will not be the lazy and indolent servant; he will improve his mind by thoughtful study; he will improve, as circumstances permit, his condition in life, bringing into active exercise the latent talents given to him by the Creator, that they be developed and put to profit. He will be brave in effort, resigned in failure, calm and self-possessed in success."

Mr. H. G. Wells, who set forth the socialist ideal, closed his answer thus:

"He will be intensely truthful, not simply in the vulgar sense of not misstating facts when pressed, but truthful in the manner of the scientific man or the artist, and as scornful of concealment as they; truthful, that is to say, as the expression of a ruling desire to have things made plain and clear, because that so they are most beautiful and life is at its finest."

Mr. Thomas W. Lawson answered with a page full of epigrams, saying:

"Every good man says 'May I' to the weak and 'I will' to the strong, and he never forgets that his body, as well as his soul, is his charge, which must be returned undefiled."

Count Katsura, who was prime minister of Japan during the war with Russia, answered:

"I believe that a good man is one who is always conscientious, continuously aiming to improve his opportunities to help his brother men, and ever seeking to promote the cause of the society in which he moves. One with a clear conscience, ever on the alert to do his duty, deserves the name of a good man, whatever his station in life. He is of the highest type of good man who subordinates himself to the good of society, and, never departing from the principle, spends his life in constant and ceaseless exertion for the attainment of his ideal."

To these, says Mr. Robert E. Speer in the Sunday School Times, two other answers may be added, which include all that is true in each of them:

"He hath showed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth Jehovah require of thee, but to do justly, and to love kindness, and to walk humbly with thy God?"

"He that hath clean hands, and a pure heart; who hath not lifted up his soul unto falsehood, and hath not sworn deceitfully."

J. R. Golden, Gibson, Ill., has an open date for a meeting in April.

H. L. Atkinson, Cincinnati, O., was the preacher last Sunday at Connellsville, Pa.

Fine audiences greeted D. W. Moore March 15 when he began his work in Carthage, Mo.

William Ross Lloyd is in a meeting with his church in Bellevue, Pa. E. G. Daugherty is the singer.

Geo. W. Knepper is having unusual success in revival services with the church at Waynesburg, Pa.

J. H. Painter of Bridgewater, Iowa, has purchased a farm near Carney, Okla., and will move to that place April 1st.

F. E. Mallory, Topeka, Kan., has been sick. He was recently elected president of the Topeka Ministerial Association.

Sixty-six confessions are reported in the three weeks' revival just closed in the C. W. B. M. Mission at Monterey, Mexico.

J. F. Williams of Pennsylvania has located as pastor at Gurnee, Ill., and begins his work under promising circumstances.

Violett and Charlton began a meeting at Deland, Ill., about the middle of March. W. T. McConnell is the faithful minister.

Bert E. Stover will give all of his time to the Armourdale (Kan.) church. He closed a meeting recently with forty-five additions.

H. H. Wagner has accepted a call to the work at Metropolis, Ill., and is already on the field. The brethren of that city speak well of his work.

E. J. Church and his congregation at Granby, Mo., are getting ready for a great meeting and everything gives promise of a great harvest.

N. H. Barrager has become minister of the church at Erie, Kan. He recently had the misfortune of losing his house and nearly all its contents by fire.

Z. M. Brubeck of Elkhart, Ill., will be in the evangelistic field this summer with a fine tent and singer, and is now ready to make dates. Write him.

Lew D. Hill commenced his pastorate in Winchester, Ill., March 1. Next Sunday he will begin a meeting in which J. Wade Seniff will have charge of the music.

We have received the report of a recent union meeting for women in the church at Lincoln, Ill. The services were in the interest of the temperance cause.

The campaign has begun to secure funds for a new building in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. This is the enterprise of the First Church, of which G. B. Van Arsdall is pastor.

G. P. Spiegel is holding several meetings in Los Angeles, Cal., under direction of the Broadway Church. B. F. Coulter, leading merchant of the city, is minister of this church.

Mrs. J. K. Ballou, wife of the pastor of the Fourteenth Street Christian Church in Sioux City, Iowa, has been ill for six weeks. Her condition is still critical, but is slightly improved.

Mrs. G. W. Buckner preached recently at New London, Mo., to the great satisfaction of the church. She was supplying for T. M. Richmond, who is at Hot Springs, Ark., for the health of his son.

Evangelist Wilhite and his helpers are to hold a short meeting in the near future for Pastor Thomas at West Side Church, Kansas City. This church is in far the best condition in all its history.

The new Christian church at Mackinaw, Ill., will cost $10,700. The building will be of concrete blocks and work will begin at once. The church is to be dedicated free of debt. J. W. Street is the pastor.

Evangelist H. Gordon Bennett is holding meetings in Union Churches in Canada, under direction of the Co-operating Boards of Baptists and Disciples. In three weeks he has received over forty additions to the churches.

THE CONGRESS.

The subject and speakers for the Tenth Annual Congress at Bloomington, Ill., March 31 and April 1 and 2 promise an unusually valuable session. A representative attendance is the one thing needed to render the Congress effective. Put aside any routine work and come. Stay through.

W. C. Payne, Secretary.

Lawrence, Kans.

Baxter Waters, Duluth, Minn., has been preaching interesting morning sermons this month. Four of his subjects were: 1. The Last Man Located. 2. How to Observe Lent. 3. The Problem of Stewardship. 4. Duties of Parents to Children.

The 169th Street Church, New York City, will make an Easter offering toward the fund for payment of the mortgage on the church property. S. T. Willis is pastor of the congregation. March 1 the mortgage was reduced $1,000 by R. A. Long of Kansas City, Mo.

The Kentucky Centennial church at Bayamon, Porto Rico, is to be dedicated March 22. The Kentucky Auxiliaries gave $7,000 for this building as part of their Centennial work. Mrs. S. K. Yancey, state secretary, has gone to Porto Rico for the dedication.

The work of the congregation in Marcelline, Mo., is doing well under the leadership of F. M. Cummings. The Bible School has been increased by fifty new members, additions to the church are frequent and in all departments of the church there is good progress.

Evangelist Buchanan recently led the forces of Rewood Falls, Minn., in a meeting. There were one hundred and one additions. The pastor, E. C. Nicholson, and his people rejoice in the results of these services, the most successful in the history of our work in the state.

News has reached us of the death March 17 of D. S. Kelly of Emporia, Kan. We had not heard of his being sick and have not learned details of this loss among our Kansas ministers. Mrs. Kelly, who is so well known by C. W. B. M. workers in every state, has the sympathy of the whole brotherhood in her bereavement.

Ground has been broken for the new Ford Industrial Building at the C. W. B. M. mountain school at Hazel Green, Ky. The new building is to be of reinforced concrete with upper story and roof covered with metal shingles. It will be equipped with a steam laundry plant, carpenter and blacksmith shops, and a domestic science room.

Any church in the Mississippi Valley that is in need of a good consecrated minister, a graduate and post-graduate of one of our best institutions of learning, and who comes well recommended by his official board, can be placed in

HAPPY OLD AGE.

Most Likely to Follow Proper Eating.

As old age advances, we require less food to replace waste, and food that will not overtax the digestive organs, while supplying true nourishment.

Such an ideal food is found in Grape-Nuts, made of whole wheat and barley by long baking and action of diastase in the barley which changes the starch into sugar.

The phosphates also, placed up under the bran-coat of the wheat, are included in Grape-Nuts, but left out of white flour. They are necessary to the building of brain and nerve cells.

"I have used Grape-Nuts," writes an Iowa man, "for 8 years and feel as good and am stronger than I was ten years ago. I am over 74 years old and attend to my business every day.

"Among my customers I meet a man every day who is 92 years old and attributes his good health to the use of Grape-Nuts and Postum which he has used for the last 5 years. He mixes Grape-Nuts with Postum and says they go fine together.

"For many years before I began to eat Grape-Nuts I could not say that I enjoyed life or knew what it was to be able to say 'I am well.' I suffered greatly with constipation, now my habits are as regular as ever in my life.

"Whenever I make extra effort I depend on Grape-Nuts food and it just fills the bill. I can think and write a great deal easier."

"There's a reason." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

communication with such a one by addressing Christian Minister, 704 S. White street, Mt. Pleasant, Ia. The church must be able to pay $1,200 or $1,000 and parsonage.

A. E. Harris and J. E. Vermilion, with six other members of the church in Greencastle, Ind., made up a party which went to Frankfort, Ind., March 15, to attend the Yeuell meetings. Bro. Vermilion reports a delightful trip and pleasant services. He says, "As in his series of meetings with us in Greencastle, Ind., Bro. Yeuell is uncompromising in presenting the gospel and in support of our plea, yet he does so in a manner that no one can in any way take offence. After hearing two good sermons resulting in between 50 and 60 additions, we left Frankfort with many regrets."

THE CHICAGO CHURCHES.

A. T. Campbell has returned from Missouri, where he went with Mrs. Campbell to attend her mother's funeral.

C. M. Sharpe preached at Garfield Boulevard Church last Sunday.

Bruce Brown of Valparaiso, Ind., was a visitor in Chicago Monday. Good audiences and frequent additions are encouraging in his work. He is teaching on Saturdays a class of 57 young men, many of whom are preaching.

The best meeting in the work of the Irving Park Church has just closed. The services were conducted by the pastor, W. F. Rothenburger, and home forces. There were 27 additions, nearly all adults. The number of men adds much to the strength of the church.

A. T. Campbell baptized two persons last Sunday in services of the Metropolitan Church.

The Junior C. T. of the West Pullman Church has begun the support of a child in India, under the C. W. B. M. There was one confession in regular services of the church last Sunday.

The Central Church will hold down town meetings in Kimball Hall, 243 Wabash avenue, April 19. J. T. Sweeney of Columbus, Ind., will help in beginning this new work.

Dr. J. J. Martin, pastor of the Austin Congregational church, made a timely and inspiring address at the Christian ministers' meeting last Monday. He spoke on "The Minister's Faith."

C. M. Sharpe will make an address next Monday on "The Authority of Christ."

LAST WORD ABOUT THE CONGRESS.

All things are ready for the Tenth Annual Congress of the Disciples of Christ, at the First Christian Church, Bloomington, Ill., March 31st to April 2nd.

When you arrive in Bloomington go direct to the First Christian Church, which is two blocks west of the public square on Jefferson street. There you will register and be assigned for entertainment. If you come in over the C. & A. take a street car and get off at West street and walk one block north. If you come in over the Big Four, the L. E. & W., or the Illinois Central, take a street car for the public square and walk two blocks west on Jefferson street.

Since the Central Illinois Christian Ministerial Institute convenes on Monday afternoon, March 30th, and holds an evening session with C. M. Chilton, of St. Joseph, Mo., as speaker, it would be well to arrive on Monday, so as to enjoy that treat also.

The Committee on Entertainment has already provided for over one hundred who were thoughtful enough to send in their names. Nearly ever mail brings additional names. Owing to the timeliness of the subjects to be discussed and the fact that our daily press has given much space to the program, the local attendance will be unusually large. All in all, we have every reason to believe that our expectations of a large general attendance and a new interest in the congress is to be realized. As pastor of the church where the sessions are to be held, I wish to again extend a cordial invitation to our ministers, our college and university men, our business men, and all who are interested in the things that pertain to the advancement of the Master's kingdom to be present.

Edgar D. Jones,
Pastor First Christian Church,

Eat Charcoal

Bad Breath, Gas on Stomach, and Blood Impurities Stopped by Wonderful Action of Charcoal Lozenges.

Trial Package Sent Free to Prove It.

To blow a whiff of your bad breath in the face of a stranger or a friend, is a mighty disagreeable thing—to both of you. It humiliates you and disgusts the one who is standing before you or talking with you face to face.

Onion-eaters, smokers, garlic-users, owners of bilious breath and furry tongues, victims of indigestion and those who are not teetotalers will be surprised how quickly they can get rid of their offensive breath by taking just a few of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges.

Charcoal is the greatest gas absorber known, absorbing 100 times its own volume in gas.

Gas on the stomach comes from indigestion, as a rule. But no matter which it comes from, if there is any there, charcoal in the form of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges, will absorb every bit of it. And besides that these charcoal wonder-workers will absorb any unnatural odors which you may have in your mouth, or in your stomach, and instead of having a "powerful" breath which you are ashamed of, you will have a pure, sweet breath, free from all odor.

That foul, bilious breath you have on arising in the morning can be stopped at once by Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges.

Don't use breath perfumes. They never conceal the odor, and never absorb the gas that causes the odor. Besides, the very fact of using them reveals the reason for their use. Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges in the first place stop for good all sour brash and belching of gas, and make your breath pure, fresh and sweet, just after you have drunk or eaten. Charcoal is a purifier as well as an absorber. It leaves the stomach and intestines pure and unpolluted by fermenting food, which causes more than half the ills of mankind.

Charcoal is now by far the best, most easy and mild laxative known. A whole boxful will do no harm; in fact, the more you take the better. Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are made of pure willow charcoal, and mixed with just a faint flavor of honey to make them palatable for you, but not too sweet. You just chew them like candy. They are absolutely harmless.

Get a new, pure, sweet breath, freshen your stomach for your next meal, and keep the intestines in good working order. You can get all the charcoal necessary to do these wonderful but simple things by getting Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges. We want you to test these little wonder-workers yourself before you buy them. So send us your full name and address for a free sample of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges. Then after you have tried the sample, and been convinced, go to your druggist and get a 25c box of them. You'll feel better all over, more comfortable, and "cleaner" inside.

Send us your name and address to-day and we will at once send you by mail a sample package, free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 200 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

FOREIGN MISSIONARY NOTES.

At the last meeting of the Executive Committee of the Foreign Society, March 13th, the following missionaries were appointed: W. F. McCall, Columbia, Mo.; Miss May Hiatt, Eureka, Ill.; Miss Alice M. Pepper, Kansas City, Mo.; Miss Sylvia Siegfried, Worthington, O.

The Central Church, San Diego, Cal., W. E. Crabtree, minister, becomes a Living-Link in the Foreign Society and will, in the future, support its own missionary. The church is very enthusiastic over this forward step. The minister and the congregation are to be congratulated.

Last week the Foreign Society received another gift on the annuity plan. It is very glad to receive money on this plan. The money can be used for building enterprises on the mission fields. Other friends are requested to follow this good example.

For the first eighteen days since the first of March $24,288 has been received. This is a gain over the same period last year of $5,990. One thousand fifty-one churches have sent in their offerings for this same period. This is a gain over last year of 94 churches.

A CONSTRUCTIVE ATTITUDE.

Every man has a right to rule his own life. This is his undisputed realm; not only so, but it shall remain forever undeveloped unless he assumes control. Every one may find within his own life that which will tax his executive powers, improve his intellect, stimulate his imagination and entertain his ambitions. How many people are making a business of living? The powers of the human soul, the depths of mystery that lie within us, the vast possibilities that are absolutely ours; how many have looked into them? The further fact of the reign of law in the making of a life, the absolute and undeniable conditions of self-improvement and success, the rich and rewarding fields of health and happiness that invite us; all these have been too lightly esteemed. "Know thyself" suggests a program of achievements the most thrilling of all.

There is a law of health, of happiness, of energy, of joy, of success. These are not accidents. Too many persons are living because they have to, not because they want to and enjoy it. There are conditions which, if met, one must be well or happy or whatever he desires. "Seek and ye shall find. Knock and it shall be opened unto, for every one that asketh findeth." There can be no doubt. There can be no failure. These are general, but there are specific laws for each line of action or desire.

If the energy spent trying to manage some one else were used in self building we and the world would be happier and the other fellow more easily managed. Self-control and self-mastery are the stepping stones to any position within one's powers. Rather, self-mastery is itself the highest position possible to man.

MICA AXLE GREASE

adds years to the life of a wagon. Just what a farmer, teamster or drayman needs to make the "wheels go round" with least wear and most profit.

Poor grease cuts the boxes out of your wheels — don't use it — get Mica Axle Grease and save the wagon.

Mica Axle Grease has just the right "body" to wear long without running. Coats the axle with an anti-friction surface of powdered mica which is almost as good as roller bearings.

Your wagon needs Mica Axle Grease — ask the dealer for it.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY
(INCORPORATED)

The man who masters himself is self-sufficient. As a matter of course, he may preach or practice law or medicine, or be a man of affairs, but these are only avocations. Ruling his own life is his vocation and his joy.

Let it be stated boldly that one's entire career, health, happiness, success, are absolutely in his own hand, and that every man may have what he really wants. Nothing is impossible to the determined soul. He may learn by progress that he does not want what he is after; that his real victory lies in other lines.

"The human will, that force unseen,
That offspring of a deathless soul,
May hew its way to any goal,
Though walls of granite intervene."

I am fully persuaded that much of the sadness and despair of earth is due to the failure to see this world conquering truth. Men must pass out of the chaos of accident into the world of purpose and do their own living. Caprice and passion and appetite are to be controlled. The will must take the initiative and be supreme over body and mind. Feelings and moods are servants. They are not masters. We will learn that the method by which we control ourselves is the identical method by which we control others. It is one and the same thing. The power by which we lift others is the power by which we lift ourselves. One grand man who is his own master is greater than a nation, for he can mould a nation.

"Out of the night that covers me,
Black as the pit from pole to pole,
I thank whatever gods may be
For an unconquerable soul."

J. M. Lowe.

HOT HALOS.

In addressing a large meeting of his fellow alumni of Brown University in Boston last week Governor Hughes said: "There is nothing in office except the work you do. The distinction is a mockery to those who enjoy it. The halo is a little hot. There are times when you would just like to take it off and rest your head, times when you would like to withdraw from public gaze, from public demands, from public criticisms, and just be an individual. But, after all, the one rule, according to my philosophy, has been to do what is put up to you to do as well as you know how, and let the rest take care of itself."

There is indeed a great deal of hero-worship in this country. Presidents, vice-presidents, members of the cabinet, governors, senators, judges, generals, famous authors, millionaires—such men are attended by crowds, their doings are chronicled in the papers, men hang upon their words. In America every man has a vast opportunity for influence, and those that have attained prominence are far more powerful than in most other nations of the globe. We Americans know how to make halos.

Yes, and we know how to make them hot! Hot with this very thing, this incessant attendance upon our great men, prying into the least details of their daily life, and publishing abroad their least utterance. Hot with fulsome praise. Hot with hostile suspicion. Hot with complaints. Hot with slanders. Hot with misrepresentations. Hot with persecutions. Hot with sarcasm. Hot with ridicule. There are so many ways of heating up a halo!

Perhaps the two tendencies balance each other. Perhaps, since we have the first, it is well that we also have the second. But if I were a public man (and I thank heaven that I am not!) I think I could get along with a very little halo, if I were allowed to control its temperature myself!—C. E. World.

From Our Growing Churches

TELEGRAMS

Lexington, Ky., March 23.—One hundred eighteen during past six days, 384 to date. Spoke to 2,500 in the city auditorium Sunday night. Broadway Church too small to accommodate the crowds. All of Christian churches of city united. Ministers Calhoun, Collis, Spencer, Simpson, Alexander and Stambaugh leading their respective congregations. Chas. Reign Scoville.

* * *

Milwaukee, Wis., March 22.—Still they come, come until the house is packed and run over. Seventy-two confessions to date. Offering to-day five hundred dollars. We continue the greatest meetings and audiences ever known to Milwaukee. Shelburne and Knight.

* * *

Lubec, Maine, March 23d.—Eleven additions last night, forty-eight to date. Using largest building in town. Mitchell and Bilby maintaining the hold on the community. This most conservative field aroused beyond our expectations. F. J. M. Appleman.

* * *

Springfield, Mo., March 23.—Fall River (Kan.) greatest meeting. One hundred and thirty additions. Over one hundred baptised, chiefly adults. Banker, editor, doctor, school principal, students. Richard Martin, evangelist, able Bible preacher. J. W. Broderick.

COLORADO.

Ault—There were 13 additions in our Ault meeting yesterday, 25 in the last three days and above 50 from all sources since our meetings began. There should be twice that number and doubtless would be could the meetings continue to legitimate end, but owing to an epidemic of scarlet fever we deem it best to close not later than next Sunday, after which we will give you a fuller account of our first union meeting with myself as preacher.

Bro. F. H. Stringham, pastor of the Christian church, rendered efficient help in these meetings proving himself a true yokefellow and a "workman that needeth not to be ashamed."

We have been using the "card system" in these meetings and while we found it very helpful I would not recommend it under any and all conditions.

Churches wanting meetings may address me at my home, Carthage, Mo.

S. J. Vance, Evangelist.

Grand Junction—Two addition March 15th in regular church services. J. H. McCartney.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Washington—Reports at preachers' meeting: Vermont Ave. (F. D. Power), 1 by statement; Ninth St. (Geo. A. Miller), 1 confession; 34th St. (Claude C. Jones), 2 by letter. Ninth St. has suffered a great loss in the recent death of S. S. Supt. J. E. Nichol.

Claude C. Jones, Secy.

ILLINOIS.

Springfield—We have had so far 54 accessions in our meeting at the Stuart Street Christian Church.

F. W. Burnham is the evangelist. Charles E. McVay of Benkelman, Nebraska, has charge of the music. The singing of the two large choruses under the leadership of Bro. McVay is proving a great attraction in the meeting.

Already there has been a larger ingathering than the church expected as they had a meeting here last year and also one two years ago. The meeting still continues.

IOWA.

Des Moines—Ministers' meeting March 16, 1908, Valley Junction (W. S. Johnson, evangelist); 7 confessions, 3 by letter. Highland Park (Eppard) 1 confession. Capitol Hill (Van Horn) 1 by letter. Jno. McD. Horne, Sec.

KANSAS.

Kansas City—There were two additions at the Northside Christian Church yesterday. James S. Myers.

MISSOURI.

Canton—The protracted meeting at Canton (Mo.) closed at the end of 3½ weeks with 47 added altogether, 35 baptisms. E. E. Violett and Frank Charlton will assist this congregation next November. B. H. Cleaver.

MONTANA.

Hamilton—The largest revival meeting held in the Bitter Root Valley has just closed at Hamilton. In point of number it does not sound large to our eastern brethren, but to us in this valley who know the great difficulties to overcome, it has been a great ingathering. Thirty-two were added, twenty-one were baptisms, nearly all adults.

Every department of church work has been strengthened. The Sunday School was increased from 40 to 115 and plans are under consideration for building a Sunday School room. With T. H. Tyler, a busy business man, but an earnest, consecrated Christian, as the efficient superintendent, we are confident of success. Five new names were added to the C. W. B. M. Nine new members to the Y. P. S. C. E. The Junior reorganized. Greater work planned by the Ladies' Aid and the Teachers' Training Class will double its membership.

Paul H. Castle, the pastor, deserves the support and praise he receives from his people and those outside the church. His sermons all through the meeting were marked for their simplicity, clearness on doctrinal points, and ever the exaltation of Christ. His whole heart and soul are in his work and he will lead his people on to greater victories.

C. R. Neal, pastor of the Helena Church, assisted the last week of the revival and won his way into the hearts and we will send by return mail a handsome portfolio (size 5x6) containing 120 pictures in full colors

Nothing approaching this work has ever been attempted before. In a series of splendid pictures the great and impressive scenes in the Bible story are depicted, true in color, costume, landscape, and all details to the life, the country and the time. ¶ To make the men and women of the Bible actual, living characters to their pupils is one of the first duties of the Sunday-School teachers, and no better help can they find for this than in the Tissot pictures. ¶ The whole world acknowledges that J. James Tissot was the greatest artist that ever lived, so far as Biblical subjects are concerned.

Only the unparalled success in the higher-priced editions makes possible this phenomenally low offer now. ¶ These pictures have received the unqualified endorsement of the leading clergymen and Sunday-School teachers throughout the United States. ¶ Nothing could be more helpful, and interesting, and delightful, when one is reading the Bible, than such a graphic interpretation of sacred stories. ¶ In no other way can the Bible stories be made so real and actual to children. Should be in every home.

of the people with his forceful, tactful preaching. The work of Lucile May Park of Coffeyville, Kan., song and assistant evangelist, cannot be too highly commended. As some one has said: "Everything Miss Park touches goes." Her work among the children is a marvel to all. She wins her way into their hearts and they cannot help doing the work she asks of them. She knows the ins and outs of every part of church work and by her tactfulness, her patience and gentleness, and in all her firmness sets in motion currents of activeness that will go on and on to eternity.

The people of Hamilton and up and down the Bitter Root Valley know of Miss Park as she sang at Grantsdale, Cowallis, Victor and Missoula. Her beautiful songs, her helpful Bible readings, her stories to the children, her earnest talks and exhortation to live the Christ life and her visits in the homes have been an inspiration. The Hamilton church to show in a measure their appreciation of her work presented her with a solid gold watch and fob. The church at Helena are certainly fortunate in securing her for their meetings beginning March 15th. We are hoping Miss Park may be kept busy in the state as we need just such a capable, consecrated worker. Mrs. H. A. Wheeldon.

Missoula, Montana.

NEW YORK.

Buffalo—During the past 35 days 22 persons, mostly adults, have responded to the gospel invitation at our regular services. The evangelistic atmosphere of this congregation is largely due to the splendid Bible School Revival, conducted under the leadership of Miss Eva Lemert of St. Louis, a few weeks ago when the Jefferson Street School was practically doubled in one week and now ranks among the great schools of our city. B. S. Ferrall, pastor.

OHIO.

Cincinnati—The Walnut Hills Christian church, Cincinnati, O., recently closed a two weeks' meeting during which there were 25 added to the church. The preaching was done by the pastor, A. W. Fortune, and the music was in charge of the Netz Sisters' Quartet. The uplifting influence of these consecrated singers will long be remembered on Walnut Hills.

SWEEP OF THE TIDE.

A prominent pastor in New York writes us this cheering message:

"I am delighted that a better day for the Christian Century is dawning. I have truly enjoyed the C. C. for many years. I do not, however, remember having read anything in its editorial department that has pleased me more than the editorial 'Positive Preaching' in the issue of Feb. 29. * * * Well, here's to the Century! May every cloud disappear, and the new day of prosperity be the brighter because of the storms of the past! The Century certainly has a mission among us. After years of suffering it is coming to its own, the more perfect because of its suffering. Undoubtedly a better day is dawning."

Important Books

We are the publishers of some of the best known works pertaining to the Disciples' Plea for a united church. These important books — important in more ways than one—should be read and owned by every member of the household of faith.

The Plea of the Disciples of Christ, by W. T. Moore. Small 16mo., cloth, 140 pages, net postpaid, thirty-five cents, won immediate success.

George Hamilton Combs, pastor of the Independence Boulevard Christian Church, Kansas City, Mo., one of the great churches of the brotherhood, writes.

"I cannot thank Dr. W. T. Moore enough for having written his little book on "Our Plea." It is more than a statement; it is a philosophy. Irenic, catholic, steel-tone, it is just the handbook I shall like to put into the hands of the thinking man on the outside. In all of his useful and honored life Mr. Moore has rendered no greater service to a great cause."

Historical Documents Advocating Christian Union, collated and edited by Charles A. Young. 12mo, cloth, 364 pages, illustrated, postpaid $1.00, is an important contribution to contemporary religious literature. It presents the living principles of the church in convenient form.

Z. T. Sweeney, Columbus, Indiana, a preacher of national reputation, writes:

"I congratulate you on the happy thought of collecting and editing these documents. They ought to be in the home of every Disciple of Christ in the Land, and I believe they should have a large and increasing sale in years to come."

Basic Truths of the Christian Faith, by Herbert L. Willett, author of The Ruling Quality, Teaching of the Books, Prophets of Israel, etc., etc. Post 8vo., cloth, 127 pages. Front cover stamped in gold, gilt top, illustrated, 75 cents, paper 25 cents.

A powerful and masterful presentation of the great truths for the attainment of the life of the spirit. Written in a charming and scholarly style. It holds the reader's fascinated attention so closely that it is a disappointment if the book has to be laid aside before it is finished.

J. E. Chase writes:

"It is the voice of a soul in touch with the Divine life, and breathes throughout its pages the high ideals and noblest conception of truer life, possible only to him who has tarried prayerfully, studiously at the feet of the world's greatest teacher."

Our Plea for Union and the Present Crisis, by Herbert L. Willett, author of the Life and Teachings of Jesus, etc., etc. 12mo., cloth, 140 pages, gold stamped, postpaid 50 cents.

Written in the belief that the Disciples of Christ are passing through an important, and in many respects, transitional period.

The author says:

'It is with the hope that * * * present forces and opportunities may be wisely estimated by us; that doors now open may be entered; that hopes only partially realized may come to fruition that these chapters are given their present form."

Early Relations and Separation of Baptists and Disciples, by Errett Gates. 8vo. cloth, gold side and back stamp, $1.00. A limited number in paper binding will be mailed postpaid for 25 cents until stock is sold out.

We owe a debt of gratitude to the writer of this book, and could only wish that it might be read not only by our people all over the land, but scattered among the Baptists. It is a most meritorious and splendid contribution to our literature.—THE CHRISTIAN WORKER, PITTSBURG, Pa.

The dominant personality of Alexander Campbell is so brought out as to give to what might be regarded as the dry details of ecclesiastical history and controversy almost the interest of a story. A valuable contribution to the history of the American churches.—THE CONGREGATIONALIST, BOSTON, Mass.

USEFUL YET.

My little boy has learned a lot since first he started off to school;
Much that I long ago forgot he has but lately learned by rule;
I once knew how to parse, but now the knack somehow is gone from me;
He fairly chews the grammar up; he knows the whole thing to a T;
Sometimes he is inclined, I fear, to look upon me with disdain,
But I still come in handy here—I earn the pleasures that we gain.

I cannot name the boundaries of Burma or Beloochistan;
He does it with the greatest ease, and proudly shows me that he can;
He works out problems that I shun, although I could have solved them once;
Sometimes I more than half suspect that he regards me as a dunce;
Perhaps I might go back and learn if I had fewer daily cares,
But, after all, 'tis I that earn the food
he eats, the clothes he wears.

My little boy is learning fast, while I forget, year after year;
The records of the misty past, to me so vague, to him are clear;
He writes a better hand than I, his letters are more plainly made;
He spells words that I cannot spell without the dictionary's aid;
He is inclined sometimes, I fear, to think my boyhood was misspent,
But I still come in handy here; I foot the bills and pay the rent.

His Attorney.

A man arrested for murder was assigned a shyster whose crude appearance caused the unfortunate prisoner to ask the judge:

"Is this my lawyer?"

"Yes," replied his honor.

"Is he going to defend me?"

"Yes."

"If he should die, could I have another?"

"Yes."

"Can I see him alone in the back room for a few minutes?"—Short Stories.

"You never change your mind about anything?" "What's the use?" rejoined the egotist. "I found years ago that I was just as liable to be wrong the second time as I was the first."

Reds and Blues Contest Buttons

REDS AND BLUES Contest plans have proved wonderfully successful in Y. M. C. A. work and are proving more so in Sunday school work. By making use of our Reds and Blues plans you can easily double your school membership in a month or six weeks. You can break up irregular attendance in a very short time. You can raise large sums of money for your needs. You can secure church attendance, bringing of lesson helps, bringing of collection, coming on time.

The Reds and Blues plans please because they set everybody at work heartily and enthusiastically and because each leaves the school in a healthy condition when the contest is ended.

Each Reds and Blues plan requires dividing the school into two sections—Reds and Blues and appointing captains, one or more, for each side, a social or other treat to be given at the close of the contest, when those on the winning side receive ice-cream and cake, and the losers crackers and cheese, or some other attraction to celebrate the close of the contest and the victory. Treat is to be paid for by the school. Complete instructions sent with each order.

Price, in lots of 10 or more (sent assorted, one-half each color), 1½c each, postpaid; 50 or more, 1c each, postpaid.

Worth a Place in Your Library

The Messiah: A Study in the Gospel of the Kingdom. David McConaughy, Jr. 12mo., cloth, net $1.00.

In two parts. I. Aiming to trace the outlines of the peerless portrait of the Messiah as depicted by Matthew. II. A series of devotional meditations adapted for the "quiet hour."

Things That Are Supreme. James G. K. McClure, D. D. College Sermons. 16mo, cloth, net 75c.

Eight sermons by the popular president of McCormick Theological Seminary. These sermons were recently preached to the students at Harvard, Yale, Cornell, Princeton, Illinois, Wisconsin and Chicago.

Christianity's Storm Centre. Charles Stelzle. A Study of the Modern City. 16 mo, cloth, net $1.00. Mt. Stelzle believes that if the Church can be aroused to face the problem, investigate the conditions and alter its own methods it will win the fight for uniting the church and the laboring masses. He is hopeful with the well founded optimism of the man who knows from experience both sides of his question.

The Eternal in Man. James I. Vance, D. D. Cloth, net $1.00. Dr. Vance has the rare gift of stimulating and arousing both head and heart. These chapters dust off the commonplace of human life and its experiences and show the eternal part of us that lies underneath.

The Supreme Conquest. W. L. Watkinson, D. D. Net $1.00. To the list of great preachers who have made the British pulpit famous, the name of William L. Watkins has long since been added. His books are eagerly sought by up-to-date ministers everywhere, and are bought with equal appreciation by the general public.

God's Message to the Human Soul. John Watson, D. D., (Ian Maclaren). The Cole Lectures for 1907. Cloth, net $1.25. A peculiar and sad interest attaches The Cole Lectures for 1907. They were delivered, the author having suddenly passed away during his visit to this country, and within a few days of the date of the appointment that brought him to America. Fortunately Dr. Watson had put these lectures into manuscript form; they are therefore preserved for the wider circle of appreciative readers.

The Modern Sunday School in Principle and Practice. Henry F. Cope. Cloth, net $1.00. This volume by the General Secretary of the Religious Education Association constitutes an invaluable guide for the management of the Sunday School under modern conditions. He presents the results of all the newest experiments both with primary, adolescent and adult grades.

China and America Today. Arthur H. Smith, D. D. Cloth, net $1.25. Dr. Smith has been for 35 years a missionary to China. In this capacity he has learned much of China, which in another relation might be denied him. Being a statesman by instinct and genius, he has taken a broad survey of conditions and opportunities, and here forcibly presents his criticisms of America's strength and weakness abroad, especially in China.

Palestine Through the Eyes of a Native. Gamahliel Wad-El-Ward. Illustrated, cloth, net $1.00. The author, a native of Palestine, has been heard and appreciated in many parts of this country in his popular lectures upon the land in which so large a part of his life was spent. His interpretations of many obscure scriptural passages by means of native manners and customs and traditions is particularly helpful and informing.

The Continent of Opportunity: South America. Francis E. Clark, D. D. Profusely illustrated, net $1.50. Dr. Clark writes a thorough-going tour of examination, covering practically every centre of importance in South American continent, Panama, Chile, Ecuador, Peru, Argentine, Brazil, Paraguay and Uruguay. Dr. Clark's prime object has been to collect information of every sort that will help to understand the problems facing Christian Civilization in our sister Continent.

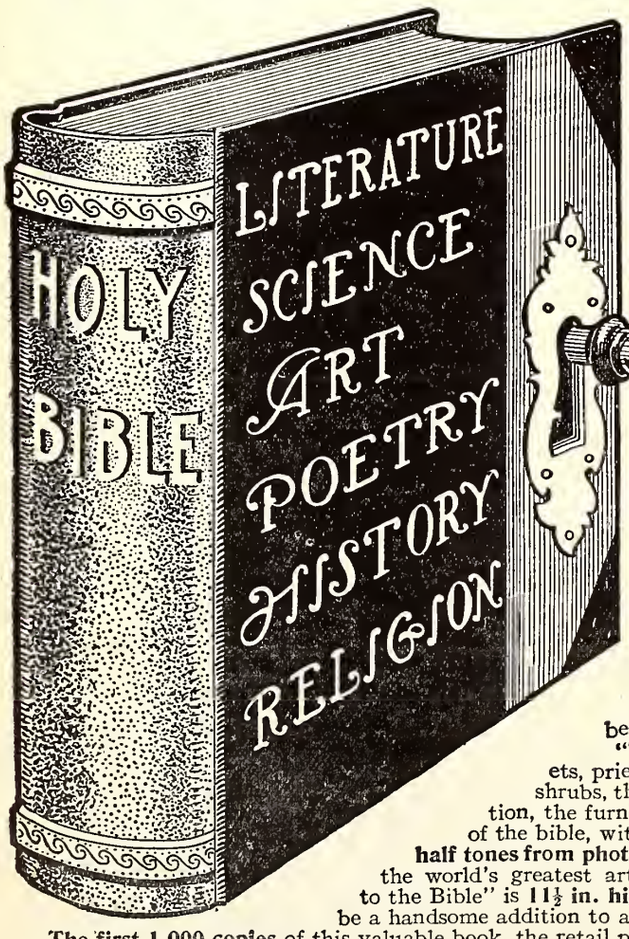
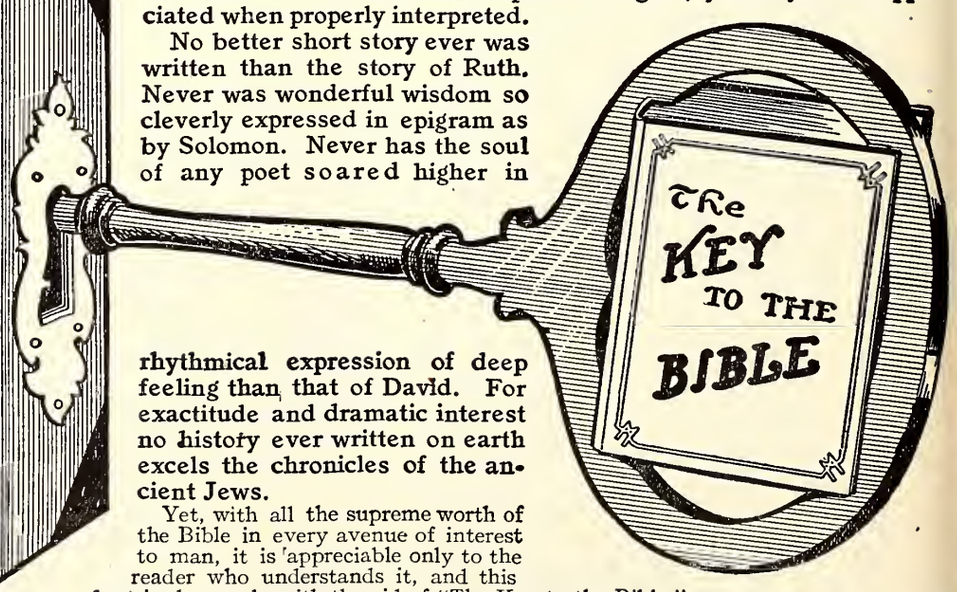
The Greatest Book About the Greatest Book.



A THOUSAND times you have read that the Bible is an education in itself; this statement has been a favorite of great men for ages. No careful student ever fails in the conviction of its truth. Literature, Science, History, Poetry, Art and Religion, all are found in it at their most supreme heights, yet only to be appreciated when properly interpreted.

No better short story ever was written than the story of Ruth. Never was wonderful wisdom so cleverly expressed in epigram as by Solomon. Never has the soul of any poet soared higher in rhythmical expression of deep feeling than that of David. For exactitude and dramatic interest no history ever written on earth excels the chronicles of the ancient Jews.



Yet, with all the supreme worth of the Bible in every avenue of interest to man, it is appreciable only to the reader who understands it, and this best is done only with the aid of "The Key to the Bible."

"The Key to the Bible" is an encyclopedia of the lessons, places, prophets, priests, apostles, disciples, birds, beasts and reptiles, the trees, plants and shrubs, the dress and customs, etc., peoples, houses and other places of habitation, the furniture, ornaments, statuary, the towns, rivers, mountains and lands of the bible, with 16 full page colored pictures from photographs, 100 full page half tones from photographs and reproductions of the greatest biblical paintings by the world's greatest artists and over 400 well drawn text illustrations. "The Key to the Bible" is 11½ in. high, 8 in. wide and 2½ in. thick, weighing 5 pounds. It will be a handsome addition to any library.

The first 1,000 copies of this valuable book, the retail price of which is $5.00, has been set aside for a preliminary sale. We have made arrangements with the publisher for a limited number of copies, and can offer them at the Preliminary sale price of $3, prepaid to any ad. After 1,000 copies are disposed of by the publishers the price will be $5.

I enclose $3.00 for one copy of "The Key to the Bible" to be sent prepaid.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

I see there is no man so happy as to have all things, and no man so miserable as not to have some. Why should I look for a better condition than all others? If I have somewhat, and that of the best things, I will in thankfulness enjoy them and want the rest with contentment.

SIX THOUSAND DOLLARS IN SIX DAYS

A notable debt raising campaign was carried through last fall by the church at Lebanon, Ind., in the midst of the financial flurry. The plan used may prove suggestive to some other church that wishes to get out of debt before the Centennial. At a meeting of the Official Board the membership roll was taken up alphabetically and each name assigned to the two officers that it was thought could approach that person most successfully. All the canvassing was to be done in one week. Each person made his pledge on a card without knowing what any other person had given. All payments were conditioned on the raising of the entire amount. The end of the week found the entire debt of six thousand dollars subscribed, and the congregation joined joyfully in a thanksgiving service with its devoted minister, L. E. Brown.

W. R. Warren,
Centennial Secretary.

EDITORIAL

In Essentials, UNITY; In Non-Essentials, LIBERTY; In all Things, CHARITY

THE BATTLE AGAINST THE BOTTLE.

It is a satisfaction to know that America is not the only battlefield in which the campaign against the saloon is being waged with energy and promise of success. One of the latest issues introduced by the liberal government in England is a bill providing for the gradual absorption of the liquor traffic by the government, during a period of fourteen years. It is the belief of the most aggressive enemies of the traffic in Great Britain that by making the business a government monopoly it can be controlled and its conscienceless violations of the law and ordinances can be eliminated. It will have the same standing as the trade in tobacco in France and salt in Italy, and the incentive to evil which grow out of the enormous profits made by an uncontrolled trade will disappear.

Two things mark this movement as unique from the standpoint of American temperance agitation. The first is that the effort is being put forward, not by temperance societies or political parties out of power, but by the administration itself, which is prepared to risk its life upon the passage of this bill, which so vitally threatens the liquor traffic that every effort is being made by the breweries and the public houses, as they are called, to organize opposition to it. The second is the fact that temperance sentiment in England seems to favor the plan of putting the manufacture and sale of all alcoholic beverages directly into the hands of the government where it can be controlled and where it is believed the evils which result from the open and aggressive saloon will be obviated. Political and social conditions in England, which are very different from those in the United States, seem to favor this solution of the difficulty, and even the most earnest advocates of temperance and abstinence are advocating this plan.

It is a cheering thing to observe that though the methods of temperance agitation and campaigning differ with the difference of national habit and custom, yet the problem of destroying the traffic in intoxicating drinks is becoming a world question, and to its solution the best men in all the western nations are devoting their time and energies.

THE CONGRESS.

By the time this issue of the Christian Century reaches its readers the sessions of the Congress at Bloomington, Ill., will be well under way. While that is the gathering of chief moment there are several others grouped about it each of which is of concern to the brotherhood. Among these will be the sessions of the Central Illinois Ministerial Association, the American Christian Educational Association and the committee on organization of a publication society.

The Congress has come to be one of the important features of the annual calendar of the Disciples. It is what its name implies, a coming together of the representative men of the brotherhood to confer regarding questions of moment in the life and thought of the churches. It is not a legislative body but a parliament in which freedom of speech is the one desirable thing. Perhaps in our busy age there is too much talking in proportion to the thinking actually accomplished. Conventions are the order of the day. Press and pulpit are claimant and insistent. It may be that there is an overplus of talking which marks a meagreness of thought and feeling.

But no gathering could be held with better promise of good results than that in which the men and women who are studying the life of the age and are trying to get below the surface of things to the reality are come together to speak of their common faith, their hopes and purposes. Some at least of those who have a part in the Congress utterances are of this sort. Their names are familiar wherever Christian philanthropy, social uplift and religious discipline are talked of. The value of such a gathering to all who attend is not to be put into common speech.

We hope to give a full account of the Congress sessions next week.

MEN OF NOTE.

The continued illness of the British premier, Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, has made it practically certain that his resignation will be presented at an early date and a new ministry will be formed. It is generally understood that Mr. Asquith, the present chancellor of the exchequer and leader of the administration in the premier's absence, will become the head of the new administration. The departure of Campbell-Bannerman or "C.-B.," as he is affectionately called, will be a distinct loss to British statesmanship. He has none of the brilliancy of Lord Rosebery, Mr. Balfour or Gladstone, his predecessors in the office, nor has he behind him the traditions which made Lord Salisbury a favorite as head of the government. But his success as premier has astonished all observers, and his administration, which threatened at first to be of but short life in spite of the majority with which it was ushered in, has endured and has inaugurated some notable reforms in English life.

Rev. Thomas Spurgeon, the son of Charles Haddon Spurgeon, has been pastor of the Metropolitan Tabernacle in London during almost the entire period since his father's death. During the past two years, however, he has been an invalid to such an extent as to prevent his work with the church, and has spent most of his time on the continent in the effort to regain his strength. This at last he perceives to be out of the question, and he has presented his formal resignation which has been accepted with reluctance by the congregation. His assistant pastor, Archibald Brown, will continue with the church established many years ago by the great Spurgeon. The resigning pastor has been fourteen years with the church and during that time no less than 2,200 members have been received into its fellowship.

An organization that may be fairly considered cosmopolitan is the new Y. M. C. A. branch recently established at Kuala, on the Malay Peninsula. Its membership of over three hundred men is composed of Protestants, Roman Catholics, Hindus, Mohammedans, Confucians and Buddhists. Internationally it represents Europeans, Eurasians, Chinese, Malays, Tamils, Singhalese and Japanese, all intent upon the studies of electricity, stenography or building construction. That of the Association there is democratic as well as cosmopolitan is attested by the unusual accomplishment of persuading Tamils to mix with the Chinese, Malays with the English. It is an example of toleration that shames many of our own petty prejudices.

Several missionaries have left this country to preach the gospel in foreign lands, being persuaded that they had the "gift of tongues." Rev. S. C. Todd of the Bible Missionary Society writes from China to the Baptist Argus that he has met a number of these persons in that country, India and Japan, but in every case their speech was an "unknown tongue" to the people they sought to address.

Venerable institutions are no more exempt from insanity than venerable men. The church damns the grasshoppers. There has been preserved in the register of the cathedral of Laon an episcopal edict (dated 1120) against weevils. In 1516 an official of Troyes issued this order: "To all parties concerned: Doing justice to the request of the inhabitants of Villenoxe, we warn the caterpillars to withdraw within the space of six days, and in default of this, we declare them accurst and excommunicated."— Victor Hugo.

My Jesus, as Thou wilt!
If among thorns I go,
Still sometimes here and there
Let a few roses blow.
But Thou on earth along
The thorny path hast gone,
Then lead me after Thee,
My Lord, Thy will be done.

—Benjamin Schmolke.

If prayers of thanksgiving were commoner, the whole life would be indefinitely enriched. The eye would ever be kept awake and clear for the hundred tokens of a Father's love that fall unnoticed about our path every day, and the heart would be more sensitive and responsive to the great salvation.—J. In View of Our Centennial—III, The Ordinances

Perry J. Rice

In our exposition of the position of the Disciples we have thus far considered "The Name," and "The Creed." We come now to consider the attitude of the Disciples with reference to the ordinances. The word ordinance means "that which has been ordained or appointed." When it is used in connection with the Christion religion it refers to the specific things which the Lord has appointed. It is not a prominent word in the New Testament. It is, however, used a number of times, usually referring to the requirements of the law. It has come into much greater prominence in Christian history, being used to designate certain specific appointments of the Christian religion. Of these there are two quite universally recognized. They are Baptism and the Lord's Supper.

In discussing the subject of baptism let us remove from our minds as far as possible any thought of controversy or debate. We shall perhaps be able to put ourselves in this frame of mind if we seek simply to enumerate the several very patent and quite universally received positions with reference to the subject. In the first place it is everywhere recognized as having a place among gospel requirements. This was prominently true in the work of John the Baptist. Jesus himself submitted to it, saying as he did so, "Thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness." Moreover he gave it a place in the great commission. Throughout the early apostolic history as recorded in Acts, and the several Epistles it is given proportionate prominence. In the second place, it may be said with the utmost assurance that immersion in water has been universally recognized as fulfilling the requirements of the New Testament as far as the form of administering the ordinance is concerned. It is true, of course, that other forms have been very largely practiced but they have been recognized as substitutes for immersion on the ground that the form is of no particular consequence. It is well to remember that the practice of these substitutes has been the occasion for most of the controversy that has been waged over the subject. Pedobaptists, therefore, and not Baptists must shoulder the resonsibility for this prolonged war of words within the church. It would seem that in the interest of peace and of union, if for no other reason, the use of these substitutes might be discontinued.

In the third place, throughout the history of the church baptism has, with the fewest exceptions, been recognized as having a place in the divine economy. Practically all of the churches make it a condition of church membership. This universal position implies that together with faith, and a contrite heart, baptism is linked as one of the primary conditions to the enjoyment of the blessings promised in the gospel. This last proposition may not be quite so universally acceptable as the two which precede it, but taken just as it is stated and reading nothing into it and nothing out of it, most people would assent to it.

The three propositions named by no means cover all the questions that may arise. It is indeed at this very point that the mind of man begins to inquire as to the exact significance of baptism and its relation to the forgiveness of sin and our acceptance on the part of the Father. Many judgments have been held upon this point and as yet none can be said to approach general acceptance. The reason for this is apparent. It is a question dependent upon the interpretation of numerous passages of Scripture concerning which somewhat widely variant judgments may be held. But exact definitions at this point are not at all essential to the ordinance itself. All of the demands are fulfilled when one in loving obedience to the divine will and in accordance with the universal positions above referred to, submits to baptism. We may safely leave the results with God. Whatever judgments one may hold with reference to the relation of baptism to the forgiveness of sin, do not in the least alter the fact. It is important therefore, that we do the thing required in the way indicated in the New Testament and we may rest assured that since all the requirements of the gospel have their end in securing to man his highest good, this action on our part will not be suffered to fail of its intended purpose. In other words, those who in faith and a spirit of obedience have been baptized may rest in perfect assurance that so far as they are individually concerned the question is forever settled. There can be no possible controversy in the minds of such people upon the subject since they are conscious that whether it be of great or of little importance they have fulfilled all its requirements. It therefore appears that in these universally accepted propositions all that is essential to the ordinance is included.

This is the position which the Disciples have held from the beginning though in the discussion of the subject we have often been led far afield. Division of opinion on some of these questions of interpretation led to the separation of Baptists and Disciples after they had worked together for about a decade and a half, and these differences of opinion still continue to serve as hindrances to the complete union of the two bodies. Probably there never will be a complete agreement, and in view of this it would seem unnecessary much longer to delay union when the essential features of the ordinance are honored alike by both bodies. Our convictions, however, based upon the interpretation of the Scriptures which we, or those with whom we are immediately associated have made, are tenacious things and therefore a degree of patience, not often exercised, is important on the part of all concerned. It is well to remember that there is a position with reference to the ordinance of baptism which is not in dispute and those who hold that position need only to abide the time when others will be willing to accept it.

The ordinance of the Lord's Supper is also of interest. With reference to it there is abundant opportunity for controversial discussion. Questions with reference to its origin, its position in the early church and the particular significance that was attached to it are not only interesting but important. To enter upon the discussion of any of these questions in this essay would carry us far beyond the limits of our expressed purpose. Let us at once divest our minds of any mystical ideas which are so likely to attach themselves to this ordinance. It is pre-eminently a remembrance institution. "This do in remembrance of me," is the word of the Master. Speaking of the ordinance, Isaac Errett once said: "We invest it not with the awfulness of a sacrament but regard it as a sweet and precious feast of holy memories designed to quicken our love of Christ and cement the ties of our common brotherhood." The necessity for such a memorial may be easily seen. It is easy to forget. We allow to lapse from our memories our most sacred experiences, and the loved ones of to-day if they are removed from our midst are all too soon forgotten. The world with its innumerabe interests crowds in upon us and before we are aware of it, it has obliterated from our lives the aspirations that, under other circumstances, love has inspired.

Moreover the ordinance of the Lord's Supper emphasizes the elements of chief significance in the life and ministry of our Lord. It speaks to us of his "broken body" and his "shed blood," all of which he endured that he might bring us to God. It places before the mind in the most vivid possible way the suffering servant of the world. It is a material picture of the very center and circumference of the work of Christ. It says plainer than any language could utter, "He gave his life for us, and we therefore ought to give our lives in the service of the world." The Lord's Supper therefore is not only a memory, sweet and precious, but a clarion call to service. It says to every humble hungering soul,

> "I gave my life for thee,
> My precious blood I shed,
> That thou might'st ransomed be,
> And quickened from the dead.
> I gave my life for thee,
> What hast thou done for me?"

The full significance of the Lord's Supper is never felt until the last line of each verse of this beautiful hymn of Frances Havergal is borne in upon our hearts as a personal call to sacrifice and service.

It has been the custom of the Disciples to observe the Lord's Supper on every first day of the week because, in the first place, this is in accord with the custom of the early church. There is, however, another reason which it may be well to emphasize. If the ordinance has such significance and value as we have said, then every reason that would induce Christian people to observe it at all would urge its frequent observance. Our public services in the Lord's house are not always as helpful and inspiring as they might be. The preacher often feels the inadequacy of his own message to meet the deepest needs of the people to whom he speaks. But when this memorial service is added he has the consciousness that taken as a whole the hour cannot have been spent in vain. With this picture of the suffering Savior indelibly printed upon the minds and hearts of the people, they cannot fail to go back to their offices, factories and shops, or to the routine duties of the home with new resolutions and a quickening sense of purpose to serve and to make that service however humble, glorious.

The Good and Evil of Church Letters

G. B. Van Arsdall

The custom of giving church letters is one that has been in vogue for a long time The purpose of the letter has been to serve as a certificate of membership or statement of the Christian character and good standing of persons moving from one locality to another. The thought in it evidently has been to avoid a church being imposed upon by someone seeking membership who was not worthy. It served also as a testimonial of appreciation of the services rendered by the individual to his own church when he moved from that church to some other community. The results of the custom in this respect have, of course, been wholesome, but on the other hand, there have been some difficulties attending the matter. One of these has been the question of what constitutes good standing in the church. In every congregation there are some, at least, who are not actively engaged in the work, but with whom the church is exercising patience and cultivating them in the hope that they may grow into an active practice of Christian virtues. When such persons call for a letter it is difficult to know how to treat such a request, and yet the difficulty is by no means inconsistent with the attitude of the church toward such persons in retaining them as members, and endeavoring to cultivate Christian graces in them.

But perhaps the most serious outgrowth of the custom of granting church letters has been that it has created a false conception as to what church membership is. To illustrate what it means, one of the difficult problems with every pastor is to induce those who move into his community, who are members of the church elsewhere, to formally identify themselves with the church, or, to put it into the language of general usage, to put their letters into the church.

But before considering this false conception, let us introduce some of the reasons commonly given for withholding membership from the church to which one has moved. Especially in the city we not infrequently meet with people who avail themselves of the fact that they are not formally identified with the church there to spend months, and sometimes years, in going about from church to church, and thus dissipating their energies without centering them on any particular work. Then we not infrequently hear such expressions as this concerning the matter, "We have been members of the old home church since we were children, and we cannot bear the thought of taking our letters away from that church." Another reason often given is the fact that the individuals were very much dissatisfied with the conduct of affairs in the church of which they were formerly members. Perhaps the church was quarrelsome, or there were those in it, who in their judgment at least, sought to "run things." But the more common excuse given is the uncertainty of permanent residence. It would be surprising to those not acquainted with the facts to know how many people who move to a city withhold their fellowship and co-operation in the church for years, because the permanency of their residence there is uncertain. The writer recently met those of a family, who have moved to Cedar Rapids, who lived in Des Moines for eleven years, and yet never identified themselves with the church there, because at no time during that period was it certain that they might not move away from the city soon. All these, and many others, are reasons commonly given for not taking fellowship with the church. It would be interesting and profitable to discuss each of these at length, but we speak of the matter here only to call attention to the false conception of church membership that has grown up as a result of the custom of granting church letters. For instance, when one speaks of leaving his letter in the church from which he came, he conveys the idea that he has left something tangible behind him. Now the only thing which one leaves behind is the record and memory and influence of his life, and the church letter is simply a testimonial to that fact. That he is a member of the church from which he came is true only in the sense that his name may be on the roll of the church. From that church he may receive a statement concerning his character that will admit him into another church, but a man has no church membership, in the truest sense of the word, apart from the place where he lives and fellowships in the Master's work, and if he does not live somewhere and work somewhere, it matters not where his name may be enrolled.

The pathetic side to this matter is in what the church suffers from this misconception. None of us know how long we may live in any particular community, and certain it is that we will not live anywhere on the earth permanently. In every other line of business it is the normal thing for a man to seek out those who are engaged in his profession or business, learn its condition and needs, and seek to benefit both himself and the business by an interest and participation in it. It would seem that in the matter of church membership, which to a Christion ought to be the most important thing in his life, it would be the natural thing for him to seek out the church first, and take fellowship immediately upon his arrival in the city. Such a course would make the church and its work the matter of first importance with him, and his influence there the thing about which he was most anxious. Even should one stay but a few months in the church, he does not know what influence such an active interest upon his part may have upon others, and it is certainly the wholesome and natural thing for him to do, in order to cultivate his own spiritual life.

The writer has seen so much of the evil effects of this misconception of church membership that he has come to the conclusion that it would be a wise policy for the church in any community to enroll the names of members who move to that community on the list of the church membership, assign them work, have an oversight of them, and in short, sustain the same relation to them that it does to those who observe the formal custom of presenting their letters and coming forward to receive the hand of fellowship. This need cause no offense to such persons, indeed it is rather a compliment to them, to take such recognition of their worth and place and what is expected of them, and what in their hearts they really expect of themselves. A politician does not formally give the hand of fellowship to a member of his party who moves to town. He simply expects that he will go on voting and working for his party as he has always done. Should the church do less? Let us think on these things.

Twentieth Century Church Equipment—I

S. R. Badgely

The topic "Twentieth Century Church Equipment" implies that there has been some sort of church equipment in the centuries preceding ours. It might therefore be interesting and profitable to review briefly the history and development of church building in order to judge how the present may be related to the past.

The most enduring history of the human race in all ages has been written in the buildings which it has erected. From the earliest type of shelter to the most magnificent palace, all tell us some story of the wants and wishes, toils and tastes, hopes and home life of their builders. The tent of the Bedouin and wigwam of the Indian, speak of the nomadic life of their occupants, the one in search of pasturage for his flocks, and the other in pursuit of game or fish.

So well understood is the language of buildings that the ruins of habitations long destroyed are a most valuable heritage. Fragmentary ruins of Egyptian, Greek and Roman buildings have added much to our knowledge of these interesting people and enable us to trace the genealogy of architecture in its earlier development.

The long buried Pompeii yields up many of its secrets, as its buildings are exposed to view, and even the Sphinx with all its reputation for silence, has not been without its story.

The most ancient and enduring structures of which we have knowledge are tombs built, or rock hewn, to preserve the remains and perpetuate the memory of the dead, and temples erected either to placate the anger of the gods or as an expression of gratitude and a place of worship.

The earlier form of temples provided simply a shrine for an image worshiped as a god, or which stood as a symbol of a god, so that the heart's desire for communion with a higher order of being might have something tangible to appeal to in petition, gratitude and sacrifice.

The tabernacle of God's chosen Israel was an adaptation of these temples with the Ark of the Covenant, the cherubim and the shechinah, representing the visible presence of the one true and living God, occupying the inmost chamber, or holy of holies. Solomon's temple, inspired by the gratitude of David his father, adhered to the same plan as the tabernacle with each dimension doubled.

In the formative period of the church certain great truths were essential, all of which were emphasized in the temple and its equipment. God's people, surrounded by polytheistic nations with gods for all purposes and all occasions, with charaters as diversified as human ingenuity and passions could conceive, must be taught first of all that there is but one true and living God, creator of all things, pure in life and character, and that this God required his people to be like him. Hence we find in the tabernacle and in the temple which displaced it, one only visible symbol of God, sacredly guarded from all save the high priest and he was permitted but once a year to come into the presence and that only after extraordinary preparation and purification.

The temple with its outer and inner courts, holy place and holy of holies with strict ceremonies of washing and cleansing, were impressive object lessons in purity and holiness. Every article in the elaborate and expensive list of furnishings had its use and taught its lesson. The temple and its equipment was in every essential detail adapted to and suitable for its time and mission.

God who has all time and eternity in which to accomplish his purposes, regards time as an element in all his work and in the development of his people. Israel, inspired, directed and used equipment and methods corresponding in purpose to our most advanced kindergarten work.

The coming of Jesus Christ on earth found the Jewish temple the principal building devoted to the worship of God. The form of worship and climatic conditions of that age and locality had not developed the enclosed auditorium for large congregations. The teaching and preaching of the Master was for the most part in the open air, on mountain slope, by sea shore and at the road side.

As teaching and preaching became more and more a prominent feature in the Christian propaganda and with the extension of the church to other and more northern climates, there came the necessity for buildings which would shelter and accommodate large gatherings of people.

Meantime the Romans had evolved from the Greek Stoa a form of building called the basilica, used as a hall of justice. Many of these buildings were appropriated for Christian worship and new churches were built after the same general plan until the name basilica came to stand for a Christian church. The Roman basilica had a raised tribune opposite the main entrance which in the adaptation for Christian worship easily became the sanctuary or chancel which still remains an important feature in ecclesiastical architecture. Symbols, images and paintings gradually became important factors in church furnishings and decoration. Thus art reached its highest development under the fostering care of the church and inspired by a deep religious spirit.

The excesses of the period called the "Dark Ages" brought on a reaction known as "The Reformation" when many fine churches and priceless works of art in sculpture and painting were mutilated and destroyed in a spirit of rampant iconoclasm. Thus it was that along with Protestanism came a prejudice against the use of material forms and symbols of any description and a decided preference for plainness almost to the point of ugliness, all of which was quite discouraging to architecture and art.

The Church, however, in all ages has been the greatest patron and conservator of architecture and art. It has done more than any other institution to inspire and make possible the erection of noble and permanent monumental structures. Architecture, therefore, owes to the Church a debt of gratitude which entitles it to the very best product of architectural skill.

Chicago's Fifty-Year Old Y. M. C. A.

Oliver R. Williamson

In that historic London upper room the world wide Young Men's Christian Association had its birth June 6, 1844. Thirteen years later a financial panic, checking business and bringing despair to thousands, spread through the United States. In the wake of disaster came a wonderful religious revival, scarcely less widespread; the awakened zeal for evangelism led to a deeper sense of the spiritual needs of the cities and organizations of the Y. M. C. A., first in Montreal and Boston, then in other large communities, became the centers of Christian effort.

In Chicago the "Young Men's Society for Religious Improvement," recognizing "the benign results" obtained through these Associations, proceeded on March 29, 1858, to change its form of organization to that of the new movement. Cyrus Bentley, later well known in Chicago, became its president; Dwight L. Moody's share in the beginnings is a part of the world's religious history; and there was in active connection with the work such men as John V. Farwell, A. L. Coe, B. F. Jacobs, L. Z. Leiter, H. J. Willing, Orrington Lunt and E. S. Wells. William Blair and W. W. Boyington were among the incorporators. The first Board of Trustees included E. W. Blatchford, Cyrus H. McCormick and George Armour. Ever since these days the Association has claimed in peculiarly large measure the support and active interest of the leaders in Chicago's material upbuilding; the Committee of One Hundred that has been laboring enthusiastically since last June in preparation for the semi-centennial celebration is probably quite as representative and certainly a more comprehensive body of men who have "made good" than the one of early days.

Chicago in 1858 was a rough hewn town of 90,000. What she is now everyone knows. Despite her large foreign population she is the typical American city. Her stamp is upon much of the marvelous progress of the great west, and to her she draws of the best material for American manhood from the farms and smaller communities, to make or to mar, to refine or to destroy. Out of this crucible have come men of the sort that make nations.

Chicago's leadership in material things is undisputed in the trans-Appalachian region. Spiritually, perhaps the same badge of supremacy may not be placed upon her. But in one particular Christian effort has held its own with the more sordid endeavors of a striving Americanism. Though the work of her Y. M. C. A. to-day is sharply differentiated in outward form from that of the sixties, it still sets the pace for specialized work for young men. Here, where may be found the largest single department in the world, is the proving ground for men and measures. In the multifarious operations new standards of efficiency are developed, and from its offices and its training schools have gone forth youthful veterans who man the associations in smaller cities, who direct or share the foreign work at home or in the field, and who follow Uncle Sam's boys in Panama or in the Philippines.

More than a mere local interest there is, then, in the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of this Association. The organization has kept abreast of the growth and changing character of the western metropolis, being thus typical of the effort of the Church to be, as a unified multitude, what Paul endeavored to be individually—"All things to all men." First a hired room furnished "A common place of resort, to which to invite the idle and thoughtless young men of the city, where they may pass their time pleasantly and profitably in reading and in intercourse with Christian young men, and thus be brought under religious influences;" now, by various stages and by cautious unfolding the Association has become a broadly organized body having under its care four general, six railroad and ten student departments located at strategic points; owning hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of property and making use of every dollar's worth of it; claiming during the year some 12,000 members and doing for young men what no other one agency could be conceived of as doing. The enrollment in educational classes exceeds 2,000.

It is worth while to go back and touch upon some of the more salient points of the Association's development. Advent of the Civil War brought with it new problems for those who were striving to save men. The Association shared in the common spirit of patriotism, and under the leadership of Major Whittle, five companies of young men, nearly all Christians, were enlisted for the Union Army. These with an equal number of companies constituted the Seventy-Second Illinois Infantry and gained honor for courage in the field. A Y. M. C. A. was organized in the camps, and in the work of the Christian and sanitary commissions the Chicago organization was a leader. During the war and for two years afterward, quarters were occupied in the First Methodist Church block. Then the generosity of John V. Farwell made a building possible, two "Farwell Halls" in succession being destroyed by fire before the structure was erected which endured until, in the early nineties, the present fine building housing the Central Department and the general offices was occupied. Within the third hall Moody and Sankey and scores of preachers, singers, lecturers and evangelists, whose names are written in the book of fame were heard by Chicagoans and by the hundreds of visitors who sought out a meeting place known all over the world.

Organization on a metropolitan basis, the coming as general secretary of L. W. Messer, and the business like and progressive administrations of Presidents J. W. Houghteling, J. V. Farwell, Jr., J. H. Eckels and E. P. Bailey have marked a new era of which a fresh stage is to begin with the coming celebration. By a million-dollar fund with which the event is to be signalized, way is to be cleared for extending one of the most important developments that have proved their worth in recent years—the dormitory system. Besides providing the excellent influence of residence in wholesome surroundings, these facilities eventually pay for themselves and thus sustain the beneficiaries' self respect. To this fund John G. Shedd has pledged $100,000, Mrs. T. B. Blackstone $25,000 and A. W. Wieboldt $30,000, and the prospects for complete success are good.

In closing this brief article the aims of the Association, and the understanding of those aims by the typical business man, may be well expressed in the words of Mr. Shedd: "One of the most vital needs of a great city like Chicago, where thousands of young men come annually from the smaller cities to make their way in the world, practically without friends, is an environment which will encourage the growth of their moral and intellectual qualities. They should not be left to themselves. Society owes them direction and assistance." Mr. Shedd himself came to Chicago as a clerk at 22.

BLESSED ARE THE MERCIFUL.

Any of us may profit by a little old fashioned, thorough-going self examination occasionally. No better basis can be found for this personal review than the Beatitudes. Item by item am I qualified to claim these blessings? Am I making any progress toward becoming better fitted to receive them? Am I not especially neglecting the habit of the Merciful?

Such self investigation may well be prompted by the joint call that has gone out from the Christian Woman's Board of Missions and the National Benevolent Association for the observance of Easter. They appeal particularly in the name of the little ones of all lands. Do heavy coal bills, the exactions of the beef trust, the continued expensiveness of fashionable clothing, and even the reduced incomes out of which some of us have been compelled to meet these various demands of our circumstances, justify us in passing by the Easter call and the opportunity to do something toward claiming the Master's reward? "Destroy not with thy meat him for whom Christ died."

CENTENNIAL BIBLE SCHOOL DAY

Special emphasis is being placed on the raising of the centennial fund in Kentucky during the month of April, and the first Sunday in the month is known as Centennial Bible School Day all over the state. More than one hundred churches have pledged themselves to take special offerings on this day. It will be remembered that the centennial undertaking in Kentucky is the raising of $25,000 for the endowment of a Bible school department in the college of the Bible at Lexington. About $5,000 has been raised in cash up to the present time, and it is hoped that at least $10,000 additional can be raised during the month of April. The churches and schools are responding nicely. A program of suggestions may be had free on application, and mite boxes and other supplies are also to be had. All offerings should be sent promptly to Robt. M. Hopkins, 218 Keller Bldg., Louisville, Ky., and they are invested at once at six per cent interest, the interest going to increase the fund.

Central Y. M. C. A. Building, Chicago, Ill.

Let all Kentucky churches plan for a BIG centennial offering the first Sunday in April, or the first Sunday thereafter convenient.

R. M. Hopkins.

ELLA ELBERT JOHNSON TRUNDLE.

I feel sure you will permit in your columns some words concerning the life and home going of Sister Ella Elbert (Johnson) Trundle, who left us Jan. 18th last.

As all her friends know Sister Trundle has been an invalid for sixteen years yet her patience, faith and endurance were remarkable. Reared in most cultured surroundings near Lexington, Ky., yet she was humble and loved the lowliest. Serene and calm she lived her life of suffering keeping to herself the pain of that life for she did not wish to worry people. Her husband, Dan E. Trundle, minister of the Christian church at Rialto, Cal., said he depended upon her more than she on him. He says "I saw through her eyes, acted through her judgment, felt through her pure love and interpreted the Word through her heart." She was saddened at the thought of not being useful and yet few people were more useful in life. She was a great reader, thinker and was well educated, very proficient in her college work. From a hospital here at San Bernardino her soul went back to God and we laid her frail body to rest in the beautiful cemetery at Rialto. It was my privilege to conduct her funeral service. I say "privilege" because hers was a life of victory and it is always a privilege to participate in victory. The Brooks Brothers, who were at that time in a meeting at Riverside together with Bro. Anderson, minister at the same place, were with us and rendered aid in song and prayers. The local ministers also assisted in the service.

For Sister Trundle I believe "to live was Christ, to die was gain."

At the early age of 39 years her sun has set but the aroma of her life will last in the hearts of her friends forever and the joy of a hope of meeting will compensate for the parting now.

WHEN I HAVE TIME.

When I have time, so many things I'll do
To make life happier, and more fair
For those whose lives are crowded now with care;
I'll help to lift them from their low despair,
When I have time.

When I have time, the friend I love so well
Shall know no more the weary, toiling days;
I'll lead her feet in pleasant paths always,
And cheer her heart with words of sweetest praise.
When I have time.

When you have time the friend you hold so dear
May be beyond the reach of all your sweet intent,
May never know that you so kindly meant
To fill her life with sweet content,
When you had time.

Now is the time. Ah, friend, no longer wait
To scatter loving smiles and words, or cheer,
To those around whose lives are now so dear.
They may not meet you in the coming year.
Now is the time.

—Selected.

Keep the wolf of worry from your door and the rest will take care of themselves.

There always are few friends to mourn the loss of the man who made no enemies.

Few men are in moral danger as great as those who proclaim religion so strenuously they feel no need to practice it.

The Grave at Bethany*

H. L. Willett

The town of Bethany lies about a mile and a half east of Jerusalem behind the Mt. of Olives. It is reached either by the main Jericho road which circles the hill, or by a foot path leading down from the top of the Mount past the church which marks the supposed site of Bethpage. Bethany itself is a jumble of unkempt looking houses mingled with many ruins of a former period. Among the ruins there are pointed out the traditional house of Simon the leper and the house of Lazarus and his two sisters. These are, of course, worthless traditions for the buildings at furthest could not have been more than a few centuries old. All that can be relied upon is the fact that this is unmistakably the same village in which Jesus passed so many hours of his earthly life. Its present name El Azarieh is the reminder of the Lazarus of New Testament stories. The traveler is shown as the most interesting spot in the village, a tomb which is entered through an opening in the stone wall bordering one of the crooked streets. You enter following the guide who hands you a candle as you descend some twenty steps to a small square chamber. From this in turn you go still lower to a diminutive crypt to enter which you have to stoop very low. The lights carried by those who enter are scarcely able to more than reveal the darkness of the place. Here it is insisted Lazarus was buried. Of course the only foundation for this belief is the fact that it is a fairly well preserved tomb which must go back well toward the early Christian period. More than this cannot be affirmed. Destruction has so often swept over the region that every authentic trace of former sites has been obliterated.

Here lived Lazarus the Jew and his two sisters, Mary and Martha. By what incidents Jesus came to make their acquaintance is not known, but the place was restful and the friendship with the three was genuine and delightful. It was a brief walk from Jerusalem to this retreat where a night could easily be spent during even the most strenuous period of teaching in the city. Jesus had been often at this home. He was to spend here those last nights before the tragedy of the cross, going out each evening from Jerusalem.

It was during Jesus' ministry in Perea, east of the Jordan, that news came to him that Lazarus was very ill. He was besought to come at once. He understood better than the disciples the import of this message. Instead of going at once he delayed, much to the astonishment of some of the circle. It is scarcely possible that this delay was due to Jesus' desire that Lazarus should die. Even the motive of wishing an opportunity for so great a work of power seems hardly consistent with the character of our Lord. It is more probable that he was waiting for a clearer vision of his duty and the will of God. He had no desire to make a display of miracle. He knew only too well how shallow and temporary was the faith which rested on such a foundation.

But presenty he told the disciples plainly that Lazarus was dead and announced his purpose to go at once to the Bethany home. They knew the danger which such a visit involved in the present excited condition of the public mind, and especially the official mind, regarding Jesus. Why he should have waited when his presence might have saved his friend's life and now make the hazardous journey when all hope was over they could not understand. But with loving loyalty they responded to Thomas' brave words, "Let us go up that we may die with him." They were willing to brave martyr deaths for the sake of companionship with their Lord.

The interviews of Jesus with Mary and Martha are pathetic indeed. Both of the sisters voice their sense of keen regret and gentle reproach in the words, "Lord if thou hadst been here our brother had not died." Their faith could not look further than the fact that Jesus' presence had been sufficient to bring healing and help to the afflicted of their people. But from this last blow there was no recovery. There was merely the sad consolation of Jesus' visit to the stricken home. It is significant that the longer of the two interviews between Jesus and the two sisters is that recording his conversation with Martha. It may be that the grief of Mary was too deep to find consolation in words, although she had hung upon Jesus' teachings in the days when the busier Martha was engaged in acts of hospitality. But now it is with Martha that the Lord opens the great themes of life and death. The resurrection was a commonplace of Jewish teaching in that age, but Jesus wanted to show this troubled sister that life is independent of mortality and consists in a quality of being upon which the touch of death can never come.

The words, "I am the resurrection and the life" are more than the central utterances of the liturgy of the dead. They are the secret of the life that cannot die. They point the troubled spirits of earth to the truth that life consists not in years, times and places, but in the presence of God within the soul and such companionship with the divine as transfigures being into deathless power. Who that has read the Euthanasia of Sydney Carton in the Dicken's Tale of Two Cities, has not risen to a new sense of the fact of Christ in human life and of the significance of Paul's insistence that through the power of the daily resurrection from sin and self mortality is swallowed up of life.

With this fact so potently set forth in the story of Lazarus there is coupled another of scarcely less significance. It is the sympathy of Jesus. If the longest verse in the Bible instead of the shortest had been dedicated to the enshrinement of this truth it could not have been made more impressive. In that moment Jesus who was master of life and death, looked upon this little group of mourners as the representatives of all those who watch their loved ones as they pass out through the gates of death. It was the cry of human bereavement heard through all the ages to which his heart responded and in the fullness of his sympathy with these stricken ones "Jesus wept." Edward Denny's fine words emphasize this human sympathy of our Lord.

"Jesus wept, those tears are over,
But his heart is still the same,
Kinsman, friend and elder brother,
Is his everlasting name,
Savior who can feel like thee,
Gracious one of Bethany."

The raising of Lazarus was but an incident impressive of the truth which Jesus had uttered. That life to which Lazarus was recalled was brief and troubled as before, but within there was the stronger current of the life indeed of which Jesus had spoken to Martha. The forthcoming of Lazarus from the grave was only a partial triumph over death which waited in the shadow for a deadlier stroke, but the words of Jesus have opened the gates of life to all mankind and death is swallowed up in victory.

A Modern Meditation.

Idle not; for idleness is the mother of all sins.

Neither dawdle nor dilly-dally; for the dawdler groweth weary and accomplisheth naught.

Delay not, nor postpone; for more crimes are due to postponement than to deliberate intention.

Hesitate not an hour in performing thy tasks; for the only way to get a thing done is to do it now.

Glower not, nor grouch; for it is a fearful crime to make other people unhappy.

Never indulge thyself in despair; for there is no surer way to miss all the good things that are coming to you.

Neither indulge in vain retrospection; for what is done is done forever, and the only wise thing is to forget it.

Blame not thyself nor any other person too much; for there are laws stronger than any of us that govern the universe.

Make hope and industry thy habits; for by these two practices shall a man reach the highest place—even contentment.—Ex.

He who does not look forward with reverence will look back with regret.

Easter Visions

Silas Jones

The joy of the Easter vision is set over against the despair of Good Friday and the Sabbath following. Darkness settled down upon the disciples when the Lord was condemned and crucified. They were dazed, they were without plan or hope when they heard no longer the voice that had been their guide and inspiration. When Adoniram Judson was asked what was the greatest pleasure he ever experienced, he replied: "What would you think of floating down the Irawaddy on a calm, moonlight evening, with your wife at your side, and your baby in your arms, free, all free? But it means twenty-one months of qualification in a Burman prison to understand what that means." We need to know something of what the world would be without Easter if we are to understand the full significance of the visions of the first Easter morning. If we will only face the facts, our joy will be great not only at the Easter season but also at all seasons. The limitations of earth are removed for those who see the living Christ.

Man's idea of death has been changed by the resurrection. Had there been no Easter vision, Chrysostom would have been a brilliant rhetorician and probably nothing more. But here is what the believing Chrysostom says about death: "Death is a rest; a deliverance from the exhausting labors and cares of this world. When, then, thou seest a relative departing, yield not to despondency; give thyself to reflection; examine thy conscience; cherish the thought that after a little while this end awaits thee also. Be more considerate; let another's death excite thee to salutary fear; shake off all indolence; quit your sins, and commence a happy change. We differ from unbelievers in our estimate of things. The unbeliever surveys the heaven and worships it because he thinks it a divinity; he looks to the earth and makes himself a servant to it, and longs for things of sense. But not so with us. We survey the heaven, and admire Him that made it; for we believe it not to be a god but a work of God. I look on the whole creation and am led by it to the Creator. He looks on wealth and longs for it with earnest desire; I look on wealth and condemn it. He sees poverty and laments; I see poverty and rejoice. I see things in one light; he in another. Just so in regard to death. He sees a corpse and thinks of it as a corpse; I see a corpse and behold sleep rather than death. Consider to whom the departed has gone and take comfort. He has gone where Paul is, and Peter, and the whole company of the saints. Consider how he shall arise, and with glory and splendor."

"Go quickly, and tell his disciples." There is a duty laid upon those who see the Easter vision. The sorrowing disciples needed to be told of the risen Lord. The women were commissioned to bear the news. The apostles in turn were sent to their people and to the nations. "He that heareth, let him say, Come." The Christian can never sit down to enjoy selfishly the blessings his religion has brought to him. He must tell the good news. He must take it to the man that has never heard it. He must declare its meaning in the church. We have but a partial understanding of what the Christian salvation is. The lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye, and the pride of life are in the church. They have no right to kindly treatment in the house of God. The resurrection of Christ means a new man. The joys of heaven are the joys of redeemed humanity, not the pleasures of the worldling. The risen Lord makes no promise of an eternal life of selfish enjoyment; it is eternal life to know him and to do his will.

Scripture II Sam. 22:17-27	Christian Endeavor	Topic for Apr. 12

Temperance Leaders

Royal L. Handley

A temperance meeting is of much importance to young people, especially in the present hour when a revival of efforts in opposition to the saloon calls young men and women to action. This temperance meeting ought to bring about in your Endeavor society a clearer understanding of the whole drink question, a liver interest in temperance work in general and greater readiness to be of use in solving the problem in your local community. Here, as always, Christian Endeavor must mean practical application of Christian principles.

"Drunkenness is the result of getting the man and the drink together, with the drink inside the man," says Hon. O. W. Stewart, in his lecture on intemperance. The evil comes about from taking the drink to the man, or the man to the drink.

Prohibition is concerned with the matter of taking the drink to the man. It battles against the forces of the brewing and distilling trusts, which are determined to bring the glass to the lips of every man whose purse they may empty.

Temperance works at the problem from the other standpoint, seeking to put an end of the man's going to the drink. At this task many noble souls have burned out in behalf of pitiable victims of intemperance. The waters of temperance sentiment have been swelled to flood tide in many places because here and there good men have been fearless and faithful in opposing the liquor trade. Of those whose names stand like mountain peaks among temperance workers is John B. Gough, who suffered seven years of intemperate existence and then spent the rest of his days freeing men from fetters he had broken. Standing before a vast audience in Philadelphia, he lifted up his hand with an impressive gesture and said: "I have seven years in the record of my life when I was held in the iron grasp of intemperance. I would give the world to blot it out; but alas! I cannot." Then with flaming face and uplifted eyes he exclaimed, "Therefore, young men, make your record clean."

The drink that is "deceiving" the great mass of people nowadays is beer. The brewers of the country are pushing with organized effort and with unlimited money a "campaign of education," whose purpose is to teach our people to "consider beer as food, and as a necessity for public health and good." Many who are "not wise" are "deceived" by those false claims made in behalf of beer.—Mrs. Z. F. Stevens.

Prior to his setting sail from New York harbor on his voyage for the Arctic regions, Commander Robert E. Peary was interviewed concerning the supplies for the Roosevelt, and among other questions put to him was this: "How about alcoholic drinks?" The answer came decisively: "No man can drink alcoholic liquor who goes to the North. It would mean death to the man and a menace to the expedition."—Harper's Weekly.

Question Spurs.

In what struggle must every soul engage? 1 Cor. 9:25-27.

What desire often leads the young into wrong paths? Luke 15:11-13.

What is the sin of intemperance? 1 Cor. 3:16, 17.

What should be our attitude toward temptations to intemperance? Col. 2:21.

How may one gain self-control? Gal. 5:22, 23; 2 Pet. 1:5-8.

WITH THE WORKERS

Doings of Preachers, Teachers, Thinkers and Givers

T. B. McDonald preached at Minden, Nebr., Mar. 22.

H. A. Denton is out on a series of home missionary rallies.

C. V. Allison begins a meeting at Phillipsburg, Kan., next Sunday.

Prof. L. P. Bush preached for the Ox Bow, (Nebr.) church, March 22.

D. L. Dunkelberger is in a meeting at Falls City, Nebr., with home forces.

The Southern Illinois Ministerial Association has its twenty-first meeting at Flora, May 5-7.

C. W. Kitchen is successful in the Bible school and teacher-training class at Chanute, Kan.

W. T. McLain says that a beginning will be made on the new building at Manhattan, Kan., soon.

J. W. Hilton, of Lincoln, Nebr., was at Neligh on March 22, in the interest of the Anti-Saloon League.

J. P. Haner has a call to Cowgill, Mo. The brethren want a minister for half time to locate with them.

A. W. Shafer is in a meeting at Missoula, Mont., which is being lead by Victor Dorris as preacher.

J. M. Kersey gave his lecture on "Force and Counterforce" to the church at Chanute, Kan., March 24.

H. J. Myers supplied at Seward, Nebr., March 22, holding a union evening service with the Congregationalists.

H. F. Reed, of Wellington, O., commends very cordially Mrs. Minnie F. Duck as a singer and assistant in a meeting.

Geo. W. Borch has resigned as pastor at Hiawatha, Kans. He has done a good work and the church is in splendid condition.

H. C. Gresham, late of Tyler, has taken the work at Seneca, Mo., where a union temperance meeting is now being conducted.

W. E. Spicer, who began his work last Sunday in Bisbee, Ariz., is anxious to hear from those who know of Disciples in that city.

Clay T. Runyon, of Las Animas, Colo., has accepted a call from the First church at La Junta, Colo., and enters upon the work April 1.

R. H. Newton, who is residing at Haswell, Colo., thirty miles east of Ordway at present, preached at Ordway March 8th and 15th.

Charles E. McVay, having sung in ten consecutive revival meetings without rest is now at his home, Benkelman, Nebraska, for a short vacation.

M. M. Nelson, pastor in Monte Vista, Colo., was sick most of January and February. He is again in his pulpit, but has not regained his normal strength. Had the largest audience Sunday night, March 8th, that he has had since he became pastor at Monte Vista.

H. G. Knowles and R. C. Murphy closed a very successful meeting at Dorchester, Nebr., March 15, resulting in 100 additions, eighty baptisms.

I. H. Hazel has accepted a call to Imperial, Cal., after a period of successful work in Indiana. He recently baptized a number of persons at Clay City, Ind.

J. M. Rudy is striking telling blows against the saloons of Sedalia, Mo. A vigorous pamphlet of sixteen pages has been published by him in the campaign.

B. S. Ferrall and his helpers of the Jefferson Street Church, Buffalo, N. Y., have pushed the attendance of their Sunday school to a point well beyond the 500 mark.

The North Park church, Indianapolis, Ind., of which Austin Hunter is pastor, has a prosperous Sunday school. A large men's class had 54 in attendance Mar. 22.

C. L. De Pew, Illinois State Supt. of Sunday Schools, will speak in Peoria, Ill., Apr. 3, when our teachers of the two schools of the city will enjoy a Bible School luncheon.

The Central church, Peoria, Ill., expects to send a large delegation to the Congress. The men's association of this church heard an address by H. H. Peters, Centennial secretary of Eureka College, Mar. 27.

A. L. Ward of Wheeling, West Virginia, formerly pastor of the church at Boston, following J. H. Mohorter, has accepted the invitation of the church at Boulder, Colo., and will begin his pastoral duties about the 15th of April.

Raymond C. Farmer resides at Colorado Springs, Colo., and is a student in Colorado College, completing his studies to fit himself for the ministry. He preaches one-half time at Elbert. He reports the work at that place gaining.

F. H. Stringham, formerly of eastern Washington, began his pastorate at Ault, Colo., March 1st. He is employed for one-half time in beginning, but hopes the meeting may so strengthen the church that they shall be able to employ him for full time.

Joel Brown's meeting at Alliance, Nebr., closed with fifteen added. Subscriptions for a regular preacher were taken. The church is meeting in a United Presbyterian house. Brother Brown has located a claim in that region and will move his family there May 1. He is available for evangelistic work.

Mrs. J. K. Ballou, wife of J. K. Ballou, minister at Sioux City, Ia., passed to the beyond on March 24, after seven weeks of serious illness. They were married the 17th of last Dec. The funeral was conducted at Sioux City by Rev. E. F. Leake and interment was at Muscatine, Iowa, the home of the deceased. Bro. Ballou has the sympathy of many friends among Christian Century readers.

A. L. Chapman has resigned the pastorate of the First Christian Church in Seattle, Washington, and has accepted a call to the church at Boise, Idaho. During his pastorate in Washington the church has prospered in all departments of its work. A new mission has been planted on Queen Anne Hill, and the prospects in that city are bright. The best wishes of Bro. Chapman's large circle of friends go with him to his new work.

The following note brings sad news to the wide circle of friends who have known Mr. and Mrs. Kelly of Emporia, Kas.:

Dear Brother Willett:

Dorman S. Kelly died suddenly at his home in Emporia, Tuesday morning. He was as well as usual apparently and did some work in the garden. He came into the house after a few moments and complained of a pain in his heart. He died a few minutes later in the arms of his wife.

We are all broken hearted. He was an elder of the congregation sixteen years,—was head of the department of biology in the State Normal for twelve years,—superintendent of city schools of Jeffersonville, Ind., two years, and for the past eight years has lived in Emporia engaged in life insurance and real estate business. He was an earnest Christian man, true as steel, clean, unselfish, every inch a man.

His wife, Louise Kelly, and daughter, Beryl, are bearing their grief as only the saints can bear.

Your brother,
Willis A. Parker.

Our most heartfelt sympathy is extended to Sister Kelly in this hour of sorrow.

THE CHICAGO CHURCHES.

George A. Campbell baptized an influential physician of Austin in last Sunday's services, which were attended by excellent audiences. He reported about sixty additions during the last year, nearly half of them by baptism.

The Irving Park church has received during March over twenty new members into its fellowship. Most of these new members are grown people who have added much to the strength of the congregation.

F. C. Cothran and his people of the Armour Avenue (colored) church held rally services last Sunday in which more than $100.00 was given for payment on the church debt.

Bruce Brown, pastor in Valparaiso, Ind., started an anti-salcon campaign in that city which gives promise of a successful issue for temperance forces.

There were six additions last Sunday at the First church, and one baptism March 22. Dr. Willett and Dr. Crosser, pastor of the Kenwood Evangelical church, exchanged pulpits last Sunday night.

The Oak Park church is holding services in Armory Hall. There were 85 in the Sunday school this week. Prof. B. J. Radford is preaching for the church at present.

FOREIGN MISSIONARY ITEMS.

Miss Stella Ford of Detroit, Mich., has made a gift of $600 to the Foreign Society and will now support a missionary on the foreign field. Her sister, Miss Nellie B. Ford, has supported a missionary through the Foreign Society for several years.

Hiram and Ravenna, Ohio, have united in a Living-Link and will support a missionary through the Foreign Society.

A new congregation has been recently established at Union, Cuba. There will be about 30 members in the new church. Roscoe R. Hill of Matanzas, held the meeting which resulted in the new organization. Union is about twenty-five miles from Matanzas.

A brother in Nebraska has just given the Foreign Society $300, on the Annuity Plan. This is the sixth gift which he has made to the Society in this way.

NOTES FROM MEXICO.

Felipe B. Jimenez, of Sabinas, has just closed a splendid meeting with the Central and San Luisito churches at Monterey, with sixty-five additions in two weeks at the former, and ten in six days at the latter. His force and power as a simple Gospel preacher is remarkable, and his audience hung on his words, as things of spirit and life. The membership of both churches were most active in their personal work, and the churches have been greatly strengthened.

The Christian Endeavorers of Monterey enjoyed a most helpful two days' visit from Genl. Sect. Shaw of Boston, Saturday afternoon. He addressed the Juniors, after he had been welcomed by the two presidents of our Mexican and American Societies, concluding with a graceful entwining of the flags of the two nations, and a reciting in concert "Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." The two flags were presented to him afterward as souvenirs. Saturday night and Sunday afternoon were given to the Young Peoples' work, and Sunday night a mass meeting was held in the new hall of Lawrence Institute, at which gathered all the Mexican Young Peoples' Societies of the city, and the meeting took on the brilliancy and enthusiasm of a state convention at home. Pres. Bolby D. Hall, of the Texas C. E. union, accompanied Mr. Shaw and made several helpful talks during the meetings.

Bro. and Sister J. H. Fuller, of Sherman, Texas, are expected to arrive at Monterey any day now to take up the evangelistic work in and around here. S. G. Inman and wife are moving to Cindad Porfirio Diaz for the purpose of establishing another station which will be in the center of work in the state of Coahuila, and the new work among the Mexicans in Texas.

The missionaries of the different boards are talking of a great united evangelistic campaign to cover the principal citiles of the Republic, led by one of the great evangelists from the United States. Everything seems to point to the fact that Mexico is ready to welcome such a campaign.

S. G. Inman.

DAKOTA SNAP SHOTS.

Our State Evangelistic team, Lawrence Wright and Wm. J. Carr, are now at Miller, S. D., in a good meeting following a union meeting there. They report sixteen to date. Brother Wright was in the Black Hills country recently and reported seven additions.

Their next meetings will in all probability be Arlington and Highmore.

Guy L. Zerby of Tampico, Ill., is in a meeting at Virgil with George Woodman as singer. They report six to date and continue. Virgil is a new work and the meeting is being held in a hall.

Homer L. Lewis closes his work at Sioux Falls, April 1st. His successor is probably in sight.

The writer recently visited Armour, Platte and Sioux Falls. I spent the first Sunday in March at Armour and had two confessions and baptisms and raised $25 for foreign missions and spoke at Platte the next evening and raised $19. We raised our apportionment of $50 at Aberdeen the third Sunday.

A few days ago I baptized a Methodist preacher in a large bath tub as he was not well. His first words when he emerged from the watery grave were "Praise God"! He first became convinced that there can be no baptism without faith on the part of the recipient. The rest was easy and he soon became satisfied that immersion only can fill the N. T. requirements.

Henry W. Warren of Barbourville, Ky., has recently located at Ellendale, N. D. He spoke one Sunday in Aberdeen and our people were much pleased with his messages—especially his lecture "Under the Southern Cross." He is much liked at Ellendale.

Mrs. Alice Matlock of Greenfield, Ind., has just arrived and will make her home with us at least a year. She was president of a large auxiliary and will be a great help in our work.

Our pastorate closes here with March and then we take up the North Dakota work for the C. W. B. M. and will no doubt make Fargo the principal station. My family will be in Aberdeen for a time.

F. B. Sapp,
Cor. Secy.

Aberdeen, S. D., March 25.

He who gives to be seen usually has much he wants to hide.

SOUTH KENTUCKY.

At this time the evangelist for South Kentucky with W. E. Spain as leader of song is at Greenville holding a meeting in the Court House. Not less than fifty (50) members of the church of Jesus Christ, who once claimed to be nothing but Christians live in and near this beautiful capital of Muhlenburg county, Kentucky; some of these have joined "some other denomination to have a church home," in order to keep from being out of the church. These expressions can be heard in many places and yet some seem to think "we do not need to discuss first principles." An enrollment committee has been appointed and up to this writing some thirty names have been enrolled and fair prospects for starting an organization. To date three have confessed the name of Jesus Christ and have been baptized. Truly South Kentucky is in many respects a mission field.

Since June 1st, 1907, to this date eleven meetings have been held and before the missionary year ends, April 30th, not less than thirteen protracted meetings will have been held.

There are some things in store in South Kentucky which when consummated will, we believe, be a blessing to our missionary work. For thirty-four years there has been a missionary organization in South Kentucky, known as the South Kentucky Christian Missionary and Sunday-school Association. Its territory consisted of the thirty-three coun-

16mo, Cloth, 50c. net.
Dr. Broughton brings within the grasp of the average mind a full array of Scripture facts concerning the coming of our Lord. A reading cannot fail to strengthen one's vision and to afford a keener realization of prophetic truth.

THE DAILY ALTAR - - - - - - - - - - J. H. Jowett
Cloth, 25c. net; Leather, 35c. net.
A companion to the popular "Yet Another Day," giving a very brief prayer for each day in the year.

A TYPICAL MISSION IN CHINA - - - - - - - - - W. E. Soothill
12mo, Cloth, $1.50 net.
The author's work, covering nearly a quarter of a century, has been rewarded by nearly ten thousand converts. The volume is comprehensive, bright, informing and at times most humorous.

JOHN G. PATON, MISSIONARY TO THE NEW HEBRIDES - - - - - - - -
New Edition. Illustrated. 8vo, Cloth, $1.50.
An Autobiography, edited by his brother. New and complete edition brought down to the close of life. To this edition Dr. Arthur T. Pierson has added an appreciation.

THE INDUSTRIAL CONFLICT - - - - - - - - - Samuel G. Smith
12mo, Cloth, $1.00 net.
Dr. Smith, of the Department of Sociology in the University of Minnesota, presents the Labor problem from a new and fundamental point of view, a position with which future students will have to reckon. The work appears at a most opportune moment, is calm, judicial, convincing.

PREACHER PROBLEMS or the Twentieth Century Preacher at His Work - William T. Moore
12mo, Cloth, $1.50 net.
This book is an adviser for the minister, young or old; advice from a long experience and guided by the sanest spirit. The author's fifty years' experience as author, editor, instructor and pastor, gives his conclusions great value.

AN EFFICIENT CHURCH with an Introduction by Bishop Earl Cranston, LL. D. Carl Gregg Doney
12mo, Cloth, $1.25 net.
Presents data gathered at first hand. Mr. Doney opens up the pathway to methods of working and teaching in the modern religions congregation that will upset some old ideas, but cannot fail to give every alert religious worker a fresh inspiration and a new hope.

THE MODERN SUNDAY SCHOOL IN PRINCIPLE AND PRACTICE - - Henry F. Cope
12mo, Cloth, $1.00 net.
By the General Secretary of the Religious Education Association. He presents the results of all the newest experiments both with primary, adolescent and adult grades. So clear and simple is his presentation, that this book will be a revelation to many.

Keep the Wheels Turning

One of the little economies that help toward a substantial saving is the use of a good axle grease. A grease without proper "body" runs off. One too heavy stiffens on the axle and adds to the pull.

MICA AXLE GREASE

is right—won't run, won't stiffen, won't wear out as soon as other grease will.

Covers the axle with an almost friction-less coating of powdered mica and keeps your wheels turning when the other fellow, who uses poor grease, is stuck.

Nothing like Mica Axle Grease for a tired wagon. Ask the dealer for it.

ties in the extreme western part of the state. At that time I am told, the facilities for travel and other conditions then existing seemed to demand a separate organization from the "Kentucky Christian Missionary Convention." Now such conditions as existed then do not exist. For three years or more it seems that there has been a desire to bring about a union of the South Kentucky Christian Missionary and Sunday-school Association and the Kentucky Christian Missionary Convention.

Such terms as can be agreed upon between the boards representing these two organizations have been submitted and unanimously agreed to.

It remains for the South Kentucky Convention, which meets in Mayfield May 25-27, and the Central Kentucky Convention, which meets in September, to ratify these terms agreed upon by these two committees.

That each Convention will unanimously adopt the recommendations, I have not one doubt, so that in 1909 when our great Convention meets in Lexington, we may safely anticipate one of the greatest Conventions in the history of our missionary work in Kentucky.

This makes me rejoice.

It is now a settled fact that our South Kentucky Convention will meet in the beautiful city of Mayfield, May 25-27, 1908. Sherman B. Moore is the faithful and efficient minister. The church building, one of the prettiest I ever saw, is now in readiness as a splendid place of meeting so that nothing is in our way. I say to one and all, let's make this the greatest South Kentucky Convention. Remember the invitation is extended to one and all. Let there be a large representation from Central and Eastern Kentucky.

The entertainment will be free, but you must write to Sherman B. Moore, that homes may be provided. No one will be overlooked if you write in time. No more hospitable people live any where than in Mayfield. There is nothing in the way. All aboard for Mayfield May 25-27, 1908. Railroad rates will soon be announced. The program is divided into three grand divisions, the C. W. B. M. church and Bible school. All these will interesting and profitable. The time taken up by all these sessions is from Monday evening at 8 o'clock to Wednesday evening. No one need stay away on account of too much time being taken. We are looking forward to this convention with great hopes. May we not be disappointed.

WHO WAS "BOSS."

Once on a time, runs a modern fable which appears in the Philadelphia Ledger, a youth about to embark on the sea of matrimony went to his father and said:

"Father, who should be boss, I or my wife?"

The old man smiled and said:

"Here are one hundred hens and a team of horses. Hitch up the horses, load the hens into the wagon, and wherever you find a man and his wife dwelling, stop and make inquiry as to who is the boss. Wherever you find a woman running things, leave a hen. If you come to a place where a man is in control, give him one of the horses."

After seventy-nine hens had been disposed of, he came to a house and made the usual inquiry.

"I'm boss o' this ranch," said the man.

So the wife was called, and the affirmed her husband's assertion.

"Take which ever horse you want," was the boy's reply.

So the husband replied; "I'll take the bay."

But the wife did not like the bay horse, and called her husband aside and talked to him. He returned and said:

"I believe I'll take the gray horse."

"Not much," said the young man. "You get a hen."

Hang up before you a map of the United States; sprinkle it with about five thousand blood drops; decorate it with about five hundred golden stars; adorn it with five blue ribbons; then remember that every crimson spot represents a city or town where there is no saloon, each golden star a prohibition county, and each blue ribbon a prohibition state.—J. Lexington, Ky., March 30.—Dr. Scoville spoke to large congregation at Central Church Sunday morning. The Bible school at this church, of which I. J. Spencer is minister and superintendent, numbered 875, the largest in the history of Christian churches in Kentucky, with Broadway as close second. Great union mass meeting at City Auditorium at 3 o'clock; 2,500 present. The same number at evening services. Fifty-two accessions. Nearly five hundred to date. More than 50 charter members for new church at Woodland and Seventh in Lexington. Brother Scoville has been very ill with grip, but preached every night, contrary to the advice of his physician.
Thomas Penn Ullom.

COLORADO.

Ault.—Our Ault meeting closed last night with 106 additions to church and Sunday school.

Churches wanting meetings may write me at my home, Carthage, Mo. I do not care to undertake a meeting without a good chorus leader.
S. J. Vance.

ILLINOIS.

Springfield.—There have been already 83 accessions in the meeting at the Stuart Street Christian church. F. W. Burnham is preaching. Charles E. McVay, of Benkelman, Nebr., has charge of the music. Bro. McVay has two large choruses. The singing of the children's chorus is especially attractive. Occasionally they occupy the platform of the adult chorus and lead the singing. This is already a splendid meeting for a city church.

Waynesville.—On Feb. 16th we began a meeting here with Bro. C. A. Vanwinkle of Berea, Ky., doing the preaching. We had 51 additions in four weeks. Last Tuesday we changed into a union meeting. Since then six more have responded to the invitation. Bro. Vanwinkle continues to lead the union forces.
J. F. Smith,

Huntington — Sunday closed my six years' work with the Huntington church. They have been years of profit, pleasure and hard work. I have seen the church grow from a small membership and Sunday school to over 1,000 members, a Sunday school of 900, and the erection of one of the best buildings in the brotherhood. During my ministry there has not been a ripple of discord or one unpleasantness. We have all pulled together as one man to the building up of a great church. Our closing services were the greatest ever held in the church. At the closing of the great Sunday school the superintendent asked all to stand who had been baptized and received into the church under Bro. Shelburne's preaching, and fully two-thirds of the membership stood to their feet. In the closing preaching services

Nothing approaching this work has ever been attempted before. In a series of splendid pictures the great and impressive scenes in the Bible story are depicted, true in color, costume, landscape, and all details to the life, the country and the time. ¶ To make the men and women of the Bible actual, living characters to their pupils is one of the first duties of the Sunday-School teachers, and no better help can they find for this than in the Tissot pictures. ¶ The whole world acknowledges that J. James Tissot was the greatest artist that ever lived, so far as Biblical subjects are concerned.

Only the unparalled success in the higher-priced editions makes possible this phenomenally low offer now. ¶ These pictures have received the unqualified endorsement of the leading clergymen and Sunday-School teachers throughout the United States. ¶ Nothing could be more helpful, and interesting, and delightful, when one is reading the Bible, than such a graphic interpretation of sacred stories. ¶ In no other way can the Bible stories be made so real and actual to children. Should be in every home.

OHIO'S CAPITAL.

The Disciples of the Capital City have their latch strings hanging out, and are making ready to give every visitor to the Ohio Christian Missionary Society meeting, May 25th to 28th, a royal welcome.

The membership of all the churches and their friends will open their homes for the guests.

The plan of entertaining this year will be the same as it has been for the past two or three years, a uniform charge of 50 cents will be made to all delegates, for their lodging and breakfast.

Delegates, who are to be entertained free by their friends, should notify the chairman of the entertainment committee, so he can arrange accordingly.

The ladies of the Broad Street church, where the meeting is to be held, will serve dinner and supper during the convention. The first meal to be served will be supper, Monday evening, May 25th.

Delegates are urged to come for the first session, and remain to the close of the convention, and are urged also to attend all the sessions of the convention, and not spend the time shopping.

The one thing we are anxious about is that the names of all delegates be sent at once to the committee of entertainment, so that provision can be made

Important Books

We are the publishers of some of the best known works pertaining to the Disciples' Plea for a united church. These important books — important in more ways than one—should be read and owned by every member of the household of faith.

The Plea of the Disciples of Christ, by W. T. Moore. Small 16mo., cloth, 140 pages, net, postpaid, thirty-five cents, won immediate success.

George Hamilton Combs, pastor of the Independence Boulevard Christian Church, Kansas City, Mo., one of the great churches of the brotherhood, writes.

"I cannot thank Dr. W. T. Moore enough for having written his little book on "Our Plea." It is more than a statement; it is a philosophy. Irenic, catholic, steel-tone, it is just the handbook I shall like to put into the hands of the thinking man on the outside. In all of his useful and honored life Mr. Moore has rendered no greater service to a great cause."

Historical Documents Advocating Christian Union, collated and edited by Charles A. Young. 12mo, cloth, 364 pages, illustrated, postpaid $1.00, is an important contribution to contemporary religious literature. It presents the living principles of the church in convenient form.

Z. T. Sweeney, Columbus, Indiana, a preacher of national reputation, writes:

"I congratulate you on the happy thought of collecting and editing these documents. They ought to be in the home of every Disciple of Christ in the Land, and I believe they should have a large and increasing sale in years to come."

Basic Truths of the Christian Faith, by Herbert L. Willett, author of The Ruling Quality, Teaching of the Books, Prophets of Israel, etc., etc. Post 8vo., cloth, 127 pages. Front cover stamped in gold, gilt top, illustrated, 75 cents, paper 25 cents.

A powerful and masterful presentation of the great truths for the attainment of the life of the spirit. Written in a charming and scholarly style. It holds the reader's fascinated attention so closely that it is a disappointment if the book has to be laid aside before it is finished.

J. E. Chase writes:

"It is the voice of a soul in touch with the Divine life, and breathes throughout its pages the high ideals and noblest conception of truer life, possible only to him who has tarried prayerfully, studiously at the feet of the world's greatest teacher."

Our Plea for Union and the Present Crisis, by Herbert L. Willett, author of the Life and Teachings of Jesus, etc., etc. 12mo., cloth, 140 pages, gold stamped, postpaid 50 cents.

Written in the belief that the Disciples of Christ are passing through an important, and in many respects, transitional period.

The author says:

"It is with the hope that * * * present forces and opportunities may be wisely estimated by us; that doors now open may be entered; that hopes only partially realized may come to fruition that these chapters are given their present form."

Early Relations and Separation of Baptists and Disciples, by Errett Gates. 8vo. cloth, gold side and back stamp, $1.00. A limited number in paper binding will be mailed postpaid for 25 cents until stock is sold out.

We owe a debt of gratitude to the writer of this book, and could only wish that it might be read not only by our people all over the land, but scattered among the Baptists. It is a most meritorious and splendid contribution to our literature.—THE CHRISTIAN WORKER, PITTSBURG, Pa.

The dominant personality of Alexander Campbell is so brought out as to give to what might be regarded as the dry details of ecclesiastical history and controversy almost the interest of a story. A valuable contribution to the history of the American churches.—THE CONGREGATIONALIST, BOSTON, Mass.

for all, and the next thing is that the people who come shall go to the homes that will be open for them, and not go to the hotels, and thus make a great loss of labor and material to the good women who do the preparing. To reach Broad Street church, which is on the corner of Broad and 21st streets:

First. From the Union Station, take an Oak street car, get off at Huffman avenue. Go two blocks north, and one east.

Second. From the T. & O. C. station, take any car going east to High and Broad street, transfer to Long street car, and get off at 21st street and go one block south.

Third. From the Interurban Union Station walk east to High street and take Long street car, and go as directed above.

Fourth. From the Scioto Valley Traction Station, walk one block north to the Oak street car, and reach the church as directed over it.

Fifth. Remember we have 7 tickets for 25 cents in Columbus. Buy tickets, and ask for transfers to any part of the city.

Delegates will go dicectly to the church, where they will be assigned to their stopping places, and pages will direct them there.

Every church in Ohio should have at least five delegates at this convention.

First the minister, then a business man, these two should have expenses paid by the church sending them. Then the Bible schools should send their superintendents, the Endeavorers their presidents, the C. W. B. M. their presidents.

All of these should be appointed just as quickly as possible, and their names sent to the chairman of the Entertainment Committee so he can complete arrangements before convention time.

CHURCH EXTENSION NOTES

During March the Board of Church Extension received the following Annuity gifts: $1,000 from a friend in Missouri, and $500 from a friend in Pennsylvania. To people over fifty years old, the Board pays 6 per cent in semi-annual payments, paying the interest to the wife in case she survives her husband. This last is the 216th gift to the Board of Church Extension on the Annuity Plan. Annuity money builds churches just like any other gifts. Our Board needed $13,000 of Annuity money at our last meeting for churches that would be glad to pay 6 per cent in order to get their congregations adequately housed. Concerning the Annuity Plan, please write to G. W. Muckley, Cor. Sec., 600 Water Works Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

The Board of Church Extension has received two other gifts of $500 each during March. One was a payment on a Named Loan Fund, and the other was a bequest.

"It is better to be safe than sorry."

The experience of San Francisco during the three months following the earthquake, and during the period immediately following the reopening of the saloons, established beyond peradventure these facts; first, that crime is largely traceable to the saloon, and second, that by the banishment of drink from any community crime may be reduced to a minimum.

His books are eagerly sought by up-to-date ministers everywhere, and are bought with equal appreciation by the general public.

God's Message to the Human Soul. John Watson, D. D., (Ian Maclaren). The Cole Lectures for 1907. Cloth, net $1.25. A peculiar and sad interest attaches The Cole Lectures for 1907. They were delivered, the author having suddenly passed away during his visit to this country, and within a few days of the date of the appointment that brought him to America. Fortunately Dr. Watson had put these lectures into manuscript form; they are therefore preserved for the wider circle of appreciative readers.

The Modern Sunday School in Principle and Practice. Henry F. Cope. Cloth, net $1.00. This volume by the General Secretary of the Religious Education Association constitutes an invaluable guide for the management of the Sunday School under modern conditions. He presents the results of all the newest experiments both with primary, adolescent and adult grades.

China and America Today. Arthur H. Smith, D. D. Cloth, net $1.25. Dr. Smith has been for 35 years a missionary to China. In this capacity he has learned much of China, which in another relation might be denied him. Being a statesman by instinct and genius, he has taken a broad survey of conditions and opportunities, and here forcibly presents his criticisms of America's strength and weakness abroad, especially in China.

Palestine Through the Eyes of a Native. Gamahliel Wad-El-Ward. Illustrated, cloth, net $1.00. The author, a native of Palestine, has been heard and appreciated in many parts of this country in his popular lectures upon the land in which so large a part of his life was spent. His interpretations of many obscure scriptural passages by means of native manners and customs and traditions is particularly helpful and informing.

The Continent of Opportunity: South America. Francis E. Clark, D. D. Profusely illustrated, net $1.50. Dr. Clark writes a thorough-going tour of examination, covering practically every centre of importance in South American continent, Panama, Chile, Ecuador, Peru, Argentine, Brazil, Paraguay and Uruguay. Dr. Clark's prime object has been to collect information of every sort that will help to understand the problems facing Christian Civilization in our sister Continent.

ORDER NOW OF THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

A GREAT JOINT EASTER OBSERVANCE

The Christian Woman's Board of Missions and the National Benevolent Association have decided to continue the joint observance of Easter. They desire to lay the claims of the orphan in every land upon the hearts of the young people in our Bible Schools and Mission Bands and Junior and Intermediate Societies.

Easter is the day upon which we make our offering for the orphans of all lands. No ministry is more Christlike, and certainly none is more vital to the success of the cause of Christ at home and abroad. The orphanage, the hospital, and the dispensary furnish the key to the hearts of the benighted in foreign lands. The same holy ministry must be the key used if we would find access to many hearts in our home land. This holy service has been left too long and too largely to the lodges.

The National convention of the C. W. B. M. gave to its Young People's Department the support of the Orphanages in India and Porto Rico, the building of a girls' orphanage in Porto Rico, and the rebuilding or repairing of the ten churches and six mission buildings destroyed or injured by the earthquake in Jamaica. Of the sum needed $25,000 is asked at Easter. The C. W. B. M. offers to any young people's organization giving $25 within three months' time a life membership in the C. W. B. M. Many life memberships should be secured through the Easter offering. To each person who contributes $1 or more to the C. W. B. M., through this offering, a beautiful booklet of engravings showing the missionaries and mission buildings, or a certificate with portrait of one of the pioneers of the Reformation will be given.

The National Benevolent Association of the Christian Church is asking its friends to send it this year $25,000 as its Easter offering. This surely is not too much to ask for the care of the helpless needy ones in our homeland; to rescue the children from haunts of poverty and sin, and the aged disciple from the poorhouse. The present needs are a building for the boys at Dallas, the enlargement of the Cleveland Orphanage, a better equipment for the care of the children at Baldwin, Ga., the enlargement of its work for the aged, a building for the orphanage now in a rented house at Denver, a better equipped hospital in St. Louis, and increased facilities at Valparaiso. To do this creditably more than the amount asked for is needed. A gift of $100 constitutes the donar a life line; $25 secures a life membership. To each person who contributes $1 or more through the Easter offering, a beautiful souvenir booklet of pictures of the buildings and inmates of our homes will be given.

A beautiful exercise will be furnished free by application to either the National Benevolent Association, 903 Aubert Ave., St. Louis, or The Christian Woman's Board of Missions, 152 E. Market St., Indianapolis, Ind. Write at once for the exercise and other valuable aids, all free.

An army of young people is already in line for a great, glad Easter festival, in behalf of the homeless, parentless children of all lands. Every young person in the Church of Christ should have fellowship in this holy ministry.

W. R. Warren says: "The Easter offering will help to restore the Christianity of Christ, and every meal supplied, every lesson taught and every coat provided for the orphan at home and abroad through the National Benevolent Association and the Christian Woman's Board of Missions will be an unmistakable sign of Christ's divinity and of the Church's loyalty to him. An accepted Christ and a loyal Church will be the best Centennial realization of our Father's dreams."

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

OUR EASTER SUN

By Clara Broughton Conant

On Calvary's mournful slope
His sad disciples saw
Their radiant Star of Hope
Behind the clouds withdraw.
Their Lord hung bleeding on the cross of woe,
The King of kings, whom yet they did not know!

They laid Him in the tomb:
The day had scarce begun,
When in the tender gloom
Arose our "Easter Sun!"
The weeping women heard the angels' strain:
"Oh fear ye not! The Lord is risen again!

Shine on, O radiant Sun,
While centuries come and go,
Till the whole earth transformed
Reflects the wondrous glow!
Till the last ransomed soul to the new life is born,
And breaks upon the world the Resurrection Morn!

THE CONGRESS IN RETROSPECT.

We are giving up much of our space this week to the report of our Congress at Bloomington. We believe that those present will be glad to have as full a record of its sessions as possible, and we are equally certain that those who were deprived of the privilege of attendance will welcome the report as a partial compensation for their absence.

It is a truism that the best of such a gathering is the part which cannot be put into any record. There is the joy of meeting fellow-workers in the tasks of the kingdom; there is the opportunity of conference regarding matters of interest among the churches; there is the uplift of spirit which comes from the atmosphere of devotion, and there is the personality of those who lead or follow in the discussions of the public sessions. These things are beyond words to express.

It is apparent that the interest of the Disciples in the largest and most important elements of our common faith is growing with the years. The men who were at the Congress listened with deep attention to all that was said regarding the great problems of the church in meeting its responsibilities. Every reference to literature was eagerly taken down. Every disclosure of new ways of approach to the perplexing questions of the hour was treasured. It was not the discussion of methods so much as those of principles that awakened the keenest interest. There was a feeling that life is too short for any but the most important things, and that the minister who meets the responsibility of his sacred office in these times is doing business in great waters.

It is difficult to point out the moment at which the Congress reached its highest level, and yet we believe it is only accurate to affirm that this was the session in which the matter of union with the Baptists was proposed and discussed. Nor was it alone the charming personality, the genial brotherliness or the splendid presentation of Dr. Dodd of Baltimore which produced this result. These were but the occasions and not the causes of an enthusiasm which swelled beyond the bounds of other sessions. Ten years ago such utterances would have been impossible. Five years ago they would have been taken as the solitary message of some non-representative Baptist. Today we are constrained to believe that they voice a sentiment deep and broad in the Baptist brotherhood which threatens to overmatch our own interest in the great theme which has been our watchword for a century.

For these and many other tokens of the blessing of God upon our work today we are indebted to the Bloomington convocation. Several of the addresses are to be published in pamphlet form. Due announcement will be made of this fact, and we hope their reading may be very wide. We hope to present ampler reports of some of these papers in the near future. We know that they will be welcomed by our readers.

THE DEATH OF PRESIDENT HALL.

No news that has come to the Christian world during the past month is more sudden and saddening than that of the death of Charles Cuthbert Hall of Union Theological Seminary. It is but a few weeks since he was here with us in Chicago, delivering the third of his splendid course of lectures on the Barrows foundation, dealing with the relation between Christianity and the ethnic faiths, a course of lectures which he had already delivered during the past year in the principal cities of India, China and Japan.

Dr. Hall was fifty-six years old. His earliest desire was toward the ministry, but during his college course his voice became so affected that he had to abandon his purpose for a time. He then made preparation for the career of a journalist, but as his voice regained strength he resumed his original intentions and entered Union Theological Seminary. At the close of his course in this institution he pursued graduate studies at the Presbyterian College in London, and at the Free Church College, Edinburgh.

In 1877 he was called to the pastorate of the First Presbyterian Church in Brooklyn, which he served with conspicuous success for twenty years. This period of his career is marked by his books, "Does God Send Trouble;" "Into His Marvellous Light," and "The Gospel of the Divine Sacrifice." When one remembers his gracious personality and the fervor with which he ever contended for the great truths of the Christian faith, it is with astonishment and depression of heart that one learns that he was the victim of a serious and determined effort to try him for heresy. It took the Presbytery of Brooklyn less than ten minutes to kill the resolution offered by a militant and viligant heresy hunter. In 1897 Dr. Hall was elected to the presidency of the Union Theological Seminary, a position which he filled with conspicuous ability and marked results to the hour of his death.

When the Haskell Foundation for an Indian Lectureship was established at the University of Chicago, Dr. Barrows, later president of Oberlin College, was made the first representative in the Orient. Later Principal Fairbairn of Mansfield College, Oxford, was the incumbent. By unanimous vote of the trustees Dr. Hall was chosen as the third in succession, and after his first notably successful lectures in the East, was re-elected for a second period of the same service, a very marked distinction. During his lecture tour in India in 1906 he contracted a malady incident to that climate, and on his return to the Orient last year he suffered a severe attack of illness in Japan, but seemed to have recovered. It was not until January of this year that he was stricken with a new and more dangerous form of the same disease, and knew that death was inevitable.

Dr. Hall was a close personal friend of the late President Harper. It was during his service as President of the Religious Educational Association and while the sessions of the Boston convention were being held that news came of Dr. Harper's impending death, when hope had been finally abandoned. No one who was present on that occasion will forget the prayer offered by Dr. Hall for his friend, who was also the father of that great work of religious education in which all present were engaged.

To native abilities of exceptional character Charles Cuthbert Hall united the results of the most competent and exhaustive studies. His personality was the personification of graciousness and charm. His style was elevated and inspiring. During the past few years several books have come from his tireless pen. Among them, "The Universal Elements of the Christian Religion" and "Christian Belief Interpreted by Christian Experience" were the most notable. His death is a loss to the forces of American Christianity which we do not like to contemplate. There is no man who can just fill his place.

A LITTLE CHILD SHALL LEAD THEM.

Oh, the children of Porto Rico must be given education of hand as well as of brain! In them, I see a bright and glorious future opening for this rich and highly favored land.

The Congress at Bloomington

The Tenth Annual Congress of the Disciples of Christ was held in Bloomington, Ills., from Tuesday to Thursday of last week. It is the most meagre justice to the facts to say that it was the largest, most enthusiastic and most profitable in the list of such gatherings. The registered attendance from outside of Bloomington was somewhat over three hundred, nearly one hundred more than at any previous Congress. And when it is remembered that most of the delegates are ministers, the significance of the event becomes evident. The sessions were held in the First Christian Church, of which Edgar D. Jones is the alert and successful pastor. The Second Church, under the leadership of J. H. Gilliland, the "bishop" of the entire region, rendered valuable assistance. The arrangements for entertainment were in the capable hands of Mr. Robert E. Williams, of the First Church, and could not have been improved.

The committee in charge of the program and general arrangements was composed of W. F. Richardson of Kansas City, President; Prof. W. C. Payne of Lawrence, Kas., Secretary; Edgar D. Jones of Bloomington, Finis Idleman of Des Moines and I. J. Spencer of Lexington, Ky. To Prof. Payne fell practically all the executive work in the preparation for the gathering. And that his part was splendidly done both before and during the Congress was evident to all. President Richardson made an admirable director of affairs, introducing the chairmen of the various sessions and presiding at the business meetings.

The Congress was immediately preceded by the Central Illinois Ministerial Association, which met on Monday and continued till Tuesday morning, with an evening address by C. M. Chilton of St. Joseph, Mo. At ten o'clock on Tuesday a session of the American Christian Education Association was held, at which addresses were made by Prof. S. M. Jefferson and Prof. Thomas McCartney of Kentucq University on "The College and the Post-Graduate Course for the Ministry," by Prof. C. B. Coleman of Butler College on "The Church, the College and the Public," and by Prof. H. L. Willett of the University of Chicago on "A Campaign Suggestion," to the effect that the most needed factor in our educational work today is a field Secretary of Education who can be a common denominator of information and inspiration on this theme throughout the brotherhood.

The Congress opened at 2 p. m. President Richardson was in the chair, and after devotional services conducted by J. M. Philputt of St. Louis, Mo., E. D. Jones, pastor of the church, introduced Hon. Adlai E. Stevenson, ex-Vice-President of the United States, who delivered the address of welcome. In speaking of the attractiveness of Bloomington Mr. Stevenson said: "It may not be out of place to recall a legend to the effect that a Bloomington man departed this life and passing straightway heavenward, of course, safely reached the celestial gate. Interrogated by Saint Peter as to where he was from, the answer given with characteristic modesty was, 'From Bloomington.' Slowly opening the gate Saint Peter, in somewhat petulant tone, remarked: 'Oh, well, come on in, but you will not be contented here.'

"In an old church on a street near by it was my good fortune in my boyhood to hear three of the most eminent pulpit orators of that day—Henry Ward Beecher, Peter Cartwright, and Alexander Campbell. The personality, no less than the eloquence, of Mr. Campbell impressed me deeply. The passing years have not dimmed my recollections of his logical, forceful and eloquent discourse. His patriarchal appearance, earnestness and dignified bearing gave emphasis to his solemn appeals and deep lodgement to his words in the hearts of all who heard him. Once seen and heard he was in very truth a man never to be forgotten."

In response, President Richardson not only made a fitting answer to the sentiments expressed, but made a splendid contribution to Bloomington's present aggressive campaign for the suppression of the saloon, by an appeal to facts regarding conditions in Kansas.

The first paper of the Congress was read by George B. Van Arsdall of Cedar Rapids, Ia., on "The Unshepherded Church and Ministerial Supply." He said, in part:

"Two problems are involved in this study. First, the most effectual care of our existing church by our present ministry; and second, the enlistment and training of a future ministry for the church. The first is that of the wisest use of the forces we have and the second that of increasing the number and efficiency of our forces. The questions are among the most vital and practical issues with which the church is confronted.

'We have 11,000 churches and our statistician reports an annual increase of about 150. The report of last year showed 6619 ministers. One-fourth of our churches are without preaching and an additional fourth have preaching only once a month and both of these classes are without pastoral care. Some months ago Rev. A. W. Taylor of Eureka made a canvas of the state of our churches, gathering his information directly from the several states. His report shows that 22 per cent have no preaching; 50 per cent have preaching part of the time and 28 per cent have preaching all the time. The actual value of the churches that have no preaching at all to the cause of Christ is so meagre as to scarcely be reckoned at all. Indeed it is a question if their existence is not a detriment.

"The responsibility in the matter rests primarily with our missionary organizations. I would recommend the establishment in every state of an Advisory Board of Ministerial Supply. This might well be made a part of our present state organizations. Our state societies are coming to be delegate bodies. With the growth of this ideal condition opportunity will be afforded the churches for a real voice in the creation of such a board. The ministry of the state might elect two members to the board; the churches through their delegates to elect two and the four to select the fifth member. Its duty would be to locate ministers."

After a spirited discussion, the committees on nominations and time and place of the next Congress were announced and the session adjourned.

In the evening Prof. S. M. Jefferson presided, and after devotional services led by H. O. Breeden and W. E. M. Hackleman, Miss Wanbaugh of the Second Church sang a solo. Dr. Hastings H. Hart, of the Illinois Children's Aid Society, gave the address of the evening on the redemption of the child. It was full of information regarding a most important branch of social salvation. Among other things he said:

"The ordinary family home is the best institution that was ever devised for the protection of homeless children. This is the principle on which the various children's aid societies have been working and it has met with more satisfactory results than under the orphanage system. The children who were transplanted from New York turned out well and some of them became governors of states, judges and physicians and members of other professions.

"One peculiar condition found by the officers and agents of these societies is the fact that as a community grows older and richer the people in it are less willing to take children. In Oklahoma today the ratio would be almost 3 to 1 as regards families willing to bring up an orphan child. In the east already the societies have been reduced to adopting the "boarding plan" and pay large sums for the board of children so as to get them into the right kind of homes. Beware then, of getting rich."

The session of Wednesday morning found the Congress in its full strength. The attendance had reached a point beyond the expectation of the officers and hosts and a splendid spirit pervaded the gathering. A. B. Philputt of Indianapolis presided. After a devotional half-hour in charge of S. S. Lappin of Stanford, Ill., Earl M. Todd of Manchester, N. H., read a trenchant paper on "Sanity in Evangelism." He showed that evangelism is the very heart of the Gospel, and has been the most marked characteristic of the work of the Disciples. But he pointed out several particulars in which the popular evangelism of our day needs improvement if it is not to become a menace rather than a blessing to the churches.

"Unless our evangelism can be purged," said he, "of certain elements, and delivered from certain tendencies that have gained momentum, and its personnel improved by the raising up of men of greater spiritual culture and wider knowledge and more catholic spirit—evangelism will destroy the movement which it has created; it will perish from sheer bigness.

"It is doubtful if any church in the brotherhood is strong enough to endure a revival led by any one of our more prominent evangelists without suffering heavily in respect to the higher spiritual interests of the church.

"The nature of the advertising, the conduct oftime of the evangelist and singer in public and in the homes of the people, the Pharisaism that breathes in the most popular evangelistic songs, all speak loud of moral levity. The people are quick to recognize this, and in spite of the gesticulating and sweating of the evangelist—to some a sufficient guarantee of earnestness, the impression will remain that the whole thing is make-believe and that there is nothing in it for men whose sole interest is in the realities of life.

"It is constantly affirmed by the opponents of the modern learning that criticism and science are destroying the faith of men and manufacturing infidels. They are doing nothing of the kind; they are simply destroying the false foundations, and the man who laid the foundations, and not the man who shakes them, is responsible for these deplorable lapses from faith. If a man's faith rest on the right foundation nothing can shake it and only sin can destroy it. The evangelist has no mandate to seek to influence men's opinions in these regards either one way or the other, and the evangelist who, either in ignorance or pride or prejudice or cowardice, encumbers his message with these matters, and burdens men's faith with them, sins against the evangel and against humanity, and prepares the way for the destruction of his own work—he himself being saved, yet so as by fire.

"I may say that this whole matter of evangelism resolves itself as does every other matter in the whole realm of human interest into one word—Men. Better men, larger men, men of deeper and broader culture; men who live near to Christ, who love Him supremely, who know Him so well that they are able to recognize His spirit in every possible disguise; men who, in the fellowship of Christ, have lost themselves and have outgrown provincialism and sectarianism; men who can say, 'I have been crucified with Christ, and it is no longer that I live, but Christ liveth in me;' men, Christ-filled men, are our hope for an evangelism that shall meet the needs of the twentieth century."

No brief suggestion can do justice to this powerful and timely appeal for an evangelism truly suited to the needs of the times.

Mr. Arthur Holmes of Philadelphia, Pa., spoke on "The Church and Men." Mr. Holmes was at one time a machinist, a toiler among men, was later a pastor and then graduated, as he said, into Y. M. C. A. work. In his address he gave a thoughtful presentation of the reasons why men do not attend church, lined up the position of capital and labor as to their attitude to the church, gave statistical reports on the conditions of the two classes in this country and ended with many helpful suggestions as to how to get the men in the church and keep them in.

The speaker stated 9,000,000 out of 12,000,000 boys in this country drift out of the church between the ages of 12 and 19. How to keep the boy in church means a careful study of the boy himself. He advised the co-operation of the Y. M. C. A. and the churches and thus combine the physical, educational, religious and social work in the churches. He advocated the club idea in the churches to appeal to men. Mr. Holmes advised work in small groups, as this tends to eliminate the crowded conditions and brings out individualism. "Go where men are," said Mr. Holmes. "Shop meetings should be held by the church. Business men can be reached by a supper at some downtown place where discussions on various subjects may follow. Use the volunteer worker. The volunteer is the essence of the service in the kingdom. Love has a force that mere paid labor can never have. First aid to the injured could be taught in some of the shop meetings at noon. Lawyers could talk legal problems to another group, physicians could lecture on health, etc. The group idea will cause the union of all the churches. They will never get together until they get together for something."

By this time it was time to adjourn for luncheon. In order to afford time for discussion of the papers, the afternoon session opened at 1:30. President T. E. Cramblett of Bethany College presided, and Levi Marshall of Hannibal, Mo., led the devotional exercises; a half-hour was devoted to a discussion of the morning addresses, which served to reveal the strength of their appeal to the Congress.

The chief paper of the afternoon was read by Dr. Charles Hastings Dodd, pastor of the Eutaw Place Baptist Church, Baltimore, on "Closer Relations Between Baptists and Disciples." It was one of the most effective of the Congress and raised the audience to a high pitch of enthusiasm.

He made frequent reference to the great session at the recent Baptist Congress in his own city, in which plans for the union of Baptists, Free Baptists and Disciples were discussed with much enthusiasm and quoted from the addresses of F. D. Power, Peter Ainslie and Erret Gates.

He said:

"I can see nothing half as supernatural in this day as the impulse to fraternity and solidarity. It is impossible to resist it. I look upon it as the spiritual miracle of the time. We are not merely looking over walls, clambering up on the steep ladders of our fraternal impulses; the walls themselves are shrinking and toppling and falling as the marching hosts of God's children more and more strike the rhythm of common thought and feeling. I have no need to dwell on things widely known like the Cumberland affiliation in Presbyterian ranks, the union of Baptists and Free Baptists in Canada, the coming together of seven presbyterial bodies for missionary work in Japan under the name of 'The United Church of Christ in Japan,' the blending of the Methodism of north and south to form one Methodist missionary propaganda in Japan, the World Alliance of the Reformed bodies; the pending possibility of consolidation among Congregationalists, United Brethren and Methodist Protestants, not to mention the International Church Federation Society, and such remarkable expressions of unity as the laymen's missionary movement and the young people's missionary movement.

"Something over a year ago by Baptists and Disciple ministers of Baltimore, a joint committee was appointed to start the work of bringing the two denominations into closer relations. This scheme was proposed: (1) A general exchange of pulpits for the purpose of presenting an appeal for union and thereafter frequent repetitions of such exchanges in the interests of fraternity; (2) the organization of one minister's conference; (3) fraternal delegations to the various denominational gatherings, such as state meetings; (4) establishment of intercommunion at the Lord's supper; (5) free exchange of church letters; (6) constant propagation of the idea of fraternity through the press as well as the pulpit; (7) an annual convention for fraternal interchange; (8) the founding of union mission stations in neutral fields; (9) formulation of a plan for ultimate organic union within state bounds, covering legislative requirements for the manipulation and safeguarding of property, the carrying out of trusts and the fusion of the existing societies.

The movement for unity widens. I would counsel the fostering of mutual schools of learning and an interchange of ministry. Yet again, I counsel the frank recognition on the part of the Baptists of Disciple superiority in many ways. I conclude all my counsels by exhorting all who hear me to expect great sacrifice before the ideal is accomplished. Sacrifice—yes of name and prestige and pride and many a meretricious thing—but there need be no sacrifice of truth, of the mighty usefulness of past history or of the peerless opportunity that lies before the religion of democracy."

Dr. Dodd's paper was often interrupted by vigorous applause and at the end there was an ovation.

F. W. Burnham of Springfield, Ill., opened the discussion in a well-written paper, in the course of which he said:

"That there may be closer relations between the Baptists and Disciples the following suggestions are offered along the line of internal preparation: First, let us make sure that we want union, actual organic union, and that all want it. Let us boldly declare that we believe in the possibility of its early realization and that we are really willing to do something to bring it about. Second, inaugurate a widespread and thorough campaign of education and inspiration upon this subject. Make this the paramount issue until the people are thoroughly enlightened and prepared for decision. The time has come to start such an agitation in our churches on the subject of Christian union. If this is not the only live issue in our church, it is certainly the most urgent and most important for the advancement of the Master's kingdom. Third, those who have the vision of union and are fired with zeal to bring it about must be careful to manifest in every such effort the spirit of Christ to the fullest possible degree. Our people are jealous of their independence. They remember that this freedom was purchased with a great price. Let us seek the Christly spirit and cause our people to seek it, that when the time of union comes, the transition may be easy and natural."

In the discussion that followed, which was most enthusiastic, the one note struck by all was that of joy at the signs of union evident on every side. Among the speakers was Rev. U. S. Davis, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Bloomington.

The following resolution introduced by L. H. Coleman, a member of the First Christian Church of Springfield, was adopted:

"Resolved: That the two addresses on the union of the Baptist and Christian churches be printed and read in all the churches here represented and that this Congress commit itself unreservedly to the task of effecting such a union."

Following this William A. Ward, representing the interests of Christian Socialism, spoke briefly; after which C. S. Medbury presented his paper on "Centennial Ideals," in which he urged, among other features of our centennial propaganda, a deeper piety, a better and larger evangelism, and a more definite confinement to the program of missions.

WEDNESDAY EVENING.

J. H. Gilliland was the chairman at the evening session, and Willis A. Parker, of Emporia, Kan., led the devotional service. The paper of the evening was read by Prof. H. L. Willett, of Chicago, on "The Devotional Material of the Old Testament."

He compared the New Testament to the Odyssey of the Greeks, a figure which led naturally to terming the Old Testament the Iliad of the race. The variety of subject matter was brought out, but was shown to possess a singular and impressive unity of purpose. The speaker dwelt on the influence the Old Tetament has had upon the world; first, of its value to Jesus, its influence on the thinkers of the early Christian church, its unmistakable influence upon the governments of the world. Of the true worth of the book he said:

You may judge of a people by the characters it exalts; you may estimate a book by the men it enthrones. The Hebrew Scriptures find their heroes in the men of faith and vision, to whom God had in some true sense become a reality. There is a passing admiration expressed for the Baraks, the Samsons, the Jephthahs and the Sauls. But the men who are given the center of the stage are the men in whom dwelt the spirit of the Highest." Such a man was Abraham; David also possessed the true qualities of greatness, and the speaker dwelt at length on these two characters. Continuing, he said: "On closest study the great men of the Old Testment are seen to be not so much the militant and tireless contenders for better things that we have pictured them, but rather men who dwelt much in silence and meditation, nurturing the powers of action in the quiet of the mighty hills, only to come forth in great moments like lions of the Lord.

"I is not less true that the earnest pilgrim of the inner way finds for himself even larger treasures of holy thought in the Old Testament than its writers understood. One must walk here with great caution not to err or lend himself to misconception.

"A brief account may well be taken, in closing, of the values which have been imparted to the Old Testament by its entrance into human life in hours of devotion or of supreme spiritual experiences. In this moment it is necessary to confine our inquiry to a limited section of this opulent material, and for obvious reasons the part selected will be the Psalms. To the Christian who is seeking aids to the holy life, writings of this kind have a triple worth. They reveal the hearts of the saints who first uttered them; they serve as the gates through which the eager and alert spirit enters still deeper into the psalm country of prayer and holy thought, and they come to us bearing the rich burden of the treasured and accumulating joys and sorrows, hopes and visions of the men and women who have made them their own in the passing years. The most casual and superficial survey of the theme is sufficient to assure the seeker after God that he has high companionship on his journey to the celestial city, and that many fair souls have traveled this way whose recorded joy of the divine word are to him brooks by the way. The Psalms are written over, like a palimpsest, with the meditations and experiences of those who have found them the solace for their sorrow and the fitting expression of their joy."

THURSDAY MORNING.

Mrs. Helen E. Moses, President of the Christian Women's Board of Missions, presided at the Thursday morning session, and Parker Stockdale of Chicago led the devotional services. Henry L. Herod of Indianapolis, read a statesmanlike paper on "The Race Problem," in which he dealt in an able and illuminating manner with the conditions which surrounded his people, the colored race in America. He said:

'In the beginning the negro illiteracy was counted at 100 per cent. He has reduced that illiteracy by 50 per cent. The negro must not forget that he is but a little child gazing awe-stricken and reverently into an extant of knowledge in whose delight he has not yet come.

"Industrial factors are trifling compared with moral ravages. The negro seems to have had two moral standards, one to live by on week days and another to shout for on Sundays. The white man has a prejudice against the negro in education, in business, in civil life and even in death on the gallows. This discrimination is based solely on the color of his skin. A white face is always above par, a black face is always below. He is judged by the worst element in the race, the white man by the best. The negro practices humility, honesty, integrity, meekness, lowliness, all of which are Christian virtues. But the negro has no desire for a monopoly on goodness. It is high time that both races understood each other.

"Christianity proposes the highest development of manhood. Christianity proposes the perfect standard of measurement. It proposes the perfect method of loving service, not for self but for others. It proposes the perfect spirit of love, helpfulness, not exploitation, co-operation, not condemnation, love, not hatred, all men up, not some men down. I would have the negro understand that to be worthy is better than being rich and better than being white. He needs to know that to be great is to be humble. There is no place in Christ for race prejudice. My solution has been called impracticable, but God's ways have always been impracticable to those who are not disposed to follow them. Let us at least give God's way a fair trial. So here in America let us have the best negro in the world and we shall have a people known for industry, intelligence, a people of moral strength, and good citizens."

C. C. Smith, the well known secretary of the Department of Negro Education and Evangelization, was the next speaker on the program and delighted his hearers with a masterly address on the race issue. He has been for many years closely in touch with both sides of the race issue in the south and speaks from experience. During his work among the negroes of the south, he has been in a position to know the exact conditions, and in his address made a plea for the uplifting of both the negro and the white in that section of the country. He says the whites do not go about the problem in the south in the proper manner and that there is much uncalled for friction in settling the question. His talk was highly instructive and was thoroughly enjoyed by all. Following his address there was a general discussion of the subject.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

W. R. Warren of Pittsburg was chairman of the afternoon session, and O. W. Lawrence of Decatur conducted the worship. The address was delivered by Rev. Henry L. Cope on "Sunday School Pedagogy." In the course of his exceeding informing paper he said:

"Religious education will reach the whole life, as much the reason as the affections, as much the will as the emotions. It must be as evidently concerned with baseball or with the problems of the playground or the workshop as with the hymn or the prayer meeting It need not teach baseball, nor need it teach carpentry; but it must teach a boy how to live on the diamond and the man to live in the workshop and teach us all how to play fair in the great game of life. Whether it confine its text-book to the great masterpiece of the religious literature of the ages or not it must make its actual of the ages or not it must make its actual curriculum wide as the heart of man, as the interests of the ages."

In the discussion that followed, valuable suggestions were made by Mr. Cope and others regarding the best Sunday school literature.

The following resolution, introduced by W. R. Warren, was adopted:

"Resolved: By the ministers of the gospel assembled in Bloomington, Ill., April 2, 1908, that all Christian Ministerial Association, state, district and city, be asked to elect delegates to a conference to be held in connection with the national convention at New Orleans, and that the meeting select a committee of five to report to that conference the advisability of a plan for the organization and adminstration of an American Christian Ministerial Association."

The chair appointed the following committee as provided by the resolution: W. R Warren, Pittsburg; J. G. Waggoner, Canton, Ill.; C. C. Rowlinson, Iowa City, Ia.; O. W. Lawrence, Decatur, and H. O. Pritchard, Lincoln, Neb.

The usual vote of appreciation for the courtesies enjoyed at the hands of the Bloomington churches was passed.

The chairman of the Committee of Ten, selected two years since, to confer with a similar committee from the Baptists, regarding closer relations with that people, reported progress.

The most important business was the election of officers. The following were named: President, Dr. J. M. Philputt, of St. Louis, Mo.; First Vice-President, F. W. Burnham, of Springfield, Ill.; Second Vice-President, J. E. Lynn, of Warren, Ohio; Third Vice-President, Chancellor W. P. Aylesworth, of Lincoln, Neb.; Secretary and Treasurer, G. B. Van Arsdall, of Cedar Rapids, Ia.

THURSDAY EVENING.

The closing session of the Congress was devoted to the topic, "A Human View of the Labor Problem," and the speaker was Miss Mary McDowell, head of the University of Chicago Social Settlement in the Stock Yards district. H. O. Pritchard was in the chair, and after the opening exercises, introduced the speaker.

"I'm not going to speak as an economist or as a sociologist. My business is simply to be human. We have been thinking that we've got a democracy," said Miss McDowell. "We haven't got a democracy and that is what is causing the great struggle today." She has been working in that neighborhood for fifteen years and has seen the population change from English speaking people—Irish, Scotch and English—to Slovaks, Lithuanians, Polish, Italians, Greeks and Syrians. No one today has a more difficult place than the man that stands between labor and capital such as the superintendents and bosses.

She showed how the American standard of living had taken hold of these immigrants—the standard which demands something better than two rooms for eleven people. They get an idea that the members of their families should have more privacy and they are gradually working for better accommodations, especially for the women and girls. The American laborer, even the most unskilled, is not content with the conditions to which the new comers were accustomed in the old world. Referring to the conference between the labor leaders and the packers, one man said: "The representative of labor represents quite as important interests as the representative of the packers." He was speaking to a group of ladies and gentlemen who had come for conference on labor conditions to Mrs. Potter Palmer's new picture gallery. "You may talk of your free baths," he said, "and the rest rooms you are putting in the factories and the districts where we live. But we want our own baths and rest rooms and want some of the beauty ourselves in our own homes."

At the close a great number of questions were asked of the speaker, to which she responded.

After a brief statement by the secretary, Prof. Payne, the Congress was brought to a close, with the feeling on the part of all that it had been the most enthusiastic and successful of the ten held thus far.

CONGRESS NOTES.

The ladies of the First and Second churches served luncheon and dinners in the church for twenty-five cents. The visitors appreciated the good service, and the ladies had all they could care for.

Edgar D. Jones, pastor of the First church, was an admirable host, whose increasing efforts contributed in quiet, yet most effective ways, to the success of the Congress.

The Committee of Twenty-five to consider the wisdom and method of establishing a publication society among the Disciples, held two important meetings during the Congress.

The Centennial Committee was in session several times, maturing plans for the great convention of 1909 in Pittsburg. Secretary W. R. Warren was busy keeping Centennial interests to the front.

The Executive Board of the American Christian Education Society held a session and elected officers as follows: President, T. C. Howe, of Butler College; Secretary, A. B. Philputt, of Indianapolis. Executive Committee, the President, Secretary and W. C. Payne, Thomas McCartney and H. L. Willett.

The number of special meetings of committees and other groups held in connection with the Congress led one delegate to suggest that a special Congress ought to be held every year for committee meetings alone.

The veterans, W. T. Moore and William Hayden, were much in evidence in the sessions. We missed J. B. Briney, who usually lends spice and point to the discussions.

The Bloomington papers, the Paragraph and the Bulletin, contained valuable reports of the Congress. Especially did the reports in the former maintain the high reputation for efficiency enjoyed by that journal.

Dr. Dodd, in his splendid address on the Union of Baptists and Disciples, referred at length to the effort now being made to unite the Baptist and Christian churches of Rockford, Ill., and believed it was typical of many communities.

If the Committee of Ten, chosen two years ago to confer with a similar committee from the Baptists regarding a basis of co-operation, does not bring in its report soon, the two bodies will be one before it finishes its work.

It was suggested that the Congress be omitted next year, and held hereafter biennially. But the suggestion met with no favor, and was laid aside. It is apparent that the Disciples want a Congress every year.

Dr. W. T. Moore made an earnest plea for Bethany, W. Va., as the place for the next Congress. After vigorous discussions, however, the matter was left in the hands of the officers.

Miss McDowell illustrated the longing expressed in the labor struggle by a story of two little boys who stopped to drink at the fountain before the settlement house. The day was sultry and the odor from the stock yards and packing houses were especially noticeable. The smoke for which that part of Chicago is notorious was very thick that day when one of the little boys was heard to say: "Yes, He can see everything. He can see inside us. Why, He can see down through the smoke, God can. And the other little boy replied, very reverently, "Gee; wish I was God."

In illustrating the bluntness and directness of some working men with whom the minister has at times to work, Mr. Holmes said he was once conducting a shop meeting and tried to start a song. It did not go well and he said to the men, "That was not a success. Something was the matter." A man at the back of the crowd called out, "Yes, we've got a bum leader."

Fat Man—"Then better anchor me down first."—Judge.

"WE WILL PUT YOUR NAME ON FILE."

REVIVED.

Old-Time Health, Eating Grape-Nuts.

"I had been sick for ten years with dyspepsia and a lot of complications," wrote an Arkansas woman.

"An operation was advised, change of climate was suggested, but no one seemed to know just what was the matter. I was in bed three days in the week, and got so thin I weighed only eighty-nine pounds. No food seemed to agree with me.

"I told my husband I was going to try some kind of predigested food to see if I could keep from this feeling of continued hunger.

"Grape-Nuts and cream was the food I got and nothing has seemed to satisfy me like it. I never feel hungry, but have a natural appetite. Have had no nervous spells since I began this food, and have taken no medicine.

"I have gained so much strength that I now do all my housework and feel well and strong. My weight has increased eight pounds in eight weeks, and I shall always eat Grape-Nuts, as it is far pleasanter than taking medicines." "There's a Reason." Sunday School Lesson--The Cruise of Ointment

Athough this lesson occurs at Bethany, the scene of the last study, some considerable interval has elapsed since the raising of Lazarus. The events which followed that miracle made it necessary for Jesus to retire to a distance from Jerusalem, and He went first into Ephraim and then still further into Perea. Finally He started on His journey to Jerusalem where He was to consummate the purposes of His ministry by His death. On the way through Jericho He healed the blind man and had the remarkable interview with Zaccheus. Then He started with His disciples up the long ascent from Jericho to Jerusalem and closed the journey at Bethany just over the Mount of Olives from the city.

Simon the Leper.

His arrival was only six days before the Passover, which was to be fraught with such memorable consequences to Himself and His work. His coming was a matter of intense public interest. In addition to His general reputation, Jesus was known here as the friend of Lazarus and his sister, and as the One who had raised this, their townsman, from the grave. Such a visitor would fill all minds with curiosity to see Him. Perhaps, also, He had healed Simon the Leper of the deadly disease which was held incurable by the knowledge of that time. The fact that this man had been a leper is clear from the title given him, and that he had been cured is equally certain, for otherwise he would have been unable to remain in any settled community according to the laws relating to leprosy. The inference is clear, therefore, that he also was one of the objects of Jesus' compassion. A ruin in the old town of Bethany at the present time is pointed out as the home of Simon the Leper.

Character of Martha.

At this home there were gathered many of the townspeople on the evening of Jesus' arrival. It was a gala occasion. Nothing could exceed their desire to honor their great and gracious guest. True to her domestic instincts, Martha assisted in serving. An ancient tradition affirmed that she was the wife of Simon the Leper. There is no indication that she was less interested in Jesus' teaching than her brother and sister. Her rebuke of Mary at the 10:38-42) does not indicate that she time Jesus was their guest (Luke was indifferent to His words, but only that she was anxious for His comfort. Nor do Jesus' words on that occasion mark His disapproval of Martha's solicitude, but only his hint that there were other and perhaps more important sides to human life than mere attention to the demands of hospitality. Certainly Martha's earnest words with Jesus at the time of her brother's death (John 11:17-28.) show that she was intensely interested not only in the present circumstances, but in the whole truth regarding the resurrection. She was a woman of practical mind, impatient of dreaming and insistent upon knowing the reality of things. As such she merits approval quite as fully as does Mary.

"The Sons of Martha."

This fact must be considered by readers of Mr. Kipling's poem, "The Sons of Martha," in which the speaker utters his cynical comments upon a world in which

"The Sons of Mary seldom bother, for they have inherited that good part,
The Sons of Martha favor their mother, of the careful soul and the troubled heart;
And because she lost her temper once, and because she was rude to the Lord, her guest,
Her sons must wait on Mary's sons, world without end, reprieve or rest."

For in the sense in which that poem speaks of the sons of Mary, the indolent, pampered, superior class, they are becoming fewer every year, whether they have the title of nobility or are of the company of the idle rich or are of the slave holding aristocracy in lands where human bondage still continues. The sons of Martha are workers in the world; they belong to no class alone, nor to any one land. In their ranks are the toilers in mines, the diggers of tunnels, the sweating heroes of factories and workshops, the captains of industry, the makers of empire, the engineers, architects, scientists, surgeons, teachers, tradesmen and ministers who have been given their task of God, who love their work and are bringing things to pass. Like Martha, their mother, they do their appointed service in its proper time, whether it is the serving of a guest in the home, the planning of a campaign, or the questioning after the mysteries of life by the side of a sealed grave.

The Secret of the Tomb.

Lazarus sat with the other guests in the home of Simon the leper. One wonders if his conversation with Jesus at his side dealt with those secrets of the days he spent in the narrow house below the hill. Had the sisters asked him any questions of that mysterious time? Tennyson has raised the same inquiry:

"Behold a man raised up by Christ!
The rest remaineth unrevealed;
He told it not; or something sealed
The lips of that Evangelist."

While thus they sat in conversation, Mary, the other sister, came in with her offering of spikenard, and breaking the fragile alabaster cup, she poured its contents on the feet of Jesus and wiped them with her hair. The splendid gift was worthy of the richest giver. The house was filled with the priceless odor. Jesus received it as a token of that devotion which no words could adequately express. Mary loved him because of the gracious sympathy he had brought into their lives; but more than this, she felt that life itself could not repay the wonderful blessing he had wrought in bringing Lazarus back.

The Protest of Judas.

In rapid review the characters in this little drama pass across the stage. Judas comes next. He is called the son of Simon. This could hardly be Simon the host, for the word "Iscariot" seems to refer to the town of Kerioth, further east. Judas is the only jarring note in this harmony of souls. His protest against the apparent waste of this offering may have passed at the moment as the prudent counsel of an economical mind, but when in later years the evangelist told the story his judgment was uncompromising. It was because Judas was possessed of that avarice which helped to bring Jesus to his death that he had made the criticism upon Mary's gift.

Very gracious were the words of Jesus as he accepted the anointing as not only the token of Mary's love, but in a mystical sense his own preparation for that burial which he alone of that group foresaw as imminent. Beyond all price was this act of generous and unreserved affection. It was worth any sacrifice of mere money, which can be used for such sordid and worthless things, that for once in his life it should express such precious sentiments. For the whole of his message centers in the truth that nothing matters but love.

POSITIVE PREACHING.

Dear Bro. Willett:

Thank you for your recent editorial on "Positive Preaching."

It is true that the preacher may know many new truths that others "are not able to bear." Christ's method was to gently lead his disciples along the path of knowledge. It is cowardly to cling only to the past, and to force upon men ideas that can only cause trouble in the congregation. I am afraid that some of our preachers assume an attitude of defiance and dogmatism that results only in evil. With best wishes, I am, yours truly, R. F. Thrapp.

The Prayer Meeting--Power of a Man of God

Topic for April 22. 1 Sam. 9:6.

Silas Jones

Illustrations of the power of the man of God are abundant in the Scriptures and in the history of the church. Ahab, the king of Israel, went down to take possession of the vineyard of Naboth. Elijah the man of God met him and said: "Hast thou killed, and also taken possession? Thou hast sold thyself to do evil." When the king heard the words of doom, he put on sackcloth and fasted, for he could not stand out against him who spoke in the name of Jehovah the God of Israel. King David committed a great sin. Nathan the prophet came to the king and boldly denounced him. David said: "I have sinned against Jehovah." The pleasure-loving Herod Antipas feared John the Baptist, "knowing he was a just man an holy." When Paul the prisoner reasoned of righteousness, self-control and the judgment to come, Felix his judge was terrified. The representative of Roman power was weak before the Christian apostle who spoke for God. The might of the nations is nothing to the man who feels for a moment the presence of the ruler of all. Neither Jewish ecclesiasticism nor Roman militarism was able to destroy the early church, because men of God preached the gospel.

Leo X thought the disturbance in Germany originating with the posting of Luther's theses was a quarrel of the monks. He soon discovered his mistake. The leader of that disturbance was a man of profound religious experience. He had laid hold upon neglected elements of Christianity. He had been burdened by a false theory of salvation. He was aroused by the corruption of the church. The attempt to crush Luther failed, for God sent him to declare the truth. Contempt and ridicule met Wesley and his companions when they put into practice principles of the gospel displeasing to the natural man. They bore the cross laid upon them, and the standard of Christian conduct was brought nearer to the rule of Christ. The plea for the union of disciples of the Lord was effective through the faith and knowledge of the men who made it.

Ten righteous men would have saved Sodom. One earnest Christian can save a town. The truth is mighty and will prevail if it is in a life. But a good life cannot exert its full power in one day, nor can it fully reveal itself without sacrifice. Perhaps, then, the complaints we are so quick to utter are not justified. We may be in too great a hurry. It may be, too, that the element of sacrifice is left out of our conception of goodness. It may be our expectation to win victories without cost to ourselves. Our Lord endured the cross for the salvation of the world. "A servant is not greater than his Lord." The progress of the church has been marked by the self-denial of its leaders. The present conflict differs only in form from that of the past. Modern inventions have brought comfort to the body; they have not cured the world of its sin. The spiritual struggle remains, and only the brave and loyal are fit for it.

The man of God knows the divine will and does it. He has always been reverenced by men of sanity and he always will be. We honor him who knows the secret of beauty, and expresses it on canvas or in verse. Patriotic deeds are celebrated by poets and orators. The names of inventors have become household words. With greater reason ought we to reflect on the life of one who knows the secret of the Lord. In the mad rush for things we may forget ourselves. The man of God will not allow us to do this if we give heed to him. Men are eager to secure for their towns factories that will furnish employment for labor. Is it not worth while to bring in men whose very presence is a rebuke to every form of evil?

Christian Endeavor--Observing Easter

Topic for April 19. John 20:1-10, 19-23.

Amos R. Wells

If the spirit of Easter is maintained throughout our Sundays, they will be well kept; there is no doubt of that. The Easter spirit is that of life out of death, of strength out of weakness, of joy out of sorrow; it is the spirit of a new beginning, and that is the true spirit of the Lord's Day.

The six working days have worn our bodies to the breaking point. Sunday, rightly observed, means life from that death, strength from that weakness, exhilaration from that depression. The average man, the man with an average constitution, cannot do his best work on the six days if he also works on the seventh day. The Fourth Commandment is written as plainly on our nerves and muscles as upon the leaves of our Bibles.

Besides, the six days' work brings our spirits to the breaking point. How the worries press upon us! How many fears and doubts! How many harsh words do we hear and speak! How much that is ugly comes into our lives and goes out of our lives! Surely we need one day in seven for cleaning house. And Sunday is our life from this spiritual death. It is our chance to renew our courage and purify our desires, tighten our hold of the great realities and loosen the grip of the evil one.

If we do not gladly assent to all this, it is because we have not been spending Sunday as we should. If we enter upon its sacred hours with a great burden of unaccomplished tasks hanging over us, Sunday will have no real rest for our bodies. If we carry into the Lord's Day the clashing frets of the past week and the dark fears for the week to come, Sunday will have no renewing for our souls. We must prepare for it, getting our work out of the way. We must accept it, giving ourselves up to it and allowing it to have its blessed way with us. And if we thus permit the Sabbath to prove itself, no fear but it will prove itself to be the "day of all the week the best, emblem of eternal rest."

A RECITATION.

Let the following poem upon the Lord's day be committed to memory and recited in the meeting:

Again the morn of gladness,
The morn of light, is here;
And earth itself looks fairer,
And heaven itself more near;
The bells, like angels voices,
Speak peace to every breast,
And all the land lies quiet
To keep the day of rest.

Again, O loving Saviour,
The children of Thy grace
Prepare themselves to seek Thee
Within Thy chosen place.
Our song shall rise to greet Thee,
If Thou our hearts wilt raise;
If Thou our lips wilt open,
Our mouth shall show Thy praise.

The church on earth rejoices
To join with these today;
In every tongue and nation
She calls her sons to pray.
Across the northern snow-fields,
Beneath the Indian palms,
She makes the same pure offering,
And sings the same sweet psalms.

"Lest We Forget"--Easter and The Orphans

REMEMBER.

Remember that Christ stands naked, cold and hungry awaiting our answer to the cry of his needs in the Easter Offering. Every young person and every Bible school, Mission band, Junior and Intermediate society in the brotherhood should enjoy the blessing of ministering to him by ministering to his suffering little ones in all lands.

IT IS THE WILL OF THE LORD.

"And if the brother be waxen poor, and fallen in decay with thee then thou shalt relieve him; yea, though he be a stranger, or a sojourner; that he may live with thee." Levi 25:35.

"If I have eaten my morsel alone and the fatherless have not eaten thereof, if I have seen any perish for want of clothing and he were not warmed with the fleece of my sheep—then let my shoulder fall from my shoulder blade, and mine arm be broken from the bone."

"He that hath pity on the poor, lendeth to the Lord, and that which he hath given he will pay him again."

But whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him? 1 Jno. 3:17.

And the King shall answer and say unto them, verily I say unto you, inasmuch as ye have done it one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me. Matt. 25:40.

CHRISTIANITY APPLIED.

The Gospel of the Helping Hand is Christianity applied. The one to whom this ministry does not appeal has not absorbed all the "light" yet that is his privilege. We canot feel satisfied with this work until these institutions have been sufficiently established in every section of our land.

C. F. SWANDER.

AMERICA FOR CHRIST.

If we would win America for Christ and through America win the world, we canot turn over the work of benevolence to fraternal orders and secret societies. We must act as becometh Christian men and women. We must do what Jesus did, do what Jesus would do if he were on earth to-day. We must care for those who need care, help those who need help, shelter those who need shelter, provide homes for those who need homes.

CLAUDE E. HILL.

SAD CONDITION OF INDIA'S CHILD LIFE.

The child-heart beats the same in every land, and I have found that the little ones of India have the same thoughts and feelings as do those of our own America. But in India child-life is indeed pitiable. The children there know little, if anything, of that free, happy childhood time which God intended them to have, and in which they should be gaining strength, both in body and mind to better fit them for the experience of after years.

ANNIE AGNES LACKEY.

A WORK WELL BEGUN.

In caring for the orphan and helpless, penniless old age or the unfortunate sick, homes and hospitals are needed where they can be taken and ministered unto in the name of the blessed Master. To meet just this need which was felt by a large number, the National Benevolent Association was called into being, and under her efficient leadership we can minister to those in greatest need who otherwise must needs suffer.

GEO. B. TOWNSEND.

BOYS OF PORTO RICO.

Porto Rico needs a regeneration of her moral life. Much can be done and must be done with the older people, but our main progress no doubt must come through our work with the children. In them can be instilled a trust in fellow man and in God. They can be taught to be sincere, to keep a clean heart as well as a clean exterior. They can be taught thoroughness and be made to know that though other men and even one's self may be cheated God may not be. In the children can be developed stability of character which will not permit religious teachings to be easily put aside.

W. A. DOBSON.

A NEW COMMANDMENT.

"A new commandment give I unto you that ye love one another." Paul gave the same instruction: "Touching the ministering to the saints, it is superfluous for me to write unto you." "Concerning the collection for the saints, upon the first day of the week, let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him."

This benevolent organization comes to us with a great privilege with its children's and old people's homes, its hospitals and orphanages, its Easter-day and life-line service. It would arouse our people everywhere to the call of Christian benevolence. Shall we answer? Shall we respond to the claims of the needy?

F. D. POWER.

WIN THE CHILDREN OF FOREIGN LANDS FOR CHRIST.

More and more convinced are we of the importance of striving to win the children, heathen and Mahommedan, as we seek to win the men and women, and the assurances we have had that the message we have to give touches their hearts strengthens still more this conviction.

In our school work, this past year we have heard private confession from a Mohommedan boy that he had asked Jesus to forgive his sin. A Mahommedon will not acknowledge that Christ has any divine power, and this boy knows what his people teach.

E. H. GORDON.

A RETURN TO FIRST PRINCIPLES.

It is an evidence that we are going from the first principles unto perfection that a National Benevolent Association has sprung up in our midst—the picture of our own Christ helping the needy to-day. And this picture has crept into many tender hearts as evidenced in many splendid offerings already made. Further, it means new lives of tenderness and helpfulness. For, after all, one's life is only enriched and widened and glorified as it knows and enters into the world's needs in a relieving ministry.

O. H. PHILLIPS.

AN APPEAL FROM MAHOBA GIRLS.

You people have given many presents to India. You have said many prayers for us, and also have done many works for us. But O, brothers and sisters, gifts and prayers are necessary. In every section of our country there is the darkness of death. In every little division, from the smallest section to the great country of Madras, all of our people are bowing their heads to idols, and are stretching out their hands to empty loneliness. In the United Provinces there are many places of pilgrimage. Many Hindoo people come into this province to bathe in the river Ganges, and 47,192,000 live here. If all these find the true way, many other sent ones will be necessary.

GIRLS IN MAHOBA.

IT HAS A RIGHT TO BE FIRST.

The Benevolent Association has a rightful primacy. It is the Sinai of the older law. It is the Transfiguration Mount of the newer love. It is the dawn-break of the millenial day. It is the prophecy and pledge of heaven. It is as high as a dream. It is as wide as human sorrow. It is as deep as the love of God. And by your love for our plea, which is Christ's plea, which is the plea of the apostles, of saints, of martyrs, of the church of the first-born of the ages; by your love for its unity, the wholeness of its restoration, its successes, its heart culture; by the prayer of the aged and the cry of the orphan, I plead for your generous support of this ministry of tenderness and love.

With The Workers

Plans have been adopted for a new building at Diagonal, Ia.

G. L. Bohanon changes his address from Spencer to Long Grove, Ia.

Edward Clutter is in a meeting at Odell, Neb., where L. C. Armstrong is pastor.

E. H. Williamson and wife are to be at Newburg, Mo., in April, and at Sparta in May.

Albert Marton, of Morrowville, has been called to the Stamford church, Nebraska.

Z. T. Sweeney dedicated the Crawford Road Christian church, Cleveland, O., last Sunday.

O. J. Marks is singing in a meeting with J. T. Ferguson at Park church, Kansas City.

S. M. Perkins' address is now 514 East Fifteenth street, Davenport, instead of Albia.

The Texas Christian convention and encampment is to be held at Thorp Spring, June 9-17.

Brother Jno. Darsie, of Hiram, Ohio, is supplying the pulpit at Fifty-sixth Street church for a time.

Evangelist E. B. Barnes has been secured by the church in Columbia, N. C., for a meeting in May.

Z. O. Doward is accomplishing excellent results in his labors with the East Side church, Lincoln, Neb.

C. M. Johnson, of Mt. Ayr, has been called to the work at Cincinnati, Ia., and will begin next Sunday.

A. R. Adams, of Milestone, Sask., Canada, is to visit his old home in the southern states this summer.

Homer L. Lewis has closed his work at Sioux Falls, S. D., and changes his address to Haynes, same state.

The present membership of the East Side church, Denver, is 166. Jesse B. Haston is doing good work there.

The young people are a strong force in the church at Meyersdale, Pa. The work is moving along nicely there.

A. C. Stewart reports a minister of the Dunkard church, with his wife, joining our congregation at Green, Ia.

H. O. Breeden and Howard Saxton are to hold a meeting for the church at Mineral Wells, Texas, in November.

S. W. Jackson and wife, who have for two years been evangelizing, have been in a good meeting at Hood River, Ore.

Dr. Royal J. Dye has been appointed Representative in the Congo Free State, of the World's Sunday School Association.

The Sunday school of the Capitol Hill church, Des Moines, Ia., has pushed its attendance past the 500 mark.

Evangelist E. R. Clarkson, assisted by F. H. Cappa and wife, will lead the church in Rome, Ga., in a meeting this month.

The Goldfield (Iowa) church, where R. C. Moore is the minister, will spend about $1,500 on church repairs this summer.

The church in Scottdale, Pa., gave a farewell reception recently for M. C. Frick and wife, who have removed to Mill Hall, Pa.

Russell F. Thrapp, pastor in Jacksonville, Ill., has been speaking in Lincoln and towns near, in the interest of the local option campaign.

A reception was tendered W. C. Bower and family, of Tonawanda, N. Y., by his congregation recently. He is a much loved minister.

In three months the Bible school at Wellsville, O., has increased to 360 in attendance. The class of the minister, Homer Sala, has grown to 120.

The church at Denver, Ill., B. H. Cleaver, minister, is rejoicing over the assignment to it by the Foreign Board of Bolengi, Africa, under the station plan.

Charles Lemuel Dean is able to report forty-one additions at Loveland, Col., during his pastorate there from November 1, 1907, till the first of March of this year.

The Sunday schools of the Central church, Des Moines, Ia., and Independence Boulevard church, Kansas City, Mo., have decided to enter once more into a friendly contest.

Cleveland Kleihauer, pastor of the church at David City, Neb., is a Cotner University graduate. That he is appreciated is seen in the increasing of his salary by his congregation.

J. A. Cornelius is to close his work at Dodge City, Kan., in the near future. O. Kennedy, the minister at Bucklin, commends him very highly to any church desiring a pastor.

G. D. Edwards, of Missouri Bible College, Columbia, Mo., recently addressed the students of Christian University, Canton, Mo., telling of his former work in the Hawaiian Islands.

Austin Hunter, of Indianapolis, has recently addressed the mens' meetings at North Indianapolis, Mooresville and Greenwood, Ind., He is now beginning his seventh year as pastor of the North Park church.

The West End church, Atlanta, Ga., after nearly two years of persistent effort, has secured Herbert Yewell for a tabernacle meeting in June. The church will make thorough preparation and do all it can to aid Bro. Yewell in a great victory.

W. H. Cannon, minister in Lincoln, Ill., has accepted a call to Pittsfield, Ill., and will begin his new pastorate about May 1. During Bro. Cannon's ministry in Lincoln the Christian church has greatly prospered in its membership, a handsome new and modern church building has been erected, and every department of the church has shown increased life and activity.

J. M. Rudy has removed from Sedalia, Mo., to Greencastle, Ind. His departure from Sedalia was the occasion of a farewell reception at the church, at which the departing pastor was presented with a purse containing $142.50. A letter of commendation addressed to Mr. Rudy's new charge was read and adopted by the church. His new field is one of the most important in Indiana, and we wish him the prosperous ministry merited by vigorous and consecrated service.

The new Euclid avenue church building, Cleveland, O., costing $114,000, will be dedicated April 12. President Bates, of Hiram College, will preach the sermon. The entire cost of this building has been more than provided, so there will be no unseemly money getting on Dedication Day. The church and the pastor, J. H. Goldner, expect to make it a day of real spiritual uplift.

THEY GROW.

Good Humor and Cheerfulness from Right Food.

Cheerfulness is like sunlight. It dispels the clouds from the mind as sunlight chases away the shadows of night.

The good humored man can pick up and carry off a load that the man with a grouch wouldn't attempt to lift.

Anything that interferes with good health is apt to keep cheerfulness and good humor in the background. A Washington lady found that letting coffee alone made things bright for her. She writes:

"Four years ago I was practically given up by my doctor and was not expected to live long. My nervous system was in a bad condition.

"But I was young and did not want to die, so I began to look about for the cause of my chronic trouble. I used to have nervous spells which would exhaust me, and after each spell it would take me days before I could sit up in a chair.

"I became convinced my trouble was caused by coffee. I decided to stop it and bought some Postum.

"The first cup, which I made according to directions, had a soothing effect on my nerves, and I liked the taste. For a time I nearly lived on Postum and ate little food besides. I am to-day a healthy woman.

"My family and relatives wonder if I am the same person I was four years ago, when I could do no work on account of nervousness. Now I am doing my own housework, take care of two babies, one twenty, the other two months old. I am so busy that I hardly get time to write a letter, yet I do it all with the cheerfulness and good humor that comes from enjoying good health.

"I tell my friends it is to Postum I owe my life to-day."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

R. F. Whiston and J. W. Hilton begin a meeting with the church at Ashland, Neb., April 3. The regular services under Professor Hilton's ministry have drawn such large audiences that it was necessary to find a larger auditorium, and for several Sundays the evening services have been held in the Baptist church.

Y. M. C. A. JUBILEE AT HAND.

With the approach of the semi-centennial of the Chicago Y. M. C. A., interest in the numerous events which are scheduled for the days and evenings between April 11 and 28 has grown more intense. The daily press has followed closely the development of plans by the committee of 100 business men which has the matter in charge.

Over 200 meetings are to be held, and some fifty prominent speakers will make addresses, including Commissioner Henry B. F. Macfarland, Washington, D. C.; James G. Cannon, Vice-President of the Fourth National Bank of New York; Judge Selden P. Spencer, St. Louis; President Woodrow Wilson, of Princeton University; Bishop William F. McDowell and Bishop Charles P. Anderson, of Chicago; John R. Mott, of New York, President of the World's Student Federation, Y. M. C. A.; and Richard C. Morse, veteran General Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. International Committee. The list also includes a large number of specialists in Christian work for men in connection with the railroads, colleges, industrial establishments and foreign population. Four public receptions will be held in the buildings April 23, and banquets will be given to the members and their friends on the following night. One thousand men and boys trained in the gymnasium of the various departments will participate in a remarkable exhibition of physical work to be held in the First Regiment Armory on Saturday, April 25.

Sunday, the 26th, practically all the Protestant churches will have a share in the observance, special anniversary sermons being preached in many cases. During the afternoon there will be special meetings in the Association Buildings, and mass meetings will be held in the evening at a number of the larger churches.

One of the most notable features will be a citizens' banquet at the Congress Hotel on April 27. This will bring together a large number of the representative men of Chicago, so many of whom are interested in the activities of the association. On the concluding day, April 28, the attention will especially be directed to one of the most effective departments of the association, namely the students' work, by a dinner to begin at the University of Chicago Commons, under the auspices of the various associations conected with the institution.

The fact that a large part of the $1,000,000 fund, if it is secured, will be used for men's dormitories, directs attention to an interesting phase of the association work in which the dormitory has been specially helpful—that which has its relation to the men of the railroads. Chicago is the greatest railroad center in the world, and thousands of these employes have benefited by these institutions. The railroad companies themselves have long realized the value of this provision, and have not only given the association its sympathetic support, but have contributed generously toward the expense of maintenance. Six different buildings are fully occupied as railroad club houses, and are in active operation every minute of every day, and to these buildings, whch are located near the railroad yards, the workers can go at once from their employment, secure a satisfactory meal at a reasonable price, enjoy a bath and comfortable bed, and put in their leisure hours playing harmless games or social conversation. Two of these buildings are at the Pennsylvania railroad terminals, one at Dearborn station and one each upon the Northwestern, Grand Trunk and Chicago & Eastern Illinois lines. That at Dearborn station is the largest, with a membership during the past year of 392.

FOREIGN MISSIONS.

During the month of March the total receipts of the Foreign Society amounted to $46,263.73. During the same month 1,780 churches sent offerings amounting to $39,780.93, a gain of $647.51 over the corresponding month last year. It is hoped the tardy churches will be prompt in sending their offerings in April.

Last week the Foreign Society received a gift of $750 on the annuity plan from a friend in Florida, and also a gift of $100 from a friend in Kansas. Other friends are requested to remember the Foreign Society when they desire to place money on the annuity plan.

In the future the First Church at Findlay, Ohio, will support D. O. Cunningham at Harda, India, through the Foreign Society. It will be remembered that Findlay, Ohio, was formerly the home of Brother Cunningham. Here he is well known and greatly beloved.

The church at Mansfield, Ohio, M. G. Buckner, minister, will, in the future, support J. C. Archer at Jubbulpore, India. This is a bold step for the church at Mansfield. J. C. Archer is a graduate of Hiram College, and has done efficient service as a minister of a local church in Ohio. He goes to his field of labor September next.

The church at Pittsburg, Kan., has adopted Miss Mamie Longan as their living-link missionary in the Foreign Society. She completes her course of studies at Drake University at the close of this session. Her home is near St. Joseph, Mo. She is a grand-daughter of the late G. W. Longan, well known to our brotherhood in general and to the Missouri churches in particular.

PIMPLES WILL LEAVE YOU.

In Five Days You Can Get Rid of All Skin Eruptions by the New Calcium Sulphide Wafers.

TRIAL PACKAGE TO PROVE IT SENT FREE.

If you are one of the unfortunates who can't get away from your pimples, and you have tried almost everything under heaven to get rid of them, take a few of Stuart's Calcium Wafers every day. Do that steadily for a few days, and in less than a week look at yourself in the mirror.

You will then say that Stuart's Calcium Wafers are a wonder in getting rid of all eruptions.

These wonderful little workers contain the most effective blood purifier ever discovered, calcium sulphide.

No matter what your trouble is, whether pimples, blotches, blackheads, rash, tetter, eczema, or scabby crusts, you can solemnly depend upon Stuart's Calcium Wafers as never failing.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers have cured boils in three days and the worst cases of skin diseases in a week. Every particle of impurity is driven out of your system completely, never to return, and it is done without deranging your system in the slightest.

Most treatments for the blood and for skin eruptions are miserably slow in their results, and besides, many of them are poisonous. Stuart's Calcium Wafers contain no poison, or drug of any kind; they are absolutely harmless, and yet do work which cannot fail to surprise you.

Don't go around with a humiliating, disgusting mass of pimples and blackheads on your face. A face covered over with these disgusting things makes people turn away from you, breeds failure in your life work. Stop it. Read what an Iowa man said when he woke up one morning and found he had a new face:

"By George, I never saw anything like it. There I've been for three years trying to get rid of pimples and blackheads, and I guess I used everything under the sun. I used your Calcium Wafers for just seven days. This morning every blessed pimple is gone and I can't find a blackhead. I could write you a volume of thanks. I am so grateful to you."

Just send us your name and address in full, to-day, and we will send you a trial package of Stuart's Calcium Wafers, free to test. After you have tried the sample and been convinced that all we say is true, you will go to your nearest druggist and get a 50c box and be cured of your facial trouble. They are in tablet form, and no trouble whatever to take. You go about your work as usual, and there you are,—cured and happy.

Send us your name and address to-day, and we will at once send you by mail a sample package free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 175 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Ault—Our union meeting with the Christian, Congregational and Baptist churches of Ault, Colo. (Ault is a town of 800 population, sixty miles north of Denver) closed last Monday evening with 106 additions to church and Sunday school, 78 to the church and 28 to the school. Of this number 55 were confessions and 23 were by statement. More than half of those for both church and school came to our people notwithstanding the fact that the Christian church was the weakest one in the city. A spirit of love and good fellowship prevailed throughout the entire meeting, and I had a splendid opportunity of presenting the "Bible Plan of Salvation" to the people. This I did in the spirit of love, and it was received in the same spirit by the pastors and their people. I failed in no instance to "declare the whole council of God," and it was heartily received by the people. I emphasized faith, repentance, confession and baptism as conditions of pardon and love and good works as Christian duty and "all the people said amen." In this meeting I preached twenty-three sermons, three in the Christian church, five in the Congregational church, eight in the Baptist church and seven in the opera house. But for the fact that our singer, Ed. McKinney, failed to come to our assistance, thus throwing us back on home talent, we might have had greater results. Also, the fact that an epidemic broke out the first week of our meeting almost ruined our "Sunbeam" work with the children. Yet notwithstanding these hindrances the pastors and people are praising God for the victory won for Christ.

Churches in need of meetings will write me at Carthage, Mo. I make terms to meet the financial conditions of churches for which I work, but do not care to undertake meetings without a singing evangelist to assist me. I shall be pleased to recommend chorus leaders to churches in need of them.

A NAME CHANGED.

By a recent Act of the Legislature of Kentucky the name of Kentucky University was changed back to Transylvania University. This was done in accordance with a resolution of the Board of Curators, and meets with the hearty approval of faculty, student-body, alumni, and friends wherever the matter has become known.

The history of the institution under the name of Kentucky University has been a worthy one, and at no time has the University been in a more prosperous condition than now. There are several reasons which thoroughly justify the change of name. There is another institution located at Lexington bearing a similar name, and consequently considerable confusion is created in the minds of many; and because our institution is in no sense a state institution, the name Kentucky University is misleading. The name was originally given as an emergency name by Capt. Philip B. Thompson, when the charter of Bacon College was amended by the State Legislature. When Kentucky University was removed from Harrodsburg to Lexington, in 1865, and consolidated with Transylvania University, the latter had for several years been practically suspended; consequently, the name of the younger and more vigorous institution was assumed without question.

In the union of the two institutions the property of Transylvania University, consisting of grounds, buildings, endowment and library was transferred to Kentucky University with some restrictions. In connection with the recent change of the name these restrictions have been removed.

Transylvania University is an honorable name. Her history is one which dates back to the very beginning of educational endeavor in the west. Opening as a seminary as early as 1780, it lays claim to being the oldest institution of higher learning west of the Alleghany Mountains. In returning to this old name the University has much to gain. It gives us a direct line of educational history for one hundred and twenty-nine years. It brings us into close touch with some of the most illustrious names in American history, as teachers, alumni and benefactors, while nothing that was of a peculiar benefit to the institution under the name Kentucky University has been lost.

Under existing conditions the future of the university is most encouraging. Within the past few years a systematic and persistent undertaking to increase the endowment fund to meet the growing demands of the institution has been made, and is meeting with encouraging results. A new fifty thousand dollar Science building is nearing completion. When this is equipped and ready for occupancy this coming fall, Transylvania University will have one of the best Science buildings to be found in the South or West. With three splendid dormitories and the fourth one under contemplation of erection in the near future, which will be erected on the most modern plans, we are in a position to accommodate a large number of students.

During the past six years the standard of entrance requirements has been gradually raised until the University ranks with the leading institutions of the country in the educational qualifications of the students received and the character of the work done for graduation.

New departments are being added as rapidly as our endowment will permit. A department of Sociology and Economics was created at the beginning of the fall semester of 1907, with G. A. Hubbell, Ph. D., of Columbia University, in charge. He has proven himself a most valuable acquisition to the teaching force of the University. He is thoroughly competent. Besides his doctor's degree, he has further fitted himself by extensive travel and study abroad.

The year now drawing to a close may safely be said to be one of the very best in the history of the institution. Thomas B. McCartney, Ph. D., of the University of Virginia, is Acting-President. His position has been a most difficult one, but in an unusual degree he has met the exacting demands of the office. His gentlemanly and scholarly bearing has endeared him to faculty, student-body, and all others with whom he has come in contact. The year has been one of peace and harmony, hard work and progress.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Reports indicate that our churches made the March offering "unanimous." The First church and Long Beach will of course continue in the "Living Link" line. Magnolia Avenue, Covina and San Diego join this noble company. Our smaller churches are doing even better proportionately. For instance, the church at Burbank, E. D. Chapin minister, with forty-seven members, gives $70 to foreign missions. Our next big enterprise is to line up as unanimously and enthusiastically for Home Missions in May.

Our churches are especially eager for a splendid offering the first Sunday in May. It is the day for the combined interests of State and National Home Missions to be presented to our churches. "An offering from every member" is the slogan adopted for the campaign, and every pastor is expected to lead his church to a position worthy both of his people and the great interests involved. The earnest voice of George L. Snively is being heard among the churches in behalf of this great cause.

Volney Johnson, of Texas, has entered upon his work as pastor of the new University Heights church at San Diego.

C. C. S. Rush has resigned his work at Imperial City and gone to Missouri, where he has entered Canton University for ministerial studies. Harvey Hazel succeeds him at Imperial.

The church at Holtville has secured its loan from church extension, and is building a commodious house of worship. C. J. Upton is pastor, and in his work is ably assisted by H. B. Hollingsworth.

R. P. Shepherd, well known preacher and educator, and Harold Bell Wright, popular writer and pastor, are this year engaged in a joint enterprise of planting and developing a great vineyard in Imperial Valley. Neither can long hide his light under a bushel. The one has already started "A school of Evangelists," having some ten boys under his tutelage besides planting and nourishing a new church in the new county seat town of El Centro, and doubtless the other will soon have published some story of the desert that will rival in popularity "The Shepherd of the Hills."

J. Cronenberger has resigned at Santa Barbara. His year with this splendid church has been greatly blessed, over 100 added to the church and the size and efficiency of the congregation, Bible school and Young People's Department greatly increased.

W. T. Adams is crowning an eighteen months' faithful ministry at Corona by the building of a new home of worship. The dedication will occur in April, with C. C. Chapman, Past-Master of Dedication, in charge.

We are pleased to hear the announcement that H. H. Guy, of Japan, has accepted the superintendency of the work among the Japanese to be inaugurated in Los Angeles under the auspices of the Christian Women's Board of Missions. Such a man at the head assures the success of this great venture of faith.

Two great meetings are listed for April, one at Fullerton with James Small as evangelist; the other at First church, in which John L. Brandt will do the preaching.

John T. Stivers has been doing splendid service as an evangelist among our churches this year. Boyle Heights, East Side, Los Angeles, Imperial City and Santa Paula all bear testimony of the good results of his work. His address is 1343 W. Twenty-second street.

We are pleased to welcome back to Southern California that eminently successful preacher of the gospel, Sumner T. Martin. He is with the Hollywood church, where doubtless he will build up a great work.

The annual convention at Long Beach is set for August 5 to 16. Paste this date in your hat and plan to be there. Charles S. Medbury, of Des Moines, Ia., pastor of the University Place church, the largest among the Disciples, has been engaged as chief speaker. Recent advices from the East indicate the presence of that great hero of the cross from Bolengi, Africa, Dr. Royal J. Dye, and wife; also that the eloquent Geo. H. Combs, of Kansas City, will be present to deliver one or two addresses. Perhaps it is too great a saying to meet with ready credence, but present indications warrant the prophecy that Southern California's greatest convention is booked for next August. Come and help to make it such.

BETHANY COLLEGE.

The Brooke County Sunday School Association will hold its convention in the Wellsburg Christian church on the 16th and 17th of April. Prof. W. B. Taylor, who is president of the ossociation, and Prof. Philip Johnson are Bethany's representatives on the program for addresses. Herbert Smith, ministerial student, will conduct the song services.

President Crambl t is in attendance at the Congress of Disciples, held at Bloomington, Ill., this week.

Owing to the fact that commencement will be held one week earlier than usual this year, no vacation was allowed between the closing of the winter and opening of the spring terms.

Prof. I. F. Neff, of the mathematics department, reports a noticeable increase in the number of civil engineer students this year, and these will make practical application of their knowledge this term outside the college halls, where Bethany, owing to her exceptional location, offers excellent advantages.

Prof. W. B. Taylor was agreeably surprised on last Saturday evening by the male members of the faculty, who composed a birthday party, calling at his home for awhile. The occasion was an enjoyable one.

O. F. LYTLE.

If death be a transition to another place, and if it be true, as has been said, that all who have died are there—what, O judges, could be a greater good than this? For, if a man, being set free from those who call themselves judges here, is to find, on arriving in Hades, these true judges who are said to administer judgment in the unseen world..... will his transition thither be for the worse? What would not any of you give to converse with Orpheus and Musacus and Hesiod and Homer? I would gladly die many times if this be true. . . . To dwell and converse with them and to question them would indeed be happiness unspeakable!—From Socrates Apologia as reported by Plato.

As an illustration of woman's wit Mr. Depew, who is still Senator from New York, cites the following:

A man once found that his wife had bought a few puffs of false hair. This displeased him. So one day he hid in the hall outside of her room, and, just as the lady was adjusting the false puffs, he darted in upon her.

"Mary," he said reproachfully, "why do you put the hair of another woman upon your head?"

"John," retorted Mary, with a glance at her husband's shoes, "why do you put the skin of another calf upon your feet?"

"Boohoo! Boohoo!" wailed little Johnny.

"Why, what's the matter, dear?" his mother asked comfortingly.

"Boohoo—er—p-picture fell on papa's toes."

"Well. dear, that's too bad, but you mustn't cry about it, you know."

"I d-d-didn't. I l-laughed. Boohoo! Boohoo!"

BUTTERMILK.

"Which is the cow that gives the buttermilk?" innocently asked the young lady from the city, who was inspecting the herd with a critical eye.

"Don't make yourself ridiculous," said the young lady who had been in the country before and knew a thing or two. "GOATS give buttermilk."—Springfield Journal.

The baby was slow about talking, and his aunt was deploring that fact. Four-year-old Elizabeth listened anxiously.

"Oh, mother," she ventured at length, "do you think he'll grow up English? We couldn't any of us understand him if he turned out to be French!"

A JUSTIFIABLE DESIRE.

Judge Dowling—"Have you anything to say against the verdict?"

Prisoner (who has received life-sentence)—"Only that if I don't live to serve it out I wish you would put my attorney in to finish it."—Judge.

THE WAY OF IT.

"Pa, tell me how you first met ma," requested Gunson, Jr.

"I didn't meet her, son," replied Gunson, Sr. "She overtook me."—March Lippincott's.

Important Books

We are the publishers of some of the best known works pertaining to the Disciples' Plea for a united church. These important books — important in more ways than one—should be read and owned by every member of the household of faith.

The Plea of the Disciples of Christ, by W. T. Moore. Small 16mo., cloth, 140 pages, net, postpaid, thirty-five cents, won immediate success.

George Hamilton Combs, pastor of the Independence Boulevard Christian Church, Kansas City, Mo., one of the great churches of the brotherhood, writes.

"I cannot thank Dr. W. T. Moore enough for having written his little book on "Our Plea." It is more than a statement; it is a philosophy. Irenic, catholic, steel-tone, it is just the handbook I shall like to put into the hands of the thinking man on the outside. In all of his useful and honored life Mr. Moore has rendered no greater service to a great cause."

Historical Documents Advocating Christian Union, collated and edited by Charles A. Young. 12mo, cloth, 364 pages, illustrated, postpaid $1.00, is an important contribution to contemporary religious literature. It presents the living principles of the church in convenient form.

Z. T. Sweeney, Columbus, Indiana, a preacher of national reputation, writes:

"I congratulate you on the happy thought of collecting and editing these documents. They ought to be in the home of every Disciple of Christ in the Land, and I believe they should have a large and increasing sale in years to come."

Basic Truths of the Christian Faith, by Herbert L. Willett, author of The Ruling Quality, Teaching of the Books, Prophets of Israel, etc., etc. Post 8vo., cloth, 127 pages. Front cover stamped in gold, gilt top, illustrated, 75 cents, paper 25 cents.

A powerful and masterful presentation of the great truths for the attainment of the life of the spirit. Written in a charming and scholarly style. It holds the reader's fascinated attention so closely that it is a disappointment if the book has to be laid aside before it is finished.

J. E. Chase writes:

"It is the voice of a soul in touch with the Divine life, and breathes throughout its pages the high ideals and noblest conception of truer life, possible only to him who has tarried prayerfully, studiously at the feet of the world's greatest teacher."

Our Plea for Union and the Present Crisis, by Herbert L. Willett, author of the Life and Teachings of Jesus, etc., etc. 12mo., cloth, 140 pages, gold stamped, postpaid 50 cents.

Written in the belief that the Disciples of Christ are passing through an important, and in many respects, transitional period.

The author says:

"It is with the hope that * * * present forces and opportunities may be wisely estimated by us; that doors now open may be entered; that hopes only partially realized may come to fruition that these chapters are given their present form."

Early Relations and Separation of Baptists and Disciples, by Errett Gates. 8vo. cloth, gold side and back stamp, $1.00. A limited number in paper binding will be mailed postpaid for 25 cents until stock is sold out.

We owe a debt of gratitude to the writer of this book, and could only wish that it might be read not only by our people all over the land, but scattered among the Baptists. It is a most meritorious and splendid contribution to our literature.—THE CHRISTIAN WORKER, PITTSBURG, Pa.

The dominant personality of Alexander Campbell is so brought out as to give to what might be regarded as the dry details of ecclesiastical history and controversy almost the interest of a story. A valuable contribution to the history of the American churches.—THE CONGREGATIONALIST, BOSTON, Mass.

120 BIBLE PICTURES BY J. JAMES TISSOT

Reproduced in all their Gorgeous Colors

SEND $1.00 TO-DAY

and we will send by return mail a handsome portfolio (size 5x6) containing 120 pictures in full colors

Nothing approaching this work has ever been attempted before. In a series of splendid pictures the great and impressive scenes in the Bible story are depicted, true in color, costume, landscape, and all details to the life, the country and the time. ¶ To make the men and women of the Bible actual, living characters to their pupils is one of the first duties of the Sunday-School teachers, and no better help can they find for this than in the Tissot pictures. ¶ The whole world acknowledges that J. James Tissot was the greatest artist that ever lived, so far as Biblical subjects are concerned.

Only the unparalled success in the higher-priced editions makes possible this phenomenally low offer now. ¶ These pictures have received the unqualified endorsement of the leading clergymen and Sunday-School teachers throughout the United States. ¶ Nothing could be more helpful, and interesting, and delightful, when one is reading the Bible, than such a graphic interpretation of sacred stories. ¶ In no other way can the Bible stories be made so real and actual to children. Should be in every home.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

COMPENSATION.

The graves grow thicker, and life's ways more bare,
As years on year go by:
Nay, thou hast more green gardens in thy care,
And more stars in thy sky!

Behind, hopes turned to grief, and joys to memories,
Are fading out of sight;
Before, pains changed to peace, and dreams to certainties,
Are glowing in God's light.

Hither come backslidings, defeats, distresses,
Vexing this mortal strife;
Thither go progress, victories, successes,
Crowning immortal life.

Few jubilees, few gladsome, festive hours,
Form landmarks for my way;
But heaven and earth, and saints and friends and flowers,
Are keeping Easter Day!

EDITORIAL

THE AUSTIN CHURCH.

In another column we print a statement from George A. Campbell, pastor of the church in Austin, a suburb of Chicago. A portion of the congregation, few in number as compared with the total strength of the church, became dissatisfied with Mr. Campbell's preaching, largely because he failed to emphasize certain matters which they deemed essential. Among these, as we understand, were a personal devil and the endless punishment of the wicked. At the same time the charges against Mr. Campbell were so framed as to insinuate rather than state that he did not believe in the divinity of Christ and that he received unimmersed people into the membership of the church. The first of these charges would carry small weight with any one who had the least acquaintance with Mr. Campbell and his message. Readers of the CHRISTIAN CENTURY, in which his writings have appeared for years, will be able to judge of that matter. As to the second, which has received far more attention in the public press of the Disciples, we are glad to have Mr. Campbell's explicit statement to the effect that the church has maintained, and now maintains, the practice of receiving only the immersed into its membership. Various plans have been proposed and are now in use among some of our own churches, and to a still larger degree among the Baptists, for the recognition of members of non-immersion bodies as co-operating members, associate members, or members of the congregation as distinct from the church. None of these plans to secure deeper interest on the part of these sympathetic and more or less related people involves the integrity of an immersed church membership. But Mr. Campbell has not even used this mild device, and has adhered to the practice of the great body of our churches in this regard. While we regret that a separation of this kind should take place in any of the churches, we have no doubt that those who remain in the Austin church will have opportunity for a freer and more vigorous testimony in that rapidly growing suburb, and that the new group, which has gone to Oak Park, a little further from the city, will find ample room for a church in which those fundamental truths of the faith which it shares with the Austin church and all others in the brotherhood may be given full and constructive expression.

EASTER AND THE MINISTRY OF BENVOLENCE.

It is peculiarly fitting that the Easter season with its emphasis upon the new life in Christ should be the time chosen for the offering, especially in the Sunday schools, for the work of the Benevolent Association. It was nothing less than a resurrection for the world to pass out of its older period of self-interest and neglect of the poor and unfortunate to the new conception of brotherhood and good will which Jesus brought into being. Nothing was more wonderful to the thought of the Roman world than the care which Christians took not only of their own poor and distressed people, but of all who had fallen into misfortune.

It has always been the distinguishing mark of our faith that it inculcated the virtues of benevolence and care of the needy. In some parts of the church these qualities have been more evident than in others. It is to the credit of the Roman Catholic church that it has laid great emphasis upon works of charity. No doubt its benevolences have done much to convince doubters of its divine mission in the world. No force that so constantly supplies help to those in distress can be wholly wrong. And so men have praised that church for its ministry of help and healing.

Protestantism has been all too slow to learn this lesson. But it is making noble efforts today to remedy the deficiency. Few are the denominations that would feel that they were doing a full work if they omitted the care of the homeless, the orphan and the aged. The Disciples of Christ have come to a sense of their own duty in this kindly service, but not a moment too soon. The helpful agencies under the direction of the National Benevolent Association are a source of pride to all our churches. The good that is being done cannot be reckoned in figures of a ledger.

It is appropriate, therefore, that the Easter festival, which brings so vividly to mind the new and higher life that came through the resurrection of the Lord should be utilized to promote in the world that ideal of good will which is like a new life from the dead. The offering for the Association ought to be general and generous.

NOTES.

The campaign in behalf of the overthrow of the liquor traffic in this state was fought with notable results at the polls last week. The friends of righteousness have every reason to be greatly encouraged at the outcome.

The list of Illinois cities which voted out the saloon includes Decatur, Galesburg, Rockford, Paris, Urbana, Champaign, Pontiac, Mount Sterling, Arcola, Shelbyville, Hillsboro, Litchfield, Vandalia, Mount Carmel, Taylorville, Dixon, Clinton, Fairbury, DeKalb, Sycamore, Mattoon, Harvard, Carmi and Jerseyville. On the other hand, there are some severe disappointments, perhaps the most notable of which was Bloomington, in which the saloons won by a small majority. The temperance people have been very confident of winning, but it is recognized on all hands that the victories thus far gained are only the beginnings of the total overthrow of the saloons. It now remains to capture the large cities, including Chicago. The difficulty of the task will only spur the friends of law and order to renewed efforts.

One of the interesting incidents of the campaign waged by the saloon for the preservation of its business was the employment of every man of influence it could secure to champion its side of the question. If there was a minister of any creed or denomination who was willing to pose, not so much as an advocate of the saloon, but, as they phrased it, a "champion of personal liberty," he could secure plenty of work at his own terms. Men who were alleged ministers were imported from other states for this purpose, and one Chicago man who has a certain local reputation as a lecturer on ethical culture, took the platform for the saloonkeepers' association. This is the same man who had long ago organized a debate on the question, "Was Jesus Christ a real person?" It was evident that the saloon needed oratory and the preacher-lecturer needed advertising.

An interesting conference was held at Ann Arbor, Mich., a week ago upon the subject of church and guild workers in state universities. Representative men from different institutions and parts of the country discussed the most effective means of influencing students in state institutions in behalf of religious life in general and the ministry in in particular. Among other topics discussed was the general plan of affiliated colleges and Bible chairs in relation to the state university The attendance was excellent, and the results are spoken of with satisfaction by those who attended.

Much interest has been excited of late by the discovery of the remains of a Jewish temple at Assouan, in Upper Egypt. From papyrus documents relating to it it has been ascertained that it was a temple to Jahu (Jehovah) inside the fortress in Elephantine on the island in the Nile opposite Assouan. The temple was erected perhaps about the period of Ezra and Nehemiah, in the fifth century B. C. It may have been constructed as early as the times of the exile. This proves obviously that there was a Jewish colony in Upper Egypt at this period. These may have been refugees from the Northern Kingdom driven out at the time of the destruction of Samaria, or they may have been fragments of that refugee population which left Judah after the destruction of Jerusalem, carrying with them the unhappy Jeremiah. In any event, the bearing of this new temple and its cult upon the general questions of Old Testament history and criticism is very important. It seems to go far toward the vindication of those readings of Hebrew history which have become familiar under the illumination of historical criticism during the past ten years.

The Easter Offering in the Churches

CHRISTIANITY APPLIED.

I once went with a solicitor for the National Benevolent Association to a brother, worth his thousands, and asked for a liberal contribution. After describing the work in a way that should touch the heart of most any man and asking for the donation, the response came like a flash, "That doesn't appeal to me at all."

This blunt refusal started in my mind a train of inquiries: "Why does benevolent work appeal to some and not to others?" "What prompted the organization of this institution and what perpetuates its work?" "What is the motive power behind it all that makes it so successful?" I will answer the inquiries with an illustration.

In the window of a store in his town there is a curious little device. It is a glass globe setting on a pedestal. On the inside there is a perpendicular shaft supported at the top and bottom by free pivots. From the center of the shaft four arms project horizontally, with paddle-shaped fans. The curious part is that the shaft with its four fans keeps revolving in one certain direction without any visible motive power. Another curious thing is that it will revolve only in the light. When the light is dim it moves very slowly; when exceedingly bright it moves very rapidly; when it is dark the wheel is motionless.

This may be a familiar phenomenon to some, but not all; yet it is explained by a simple law of physical science that we all learned in school. On close examination one can see that the fans are black on one side and white on the other. Black absorbs the sunlight, white does not. This globe, being a vacuum and the resisting power of the air removed, the black absorbs the light on one side while on the other none is absorbed, consequently the fan is driven around and around. The motive power is the light which it absorbs.

The application is equally simple. Jesus Christ is the "light of the world." When men and women wholly surrender themselves to him they absorb that "light" which becomes a motor power to drive us on in Christian activity.

That activity may be expended in various ways, but not the least important is this ministry of the helping hand. It is Christianity applied. I would unhesitatingly say that if any man has absorbed the "light of the world" this work will appeal to him, and his help will be limited only by his means. The one to whom this ministry does not appeal has not absorbed all the "light" yet that is his privilege. We cannot feel satisfied with this work until these institutions have been sufficiently established in every section of our land that no worthy soul may be refused admittance because of lack of room. The beginning has just been made on the Pacific coast, but there are men and women here who have absorbed so much of the "light of the world" that they are determined that other branches of this noble work may grace our borders.

G. F. SWANDER.

SOME OF OUR ORPHAN GIRLS OF THE HOME LAND.

PORTO RICO AS A MISSION

Porto Rico needs the Gospel and needs it now. "The field is white unto harvest," but the laborers are so few, so few. The people, especially the men, are tired of the old religion and are ready to accept the new when they know what it is and what it requires of them. Very few of the men are Roman Catholics in the strict sense of the term. They are Romanists three times in their lives—when they are born, when they are married (if they have any marriage ceremony), and when they die. That is all. The rest of the time they ar atheists in their views.

The boys rebel against the church. A friend told us not long ago that the only time the boys of the charity school were in revolt was when they had to march to church. O, pray for the boys of Porto Rico! Never will this island be uplifted until the boys are saved. The gospel with its freshness and life-giving power is reaching the young men and boys of Porto Rico. We can hardly get seating room enough for all who come to the little mission started here. Very few weeks pass without some one confessing Christ and oft-times there are many. Some are old and bent and gray, with only a few years to give to their Master, while others are in the full strength of their manhood. When these unite their forces for truth and purity and all that is Christ-like, it cannot but help to uplift this people. We may not see great results in this generation but the results will surely come. The Boy's Orphanage will be a blessing to this island that canot be measured.

Many of the women and girls are Roman Cotholics, but not all of them. Their lives are very cramped and narrow. The better classes, of course, have their servants and have no work to do about the house. They have drawn-work and embroidery to keep them busy part of the time, and evening entertainments sometimes. A few can and do read and play the piano; but the remainder of the time is spent on the balcony. In the poorer classes it is even worse. They do not read and have almost nothing in their homes. They do their own housework, but that keeps them busy only a short time, as their cooking is not extensive and their houses contain usually but one room, seldom more than three. Their houses are bare and destitute. Very little furniture—sometimes none at all. A few stones grouped together form their stove, and with charcoal heaped upon this they have fire sufficient to cook their food. It is such a dreary, barren life. Their religion, the best they could get, seems to partly fill this vacancy.

Imorality reigns supreme; but what could be expected when people are taught that by paying a certain sum the priest will pardon all their sins. Many of the people have never been married because of the exorbitant prices charged by the priests for performing the marriage ceremony. Some of them have lived together as husband and wife and reared their families and, when a Protestant minister, coming to the place, has made it possible to have the marriage rite performed, they have seized the opportunity, their children, some of them young men and women, being present at the ceremony.

The same may be said of Porto Rico as of all other Spanish countries. Her people have been kept in ignorance as much as possible. In the church schools only a little reading, writing, and arithmetic were taught. Even though the people were able to read, they could purchase no portion of the Scriptures. Now this is changed. Bibles are not freely scattered throughout the country yet, but it is possible to purchase them.

Porto Rico is in the transition stage, and atheism and spiritualism are taking root where Christianity is not found. The time for earnest, active work is now.. The door is open and he who will may enter.

The children should be cared for in the orphanages as far as possible, so they will be constantly under the supervision of Christian people. In turn these will uplift all the population when they become the leaders.

BEARING THE INFIRMITIES OF THE WEAK.

In God's revelation to man there has always been found provision for the weak and helpless. Such provision was given prominence in the Jewish economy. The poor, the widow and the orphan were especially mentioned. Our Master did not lose sight of them during his earthly ministry, but always spoke kindly to them and ministered tenderly and bountifully.

Caring for the weak occupied a large place in the work of the early church. The deacons were appointed by the church, and the work of ministering to the poor assigned as their duty. This duty was taught by the apostles and early evangelists as one of the essential manifestations of Christianity. The church in any age which has neglected the poor within her membership or in the community has fallen short of the divine ideal of the church described in the New Testament Scriptures.

The individual who has not had experience in ministering to the needy has missed an important means of spiritual development.

Christianity is a sympathetic religion. The Christian must ever say to the unfortunate and sorrowing, your misfortune and your sorrow shall be mine and together we will bear it. Goldsmith struck a tender chord in his description of the Deserted Village when he wrote of the pastor who "watched and wept, prayed and felt for all." It is the feeling for another which is needed in this world of sorrow and sadness, that will send us to do something that will lighten the burden. We can render all needed assistance in many cases of misfortune in our several communities, but there will always be conditions which we cannot relieve by the temporary assistance which we can render, therefore we must make some other provision.

In caring for the orphan and helpless, penniless old age, or the unfortunate sick, homes and hospitals are needed where they can be taken and ministered unto in the name of the blessed Master. To meet just this need which was felt by a large number, the National Benevolent Association was called into being, and under her efficient leadership we can minister to those in greatest need who otherwise must needs suffer.

This ministry, so well begun, must be extended until every section of our great country shall have made ample provision to care for the orphan, the sick and aged poor.

This work should be recognized in the missionary and benevolent plans of every church, and the burden of this holy ministry should be laid upon the hearts of every congregation by the ministers of the Gospel.

SOME CHANGES WROUGHT BY LOVE.

In three stations of the Christian Woman's Board of Missions in India are established girls' orphanages, and in one a boys' orphanage. The aim and scope of these institutions would be better represented by the word "home" than orphanage, as usually understood in this country, for the children who come or are brought to us remain with us until they are fully grown. Thus we have them under our influence during the whole, or at least during the most important portion of that period of their life when their minds are plastic and responsive, as well as most tenacious of the truths taught them. Surrounded with the sympathy and love of a good home, their natures gradually partake of these qualities. The good and beautiful in them thrive, while all that is harsh and unlovely is kept under. The physical change is the first to be noted. A few weeks after the arrival of a poor little starved and neglected girl it will be seen that her skin has become smooth and clear, her hair instead of being a disheveled heap, harsh and unmanageable, has smoothed out and is becoming glossy and beautiful; and instead of dull eyes and countenance void of expression, there will be animation and a look of contentment and happiness.

THE AUSTIN SITUATION.

I would prefer to rest under misrepresentation rather than misrepresent.

While attending the funeral of a near relative outside the city, a Board meeting was announced Sunday morning for Sunday afternoon. The result of this meeting was a visit from the elders on my return to the city. They informed me of dissatisfaction among a number with reference to my preaching. They wished more of "the wrath of God and of first principles." They said: "We do not object to what you do preach, but to what you do not preach." One of the elders said their visit looked in the direction of my resignation. Without any animus I told them I would resign, and talked with them the best way to terminate my pastorate.

Accordingly on the following Sunday I resigned in the best of faith. Some of my strongest supporters were disturbed. I told them to do nothing, for I had only one desire, viz., to close my pastorate, leaving the church in the best condition possible.

Having an engagement at Bethany for a brief meeting I left Sunday night. On the following Sunday in my absence, unbeknown to me, the following resolution was offered to the church and carried:

"WHEREAS, The Rev. G. A. Campbell has offered his resignation as pastor of his church; and,

"WHEREAS, The services of Brother Campbell covering a period of 9 years have shown his ability in a marked degree; and,

"WHEREAS, The pastorate has up to this time been entirely satisfactory to the membership as a whole, and as there is no valid reason why the present relations between pastor and people should be disturbed; and,

"WHEREAS, The resignation of Bro. Campbell at this time would be a great detriment to the flourishing condition of the work in the different departments of the church, as well as to his personal record; be it

"Resolved. That his resignation be not accepted, but, on the contrary, he be urged to remain with us indefinitely."

The officers opposed then offered the following:

"To the Members of the Austin Christian Church:

"We, the undersigned elders and deacons of the Austin Christian church, believe not only in the divinity of Jesus, but in the incarnation of God in the person of Jesus of Nazareth. We believe not only in the death of Jesus on the cross and his burial, but in the glorious resurrection of Christ. We believe not only in the moral teaching, but also in the divine inspiration of the New Testament. We believe the church to be not only a vital institution, but a divine institution. We believe that the divinely-inspired word as preached by Peter, Paul, James and John is the true guide for the church to-day. We believe that these truths of the gospel should be preached now in the great restoration movement as they were in the apostolic period of our church, and by the great leaders in our movement, whose names are dear to every disciple who is familiar with the desperate struggle made by men true to the gospel of Jesus Christ in restoring to us the Church of the living God.

"Thus believing, as the official board of the church, we requested the elders of the church to call upon our pastor, George A. Campbell, and acquaint him with the fact that a number of the members of the church were not entirely satisfied with their church relations, and that as a board, we though he should know it and of its cause. The elders were instructed to report back to the board on Sunday, March 8, at 3 o'clock p. m. That time not having arrived we have had no report of the conference of the elders with our pastor. In the meantime our pastor has tendered his resignation to take effect within ninety days from this date. In view of the fact that a large percentage of the members of the church are not in sympathy with the action of the board in the above respects, and in view of the further fact that Christianity is free to those who accept it and compulsory on the part of no one, so far as acceptance is concerned, we deem it advisable to tender our resignation, and desire the congregation to act thereon at once. Very truly yours,

"Roy M. Marsh (president), Arno L. Roach (clerk), Minor C. Ellis, Robert Daniels, M. E. Hoshaw, George M. Hayes, J. A. Scott, I. P. Blaney, J. L. McBean, J. E. Miller, John Harper, C. Fred Fowler."

When I returned to the city I found that these and their supporters had summarily withdrawn from the Austin church and formed a new organization.

The above implications have been given wide publicity. The charge has also been made that I received into the church three unimmersed people, contrary, of course, to the custom of the church and wish of its officers.

When I first read these formal declarations of the faith of these retiring officers and the implcations therein contained I was astounded. I am yet dazed by wonderment as to how these men who had been so close to me could have written such unjust insinuations. Not a man of them had ever suggested a hint of such being in his mind. These commonplaces of Christian belief are surely held by those remaining and by myself. Great injustice has been done the church by the publication of these implications. In all this discussion not one word of mine has been quoted to justify the charges. The second charge that has had wide publicity is that of receiving the unimmersed. This charge was never made in a board meeting. It was never even suggested there. Not one of these retiring officers ever hinted to me, to my recollection, that I had done so. No unimmersed person ever considered himself or herself a member. The church has not been deceived. I was entirely unaware that anyone thought such a thing till I read it in one of the papers. If we had been receiving the unimmersed we would not have stopped with three lone cases. I would not for a moment think of fastening a new custom as important as this upon the church without the sanction of the church. The Austin church in its nine years of history—and I have been its only pastor—has never received an unimmersed person as a member. Some, in presenting letters from other churches, have been congratulated in coming with us. We do not extend the hand of fellowship after baptism; but the pastor has always had a fair understanding with them. They were not deceived. The church has been told of their promise to be baptized, and they have not been enrolled by pastor as members till they were.

If any member of the board has been long misunderstanding this, why has he been silent all these years and then gone to a paper far away for a hearing? And why is it so easy for a party to get a hearing without all the bearings of the case being known?

The Austin church has had substantial growth every year of its history. Last fiscal year we had 54 additions, 16 baptisms and the rest by letter and statement. The year before about the same. We have grown from nothing to have an income of about $4,000 a year and a place in the community and our common life in Chicago.

Although I cannot but regret the departure of our friends from us; yet, whether I stay or leave the Austin church will make some progress. The attendance since the misunderstanding has not suffered. There prevails a beautiful spirit of union, a forgiving spirit, a professed loyalty to the Christ and a determined enthusiasm.

It may be there was a cleavage that could not be healed, and any impressions that the men who have convictions and stand for something, and that the irresponsibles are left, is erroneous. I make no insiduous comparison. The present board is composed of strong men who have both convictions and vision. They are not novices in church leadership. The older Chicago Disciples all remain.

May He who often overrules Evil for Good guide both churches into deeper faith, truer love and greater passion for the Christ. GEORGE A. CAMPBELL.

AN EASTER CAROL.

Spring bursts to-day,
For Christ has risen and all the earth's at play.

Flash forth, thou Sun,
The rain is over and gone, its work is done.

Winter is past,
Sweet Spring is come at last, is come at last.

Bud, Fig and Vine,
Bud, Olive, fat with fruit and oil and wine.

Break forth this morn
In roses, thou but yesterday a thorn.

Uplift thy head,
O pure white Lily through the Winter dead.

Beside your dams
Leap and rejoice, you merry-making Lambs.

All Herds and Flocks
Rejoice, all Beasts of thickets and of rocks.

Sing, Creatures, sing,
Angels and Men and Birds and everything.

A YEAR-LONG EASTER.

BY ANNA BURNHAM BRYANT.

"Bring me something that lasts, Papa!" said a little child when her father left her to go on a journey. As we grow older, our grown-up hearts echo with a passion of longing the thought that lay behind her childish entreaty. What is the use of Easter comfort that dies with the Easter Day —fitly symbolized by fading lilies? Everybody feels a certain exaltation of spirit on Easter Sunday, something born of the stately worship and the "Resurrection Lilies," as the country people used to call them. It is not every one who lets the Easter comfort strike deep roots, until he learns to keep a year-long Easter.

If we recognize this in ourselves, it is a wholesome thing to search for reasons. Perhaps the first one is that we are not yet quite ready for comfort. Somehow I am always tempted to "set a little child in the midst" when I want to press home a truth or find an illustration, and a memory of one occurs to me at this moment. The little heart was fit to break over something, and the mother, hearing the sobs, said gently, "Come here, dear, and let me wipe your tears away." Repeated offers of comfort brought no response, till at last the child stammered tearfully, "B-b-but, mamma, I'm not done crying yet!" Are we not often very much like that? Do we not hug our grief, refusing comfort? What is it else when we will go, long months and years, perhaps, in our black, clinging garments, steadfastly shutting our eyes to sunshine either in our own lives or those of others? God is always wiping tears from off all faces, here as well as in heaven, and the more tear-stained the greater comfort. To the troubled and disconsolate he is always saying "Come." Don't think that you must wait until you have done with crying!

Something happened to an elm tree on a neighboring lawn some years ago. In lowering the lawn to meet the grade of the newly constructed street and sidewalk, many of the roots were wholly or partly cut away, and it was feared the tree would have to be cut down. But an attempt was made to save it, and a circle of ground, a mound of earth ten feet or so in diameter, was left for it to grow in. The tree refused to die. With little room to grow, a part of its life sheared away, it struck new, deeper roots down into the earth, deep, deep down into the moist soil that rewarded it with stronger growth and firm foothold. Many a life has followed the elm-tree's example. You need not die because your life is circumscribed by loss, the very roots seeming to have been cut away in some directions. Strike deeper root. Get down to hidden springs.

The real help and comfort of Easter is the strengthful thought that there are deeper and more vital realities than those in which we have been living. "Jesus said unto her, Mary." I think every one must often like to stop upon this word and shut the book, and think awhile about the meaning of it; for surely there is in it much more than meets the ear. It is as if He were reminding her of something, recalling all that he had said to her, lifting her up as by a strong hand-clasp, to new and higher thought of him. That is the real meaning of Easter. And such a thought will be a living seed of joy to grow and blossom through all the days that follow.

The Easter comfort is for those who ask for it. God's grown-up children need not be ashamed to go to him with all their troubles. A busy pastor, brooding over his Sunday's sermon, moved his tall, book-laden desk, at considerable expenditure of time and trouble, to find the little red top his child had let roll underneath as she came into the study on some errand.

"Why did you let her interrupt you so?" exclaimed the mother, leading the little one away reproachfully. "For such a little thing!"

"It wasn't a little thing to her," he answered gently. "Do you suppose I would have disappointed her? I want her always to tell me all her troubles."

That is what Christ wants, and when we do tell, he never disappoints us. No trouble of ours can ever be a little thing to him. "Woman, why weepest thou?" he said to Mary in the garden, and how quickly the comfort came upon the answer! That was because she answered on the instant. Wherever Grief walks lonely in its garden, an upward glance again reveals him, and there comes again the gentle question, like a soft touch on the heart's door to invite confession. Why should anyone go uncomforted. To everyone who grieves or suffers, the tender Lord stands as close to-day as he did to Mary on that first Easter morning. And to one who really takes the comfort that is offered, there is ever after, not one hour or day of comfort only, but a year-long Easter.—The Congregationalist.

THE TRAVAIL OF A SOUL.

There's naught can harm a soul
That's bent on righteous living,
Though ill betide the goal
And fate seems unforgiving,
The storms that rage and roll
Upon life's troubled ocean
Will cease to be; the faithful soul
Shall have, in glory, triumphed then.

LOST $300.

Buying Medicine When Right Food Was Needed.

Money spent for "tonics" and "bracers" to relieve indigestion, while the poor old stomach is loaded with pastry and pork, is worse than losing a pocketbook containing money.

If the money only is lost it's bad enough, but with lost health from wrong eating, it is hard to make the money back.

A Michigan young lady lost money on drugs but is thankful she found a way to get back her health by proper food. She writes:

"I had been a victim of nervous dyspepsia for six years and spent three hundred dollars for treatment in the attempt to get well. None of it did me any good.

"Finally I tried Grape-Nuts food, and the results were such that, if it cost a dollar a package, I would not be without it. My trouble had been caused by eating rich food such as pastry and pork.

"The most wonderful thing that ever happened to me, I am sure, was the change in my condition after I began to eat Grape-Nuts. I began to improve at once and the first week gained four pounds.

"I feel that I cannot express myself in terms that are worthy of the benefit Grape-Nuts has brought to me, and you are perfectly free to publish this letter, if it will send some poor sufferer relief, such as has come to me."

Easter--A Call to the Young to Save the Young.

The Christian Woman's Board of Missions and The National Benevolent Association of the Christian Church, desiring to exemplify the spirit of unity, have entered into a great , joint observance of Easter in behalf of orphans of all lands.

Easter has been chosen as the time for making an offering for the care and comfort of the motherless, homeless child because such an expression of the joy awakened at the memory of our Lord's triumph over death could not be more fitting, or more acceptable to him. "Inasmuch as ye have done it urto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Surely no ministry is more Christlike, and certainly none is more vital to the success of the cause of Christ at home or on the mission field. The orphanage, the hospital, and the dispensary furnish the key to the hearts of the benighted in foreign lands. The same key must be used if our church is to find access to the hearts of the masses in our great homeland cities.

The appeal is made to the young people in our Bible schools, Mission Bands, and Junior and Intermediate societies. From the very beginning of this beautiful ministry the children and young people have been the first to respond to the cry of their perishing little brothers and sisters in the homeland and across the seas.

THE NEED IS EXTREMELY URGENT.

There never was a greater need for a generous response to the Easter call. The answer to this call involves life or death to many homeless, or worse than homeless children, at home and abroad. The famine conditions in India and the business depression at home have greatly increased the number of these helpless little wards now dependent upon the Christian Woman's Board of Missions and The National Benevolent Association. We must provide for these helpless little ones or they must suffer. If we heed not the pathetic call of their necessities now, we may some day hear the Master say, "Ye did it not unto me."

THE NATIONAL BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION.

Has eleven great homes under its care with their hundreds of defenseless children, and helpless old brethren depending upon it for their sole support.

Through these homes, for they are conducted as sweet Christian homes rather than institutions, a great work of love has been accomplished in the name of Christ. It has helped and healed 300 of the world's multitude of sufferers through its hospitals. It has inspired 600 destitute, despondent women with new hope. It has furnished assistance to 700 parents whose homes were despoiled by the hand of death. It has provided a home for 70 helpless, homeless old saints, who but for its Christlike ministry would have suffered from hunger and cold. Eight of this number were ministers of the Gospel. It has furnished 4,065 homeless, parentless children with comfort and loving guidance, saving many of them from a vicious environment. It has 2,207 of these little waifs in Christian homes of their own. Scores of these people are doing their part well among the multitude of the world's toilers. One is a graduate of one of our state universities, a bridge architect of fine reputation; another is filling a responsible position as telegraph operator. Several of them are in business for themselves, while a still larger number are mechanics of ability. Some of our girls grace the nursing profession; others are efficient among the world's army of intelligent office workers. Several of them are presiding with sweet Christian grace over homes of their own. A ministry like this that takes hundreds of children each year away from idleness and neglect and often out of vicious influences and trains them to virtue and usefulness is truly doing a missionary work. It is better than all the Juvenile courts in the land. It should be heartily, generously supported.

To each person who contributes $1 or more to the N. B. A. through the Easter offering, a beautiful souvenir booklet of pictures of the building and inmates of your homes will be given.

The present needs of the Association are urgent and great. Seven of her family of ten institutions were born within the last four years. They are all homeless at birth. The task of providing buildings for them has been tremendous. Several of them are seriously hindered in their ministry because of debt upon their properties, beside the necessary expense of maintenance. It requires no small amount to feed, clothe and provide training for a family of from three to four hundred vigorous boys and girls. These children belong to the Brotherhood. The Lord has placed them under its care. It must provide for them. A great Easter offering will lift a great load of anxiety from the hearts of those who have the care of these dear babies, and it will insure to this company of helpless little ones the comfort of a good home.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEPARTMENT OF THE C. W. B. M.

The young people have largely equipped with the buildings needed the mission stations of the Christian Woman's Board of Missions in foreign fields. In Jamaica they built churches at Torrington, Oberlin, Berea, Manning's Hill, Highgate, Providence, Chesterfield Hill, Carmel and Salisbury Plains; besides these churches they also put up residences at Oberlin, King's Gate and Kingston, and several cottages for the use of native pastors. By the earthquake of last January most of these buildings were destroyed. Rev. John Randall says: "We must rebuild at Kingston, King's Gate, Carmel, Providence, Chesterfield and Highgate; we must repair at Oberlin, Manning's Hill, and Mt. Zion."

The chief work for which this association makes appeal at Easter is for the support of the hundreds of girls and boys in its six large orphanages in India and Porto Rico. Nearly $20,000 will be needed this year for this support alone, and one orphanage in India and one in Porto Rico have urgent need for buildings in which the children can be comfortably housed.

The need for Christian orphanages in con-Christian lands is great beyond expression. There came to India dreadful days of famine that demanded the opening of orphanages;—the days of famine that proved to be God's opportunity for giving the Bread of Life to the famishing souls of thousands who came to His people because of the hunger of the body; the weary days of famine when for months and even years there was continually in the ears of the missionaries the piteous cry of the famine-stricken, "We are hungry souls," "We are hungry souls,"—the heart-rending cry that voiced their greatest need which was so deep that they themselves were unconscious of its existence. Through the horrors of famine God gave to the Christian Churches many hundreds of children and the great privilege of making of them messengers who will carry the message of Salvation throughout much of benighted India. Just now another opportunity is given for the saving of little children from the ravages of famine with its untold sufferings, and of bringing them up in Christian homes. A great many children will need to be cared for. There are precious, promishing boys and girls whom our missionaries will gladly take into their hearts and homes if we will furnish them the money with which to defray the necessary expenss. The result of the Easter offering will decide these matters.

To each person who contributes through the Easter offering $1 or more to the Young People's Department of the C. W. B. M. will be given a booklet containing about 200 pictures of its missionaries and mission buildings.

Place your seal of approval upon the sweet spirit of unity that has brought the Christian Woman's Board of Missions and The National Benevolent Association into unanimous co-operation, and upon the holy ministry in which they are engaged in caring for the orphans of all lands, and enter into fellowship with them and the Master in this divine mission by making a liberal Easter offering.

Sunday School Lesson--Girding on Humility*

H. L. Willett

The Gospel of John divides itself into two nearly equal portions. The first of these deals with the outward ministry of the Lord, with its two lines of activity, the creation of faith in the circle of his followers and the manifestation of disbelief and opposition on the part of the Jews. With the twelfth chapter this process reaches its final stage and the public work of the Master comes to a close. The final words which Jesus spoke to the hostile people were: "While ye have light, believe on the light that ye may be sons ofthe light." From that moment he turned to the inner circle of the disciples to complete in them his testimony to the truth. The closing verses of chapter twelve recall the prophetic words of Isaiah regarding the rejection of the light by the nation.

From this time forth Jesus knew that his hour was at hand. Though only half the material of the Fourth Gospel had been covered as yet, the time which fell to Jesus' public work was almost exhausted. There remained only two or three days. These closing words of the Master to his disciples are supposed to have occurred on the night in which he was betrayed. His hour of trial was at hand, but there was still much the chosen messengers needed to understand. Not all the times of withdrawal from public life had been sufficient to make the disciples understand some of the most important truths of the kingdom. These closing hours were to be made impressive by such words as they could never forget.

THE DISCIPLES.

He had chosen them from the nation, selecting with care the best men he could find. They had been slow to learn the meaning of the Gospel and often he was compelled to rebuke their failure to comprehend. It was only when they were prepared at last to see in him the Messianic Redeemer of their nation and the Savior of the world that he felt he could trust them with the message that he must leave in their hands. He loved them deeply because he had chosen them out of the world and had lived with them many months in most intimate sympathy. And having loved them through the days of preparation, he loved them now more than ever when the end was at hand.

There is something impressive in the sternness with which the Fourth Gospel and the first Epistle of John characterize unbelief, falsehood and treachery. There is a downright and uncompromising denunciation of evil which no other portion of the New Testament reveals. It is singular that John, who was the apostle of love, should also be the apostle of wrath. But such is his fineness of vision that between light and darkness there are no shades of gradation. There is either truth or error. Most severe, therefore, is his judgment upon Judas. It is in this Gospel that we are told that Judas was a thief and wanted the money spent for the alabaster box and the ointment added to his holdings. Well might Dante put the traitor in the lowest round of hell in this great mediæval poem, if John could speak with such unbending sternness of the man.

HOPES OF HONOR.

How different were the thoughts of Jesus in that hour. It was his delight to do the will of the Father from whom he had come and to whom he was returning. Out of the great deep of God's life he had come into the world, the first-born of all the sons of the Highest. Back into the holiest place he was now departing that he might continue there the gracious work he had begun. All the more striking therefore was that humility with which he girded himself to teach the disciples their final and most needed lesson. Often they had disputed one with another regarding their relative positions in the new Messianic kingdom which Jesus was establishing. Each of one of them could recall some word of the Master, or could draw from his own imagination some reason for believing that high honor awaited him in the new dispensation. Jesus knew that such aspirations were entirely fatal to the spirit and success of his enterprise. And he wanted to make so impressive the equality and childlike humility that must mark his followers that he chose a most striking illustration of his own feelings in the matter.

THE SERVANT'S WORK.

The most menial office in the household of an oriental home was that of the servant who washed the feet of the family and the guests as they entered the house. The custom of wearing sandals prevails in the east today as then. Shoes are all but unknown. The sandals are either leather or wood soles, fastened to the foot with thongs or cords. Indeed in many parts of Palestine, the wearing of even this simple kind of foot-gear is deemed a luxury, to be indulged in only when in the towns or when walking over a very rough road. Often on a journey the Beduin slip off their sandals and put them among the stuff on their saddle bags, continuing the way with bare feet. It is easy to see therefore that the first act of hospitality in an oriental household would be to provide water to wash the feet of those arriving. And the servant who performed this work was the least in importance in the family.

What could have been more astonishing, therefore, or more calculated to teach the disciples the all-important lesson of humility than for Jesus to lay aside his flowing outer garment and put on the towel, which was usually tied on with a cord, for the purpose of performing this lowly task. Then he poured out water into a basin and went about from one to another of the group washing their feet. The act was of course not so startling in that land and time as it would be with us today. People were at least accustomed to see such deeds performed. But never by the master of the household, and beyond all things, not by one of the unique dignity which belonged to Jesus. It may well be supposed that the group sat in dumb astonishment while he passed on and washed their feet. That he had some deep purpose in it they could not doubt. But what it was they could only wait to learn.

PETER'S REMONSTRANCE.

But when he came to Peter there was remonstrance. Perhaps there had been time to think the matter through and perceive the awful impropriety of the scene. Or possibly Peter, who was always the bold, thoughtless, uncalculating member of the group, was the only one who dared question the Master regarding his conduct. At any rate the apostle would not let him proceed. It was too humiliating to think that Jesus was actually proposing to perform for him this menial act. At the first word of protest Jesus sought to reassure him with the insistence that he would know the meaning of it all at a later time. But Peter would not let the matter go on. He would be different from the others in refusing to the Lord the privilege of this humble duty. But Jesus sternly said, "If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me." He could not leave to Peter the possibility of boasting to the other disciples that he alone of them all had resisted the Master's humbling desire to wash his feet.

THE MEANING OF THE ACT.

Then the impulsive disciple cried out, "Lord, not my feet only, but also my hands and my head." Here again he was wrong. In neither manner was he to separate himself from his brethren. It was not necessary that the follower of the Lord be washed completely so often, but only that the clinging defilements of the way be removed. He who has been buried with Christ in baptism needs no second washing of this nature, but only the daily pardon which comes through prayer. The plant of God's grace within the heart needs much watering and tending, but only one planting.

Then came the teaching, of which the act of lowliness had been but the prelude. In the Fourth Gospel every

The Prayer Meeting--Our Plea

Topic for April 29, Matt. 7:19-21: John 15:8

Silas Jones

The mere talker is not in favor with this generation. Men will listen to a doer when he discourses on the kind of work with which he is familiar. "What have you done?" is the question that confronts every claimant for public confidence. There is often an error in judgment as to what is worth doing; but the demand for proof of ability to the attitude of the age toward groups of men is like that toward individuals. The group that commands respect has an aim and is making progress in the direction of attaining it. The church forms no exception to the general rule. Its noble past does not cancel the obligations of the present. Its place in the affections of men depends on a clear and adequate conception of present duty and a courageous performance of it.

WIDER THOUGHT.

It is no new thing that we distinguish between essentials and non-essentials. It is the very essence of loyalty to the plea that we make this distinction. There is room for great variety in the matter of opinions. It would be disgraceful if we should be found contending zealously for notions that form no part of the creed of the church of Christ and insisting that all men shall hold these opinions as we hold them. We have ceased to debate certain questions once thought to be all important. It becomes us to examine with care the dictrines we teach. New occasions teach new duties; they also change the intellectual emphasis. The man who knows neither the Bible nor history may be satisfied with medieval statements of Christian truth; others will probably wish to give a new interpretation to the facts upon which our faith rests. It is necessary to ask whether we have gone back to Christ and the apostles or stopped at Geneva or Rome. Having relieved ourselves of the burden of non-essentials, we can preach with greater effectiveness the message of Christ.

THE PRACTICE OF UNITY.

"They say, and do not." Such is the judgment of the Lord concerning the scribes and Pharisees. The truth taught by them he bade the people accept, but he condemned them as unworthy leaders. Had they been honestly striving to put into practice the teaching of the Old Testament on justice and mercy, they would have seen more in the prophet of Nazareth than a disturber of the peace. Insight comes to him who does the right as he is able to see it. It is possible for people to preach Christian union and then discredit themselves by refusing to practice it. If we should become theorists, our influence would cease. Recent events reveal the possibility of closer fellowship with the Baptists. It would seem that in this direction lie our greatest opportunities for the immediate future. We can prove our sincerity and love by cultivating the acquaintance of the Baptist family, and this we will do.

"THE BREED OF MEN."

After all, it is a question of men. It has always been so and always will be. Doctrines are tested by the men who hold them. Institutions must turn out men who know their rights and dare maintain them, who know the rights of others and unselfishly strive for them. They must be the lovers of the home, good citizens, and they must have a vision of the kingdoms of the world in subjection of our Lord. Such men will worthily represent the plea before the church and before the world.

Christian Endeavor--Paton, the Missionary

Topic for April 29. Acts 28:1-10.

Royal L. Handley

John Gibson Paton was born on May 24, 1842, on a farm in the parish of Kirkmahoe, near Dumfries, in the south of Scotland. His father was a stocking manufacturer in a small way and the boy was taught his father's trade. But what was more, he learned his father's religious ways. The home consisted of three rooms, the faither's workshop at one end, and the large room at the other end serving all the purposes of dining-room, kitchen, and parlor, besides containing two big beds. "The closet," says Dr. Paton, "was a very small apartment betwixt the other two, having room only for a bed, a little table, and a chair, with a diminutive window shedding diminutive light on the scene. This was the sanctuary of that cottage home. Thither daily, and oftentimes a day, generally after each meal, we saw our father retire, and 'shut to the door'; and we children got to understand by a sort of spiritual instinct (for the thing was too sacred to be talked about) that prayers were being poured out there for us, as of old by the High Priest within the veil in the Most Holy Place."

On December 1, 1857, he was licensed as a preacher of the gospel and ordained on March 23, 1858, and on April 16th set sail in the Clutha for Melbourne. Then they took an American ship which left them at Aneityum in the New Hebrides. In November, 1858, he removed with his wife to the Island of Tanna,, where he worked until 1866, when he moved to the adjoining island of Aniwa. The story of those toilsome years is told with wonderful power in Dr. Paton's Autobiography, which justifies Dr. Pierson's commendation, "I consider it unsurpassed in missionary biography. In the whole course of my extensive reading on these topics, a more stimulating, inspiring, and every way first-class book has not fallen into my hands. Everybody ought to read it."

Dr. Paton's visit to America and Great Britain made him well known to the Christians of those lands. His hair and beard were a beautiful white and his face glowed with love. His simple rigidity of principle was never relaxed. He would not ride on Sunday and insisted on walking or running from one point to another to keep his many engagements. He was a total abstainer from liquor and tobacco, and his whole appearance told of the clear and eager love of God in his soul.

He spent a long life among savages, often threatened, with experiences more wonderful than fiction, teaching and training the simple people of the South Seas, fighting the traffic in liquor and fire-arms, and human laborers, which wrought havoc among them, and striving to build the kingdom of Christ among these savage races.

The long and wonderful career ended on December 21, 1906, when the old missionary died in Glasgow.—S. S. Times.

In India, the Bishop of Calcutta presides over a "Lord's Day Union," which has changed the Calcutta Market Day from Sunday to a week-day, and secured by law prohibition of Sunday work in the European quarters of the city, and of needless work on the river. There is an agitation in favor of similar laws for all India.

With The Workers

L. L. Carpenter will dedicate the new church at Clarence, Mo., May 3.

N. D. Webber is now preaching at the church at Manton, Rhode Island.

W. L. Harris, Lyons, Kans., will dedicate the new building at Makin, Kans., May 3.

The C. E. society of Keokuk, Ia., is holding meetings every week at the county jail.

A. P. Johnson as the new minister in Bethany, Mo., is getting his work well organized.

J. D. Williams has closed his work at El Dara, Ill., and takes charge at Chambersburg, April 12.

W. F. Reagor, Sacramento, Cal., will soon establish a new church in Oak Park, a beautiful suburb.

J. F. Smith of Waynesville, Ill., has accepted a call to Loraine, Ill. He will begin his new work immediately.

The Old Orchard Church, St. Louis, Mo., has found a competent new minister in the person of J. G. Engle.

Charles Reign Scoville and his helpers will hold a meeting in Uniontown, Pa., where J. W. Carpenter is minister.

Percy H. Wilson, after ending a good meeting in Ellwood City, Pa., has commenced a revival in Natrona.

George H. Combs dedicated the new Budd Park church, Kansas City, March 29. B. L. Wray is the energetic minister.

Evangelist John T. Brown is in Harrisburg, Pa. His meeting in Elmira, N. Y., ended with a total of 86 additions.

J. A. Jayne lectured in Central Park church, Pittsburg, Pa., April 9, under the auspices of the Bible class of the Sunday school.

P. C. McFarlane has begun his seventh years am inister in Alameda, Cal. His pastorate has been of marked success.

William Ross Lloyd, assisted by Edward G. Daugherty, is in an unusually successful revival meeting in the Bellvue (Pa.), church.

Charles E. McVay is to dedicate, on May 17, a new building that is being erected by the congregation of the Central, at Joplin, Mo.

Herbert Yeuell goes to San Francisco next month to help Robert Lord Cave and the West Side Church in a meeting to begin May 3.

An encouraging feature of the work at Grants Pass, Ore., is the continually increasing church attendance. Austin J. Hollingsworth is the minister.

J. W. B. Smith will close his work at DeLand, Fla., about May 1. He refers to the official board for any testimonial as to his efficiency and character.

The King Hill Church, St. Joseph, Mo., is building a new house of worship at a cost of $10,000. F. M. Rains will dedicate it May 10.

J. P. Lichtenberger, pastor of the Lenox Avenue Church, New York City, has resigned to accept a place as dean of Berkely Bible Seminary, Berkely, Cal.

Nelson H. Trimble, assistant pastor of the Independence Boulevard church, Kansas City, Mo., has accepted the pastorate of the Fulton Avenue church, Baltimore, Md.

The Young Men's Entertainment league of the First church, Lincoln, Neb., has arranged for an indoor chautauqua to be given this week in the City Auditorium where the church is now meeting.

The services in the Christian Temple, Baltimore, Md., conducted by H. F. Lutz of Harrisburg, Pa., have been notably successful. Peter Ainslee, the pastor, and his people are much encouraged by the meeting.

The Foreign Society has six more native evangelists in Japan than one year ago. Five of these are graduates of Drake College, Tokyo. This is a very encouraging increase in the number of native evangelists.

For the first seven days of April, 314 churches have made an offering for foreign missions, an increase of 18 over the corresponding time last year; but the amount contributed by these churches was only $7,510, or $1,990 less than for the corresponding time last year.

A handsome stone building is being erected for the congregation of the First Christian church, North Yakima, Wash., where Morton L. Rose ministers. The basement was completed last fall and work will soon be begun on the superstructure. The total cost is to be about $40,000.

The church at Carthage, Mo., under the present ministry of D. W. Moore, continues in the living-link rank in the Foreign Society. Although the financial panic was felt in that section very much, yet the church by sacrifice and heroism continues to support its own missionary. The work starts well under the ministry of Bro. Moore.

Prof. T. C. Howe of Butler College, has been elected president of the college. Prof. Howe has been prominently identified with recent successful enterprises of the institution and is in every way eminently fitted for the position of president. His culture and success as an educator, and his experience as acting head of the college give promise of a bright future for Butler.

UNION MINISTERS' MEETING
Disciples and Baptists

For some time past the plan of uniting the Baptist and Disciples Ministers' Associations of Chicago has been under discussion, with the results that an arrangement was formulated last month by which the two associations are to hold joint sessions on the first Mondays of April, May and June. The first of these meetings was held last week. The Baptists number about seventy-five and the Disciples one third as many. The attendance was large and deep interest was manifested by all present in the theme of the hour, "The advantages of union between Disciples and Baptists." The meeting was presided over by the presidents of the two associations, sitting together. and the addresses were made by Prof. Willett of the Disciples' Divinity House

DIDN'T KNOW

That Coffee Was Causing Her Trouble.

So common is the use of coffee as a beverage many do not know that it is the cause of many obscure ails which are often attributed to other things.

The easiest way to find out for oneself is to quit the coffee for awhile, at least, and note results. A Virginia lady found out in this way, and also learned of a new beverage that is wholesome as well as pleasant to drink. She writes:

"I am forty years old and all my life, up to a year and a half ago, I had been a coffee drinker. About ten years ago, I had dyspepsia so bad that often the coffee I drank would sour on my stomach and I could not retain it.

"Severe headaches and heart weakness made me feel sometimes as though I were about to die. After drinking a cup or two of hot coffee, not knowing it was harmful, my heart would go like a clock without a pendulum. At other times it would almost stop and I was so nervous I did not like to be alone.

"If I took a walk for exercise, as soon as I was out of sight of the house I'd feel as if I was sinking and this would frighten me terribly. My limbs would utterly refuse to support me, and the pity of it all was, I did not know that coffee was causing the trouble.

"Reading in the papers that many persons were relieved of such ailments by leaving off coffee and drinking Postum, I got my husband to bring home a package. We made it according to directions and I liked the first cup. Its rich snappy flavor was delicious.

"I have been using Postum about eighteen months and to my great joy, digestion is good, my nerves and heart are all right, in fact, I am a well woman once more, thanks to Postum."

"There's a Reason." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in packages.

for the Disciples, and Prof. Shailer Mathews, Dean of the Divinity School of the University for the Baptists. The former reviewed the early relations and separation of the Disciples and Baptists, and traced the recent efforts for a closer association which might lead to ultimate reunion. Prof. Mathews discussed some methods of bringing the two bodies into closer relations, such as co-operation on the foreign mission field and in city evangelization. In the discussion that followed the heartiest interest in the plan was manifested. Resolutions earnestly favoring the union of the Disciples and Baptists in Rockford, Ill., were passed. The spirit of fraternity was very marked. It was decided that the discussion should be continued at the next joint meeting on the first Monday in May.

HOME MISSION NOTES.

The American Christian Missionary Society has recently received three more gifts on the annuity plan. One is from a sister already on our list as an annuitant. She sends $2,000 this, thus revealing her faith in the Society. Another sends $500, and still another $100. We have just received notice from another that she was about to send $1,000.

People needing an income on their money are turning with confidence to us. Will you not join these satisfied people, and further the Kingdom by a gift? Write us concerning the plan. Booklet free.

March was a very good month for us, our gain in receipts being $7,313.27 over the same month last year. Over a thousand dollars of this was from the churches. We are nearly $14,000 ahead of our record for the same period of last year, and are offering still a month away.

Our missionaries report for February 1.620 additions and 14 churches organized. These figures are inspiring, but are only an average monthly report. Thus mightily grows the Word of God and prevails.

Greater numbers than ever before have ordered supplies for the May offering. The supplies are in stock, hence your order can be filled at once. Send now, and get in line for a mighty advance. WM. J. WRIGHT, Corresponding Secretary, Y. M. C. A. Building, Cincinnati, Ohio.

SOME KENTUCKY HAPPENINGS.

D. G. Combs reports 20 baptisms, 4 reclaimed, 1 added by statement, and 12 from other religious bodies. He is in such constant demand for evangelistic work that it is hard for him to deny the requests made for his services and remain at Hazel Green for the greater part of each month. At that place he has reached a goodly number of the student body.

Robert Kirby's wife has been very sick for some weeks and he has been unable to leave home for his work on this account. It will be some weeks yet before he can leave her, if she recovers at all.

W. J. Cocke held a meeting at Taylorsville, during which there there were seven added. Money was raised to pay an old debt and to provide further equipment for the work, as well as to employ a preacher for this year. C. L. Pyatt is to serve the congregation as a preacher.

Five added in the district of H. L. Morgan. The condition of mountain roads interferes very much with his work.

The work at Bromley continues to show evidences of progress—audiences growing and Sunday school doing well, as told by J. P. Bornwasser.

Three added at Latonia and $290 paid on church debt. The audiences are very large to hear the gospel preached by our brother H. C. Runyon.

Bardstown had the privilege of hearing J. B. Briney preach two Sundays, and the work goes on very well.

South Louisville had three additions in March. The Sunday school is doing well, and Edward B. Richey, the minister, says the prayer meeting is the best in the history of the work.

H. H. Thompson has been kept at home for some time by the illness of his wife. She is better now, and he hopes in a short time to be able to spend all his time in the work in Pike county. Four baptisms and five added otherwise during March.

J. W. Masters gave little time to the missionary work during the month. He is preaching regularly at Mt. Vernon, and held a meeting there with 26 added. This is without our help.

Breathitt county had work done at Morgue, Hampton and Riverside by J. B. Flinchum. Six additions, one of them a preacher from another fellowship. He is planning an active campaign with the advent of better weather.

The receipts for March, as reported by H. W. Elliott, Secretary and Treasurer, amounted to $445.25. This is a little below last March. Both February and March recorded a slight falling off. If this continues until our convention in September we will lose all that we have gained and more too. We urge every church that has any money in hand for our State work to send it in at once. A considerable number of congregations took the offering last autumn and have not yet remitted. If this meets the eye of a preacher or an officer of a church that is described by the above statement, let me urge you to attend to this matter without another letter. A number of congregations take an omnibus offering at this season of the year, and from such we hope to have a remittance soon.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

act of Jesus, miracle or other, is but the illustration of some truth he is about to announce. The little child set in the midst, the bread and fish distributed, the washing of the feet, were all performed in anticipation of the teachings which they made clear and forceful. The most deadly danger which confronted the disciples and the work to which they were called was that they should regard their position as that of officers in charge of an estate, politicians in places of honor, rather than servants whose only value consisted in the witness they could give to the facts and forces of Christ's life. Jesus deemed no lesson too expensive, no lesson too humbling, that could save them from such a mistake, fatal alike to their own efficiency and to the success of the cause which he was bringing into being.

"OFFICERS" IN THE CHURCH.

So he said to them that the service he had rendered them in washing their feet was typical of their constant attitude toward one another and all men. In the nature of the case there could be no officials in the church. All were servants of the Lord and of each other. The deadliest danger that has confronted the church in any age has been that of pride in offices, created for the very purpose of gratifying human ambition. The early churches had in them men of age and experience whose counsel was followed in matters of teaching and discipline. They came to be called "elders" because of their age, or "bishops," superintendents, as the name implies, who looked over the church to give its work direction. They were not officials, they were servants. Such also were those chosen to look after the temporal affairs of the churches and to care for the poor. They were called "deacons" or helpers. Yet on the basis of these very simple activities in the apostolic church men have erected the huge structures of official organization, with ranks above ranks of officers. Even the Pope of Rome, the head of one of these systems, attempts to trace the origin of his office to the apostolic church and to Peter himself.

CHARLES A. YOUNG AT SACRAMENTO, CAL.

The first Lord's day in February C. A. Young came to lead us in an evangelistic effort in this difficult field—all are difficult—and continued three weeks with an interim of three days during the last week. Others who have aided us in special services during the present administration will not think me unfair when I say, all things considered, Bro. Young far excelled anything that we have ever been able to accomplish in the midst of this pleasure seeking, gold hunting, western environment. The number who responded to the invitation is only one of the many victories that he won for us. God forbid that I would underestimate the worth to the kingdom the twenty-five who got right with God; yet the new plane of life and action to which the church was lifted, the new position in public esteem that was gained, for many in this city learned for the first time of the people here who are content to be known as "Christians only;" and the new appreciation of all who heard him of the high privilege of owning Christ as our King, made the meeting a marking epoch indeed. His sermons on the "Divinity of Christ" were masterpieces. In fact, every discourse was so rich in thought, so resplendent in choice illustrations and quotations from the best literature, and so earnestly and simply delivered that it was always with regret to the audience that his sermons closed. Rich indeed were the treasures which he brought to us from his great storehouse of knowledge and experience; and yet there was always a feeling that we were not receiving a hundredth part of what he knew. Furthermore, his faith in the gospel of Jesus Christ, to which, he seemed to some, to be extremely loyal, if such is possible, and his loving earnestness gave him a very high ground upon which to plead to men. Not one of our services ever lacked in that dignity which appeals to true Christian culture. It was with extreme regret that the meeting closed. It should have continued two or three weeks longer. But the church didn't have the power of decision. Bro. Young is a pastor, and was compelled to return to his field. But all things considered, we had a great meeting. The church and minister are left in a happy and hopeful relationship.

NEW BELOIT CHURCH.

Last Lord's Day, April 5, I organized a church in Beloit, Wis., to be known as "The Christian Church of Beloit." They began with eighteen members, but this list will be increased to at least thirty charter members. They have found nearly fifty members living in Beloit, but some of them have been so long without a church-home that it will be very difficult to enlist them. They hope to hold a meeting in May or June. I have been preaching for them alternate Sunday afternoons for some time. We added twelve recently at the Central Christian in Rockford, as the result of a short meeting with home forces. We have sold our old property, bought in a better location, and are contemplating the erection of a building this summer.

COME TO ONE OF KENTUCKY'S GREATEST CONVENTIONS.

On May 25-27, 1908, our South Kentucky Convention meets in annual session. With present prospects it promises to be one of the most enthusiastic and profitable conventions ever held in South Kentucky.

The fond hope is entertained that fine delegations will come from all parts of South Kentucky, and many visitors from all parts of the state, inasmuch as matters of great moment in which we are mutually interested will come up for our prayerful consideration, and no one interested in our mission work in Ken-

Place.

The place where the convention is to be held is the beautiful city of Mayfield, Graves county, in the new and beautiful house of worship just completed.

Time.

The time is Monday, May 25, at 8 p. m., to Wednesday, May 27, final adjournmnt to take place Wednesday night.

The time to be taken in going, staying and coming home is not too much for any one to take from regular work.

Entertainment.

To all who send their names to Sherman B. Moore at Mayfield, homes will be provided free. No more hospitable people live anywhere than in Mayfield, and if you send names in time, you can count on having a good home while there. This will be one of the most pleasant features of the convention. Come! Come! Come!

Railroad Rates.

To all who bring with them a certificate from the railroad agent at starting point, and who have purchased a full fare ticket going to Mayfield, a fare of one-third plus 25 cents only will be charged on returning home, provided as many as one hundred (100) holding certificates attend. Please bear this in mind.

We must, according to recent meetings, have as many as one hundred attending holding certificates, or we fail to get the reduction returning home. This is important.

Conclusion.

This convention will, in all probability, be our last South Kentucky convention, as it is more than likely that the whole state will unite into one great missionary convention.

This consummation will be hailed with great enthusiasm, I am sure, from the great brotherhood of Kentucky on the extreme east to Fulton county on the extreme west, and from one side to the other.

Let every one who possibly can come to Mayfield May 25-27.

COTNER NEWS.

As the college year nears the close there is much to remember that gives pleasure and encouragement. The enthusiasm with which the year opened has continued and increased. Perhaps the increase in attendance promised in the opening has not been quite as great as expected. owing to the sudden financial depression early in the session, but this did not effect the regular college classes, but mainly the more transitory element.

The present semester has witnessed more victories in a college way than any former one in the history of the school. Week before last Mr. Ford Ellis, a Cotner junior, easily carried off the first honor in the State Prohibition Oratorical Contest at Grand Island. This is the second year in succession that this honor has been awarded Cotner. In a triangular debate with Doane and Bellevue colleges, two of the strongest denominational colleges in the state, Cotner won against each, representing both sides of the question. Both victories were complete, in one case the unanimous decision.

Last week the final decision of the committee of college presidents of Nebraska, awarding the distinguished honor of representing Nebraska at Oxford, England, as Rhodes Scholar, filled up our cup of enthusiasm.

In the great civic parade in Lincoln last Saturday, the Cotner band was given the head place, even leading the State University battalion. They were justly praised for their fine music, manly bearing, and attractive uniforms.

Perhaps no institution among us is more closely allied to the college church. The school stands for all culture, but it is distinctively religious and Biblical in its spirit. Not all students are ministerial, but among the very best students are those aspiring to preach the old story. It is therefore college news to speak of the church. Bro. H. O. Pritchard came to us at the opening of the year as pastor. It is due him to say that he has gained the confidence of all. He is a scholarly preacher, a fine church worker, and has met the Cotner spirit of loyalty to the ideals of Christian education. Our place as a living link was more easily met this year than ever before, though our church expenses are heavier. A move is well under way to erect this season a fine church building costing not less than $25,000. A fine start in raising the money has been made.

We are already planning for larger things next year. Our medical college has arranged to take the first two years at the University, and in this way come into much closer touch with the influences of the University. The teaching force has been strengthened and the term lengthened. At the opening of its next session it will occupy its own building for other work in the city, which is admirably adapted to its needs.

The gymnasium is now being finished and will be ready for dedication by commencement. In the basement there are large rooms for bath and other up-to-date conveniences. The upper floor is supplied with a fine beginning of athletic furniture.

A new outside heating plant will be built this summer, from which all buildings will be heated when completed.

A fund is being raised to put the best help in the field to reach our centenial aim of not less than $100,000 endowment by 1909.

Bro. C. S. Medbury will deliver our commencement address. A great commencement season is anticipated.

Y. M. C. A. SEMI-CENTENNIAL.

True to its original inspiration, the Chicago Young Men's Christian Association began its semi-centennial jubilee with a wide-sweeping evangelistic campaign. A conference of personal workers on Saturday, led by Evangelist Fred B. Smith, responded to the signal for beginning, and on Sunday the campaign was on all along the line. Twenty-three meetings in churches, association buildings, and railroad and college departments drew hundreds of men together for gospel appeals.

Similar meetings continued daily all through the week, reaching out to shops and industrial establishments, the speakers including Rev. Professor Hugh Black, Dr. F. W. Gunsaulus, Evangelist Smith, John R. Mott, and a score of others, including specialists in work for men, successful railroad officials and business men. Rev. J. A. Macdonald, editor of the Toronto Globe, Canada's leading newspaper, was scheduled as the speaker at Central department on last Saturday afternoon.

For the latter part of the week the program includes Thursday's luncheons and receptions, with Richard C. Morse, Robert Weidensall and George T. Coxhead among the speakers; Friday's evening dinners, addressed by such men as J. V. Farwell, Jr., George N. Cannan, E. P. Bailey, Ira Landrith, J. L. Houghteling, Bishop MacDowell, Prof. George E. Vincent, Cyrus H. McCormick, Judge S. P. Spencer and J. R. Chapman, and Saturday noon industrial work conference, and evening physical work exhibition at First Regiment Armory. Sunday the anniversary services will bring to the platforms in special meetings, in addition to some already named, H. B. Macfarland, president of the commissioners of the District of Columbia, and J. J. Cannon, a prominent New York State banker. Appropriate sermons will also be delivered in nearly all Chicago pulpits.

Monday, the closing day, will be signalized by a citizens' banquet, President Bailey presiding, which will be addressed by President Woodrow Wilson, of Princeton, Mr. McFarland, Mr. Cannon, Bishops Anderson and MacDowell, John V. Farwell, Jr., and Governor Deneen.

Satisfactory progress is being made with the million-dollar endowment fund, one gift of $50,000 and numbers of smaller amounts being added during the last few days.

In connection with the advance movement of the Chicago association, the fact is recalled that a number of the larger cities have recently conducted campaigns which resulted in an increased endowment for the erection of adequate buildings. In Baltimore $512,000 was raised in twenty-nine days from 6,200 subscribers. In 27 days Detroit, with about one-half Baltimore's population, and a fifth of Chicago's, raised $423,000 from 4,100 subscribers. Other cities which have secured funds ranging from $100,000 to $315,000, are St. Paul, Syracuse, Kansas City, Indianapolis, Portland, Ore., Richmond, Va., Denver, Ottawa, Canada, Duluth, Omaha, Pottsville, Pa., and La Crosse, Wis. Ottawa, Ontario, a city of 70,000 inhabitants, secured $202,800 in fourteen days.

Important Books

We are the publishers of some of the best known works pertaining to the Disciples' Plea for a united church. These important books — important in more ways than one—should be read and owned by every member of the household of faith.

The Plea of the Disciples of Christ, by W. T. Moore. Small 16mo., cloth, 140 pages, net postpaid, thirty-five cents, won immediate success.

George Hamilton Combs, pastor of the Independence Boulevard Christian Church, Kansas City, Mo.. one of the great churches of the brotherhood, writes.

"I cannot thank Dr. W. T. Moore enough for having written his little book on "Our Plea." It is more than a statement; it is a philosophy. Irenic, catholic, steel-tone, it is just the handbook I shall like to put into the hands of the thinking man on the outside. In all of his useful and honored life Mr. Moore has rendered no greater service to a great cause."

Historical Documents Advocating Christian Union, collated and edited by Charles A. Young. 12mo, cloth, 364 pages, illustrated, postpaid $1.00, is an important contribution to contemporary religious literature. It presents the living principles of the church in convenient form.

Z. T. Sweeney, Columbus, Indiana, a preacher of national reputation, writes:

"I congratulate you on the happy thought of collecting and editing these documents. They ought to be in the home of every Disciple of Christ in the Land, and I believe they should have a large and increasing sale in years to come."

Basic Truths of the Christian Faith, by Herbert L. Willett, author of The Ruling Quality, Teaching of the Books, Prophets of Israel, etc., etc. Post 8vo., cloth, 127 pages. Front cover stamped in gold, gilt top, illustrated, 75 cents, paper 25 cents.

A powerful and masterful presentation of the great truths for the attainment of the life of the spirit. Written in a charming and scholarly style. It holds the reader's fascinated attention so closely that it is a disappointment if the book has to be laid aside before it is finished.

J. E. Chase writes:

"It is the voice of a soul in touch with the Divine life, and breathes throughout its pages the high ideals and noblest conception of truer life, possible only to him who has tarried prayerfully, studiously at the feet of the world's greatest teacher."

Our Plea for Union and the Present Crisis, by Herbert L. Willett, author of the Life and Teachings of Jesus, etc., etc. 12mo., cloth, 140 pages, gold stamped, postpaid 50 cents.

Written in the belief that the Disciples of Christ are passing through an important, and in many respects, transitional period.

The author says:

"It is with the hope that * * * present forces and opportunities may be wisely estimated by us; that doors now open may be entered; that hopes only partially realized may come to fruition that these chapters are given their present form."

Early Relations and Separation of Baptists and Disciples, by Errett Gates. 8vo. cloth, gold side and back stamp, $1.00. A limited number in paper binding will be mailed postpaid for 25 cents until stock is sold out.

We owe a debt of gratitude to the writor of this book, and could only wish that it might be read not only by our people all over the land, but scattered among the Baptists. It is a most meritorious and splendid contribution to our literature.—THE CHRISTIAN WORKER, PITTSBURG, Pa.

The dominant personality of Alexander Campbell is so brought out as to give to what might be regarded as the dry details of ecclesiastical history and controversy almost the interest of a story. A valuable contribution to the history of the American churches.—THE CONGREGATIONALIST, BOSTON, Mass.

and we will send by return mail a handsome portfolio (size 5x6) containing 120 pictures in full colors

Nothing approaching this work has ever been attempted before. In a series of splendid pictures the great and impressive scenes in the Bible story are depicted, true in color, costume, landscape, and all details to the life, the country and the time. ¶ To make the men and women of the Bible actual, living characters to their pupils is one of the first duties of the Sunday-School teachers, and no better help can they find for this than in the Tissot pictures. ¶ The whole world acknowledges that J. James Tissot was the greatest artist that ever lived, so far as Biblical subjects are concerned.

Only the unparalled success in the higher-priced editions makes possible this phenomenally low offer now. ¶ These pictures have received the unqualified endorsement of the leading clergymen and Sunday-School teachers throughout the United States. ¶ Nothing could be more helpful, and interesting, and delightful, when one is reading the Bible, than such a graphic interpretation of sacred stories. ¶ In no other way can the Bible stories be made so real and actual to children. Should be in every home.

THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY

Have we learned this secret of Christ—that prayer is, not the mere preparation or discipline for the conflict, but the conflict and the struggle itself? Is it not rather, because we have failed to understand this, because we have not seen nor exercised the practical possibilities which lie in prayer, when thus regarded, that our belief in it and our practice of it are so wavering and unreal? —George Adam Smith.
